WELCOME, FROSH!

Varied Activities Fill Opening Week

A stag smoker featuring a full length recent movie will be held tonight, Orientation Committee Co-Chairman Steve Mahle announced today.

Mahle said "the smoker will be one of the highlights of the week which has so far found enthusiasm at its highest possible peak."

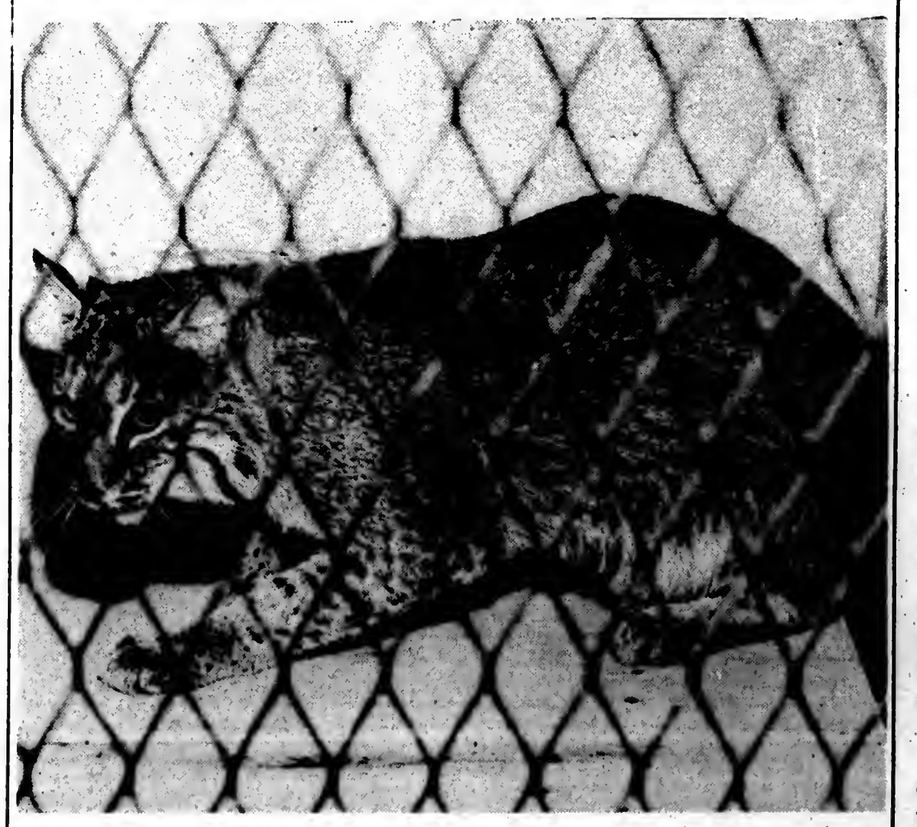
Mahle and Don Kempf, Junior Co-Chairman, planned Tuesday nights sports program and the rally last night.

"The rally was really a fine expression of Villanova spirit, and we hope it continues," Kempf said.

Mystery Show Tomorrow

Tomorrow at 7:30 in the C and F auditorium is the "Truth or Consequences" show. Colorful skits acted and directed by freshmen orientation offenders will be shown.

The highlight of the evening will be a traditional Song Fest, featuring old standard songs, some of the time when Dad went to Villanova.



No Rock and Roll

"I hope no frosh yell for rock and roll," a committee member said.

The rally last night attracted practically all of the campus residents and many day-hops as well. It gave the students an opportunity to see the team this year and the coaches doing the directing.

Tuesday's annual Sport Night in the C and F auditorium was also well attended. Films of last year's sports higlights were shown.

Count Villian IV

Villanova's new mascot Count Villain IV. He is now in the Norristown Zoo awaiting the Wildcats first home game against Furman on Saturday September 28. He was purchased recently by the Spirit Committee and shipped here from Florida. The ferocious 'Cat weighs 27 pounds and is anxious to greet all Villanovans, especially the freshmen.

Largest Freshmen Class Numbers 1300

The largest freshman class in the history of Villanova University was admitted Tuesday as the 115th academic year of the University officially got under way.

Nearly 1,300 first-year men began a four day registration period prior to the opening of classes next Monday.

Upper class engineers registered on Tuesday afternoon while students in the C and F department enrolled yesterday. Students in the division of Arts and Sciences register today.

Classes Monday

The "Frosh" will continue orientation activities tomorrow and spend the weekend preparing for their first university school day, Monday.

The largest freshman class boosts Villanova undergraduates to better than 3300 students for the 1957-58 school year.

In addition, increased application for the University's Evening Graduate and Saturday divisions together with the School of Law indicates a new high of nearly 6,000 for an overall enrollment.

Friendly Greetings

Arrival Tuesday was filled with mixed emotions for most of the 1,300 "frosh." Under the expert hand of the welcoming committee, known affectionately by all "frosh" as O.C.'s," operations went smoothly.

Villanova's newest students will continue wearing their orientation "regs" until "Muff Day" if they athletically are victorious against the spohomores. If the "frosh" lose, they must wear their "regs" still longer.

Maintain The Tradition

Welcome Freshmen!

We of the VILLANOVAN staff wish to publicly extend a welcome to you from the student body. We are dependent upon you to keep the name of Villanova rising. Every upperclassmen remembers vividly his orientation days and the questions and problems that confronted him. If you ask them they will be glad to help you and certainly disprove the theory that upperclassmen are the exalted characters they are reputed to be.

Undoubtedly you have been given all kinds of advice concerning these four years of college —that they are the best ones of your life and to get all you can out of them, etc. These are without a doubt four of the best years of your life, if you make them so. If you wholeheartedly enter into the spirit of Villanova, (in every facet) as Student Council Chairman Pat Nicholson has invited you, the benefits will be lasting.

Your decision to choose Villanova is most important, indicative of your desire to obtain a Catholic education in an atmosphere of Catholicism. You will have chances during these next four years to better yourself spiritually that may never again be presented to you. It is wise to start early and take advantage of these opportunities.

A successful combining of the spiritual, educational and social advantages offered during these four years will mould you into Catholic gentlemen and living examples of our way of life and a credit to Villanova.

Begin from the start and try to obtain all you can from these four short years. We know they will be as rich and as happy for you as they have been for us.

PAT SAYS:

'Help Build' Villanova By Boosting Villanova!

Dear Frosh:

On behalf of the upper classmen of Villanova University I want to welcome all of you into our student body. Your decision to make Villanova your home for the next four years was certainly a wise one. You have enrolled in the most wonderful school in the country. As you will soon find out, the "spirit of Villanova" is outstanding. This is so because we have a united student body solidly behind Villanova and all of its activities. Villanova has high academic standards, beautiful campus, and a friendly atmosphere, all combined to give the true Villanovan a great feeling of pride in his Alma Mater. Members of the Class of 1961, this is your school.

You are now on the threshold of the most important years of your life. Whether these years will be successful or not is up to you. The most important part of your college life is your education. Study hard to keep those marks up. Get into as many extra-curricular activities as your time permits. Do a good job in everything that you undertake. Make as many friends as you can because you will find that these boys and girls will be the best friends that you have. Believe me, these next four years will fly by, so start now to obtain all that you can from them.

You are the new blood of this great University. Soon you will be the leaders. You will find that the more you love and support Villanova, the happier you will be. This is your college and it is up to you to help keep it on top. The motto of our spirit committee is "Help Build Villanova by Boosting Villanova." If you live by this motto and do a good job in the other items mentioned, you will be a true Villanovan and a man that your Alma Mater will always hold in high esteem.

If I can ever be of any help, please don't hesitate to ask. Good luck and may God bless your college career.

Sincerely
Pat Nicholson, Chairman
Student Council

President's Message

First of all, I would like to extend a most hearty welcome to our returning upper-classmen. I sincerely hope that the summer vacation was a most happy and profitable one and that you are prepared to take up the more serious tasks involved in furthering your academic careers.

To our incoming Freshmen I would like to offer a very special word of welcome. We are extremely proud that you have seen fit to select Villanova over all the other colleges and universities available to you. I am certain that all of your expectations will be fulfilled and that for most of you the next few years will be most happy and extremely worthwhile.

To all of our students I would like to offer a most serious word of advise. You will find at Villanova every opportunity to better yourselves physically, intellectually and morally. What use you make of these opportunities depends almost entirely upon yourselves. Your parents have made and are making great sacrifices to make available to you the education you require in order to make a place for yourselves in the complex world in which we live. For your sake and theirs, do not disappoint them.

May God bless you and keep you and may Our Mother of Good Counsel watch over you and guide your stay at our beloved Alma Mater.

Campus Activities

A man or women entering a university family of over three thousand can have the tendency to want "to become lost in the crowd."

An eighteen or nineteen year old freshmen, despite ambition and ability, has a difficult time getting settled in a new enviornment.

Some solve the problem by joining a list of organizations and societies with no intention of maintaining a good standing rating in any of them. These few persons merely gve in their name in the hope that this will establish his credit among the upperclassmen.

After all, didn't these poor freshmen hear that college is "really a big joke."

And then there are some who say "I'll be too busy this year to get in any activities, maybe next year." Upperclassmen know that in most courses the students who have time to devote to an extracurrcular activity and gain something tangible from it, are the ones who succeed in class.

At Villanova University there is a proper list of activities for every student. No matter what his major might be, Arts, Enginering, or Commerce and Finance, intellectual as well as social growth is available through membership.

It would be ridiculous to assume that every activity at Villanova University is good.

Some merely have a membership card, meet once a year, and actually accomplish nothing. Others are active, growing organizations that offer something to the joiner. These are the activities that the freshmen should look for.

Obviously a prospective engineer should look toward the scientific groups. The pre-law student, the English major, the future accountant, the biology major, all have their opportunities.

The organizations joined in the freshman year help to establish the friedships that exist all through undergraduate days and often all through life.

The importance of proper selection is obvious. Do you want to be in a group that enjoys through activity or to be in a group that carries a black mark a few years from now?

Transportation

The most direct means of transportation from the University to central Philadelphia or Main Line communities is the Pennsylvania Railroad, whose Paoli Local provides half-hourly service to Broad Street, Suburban and 30the Street Stations, as well as to Paoli in the opposite direction. The Philadelphia and Western Railway, located across Lancaster Avenue from the main part of campus, has quick and frequent service to the 69th Street area and to Norristown. The Red Arrow busses travelling along Lancaster Pike also provide service to Ardmore and to the 69th Street section.

A Scholar, Athlete and Gentleman

Editor's Note: This story is a reprint of the article written by Bill Jones that appeared in the January 1, 1956 issue of the VILLANOVAN. The facts that were used for that story were taken from the December 5, 1950 VILLANOVAN from an article written by Robert J. Quinn. It is reprinted here in order to acquaint all freshmen with the name and tradition of Leo Goodreau for whom the Stadium is named, and to whom this newspaper is dedicated.*

Villanova University has produced many outstanding men throughout its years of Catholic education. Among these men some have been brilliant students, some excellent athletes and other superior gentlemen. But perhaps one of the finest men ever to enter Villanova, a humble composition of each of these qualities, never graduated. The man today is a shining memory to those of the faculty who have been at Villanova since 1930, and to the present undergraduates, merely a simple name on a tarnished plaque. This man, to whom the VILLANOVAN is respectfully dedicated, is Leo Goodreau, a scholar, an athlete, and most of all, a gentleman.

Merely a Name

To most of the students at Villanova, Leo Goodreau is merely a name that decorates the stadium and appears in the VILLANOVAN every week, but he is far more than that.

In 1927 the Villanova Stadium was erected and dedicated. The entire Villanova student body attended this ceremony. One of these students was a freshman who was destined to die on that field within one short year. The story of Leo Goodreau is in reality inspiration, an inspiration to all Villanovans.

Football

Leo was an All-New England interscholastic quarterback in high school and became a prominent name on the Villanova campus. He joined the ranks of freshmen football players and due to his hard, fast, clean and aggressive play was immediately tagged as a future star and a sure bet to take over the first string quarterback slot on the varsity the next fall.

In his first game for the Villanova frosh, he scored the first touchdown to be recorded in the new stadium, a touchdown which opened the season and the stadium with a triumph. Little did Leo realize that in the space of a few short years this field would be named Goodreau Stadium.

Baseball Too

Although he was the finest football player that Villanova had seen in quite some time, this was not his best sport. Despite his skill as a quarterback, Leo showed as much if not more proficiency as a catcher on the baseball team. His coach, Charles A. McGeehan, predicted that he easily had a major league career before him if he wanted it. He was truly a great athlete.

Leo, deeply engaged in athletics, nevertheless had an abundance of time for social activity. He was instrumental in conducting the freshman dance in the spring of 1928. Under his leadership and determination the dance became the most successful in the history of the class. In appreciation for his fine effort, the class elected him to the position of Secretary shortly before the scholastic year terminated.

Revived Spirit

He was also instrumental in reviving Villanova's fraternities which were practically non-existent. Meetings were seldom held and little was accomplished when they were. He revived the Epsilon Phi Theta Fraternity into one of the most active social clubs on the campus. In order to remain in the campus picture the frats were forced to rejuvenate and the school spirit flourished as it never had before. Leo had solidly proven that a lack of spirit had no place on the Villanova campus.

Despite this unusually heavy schedule, Leo maintained a scholastic average which placed him in the upper half of his class. His coach, Harry Stuhldreher, figured on him as potential All-American on the gridiron and a shining light in the Villanova football picture. It was a sure thing. But he was never given the chance to show his All-American calibre to the rest of the sports world, for the Lord had other and far greater plans for Leo J. Goodreau.

On the field Leo never gave up digging, and ironically this hustle cost him his life.

His Last Play

One early September afternoon he was calling offensive signals for the varsity against the frosh in a grueling scrimmage held in preparation for Villanova's game. The frosh lined up determined to prove their mettle against a larger and more experienced varsity. As the ball was snapped to a halfback, Leo, who besides being a triple threat on offense was a demon on defense, bolted forward leading the interference. The frosh line charged. There was a quick pile-up. It was Leo Goodreau's last play.

When the players unpiled, Leo was lying quite still, face down on the turf. As he slowly came to, his face was contorted with pain. A teammate tried to help the stricken player to his feet and he shrieked with pain. His back had been brutally broken.

He was given no chance of survival by the specialists called in on the case. He was almost completely paralyzed. His back was broken a'right, but his spirit was hardly dented. No longer was he fighting for his school, he was fighting for his life. He refused to give up. He insisted on hearing all the football scores that grim Saturday; his wish was not denied. He assured everyone that someday he would be back in the Villanova "line-up." But Leo underestimated himself, for he was soon to participate in a far more rewarding "line-up."

Undefeated Season

When it was recognized that he was not going to pull through, there was talk of postponing the entire football schedule, but Leo would have nothing to do with this idea. He movingly complained that it was not only unfair to the team which had worked so hard for so long, but even unfair to himself.

It is merely an anti-climax to state that the Villanova football team, inspired by this tough plucky youth swept on to an undefeated season, crushing all opposition.

The Last Spark

But soon the fight became too much, even for Leo Goodreau. He confided to his coach, Harry Stuhldreher, "I've given the best that is in me, I'm tired out, I can't hold out much longer." Death was near. He was given the Last Rites and soon lapsed into a coma. While in this coma, he began to call football signals and continued until early Tuesday afternoon, just four short days after his gridiron play, the spark of life in Leo Goodreau flickered out.

A Sad Scene

Father O'Leary who was present at the time of the death had this description: "It was a beautiful but sad scene. Outside were teammates and classmates, and inside priests and doctors. To the last Leo maintained that same staunchness of heart which marked him on the football field."

At the funeral in Villanova's College Chapel, the casket was carried by his former teammates. The entire student body was present at the Solemn High funeral Mass.

The situation was not radically changed, however, for now, he was merely playing for a new Coach and a new team in a much higher league.

Surely the spirit of Leo J. Goodreau lingers in the halls and on the playing fields of Villanova, a spirit which is to those who know his story, an ever present inspiration to higher standards of sportsmanship and duty.

It would be useless to try to develop a brilliant sentence or two for a finis to this story, fast becoming a legend, for five little words supply everything that can be said: "Leo Goodreau, scholar, athlete, gentleman."

'Well, Since Ya Asked Me...'

During the excitment and confusion of registration the Villanovan picked out six Freshmen and asked them what made the biggest impression upon them in their first few hours at Villanova.

These answers, volunteered freely by the Frosh, are a very positive indication that the spirit generated on campus last year will be far surpassed this year. Below are the remarks of the six frosh interviewed.

Carl Wolf—"The one thing that impressed me the most about Villanova is the school spirit exhibited by the upper classmen."

Gerard O'Rourke—"Both the spirit shown by the upperclassmen and the size of the University itself made the greatest initial impression upon me."

John Sanders — "The first thing that caught my attention is the large size of the Class of '61."

Chuck Dean—"The multitude of buildings, Freshmen and White Hats has both impressed and confused me."

Jack Walsh—"What impressed me?" "Three zeros that's what."

David E. Severance—"A first observation of Villanova would be the close cooperation among the upperclassmen, the tremendous spirit and the new buildings."

. . . Always Something Doing At Villanova

One of several hundred decorated cars that formed a seven-mile long motorcade enroute to Florida State football game last fall awaits jaunt down Broad Street to Municipal Stadium.

There are few week-ends that do not offer a frat party, class dance or group picnic. Here the members of the Class of '58 enjoy one of the social highlights of the year—the Junior Prom.

This is the big day that Wildcat political enthusiasts have waited for all year—ELECTION DAY! Long and intensive campaigns are culminated and class officers are chosen.

Weekly laboratory sessions are a "must" on every freshman's schedule —that is, if HE'S a premed or engineer. What has been taught in the lecture and recitation periods materializes in the science labs.

"Alright, I'll buy ya some candy," screams a helpless Villanovan at last year's Christmas party at St. John's Orphanage sponsored annually by the Junior Class.

That's really Ted Macri, a Villanova cheerleader, in that wildcat disguise leading a faithful foursome in a barber shoppe rendition the "Alma Mater" before a campus football game.

The Tradition That Is Villanova

Someone passing by the rear of the Villanova monastery on a warm afternoon would most probably find the members of the Augustinian community seated on the benches chatting and enjoying the sun.

These men largely embody the tradition of Villanova, for, long before the last wing of Alumni Hall was built or the present chapel was constructed, the Augustinian fathers were holding class on Villanova soil.

Generations of Villanova graduates and teachers have passed away, yet there are still Augustinians guiding their university through the problems of an era of expansion.

Country Estate

Villanova began its long history by the acquisition of a country estate known as Belle Air, the property of a leading Catholic layman and Revolutionary War veteran, John Randolph, by the Augustinian community of Philadelphia on October 13, 1841.

The following August, community life was established at Villanova, and a novitiate was founded in December.

The new monastery was placed under the patronage of Saint Thomas of Villanova, a former Augustinian provincial in Spain, who had served also as Archbishop of the university city of Salamanca.

One of these pioneers, Father Alonso, was the co-founder of the first university in North America, that of Mexico City.

Thirteen Begin

In keeping with the Augustinian tradition as educators, the Fathers were quick to open a school at Villanova. On September 18, 1843, classes were opened with thirteen "youths", probably of grade school, or high-school age in attendance.

The curriculum, in line with traditional concepts of "classical education," consisted of courses in French, Latin, and the classics.

Threatened with imminent danger of the "Know-Nothing" riots in Philadelphia, which threatened to involve all Catholic establishments in the area, and under-staffed as a result of the illness of three out of four faculty members, Villanova closed its doors February 20, 1845.

First Commencement

Not daunted by its temporary set-back, Villanova reopened in September with twenty-four students in attendance. The first public commencement was staged July 21, 1847.

Mendel Hall as it appeared after a fire razed it in the twenties. This was the second fire to gut the building.

A charter from the state of Pennsylvania empowered the new college "to grant to graduates or persons on whom such degrees may be conferred, diplomas or certificates as is usual in colleges or universities."

College Closed

The severe depression of the late 1850's, plus a desire to devote more time to ministering to the parishes assigned them, induced the Augustinian Fathers at Villanova to close the college again, in June of 1857, the same year in which the first seminarian educated at Villanova was ordained.

Although no lay classes were taught for the next eight years. The seminary went on, producing twenty-seven clerics by the end of the period. During the Civil War, Villanova devoted its facilities to the direct service of the country by converting them into a hospital.

In 1865, Villanova College reopened its doors to lay students, with Father Ambrose A. Miller as President assisted by a faculty of twelve. The subjects taught were Greek, Latin, English, mathematics, natural philosophy (physics), bookkeeping, history, poetry, French, German, and music.

New Growth

The next step in the growth of Villanova was the addition of a west wing to the original class room structure erected in 1848 to complete the building now known as Alumni Hall.

The most revered structure on campus and the focal point of Villanova life, the college chapel, next took its place among the buildings of Old Villanova.

Ground was broken on March 29, 1883, and the cornerstone was laid on June 3 of the same year, the feast of the Most Pure Heart of Mary.

In 1893 Villanova marked its Golden Anniversary with ninety students, of average age fifteen and one-half years, in attendance, fifteen of whom were ecclesiastical. Sixteen priests comprised the faculty.

"Fedigan's Folly"

The Anniversary celebration past, work began on two gigantic new buildings, the monastery and "College Hall," under the instigation of the then provincial Father John J. Fedigan.

So far beyond the needs of the moment were these two structures, both completed in 1902 that the project was dubbed "Fedigan's Folly." The growth of the Order and the rapid expansion of the college, however, soon turned these structures into monuments to Father Fedigan's foresight.

New Additions

Economics, sociology, and pedagogy were added to the Arts curriculum in 1905 in a step foreshadowing the establishment of two new schools.

In 1906 and again in 1908 two more strides were taken into the technical fields by the establishment of Electrical and Mechanical Engineering departments.

In 1915 the School of Science opened. Beginning with a one-year pre-medical program, the school rapidly expanded its curriculum to meet the increasing demands of the medical schools, until a four-year course leading to the degree of B.S. in Biology was offered.

Call to Colors

With the spread of the First World War to include the United States, Villanova's services were again to the colors, this time to train prospective officers. By the end of the war on November 11, 1918, the regular college students in the government-sponsored A.S.T.C. (Army Students Training Corps.) had taken their place.

Once the war had ended and life had returned to normal civilian patterns, expansion was resumed in earnest. In 1920 courses designed to train Catholic businessmen were added to the Arts curriculum.

By 1922, interest had reached such a height that it became necessary to establish a separate School of Commerce and Finance. Father Bartley was appointed Dean of the new school.

At the same time, Austin Hall was built to provide more dormitory space for the growing enrollment.

Sports Growth

In 1927, in response to the growing popularity of intercollegiate sports, the south side of the stadium was erected, and the playing field, track, and stands transferred from the main quadrangle behind the monastery.

Night classes were also begun in 1928. Expansion was proceeding at a moderate but steady pace when a disastrous fire gutted College Hall, thereby requiring the immediate construction of a classroom and laboratory building as a replacement.

Mendel Hall was built with funds solicited throughout the province in 1929 to fill the vacancy left by the fire.

Building continued with the completion of Fedigan Hall in 1930, the Commerce and Finance in 1931, and the Field House in 1932. In 1934, the present monastery was erected to replace a building leveled in another fire in 1932.

New 'Dorms'

During the years which followed, because of the depression and war, no new buildings were added to Villanova's physical plant.

The year 1941 brought the United States into the conflict then raging in Europe.

V-12 Program

In recognition of the outstanding tradition of capable administration leadership, the then president of Villanova, Father Stanford, was among those summoned. The "V-12" program these men formulated, combining the academic and the military lives, occupied nearly all the daytime teaching facilities of many of the largest colleges and universities in the country, among them Villanova.

The program, and with it a new era, were inaugurated here on May 30, 1942, when the naval commander of the new V-12 unit called to present his credentials to Father Stanford.

With the military in control, life at Villanova during the war was completely transformed. Uniforms were to be seen everywhere; only a handful of lay students remained. All administrative duties were handled by Navy personnel, and the Fathers and their lay associates were left free to concentrate their attention to teaching.

Many of the priests were called into active duty as chaplains. To those remaining fell the conduct of government-sponsored night classes for war workers wanting to increase their knowledge and skills.

Return to Normalcy

With the end of the war came a gradual return to normalcy.

So great was the increase in enrollment that a new classroom building (Belle Air Hall) and four new dormitories (the old Barracks, since replaced by Sullivan Hall) had to be erected.

Meanwhile the overflow from the dormitories took up residence in the Field House, where blankets strung in clothesline fashion, partitioned the gym into makeshift rooms.

The return to peacetime also saw the resumption of Villanova's building program. A new Chemical Engineering Building, the finest in the country, was erected. Next to it rose Commadore John Barry Hall, which houses the NROTC unit, one of fifty-two in the country. A new Library to house the college's overflowing collection of books was also built.

Last year a new law building was dedicated. This year it will be a new dormitory and the new C and F building.

Plans have already been drawn for additional engineering buildings. What is the future of Villanova University?

The history of the University only allows for one movement. Forward.

Just A Legend Now

The appearance of the college then has changed quite radically since the scene of this photo of 1952 when the freshmen were housed in the barracks alongside the driveway between the C and F building and Ithan Ave.

Continually Expanding

A charter from the state of Pennsylvania empowered the new college "to grant to graduates or persons on whom such degrees may be conferred, diplomas or certificates as is usual in colleges or universities."

College Closed

The severe depression of the late 1850's, plus a desire to devote more time to ministering to the parishes assigned them, induced the Augustinian Fathers at Villanova to close the college again, in June of 1857, the same year in which the first seminarian educated at Villanova was ordained.

Although no lay classes were taught for the next eight years. The seminary went on, producing twenty-seven clerics by the end of the period. During the Civil War, Villanova devoted its facilities to the direct service of the country by converting them into a hospital.

In 1865, Villanova College reopened its doors to lay students, with Father Ambrose A. Miller as President assisted by a faculty of twelve. The subjects taught were Greek, Latin, English, mathematics, natural philosophy (physics), bookkeeping, history, poetry, French, German, and music.

New Growth

The next step in the growth of Villanova was the addition of a west wing to the original class room structure erected in 1848 to complete the building now known as Alumni Hall.

The most revered structure on campus and the focal point of Villanova life, the college chapel, next took its place among the buildings of Old Villanova.

Ground was broken on March 29, 1883, and the cornerstone was laid on June 3 of the same year, the feast of the Most Pure Heart of Mary.

In 1893 Villanova marked its Golden Anniversary with ninety students, of average age fifteen and one-half years, in attendance, fifteen of whom were ecclesiastical. Sixteen priests comprised the faculty.

"Fedigan's Folly"

The Anniversary celebration past, work began on two gigantic new buildings, the monastery and "College Hall," under the instigation of the then provincial Father John J. Fedigan.

So far beyond the needs of the moment were these two structures, both completed in 1902, that the project was dubbed "Fedigan's Folly." The growth of the Order and the rapid expansion of the college, however, soon turned these structures into monuments to Father Fedigan's foresight.

New Additions

Economics, sociology, and pedagogy were added to the Arts curriculum in 1905 in a step foreshadowing the establishment of two new schools.

In 1906 and again in 1908 two more strides were taken into the technical fields by the establishment of Electrical and Mechanical Engineering departments.

In 1915 the School of Science opened. Beginning with a one-year pre-medical program, the school rapidly expanded its curriculum to meet the increasing demands of the medical schools, until a four-year course leading to the degree of B.S. in Biology was offered.

Call to Colors

With the spread of the First World War to include the United States, Villanova's services were again to the colors, this time to train prospective officers. By the end of the war on November 11, 1918, the regular college students in the government-sponsored A.S.T.C. (Army Students Training Corps.) had taken their place.

Once the war had ended and life had returned to normal civilian patterns, expansion was resumed in earnest. In 1920 courses designed to train Catholic businessmen were added to the Arts curriculum.

By 1922, interest had reached such a height that it became necessary to establish a separate School of Commerce and Finance. Father Bartley was appointed Dean of the new school.

At the same time, Austin Hall was built to provide more dormitory space for the growing enrollment.

Sports Growth

In 1927, in response to the growing popularity of intercollegiate sports, the south side of the stadium was erected, and the playing field, track, and stands transferred from the main quadrangle behind the monastery.

Night classes were also begun in 1928. Expansion was proceeding at a moderate but steady pace when a disastrous fire gutted College Hall, thereby requiring the immediate construction of a classroom and laboratory building as a replacement.

Mendel Hall was built with funds solicited throughout the province in 1929 to fill the vacancy left by the fire.

Building continued with the completion of Fedigan Hall in 1930, the Commerce and Finance in 1931, and the Field House in 1932. In 1934, the present monastery was erected to replace a building leveled in another fire in 1932.

New 'Dorms'

During the years which followed, because of the depression and war, no new buildings were added to Villanova's physical plant.

The year 1941 brought the United States into the conflict then raging in Europe.

V-12 Program

In recognition of the outstanding tradition of capable administration leadership, the then president of Villanova, Father Stanford, was among those summoned. The "V-12" program these men formulated, combining the academic and the military lives, occupied nearly all the daytime teaching facilities of many of the largest colleges and universities in the country, among them Villanova.

The program, and with it a new era, were inaugurated here on May 30, 1942, when the naval commander of the new V-12 unit called to present his credentials to Father Stanford.

With the military in control, life at Villanova during the war was completely transformed. Uniforms were to be seen everywhere; only a handful of lay students remained. All administrative duties were handled by Navy personnel, and the Fathers and their lay associates were left free to concentrate their attention to teaching.

Many of the priests were called into active duty as chaplains. To those remaining fell the conduct of government-sponsored night classes for war workers wanting to increase their knowledge and skills.

Return to Normalcy

With the end of the war came a gradual return to normalcy.

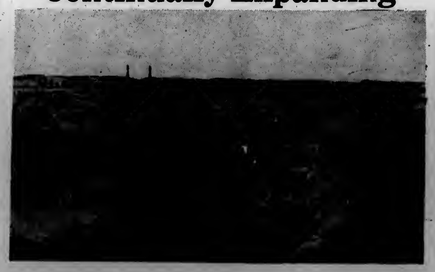
So great was the increase in enrollment that a new classroom building (Belle Air Hall) and four new dormitories (the old Barracks, since replaced by Sullivan Hall) had to be erected.

Meanwhile the overflow from the dormitories took up residence in the Field House, where blankets strung in clothesline fashion, partitioned the gym into makeshift rooms.

The return to peacetime also saw the resumption of Villanova's building program. A new Chemical Engineering Building, the finest in the country, was erected. Next to it rose Commadore John Barry Hall, which houses the NROTC unit, one of fifty-two in the country. A new Library to house the college's overflowing collection of books was also built.

Last year a new law building was dedicated. This year it will be a new dormitory and the new C and F building.

Plans have already been drawn for additional engineering buildings. What is the future of Villanova University?



The history of the University only allows for one movement. Forward.

Just A Legend Now

The appearance of the college then has changed quite radically since the scene of this photo of 1952 when the freshmen were housed in the barracks alongside the driveway between the C and F building and Ithan Ave.

Changes Announced By Provincial; Seven Priests Added To Faculty

Fathers McKee, Burke, Coffey Take New Jobs

Seven priests have been added to the faculty of Villanova University, it has been announced by the Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, Provincial of the Eastern Augustinian Province.

The new appointments are the Revs. David J. Duffy, Henry J. Erdlen, John P. Griffin, Bernard J. Hubbert, Thomas C. Kenny, James A. Wenzel, and Norbert W. Whitley.

Also announced was the appointment of the Rev. John J. Coffey as Headmaster of Malvern Preparatory School, Malvern, Pa.

Father Coffey had previously served as Director of the Augustinian Seminary Guild with offices on the university campus.

Replaces Veteran

Father Coffey succeeds the Rev. Francis L. Dennis, who has been reassigned to St. Augustine's parish in Andover, Mass., Father Dennis served at Malvern for more than 20 years.

Other local changes included the transfer of the Rev. Edward B. McKee, Assistant to the President of Villanova University, to Old St. Augustine's Parish, 4th and Vine Streets, Philadelphia, as Superior.

Faculty Changes

The Rev. Thomas A. Burke, and the Rev. John E. Bresnahan from Villanova University's faculty have been assigned to Merrimack College, Andover, Massachusetts. Father Burke held the position of Registrar at Villanova for the past six years.

Rev. Joseph A. Maher and Rev. James E. Warne have been reassigned from Villanovas University to Monsignor Bonner High School in Drexel Hill.

$25,000 Gift Helps Finance C & F Library

A gift of $25,000 has been made to the Villanova University by Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Rea, of Devon, Pa., in honor of their late son.

The announcement of the gift was made during the summer by the Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., Director of the University's Development Foundation.

The $25,000 gift will be used to finance a library in the name of the couple's son, Robert W. Rea, Jr., Father McGuire said. Young Rea was killed in an automobile accident in 1941.

Housed In C and F

To be known as the "Rea Memorial Library," it will be located in Villanova's new Commerce and Finance building presently under construction.

The new structure which will cost about $1.5 million is expected to be ready for use early next year.

In addition to the Commerce and Finance building a new dormitory is also nearing the stages of completion. Located at the extreme east end of the campus near the business building, Sheehan Hall which contains facilities for nearly 500 students, will be ready for use in September.

Expansion Program

Villanova recently embarked on a twenty-year expansion program to increase its overtaxed facilities. A fund raising program was inaugurated to offset the tremendous expense of such an undertaking.

Mr. John A. Murphy, 1956-57 Chairman of the Executive Committee of the School's Development Program, disclosed yesterday that a total of $560,311 had been received from all sources during the recently completed fiscal year.

Murphy joined with Father McGuire in paying tribute to those individuals and firms who had "accepted the heavy responsibility of aiding in the financing of higher education by contributing to Villanova's fund drive."

150 More Student Lawyers Expected In New Law School

Each year the enrollment of the school has increased and this year in the new building over 150 student lawyers are expected.

The scholastic work of a law school is considerable and exacting standards have been set.

Featured alongside of the scholastic work is considerable moot-court activity in which the students are expected to participate, thereby developing the faculties of research and exposition needed for the handling of actual cases.

The success of this training at Villanova is illustrated by the fact that the Villanova moot court team has made the finals for the judicial district for the last two years, the only two in which it has competed.

Good Review

Villanova's first Law Review, prepared by an editorial board chosen on the basis of scholastic attainment, appeared two years ago and met with widespread acclaim in legal circles.

It is expected to take its place among the country's leading legal periodicals within the next few years.

Law Library

Particularly the pride of the Law School Faculty is the fast-growing law library, non-existent a few years ago, which is already the second largest of any Catholic law school in the United States, and is well on its way toward taking the lead.

This library expansion is the department of Law Librarian Arthur C. Pulling, who served as Law Librarian at the Harvard Law Library, the largest in the nation, for many years, before coming to Villanova.

Large Library

The new law building has facilities for the proper storing of 150,000 volumes, which allows far greater freedom of legal research.

The expansion of the Law Library is parallel to that of the Law School itself, from nothing four years ago to a position of preeminence today.

Villanova Has Unique Way For Absences

"Attendance at all classes and laboratory sessions has a direct effect on the computation of a student's quality points and grade point average," said Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., the Vice-President for Academic Affairs last year when the new system was adopted.

The previous "cut system" in effect for several years was eliminated last fall, including the incurrence of a double "cut" or absence for missed classes or laboratory sessions on the day preceding and following school holidays.

Absence Affects Grade

In contrast to the disregarded ruling under which one less than twice the number of weekly credit hours due to unpardonable reasons constituted a failure in a course, the year-old method will either improve or lower a student's grade point mark since attendance will be graded according to the number of unexcused absences the student incurs from all his courses.

A student who is never absent will receive a grade of A but if he is absent as many as six times from any one course or a combination of courses he will receive a B. Eleven absences constitute a grade of C.

The average student carrying 17 to 20 credit hours per week will be given an absence mark of D when his total reaches 16.

The number of absences which deserve the grade of F varies according to the number of credits. For example, a student with 20 credits will receive a failing grade for attendance

Activities Offered For All

Alongside expansion on the spheres of buildings and enrollments, Villanova has been witnessing rapid growth in the variety of student activities and in the myriad of meetings, outings, dances and lectures sponsored by the various organizations.

Student groups at Villanova, in addition to the Student Council, which is in a class by itself might be divided into three groups—publications, clubs, and fraternities.

Publications

The publications are generally among the oldest organizations on campus and among the most active. The most obvious, of course, is the VILLANOVAN, the weekly newspaper which has come up with several All-American awards in the last few years.

Then there is the BELLE AIR, the yearbook. Also appearing at various intervals during the year are the MENDEL BULLETIN, organ of the Science School: LYNX, the campus literary quarterly; the BUSINESS WHIRL, the youngest publication on campus and voice of the Commerce and Finance School; and the VILLANOVA ENGINEER, the Engineering School magazine.

Members Needed

All of the publications are anxious to enroll new members who are willing to put in work toward making these Villanova produce even better than they are now.

Clubs Galore

Then there are the clubs—so many that it would be pointless to list them here. It might suffice to say that there is a club devoted to practically every conceivable purpose, and that the few vacant fields are fast being preempted by new organizations.

Indeed, so many organizations have been formed in the last few years that the Student Council has been seriously debating limits on its membership from the organizations.

New Societies

Among the new organizations formed within the past twelve months are the Literary Club, open to all undergraduates; the Semper Fidelis Society for those interested in the Marine PLC program; and the Society for the Advancement of Management.

Among the most conspicuous of the older clubs are the dramatic societies, Belle Masque, which puts on two plays a year, and Turf 'n Tinsel, the University's all-male musical-comedy company, which presents original performances and dance routines.

Another organization very much in the fore-front of student attention is WVIL, the campus radio station, with its studios in Dougherty Hall.

Pro Fraternities

The professional engineering fraternities feature lectures and outings designed to improve their members' knowledge of their particular engineering fields as well as to proivde occasions for social contacts with others in the engineering profession.

Somewhat akin are such clubs as the Physics, Mathematics and Chemistry Clubs, which also feature lectures in the appropriate scientific fields.

Beyond this are various other

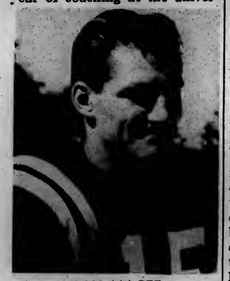
Villanova Football Prospects High



Intact Backfield, Stalwart All-Eastern Tackle Luzzi Boost Wildcat Grid Hopes

Two quarterbacks, one who topped the East in pass completion percentage last year and another who was boosted as a potential All-American even before he stepped out of high school football ranks, and a sturdy tackle, who is the outstanding player on the squad and was named to several All-East teams last year, hold the key to Villanova University's gridiron success for the coming year.

These are the men around whom Coach Frank Reagan will be building a unit which will attempt to improve upon or equal last year's 5-4 record during a nine game 1957 schedule which will carry the nomadic Wildcats to do battle in seven states including an opening contest with one of the nation's powerhouses, highly ranked Baylor, in faraway Texas, on Sept. 21.

Backfield is Intact

Villanova grid prospects for '57 are the brightest the Main Line school has had since 1952. Reagan, the former Penn great, has his first fully integrated squad as he begins his fourth year of coaching at the university. He has a contingent of 25 lettermen returning to take a crack at nine tough opponents, including five first stringers from last year.

BILLY MAGEE
The Kid Rides Again

Only one minor problem faces Reagan in the backfield, and that is—who to play? The starting unit could be considered the same that finished the season as starters last year—quarterback Billy Magee, halfbacks Rick Sapienza and Dave Parr and fullback Jack Devereaux.

Magee — dubbed "Billy the Kid" by Houston sportswriters in 1955 for his accurate passing — is the "Cinderella Kid" of Villanova football since he came to the university without a scholarship and worked his way up to chief signal-caller by the middle of his sophomore year. A little guy (5-9, 170), Magee ranked 25th in the nation as a passer last year, and his 55% topped the eastern ranks last year in completions.

Magee is backed up by a young fellow who is considered one of the best schoolboy players ever to come out of Philadelphia since coach Reagan. Jim Grazione by name, he led the team in rushing last year with a 6.2 average in 21 carries, although hampered by a leg injury most of the season. Like Magee, he is too gifted with one of the strongest passing arms in the game, and could give "The Kid" a run for the quarterback slot.

Speed at Halfback Slots

Sapienza and Parr give the backfield a good bit of speed to balance the accurate throwing of the field generals. Parr specializes in bucking the line and finding a quick hole in the opponent's defense, while Sapienza likes to run the ends. They averaged 4.8 and 4.7 yards a carry last year for a total of 426 yards.

Devereaux, a "Cinderella Kid" in his own right, since he came from fifth string fullback to a starting position in the second game last year, was the team's leading ground gainer, with 398 yards. Dave Intrabartolo, who sat out last season with an arm injury, and sophs Leon Horin and Reggie Powe, will be looking for a shot at a starting position.

Reagan has his problems, however, with the line. Led by the Wildcats' "All" candidate, Don Luzzi, 225-lb. senior tackle, the overall ranks are thin. Three stalwarts in the center of the line were lost last year via graduation.

Luzzi, famous for his fine defensive play, was continually double-teamed by the opposition last year, but still accounted for many tackles and was a big factor in enabling the Wildcats to finish 1956 as the nation's No. 1 pass defense team. He, along with veterans Hal Durgin, Bill Craig and Alex Szablowski, who are pushing for the other tackle spot, make the Main Liners strong in that position.

The end positions are pretty well taken care of also, with four letter winners returning. Tony Varrechione, considered the Villanovans' top lineman last year on offense and defense and massive (6-5, 230-lb.) Gene O'Pella, who could develop into one of the nation's top pass receivers, will probably start at those positions.

DON LUZZI
A Tackle Shall Lead Them

All-American's Son at Guard

Ed Michaels, Jr., the son of Villanova's first All-American, switched from tackle to guard last year, and from all indications will be a standout performer in that spot. Fast, with plenty of offensive and defensive drive, he will buck up the center of the line.

Ray Lyons, out last year with injuries, will battle it out for the other guard slot with junior

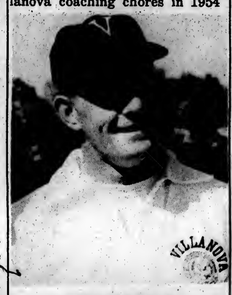
This strong squad is ready to improve last years record of five wins and four losses and give Wildcat followers the team they have been waiting for. The Main Liners open their season in a week against the powerful Baylor Bears, at Waco, Texas.

Main Liners Aim For Grid Greatness On New Outlook

A few years back, in the late '40's and early '50's, the Main Liners were riding high on the football trail, compiling winning records six out of seven seasons, against some of the nation's finest teams. They had, in fact, only three losing seasons from 1925 until 1952, with a handful of All-American players tossed in to put icing on the cake.

But then, just about the time they jumped from college to university status, came the depression, and no stockholder in '29 was ever hit harder than the Wildcat gridironers.

Era Of The 'Grocery Bowl'



Things got so bad that, back in 1953, Villanova found itself with only three games scheduled for the year. The school was faced with the prospect of giving up football on the inter-collegiate level, as many Catholic colleges had been doing in recent years. Then came the hiring of one Ambrose (Bud) Dudley as athletic director.

Dudley's job was to save football at Villanova, and that he did — with a flourish. He completed the schedule for the following year within a couple of months, and then began one of the wildest promotions in collegiate history.

He was a sports writer's dream come true, ever-present with a bit of colorful copy; he made speeches day in and day out, boosting Villanova; he initiated the nationally famous "Grocery Bowls" which involved selling huge blocks of tickets to the Acme Super Market chain—tickets which were given away with a $10 purchase of groceries; he scheduled anybody and everybody.

And therein lay the one fault with the Dudley scheme. He sent several very weak Villanova elevens traipsing around the country to take unmerciful beatings at the hands of some of the nation's powerhouses. The "Grocery Bowl" idea, which once jammed 100,000 fans into Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium to see Villanova handed a 52-0 drubbing, began to lose its appeal, and the Wildcats travelled even more.

The Villanovans played only one or two games at home, and these could have been better termed "near home," since they weren't played on campus, but in Philadelphia. One Francis X. Reagan, who took over the Villanova coaching chores in 1954 and about whom much more will be said shortly, suffered through two 1-9 seasons with his nomadic warriors.

FRANK REAGAN
Back To Campus

First Winning Year

Finally, last year, working with a team he had molded over the past two disasterous seasons, Reagan compiled his first winning record, 5-4, against top competition, and boasted a team that led the nation in pass defense. Two of the nine games were held on campus, and student and alumni spirit reached an all-time high.

University authorities were faced with a problem—Villanova was on the way back to football greatness, but which way did she want to go? Finally the decision was made — the Wildcats were coming home to stay. More on-campus games and closer-to-home scheduling were to be the order of the day. The school was still going to seek out top-flight competition, but she was going to try and find it in the East.

Reagan Takes Over

With the new athletic policies, Dudley felt it better to resign when his contract ended last January. In his place, school authorities named the aforementioned Reagan to assume the dual role of athletic director and head football coach.

And it is with Frank Reagan that the present day story of Villanova football must begin, for he is the key to its success. Reagan is one of the University of Pennsylvania's brightest grid stars, and set a still standing Ivy League record of 31 points in one game against Princeton in his senior year of 1941.

He gained nationwide fame a year before in a personal duel with Michigan All-American Tom Harmon in a game in Philadelphia. He played pro ball for a while with the New York Giants and Philadelphia Eagles, and was a coach with this latter team from 1952 until his coming to Villanova.

This is the man upon whom Villanova is counting to lead them on the final leg of their long journey home. Already, in only eight months in the athletic directorship, Reagan has begun slowly moving Wildcat football into the pattern he and university officials feel it should follow.

Memories Of '56-'57

It is with athletes and their achievements that these pages are mainly concerned. Here-weekly, yearly—are recounted the exploits of the wearers of Villanova blue as they face representatives of colleges and universities all over the naton in the various fields of athletic endeavor. Here the super-stars of past and present—the Arizins, Delanys, Filipskis, Braggs—have written their names in glory and throughout the pages of Villanova sports history.

Victory, Spirit Arrive Together

Football victory and terrific school spirit came to the university simultaneously. With a new and revitalized Spirit Committee leading the way, almost three-fourths of the student body appeared at the campus railroad station to wildly cheer a team that was returning from a 19-0 opening game loss to highly ranked Texas A & M.

Two weeks later came a 13-0 toppling of Dayton as the 'Cats unleashed a devastating ground attack. Then 1000 students journeyed on a Spirit Committee-sponsored trip to Boston to watch the rejuvenated Main Liners crush Boston University, 27-13, for its third straight. Consecutive losses to Florida State and Boston College slowed down the Villanova steamroller, but the Villanovans bounced back to rout the Citadel, 46-0, on campus, before a 26-13 loss to a strong Houston team.

26-0—And A Winning Season

Then came the final contest of the year, a battle with Iowa State, on campus. A 26-0 victory gave Villanova the winning season it had awaited so long, and final tabulations showed that the Main Liners had led the country in pass defense. The first big curve on the road back had been rounded.

Track news, however, had even managed to take its place mid the glory of a winning football season. Villanova became the only school in America to be able to claim three gold medals in the 1956 Olympics, Melbourne, Australia, when Ron Delany took the 1,500 meter run in record time, and Charley Jenkins copped two of the coveted awards as a member of the winning U.S. 1,600 meter relay team and a victory in the 400-meter run.

Now, however, all eyes turned to basketball. The courtmen of Al Severance were highly regarded in the pre-season polls, and great things were expected. Such, unfortunately, was not to be. The Wildcats looked strong in losing an opener to Canisius, and then rolled off three straight victories—including a masterful, come-from-behind win over Indiana that brought a usually blase Palestra crowd to its feet cheering—but the turning point came in the Holiday Festival in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Ryan Scores 30

This topnotch invitational tournament ,over the Christmas holidays, spelled nothing but trouble for the Main Liners. Despite a 30-point performance by soph sensation Joe Ryan in the second game, the Wildcats couldn't win a game. The graduation of Captain Jim Smith and a leg injury to Ryan slowed the team up even more in the year, and they ended with a 10-15 record—the worst in ten years.

There were bright spots, however. Smith became the sixth Villanova player to top the 1000-point mark in his varsity career, reaching 1014 with a 24-point, last-game performance against Drexel; Ryan averaged almost 12 points a game although hampered by the bad leg; big men Tom Brennan and Jack Kelly showed flashes of real brilliance, and sophs Ken Harrison and George Kanna looked to be future stars. A couple of high-scoring Georges—Reider and Raveling—down on the frosh squad, gave promise of a better fate this year.

No Task For Mere Mortals

But, if basketball was a disappointment, thre was always track. And the only persons disappointed on the banked oval were those who entertained any hopes of outclassing the Wildcats in '57. That, my friends ,was a task not to be undertaken by mortal men.

To attempt to write here, in this short space, the whole story of the unbelievable accomplishments of the Wildcat trackmen, meet by meet, is far beyond the meager talents of this writer. The faintest glimmer of their unparalledled brilliance can be found in one statement, however. They became the only collegiate team ever to win the AAU Indoor Title when the titanic amateur teams were not gutted by an existing war, and they massacred all competition in the IC4A meet.

The Big Four

The stars? They were all stars, but these were the big four—Ron Delany, running the mile in his usual style, hanging back in the safety of the pack until the last lap, then "kicking" to victory, who finished the year undefeated and took an unprecedented double victory in the IC4A meet; Charley Jenkins, dominating the 440 races and pacing the mile relay team; Don Bragg, becoming the first collegian ever to top Bob Richards and consistently clearing 15 feet, and Phil Reavis, who finding a high-soaring buddy in teammate Charley Stead, proved once again his standout abilities in the high-jump field, setting several meet records. They set coach Jim "Jumbo" Elliott on top of the track world.

After that, everything was anticlimatic. The team marched on to dominate the outdoor meets too, and prepare for the long and victorious trek to the major outdoor titles also. Meanwhile, among the minor sports, the swimming and golf teams posted winning records, while Sr. Hank Miller was named on the All-American Rifle Team.

Baseball? Unfortunately, coach Art Mahan's team of the previous year saw its entire outfield and three leading hitters leave the ranks of Villanovans, and a "green" squad took it on the chin for a losing season.

And that ,frosh, was 1956-57. Now another season is upon us and you are one of us, so stick around—we have a new story to tell.

Summer Victories Complete VU Track Title 'Grand-Slam'

When college students from all over the country began trooping back to their homes last June for a much-needed rest and old friends got back together, the conversation eventually got around to a comparison of the different schools' athletic teams.

If there was a Villanova undergraduate in the crowd when the talk got around to the world of track and field, chances are he had the floor all to himself. For the Wildcats had been the most spectacular thing in collegiate ranks during the indoor season, wrapping up both the AAU and IC4A titles in a pleasant package for coach Jim Elliott, and dominating every meet they entered.

But the best was yet to come. Even as Villanovans throughout the country were talking boastfully of their track team's brilliance, this aggregation of super-stars was embarking for Texas to attempt to complete a sweep of track titles unprecedented in collegiate history.

They did it—with ease.

A Stop in New York

The first stop on the journey toward a track "grand-slam" had been in New York, on the first week-end in June, where the Wildcats copped their third major title, the IC4A Outdoor Championship, with a smashing 48 points, beating out arch-rival Manhattan by seven counters.

The ever-victorious Ron Delany and "surprise performer," Ed Collymore, paced the Villanovans to the title, as each won two events.

Delany captured the mile in a new meet record of 4:08.4, and then took the half in 1:49.9, as expected; but Collymore, entered in the sprints suddenly on a hunch by Elliott, surprised everyone by taking both the 100 (0:09.7) and 220 (0:21).

Collymore was the difference in the meet, and reporter, Jesse Abrasson, put it into words best:

"Manhattan couldn't expect to win if Collymore scored heavily in the sprints. He scored as heavily as one man could."

Don Bragg (pole-vault,) Charley Jenkins (440) and Phil Reavis (high jump) also added first places to the Villanova score; while Alex Breckenridge, Charley Stead and the mile relay team contributed points with finishes further back.

The Biggest of All

So it was that the Wildcats—after a stop-over in Houston on June 8 to star in the annual Meet of Champions—arrived in Austin on June 15 to take the biggest title of them all, the NCAA meet championship. And they did it with only one first place!

All year long, the Main Liners had won their meets by piling up five or more first places to offset the multitude of second and thirds gained by the opposition, but they reversed that procedure to gain this final meet.

Delany added the first, taking the mile in 4:06.5, and then finished second in the half-mile, less than half an hour later. Bragg was second in the pole vault, while Reavis, Jenkins and Collymore took thirds and Breckenridge a fourth. The team totaled 47 points, winning by 15 over California.

And that was for all practical purposes the end of an era. The greatest track team in collegiate history had completed a spectacular year, one that probably will never be duplicated.

All Americans Named

The Villanova stars remained in the news however, as they competed throughout Europe over the summer. Collymore, Reavis, Bragg and Jenkins won consistently as they toured the continent with two U.S. teams, and Delany took part in three mile races, winning two and breaking the four-minute mile for the second time in his career in the other with 3:58.2, to finish second in a world's record race.

In recognition of their achievements, Delany, Reavis, Bragg and Collymore are named to the United States All-American track team in August.

For trackdom, it was truly "The Year of the Wildcats."

Bob Vincent and senior letterman Dick Byrne. Senior letter winner Vince Chaverini, No. 2 center last year, moves up to the first string for the upcoming season, but he is not regarded as a full 60-minute performer. Tom Fletcher and soph hopeful Ed Lemkin will add support in that position.

After the Baylor opener, the Wildcats will come home for two weeks in a row to meet Furman and Florida State, then travel to Virginia on Oct. 12 to meet a tough Virginia Tech eleven. Four successive away battles, vs. Boston College, Indiana, Miami (that's that rough Florida crew, not the Ohio gang) and Detroit, follow.

After a week's rest, the wanderers will close out the year at home, against Wichita.

Reagan believes that the physical condition of the team after the battle with the Baylor bruisers will decide how well the rest of the year will go. Despite the powerful Bears, however, he believes that "we will at least duplicate last year's 5-4 record, if not improve upon it."

Ex-Stars Coach

Reagan will have four ex-Villanova gridironers to assist him in his coaching chores. The backfield will be under the direction of 1950 grad Joe Rogers, who starred on the mighty Wildcat teams after the Second World War. Defensive line coach will be Dave DiFilippo, who was a star guard on the 1937 Villanova team that went undefeated in nine games, with one tie.

Offensive line mentor and newest member of the coaching staff is John Sandusky, who was a first string tackle for four years from 1946-1950. The frosh eleven will be in the capable hands of Ed Michaels, Villanova's first All-American, way back in 1935.

These are the men and players will make Villanova's 1957 football history. The result of their efforts should be mighty interesting to see.

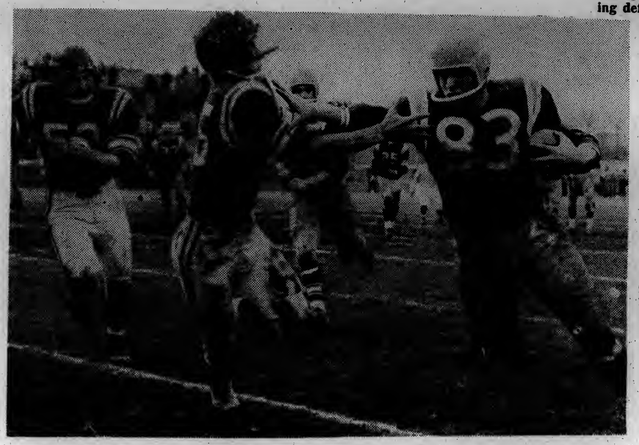
And is it what the fans want? Well, Reagan offered a revised alumni season's ticket plan this past summer, and posted the largest pre-season sale of tickets in school history. The team's coming home, and there's going to be quite a crowd there to greet them.

Reagan himself summed it all up in an interview last February. "We now have," he said, "a clearer idea of where we want to go in football and how we want to get there than we have had in a long time."



Villanova Athletes In Action

Villanova's great track star, Don Bragg, clears the pole vault bar on Blue-White Day meet last spring. Bragg became the first collegiate vaulter ever to clear 15 ft. during his days at Villanova, and is generally considered one of the top three men at the event in the country. Unfortunately for the Wildcat team, Bragg graduated last year.

Tom Brennan, 6-6 Villanova center, gets set to go up for a shot at the basket in last season's 65-64 loss to Richmond. "Long Tom" racked 14 points and 26 rebounds in the heartbreaking defeat.

An Iowa State end tries to elude the grasp of Wildcat quarterback Billy Magee during a 26-0 Villanova romp in Goodreau Stadium last year, as hard-hitting center Joe Ryan closes in. The victory, in the final game of the season, gave Villanova its first winning season in three years.

Here's a familiar figure about campus. Intramural Council President Jim Moran puts his all into the students' intramural program, keeping things moving at a lively pace.

Intramural Council member Pete O'Brien throws out the first ball to open the 1957 intramural softball season as initial batter Ed Walsh and an unidentified catcher look on. Softball is just one of the many intramural activities open to students.

Backstop Terry Hayes and the umpire glare at each other after an argument in the early innings of last year's 9-5 baseball loss to PMC, as coach Art Mahan tries to intercede. Hurler Jim Grazione stands glumly at the plate. Hayes later doubled for the losing Wildcats.

SPORTS CHATTER

Memories Of '56-'57

It is with athletes and their achievements that these pages are mainly concerned. Here-weekly, yearly—are recounted the exploits of the wearers of Villanova blue as they face representatives of colleges and universities all over the naton in the various fields of athletic endeavor. Here the super-stars of past and present—the Arizins, Delanys, Filipskis, Braggs—have written their names in glory and throughout the pages of Villanova sports history.

Victory, Spirit Arrive Together

Football victory and terrific school spirit came to the university simultaneously. With a new and revitalized Spirit Committee leading the way, almost three-fourths of the student body appeared at the campus railroad station to wildly cheer a team that was returning from a 19-0 opening game loss to highly ranked Texas A & M.

Two weeks later came a 13-0 toppling of Dayton as the 'Cats unleashed a devastating ground attack. Then 1000 students journeyed on a Spirit Committee-sponsored trip to Boston to watch the rejuvenated Main Liners crush Boston University, 27-13, for its third straight. Consecutive losses to Florida State and Boston College slowed down the Villanova steamroller, but the Villanovans bounced back to rout the Citadel, 46-0, on campus, before a 26-13 loss to a strong Houston team.

Then came the final contest of the year, a battle with Iowa State, on campus. A 26-0 victory gave Villanova the winning season it had awaited so long, and final tabulations showed that the Main Liners had led the country in pass defense. The first big curve on the road back had been rounded.

Track news, however, had even managed to take its place mid the glory of a winning football season. Villanova became the only school in America to be able to claim three gold medals in the 1956 Olympics, Melbourne, Australia, when Ron Delany took the 1,500 meter run in record time, and Charley Jenkins copped two of the coveted awards as a member of the winning U.S. 1,600 meter relay team and a victory in the 400-meter run.

Now, however, all eyes turned to basketball. The courtmen of Al Severance were highly regarded in the pre-season polls, and great things were expected. Such, unfortunately, was not to be. The Wildcats looked strong in losing an opener to Canisius, and then rolled off three straight victories—including a masterful, come-from-behind win over Indiana that brought a usually blase Palestra crowd to its feet cheering—but the turning point came in the Holiday Festival in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Ryan Scores 30

This topnotch invitational tournament ,over the Christmas holidays, spelled nothing but trouble for the Main Liners. Despite a 30-point performance by soph sensation Joe Ryan in the second game, the Wildcats couldn't win a game. The graduation of Captain Jim Smith and a leg injury to Ryan slowed the team up even more in the year, and they ended with a 10-15 record—the worst in ten years.

There were bright spots, however. Smith became the sixth Villanova player to top the 1000-point mark in his varsity career, reaching 1014 with a 24-point, last-game performance against Drexel; Ryan averaged almost 12 points a game although hampered by the bad leg; big men Tom Brennan and Jack Kelly showed flashes of real brilliance, and sophs Ken Harrison and George Emma looked to be future stars. A couple of high-scoring Georges—Reider and Raveling—down on the frosh squad, gave promise of a better fate this year.

No Task For Mere Mortals

But, if basketball was a disappointment, thre was always track. And the only persons disappointed on the banked oval were those who entertained any hopes of outclassing the Wildcats in '57. That, my friends ,was a task not to be undertaken by mortal men.

To attempt to write here, in this short space, the whole story of the unbelievable accomplishments of the Wildcat trackmen, meet by meet, is far beyond the meager talents of this writer. The faintest glimmer of their unparalledled brilliance can be found in one statement, however. They became the only collegiate team ever to win the AAU Indoor Title when the titanic amateur teams were not gutted by an existing war, and they massacred all competition in the IC4A meet.

The Big Four

The stars? They were all stars, but these were the big four—Ron Delany, running the mile in his usual style, hanging back in the safety of the pack until the last lap, then "kicking" to victory, who finished the year undefeated and took an unprecedented double victory in the IC4A meet; Charley Jenkins, dominating the 440 races and pacing the mile relay team; Don Bragg, becoming the first collegian ever to top Bob Richards and consistently clearing 15 feet, and Phil Reavis, who finding a high-soaring buddy in teammate Charley Stead, proved once again his standout abilities in the high-jump field, setting several meet records. They set coach Jim "Jumbo" Elliott on top of the track world.

After that, everything was anticlimatic. The team marched on to dominate the outdoor meets too, and prepare for the long and victorious trek to the major outdoor titles also. Meanwhile, among the minor sports, the swimming and golf teams posted winning records, while Sr. Hank Miller was named on the All-American Rifle Team.

Baseball? Unfortunately, coach Art Mahan's team of the previous year saw its entire outfield and three leading hitters leave the ranks of Villanovans, and a "green" squad took it on the chin for a losing season.

And that ,frosh, was 1956-57. Now another season is upon us and you are one of us, so stick around—we have a new story to tell.

Summer Victories Complete VU Track Title 'Grand-Slam'

When college students from all over the country began trooping back to their homes last June for a much-needed rest and old friends got back together, the conversation eventually got around to a comparison of the different schools' athletic teams.

If there was a Villanova undergraduate in the crowd when the talk got around to the world of track and field, chances are he had the floor all to himself. For the Wildcats had been the most spectacular thing in collegiate ranks during the indoor season, wrapping up both the AAU and IC4A titles in a pleasant package for coach Jim Elliott, and dominating every meet they entered.

But the best was yet to come. Even as Villanovans throughout the country were talking boastfully of their track team's brilliance, this aggregation of super-stars was embarking for Texas to attempt to complete a sweep of track titles unprecedented in collegiate history.

They did it—with ease.

A Stop in New York

The first stop on the journey toward a track "grand-slam" had been in New York, on the first week-end in June, where the Wildcats copped their third major title, the IC4A Outdoor Championship, with a smashing 48 points, beating out arch-rival Manhattan by seven counters.

The ever-victorious Ron Delany and "surprise performer," Ed Collymore, paced the Villanovans to the title, as each won two events.

Delany captured the mile in a new meet record of 4:08.4, and then took the half in 1:49.9, as expected; but Collymore, entered in the sprints suddenly on a hunch by Elliott, surprised everyone by taking both the 100 (0:09.7) and 220 (0:21).

Collymore was the difference in the meet, and reporter, Jesse Abramson, put it into words best:

"Manhattan couldn't expect to win if Collymore scored heavily in the sprints. He scored as heavily as one man could."

Don Bragg (pole-vault,) Charley Jenkins (440) and Phil Reavis (high jump) also added first places to the Villanova score; while Alex Breckenridge, Charley Stead and the mile relay team contributed points with finishes further back.

The Biggest of All

So it was that the Wildcats—after a stop-over in Houston on June 8 to star in the annual Meet of Champions—arrived in Austin on June 15 to take the biggest title of them all, the NCAA meet championship. And they did it with only one first place!

All year long, the Main Liners had won their meets by piling up five or more first places to offset the multitude of second and thirds gained by the opposition, but they reversed that procedure to gain this final meet.

Delany added the first, taking the mile in 4:06.5, and then finished second in the half-mile, less than half an hour later. Bragg was second in the pole vault, while Reavis, Jenkins and Collymore took thirds and Breckenridge a fourth. The team totaled 47 points, winning by 15 over California.

And that was for all practical purposes the end of an era. The greatest track team in collegiate history had completed a spectacular year, one that probably will never be duplicated.

All Americaps Named

The Villanova stars remained in the news however, as they competed throughout Europe over the summer. Collymore, Reavis, Bragg and Jenkins won consistently as they toured the continent with two U.S. teams, and Delany took part in three mile races, winning two and breaking the four-minute mile for the second time in his career in the other with 3:58.2, to finish second in a world's record race.

In recognition of their achievements, Delany, Reavis, Bragg and Collymore are named to the United States All-American track team in August.

For trackdom, it was truly "The Year of the Wildcats."

O-C To Use New Equipment For Frosh Program Tonight

The Opera Classica Society will open its fourth straight season otnight in the East Lounge, Dougherty Hall.

The society ,which schedules classical music, has a program tonight for freshmen. They will be the first to hear the new custom-built sound equipment.

Society moderator Anthony Angeline said the sound is similiar to that used in the movie "Around the World in Eighty Days."

Tutoring Planned

The Society also announced they are offering a service to freshmen of qualified upper class tutoring. The purpose of the tutoring, Mr. Angeline said, is to acquaint the freshmen with the beauties of the classical music.

The Society also will sponsor a football team in the intramural league this fall.

Last Spring they began an extensive sports program, the moderator said, to show that opera and athletics do mix and that the well cultured man is able to understand and appreciate both.

Twenty-two absences rate an F for 19 credits; 21 absences for 18 credits; while 18 absences is one over the maximum required to pass with 15 credit hours.

All reasons for absence must be reported to the Office of the Vice-President for Academic Affairs since the instructor will not keep an absentee record but act merely as a daily recorder of absences.

Absentee Explanations

Explanation for sickness must come from the attending doctor and be addressed to the University Physician while classes missed due to selective service appointments must be explained in advance by presenting the government notification letter. Absence caused by death in the immediate family must be explained by a letter from the pastor, parent, or guardian.

All reasons for absence, which do not release the student from responsibility for missed classwork, must be presented in writing accompanied by the Student Absence Report Form and delivered in person to Father Boyle's office no later than 4:30 p.m. of the day a student returns to class after the absence.

Report Forms may be obtained at the Dean's Office in C and F or the Office of the Vice-President in 104 Mendel Hall.

organizations, such as the International Relations Society which features trips to United Nations' meetings in New York and to various Embassies and press conferences in Washington.

There are also an Anstronomy Club, clubs devoted to the studies of foreign languages, and to particular major fields of study.

If a student still can't find a club devoted to his favorite interest, the procedure is very simple. All he has to do is find a few other students interested in the same thing, locate a faculty member interested in being moderator, and see the Dean of Student Activities about the proper procedure for founding a new organization and getting it cleared by the administration.

Fraternities

In a somewhat different class are the fraternities. These are campus organizations with no national affiliations, a separate fraternity being devoted to each school. Delta Pi Mu serves the Arts School; Delta Pi Epsilon unites the Commerce and Finance students; Phi Kappa Pi is the Engineering fraternity; and Lamda Kappa Delta represents the Science majors.

These are social organizations which sponsor dances, Communion breakfasts, and numerous other functions; they also serve as professional organizations in that they present speakers in the fields in which their members are majoring to keep the student apprised of recent developments in his chosen field.

The Villanovan who shuns the activities is depriving himself of this major part of his education. He is also missing a great deal of good, old-fashioned pleasure besides.

The Villanovan who is active in extra-curriculars, on the other hand, is making use of all the opportunities the University offers for his development. By doing so, he is making himself a better man.

Bishop Van Lierde also officiated at the opening Mass for Villanova day-hop students.

Bishop Opens School Year; '57 Enrollment Sets Record

The new school year was officially opened Monday, Sept. 16, with a Mass celebrated by the Rev. James Donnellon, president of the university at 8 a. m. for resident students, while the Mass for day-hops was said at 9:30 by Bishop Peter Canisius Van Lierde, O.S.A., Vicar General of Vatican City and assistant at the Papal Throne.

Following the 9:30 Mass Bishop Van Lierde officially laid the cornerstone for Sheehan Hall. The new dormitory, located at the extreme east end of the campus, houses nearly 500 students and was completed about one month ago.

The hall is named for the late Rev. John Sheehan, O.S.A., a former provincial of the Augustinian Order.

This year the university has reached the peak in enrollment in its 115th academic history. The total for full time day students is 3,643.

New Faces of 1957

The new faces number 1300, including undergraduate students, transfers and freshmen law students.

At present there are 1178 students enrolled in the undergraduate freshman class, 790 in the sophomore class, 763 in the junior class and 695 in the senior class. St. Mary's Hall numbers 89 new seminarians, while the freshman class in the law school consists of 65 students.

Award, Homecoming Game Highlight Oct. 5 Weekend

By BILL ICKES

The Florida State game on Oct. 5 will mark the annual homecoming weekend at Villanova and festivities for the two-day affair will include the traditional Nick Basca award, the annual queen contest and the introduction of Count Villan V to the alumni.

Leo Rudegeair and Jim Anderson are the co-chairmen of the spirit committee contributing to the Basca Weekend which is also the Senior Weekend.

A meeting was held for the freshmen halls by Leo Rogers, chairman of the spirit committee, who explained the traditional contest and exactly what was expected of them.

Halls Decorated

All halls must be decorated by the afternoon of Oct. 4 since the judging will take place that evening. The winner will be announced at the bonfire rally immediately following the judging.

The chairman of the winning hall will be presented the traditional plaque by Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., dean of activities.

One of the social highlights of the weekend fete will be the choosing of the '57 homecoming queen.

Each person desiring to submit an entry must do so through an organization to which he belongs. In turn that organization submits the entry to the spirit committee.

Contest Rules

The rules of the contest are the following:

Each Student Member Of One Organization

No student at Villanova University may ever truthfully claim that he does not belong to a campus organization even though his name is not officially inscribed in the roll book of even the least known of the ever-increasing number of extra-curricular activities.

Before raising your eyebrows and preparing to prove the falsity of the previous paragraph, do not hesitate to go directly to page 41 of the STUDENT HANDBOOK and read the thirteen words contained in Article III, Section I of the student council constitution. Those who no longer carry this grey 85-page booklet on their person, which is the first "text" book a VU frosh encounters, may be surprised to discover that the said section of the said article states "all regular students of the university shall be members of the student council. Regular students rtfers to those students carried as regular students by the university registrar."

These two sentences dispel any doubtful belief that only a select few, known as representatives in legal terminology, may sit in on council doings.

It is true that only duly elected officials may actually vote at the organization's bi-weekly meetings stated in the following sentence on the same page of the HANDBOOK; but why the C and F auditorium is attended by these comparatively few Villanovans is inexplicable.

Every other Wednesday evening, including tonight, Chairman Pat Nicholson opens a student council meeting at 6:330 which entertains approximately 50 onlookers or 1/147 of the university student counucil.

Important measures affecting every student are brought up, hashed out, improved upon, discussed at length and finally either carried or disregarded. This essential governmental process is accomplished by only a handful of the student body when every undergraduate is entitled to participate in these sessions and contribute to the proceedings by making helpful suggestions.

Although you are not a voting council student council at work.

Political Round-up:

Rights Bill Compromise Meets With Disapproval

By CLEM BIRCH

The United States of America was founded on and gained historical recognition for its fight for civil rights both universal and individual. The constitution of this nation became a model for many nations engaged in like fights for independence because it gave simply so much to those who had so little. The Congress that the constitution created stood as the pinnacle of all progress that had been made, for its balance of power had proved successful.

None of these achievements could have been made without the type of political character that was founded in men such as Jefferson, Madison, Adams and Hamilton.

A question of tremendous value then is "What has happened to political men of that caliber?" The answer has been given during the formulation of the Civil Rights Bill. A salve to render to any frictional disagreement with the act has been applied in the form of "It's the first legislation in 82 years." The fact of the matter is that today's law-makers have become so engulfed in political "give-and-takers," that no longer does there exist except in too few instances, men whose convictions are basically moral, unprejudiced and Christian, unchanged by pressure.

The proof of the pudding is in the tasting and the unnecessarily weak rights bill left a distinctive bad taste in the mouths of many.

The opinion of this columnist is that the action of compromise involved in the laws of creation was a sign of weakness unsound both morally and politically, especially morally.

Bar the Color Bar

How can men deem themselves able to judge the allowability of rights to human beings made of the same stuff as themselves with the lone difference of color standing between themselves and the "receivers," of the greatest civil action in 82 years.

The equality of one man to another is a judgement that from the beginning of time and we hope until the end of limt, must remain in the hands of God Almighty and not men whose consciences have been numbed by a traditional prejudice divorced from fundamental rationality.

Nothing Done About Much

It is the violation of this stand that forces the bill with jury trial amendment, its supporters and biased dissenters that provokes such an opinion of disgust. The world waited and watched, only to be disappointed by a farcical legislative piece.

From the other side of the political bull ring the stand that "something is better nothing" can only be judged and evaluated in an element of time—that same element that was required after the Civil War to mend the scars of that parallel conflict.

Little Man in Little Rock

Tantamount to the lack of foresight displayed in Congress this summer is the incredible bad judgment of Governor Orville Faubus of Arkansas in the past three weeks in the "Little Rock Debacle."

To the cause of segregation went a concession so great, so outlandish in scope that the 82 years interim of relative acceptance of the negro as an equal was lost. To the Ku Klux and the Commies, to the deep haters and the Strom Thurmonds went the breath of recognition towards the theory of segregation.

Faubus or Faustus

To the government of the United States and its people Faubus sold his political soul

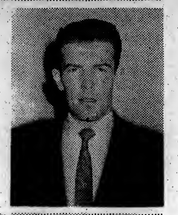
Campus New Look Hits VILLANOVAN

The new look which has captivated the campus is also evident in the VILLANOVAN. In keeping with the policy of giving the students a college newspaper worthy of this school, the editors have introduced more new features to this year's VILLANOVAN. The front page of the orientation issue was radically different. It will be the policy of this year's staff to give greater space to events which increase the name of Villanova outside the campus.

Additional regular features of the paper will include a student opinion column, a series on notable Catholics in public life, more complete coverage of intramurals, a chaplain's column, alumni news, a column on the social activities of the neighboring colleges and a faculty guest column on subjects pertaining to their fields of interest.

With these additions and the inauguration of a slightly different deadline policy the editors hope to give you another All-American college paper.

CAMPUS CAMERA



This Week's Question: Which course are you most looking forward to this year, and why?

James Furey, Frosh Engineer—"The subject I think I will enjoy the most is Mathematics, because it is interesting, and challanging."

Mary Lou Creedon, Sophomore Nurse—"I am looking forward to Psychology because of its relationship to the nursing profession, it affords understanding of one's self and of one's patients."

Paul P. Cotteral, Junior Pre-Law—"I believe that Labor Law will prove most useful because in addition to other law courses, it improves one's perspective toward labor and management problems."

Pat Gallagher, 5th year Navy Engineer—"I am looking forward to the Marriage Guidance Course because I am getting married in June, and since this will be a rather permanent state, I think I should be fully prepared."

Maureen McDade, Soph Nurse: "I am looking forward to our nursing course this semester since it will be our first hospital experience and this is what every student nurse is looking forward to."

Notable Catholics In Public Life:

John Kennedy: First Catholic President?

By FRANK DELANY—Feature Editor

First of a Series

From pulpits and the Catholic trade press, the cry has gone up recently for more leaders in the various walks of American life to be drawn from tht vast multitude of our Catholic laity.

In the general recognition of apathy on the part of many Catholics, we should not lose sight of the Catholics who have won fame for their achievements in public life. Foremost of these is John Fitzgerald Kennedy, United States senator from Massachuesetts, who has carried on a life-long romance with success in practically every field he has tried and is being spoken of more optimistically with each passing month as a possible first Catholic president in the history of the United States and the first democratic president since republicanism went modern.

It would be fitting for Senator Kennedy to be the first Catholic president as his whole life has marked him as an admirable representative of his faith.

The senator was born in Brookline, Mass., on May 29 in 1917, the son of Rose Fitzgerald, from whom he derived his middle name, and Joseph P. Kennedy, onetime ambassador to the court of St. James, Knight of Malta, Grand Knight of Pius IX, from whom of course he derived his last name. Kennedy, which was rapidly joining Cabot and Lodge in the hierarchy of nomenclature in Massachuesetts.

Handsomely educated, the senator is an alumnus of the London School of Economics, Harvard, Notre Dame and Tufts. Senator Kennedy also holds honorary degrees from six universities including Harvard, and as of last April, Villanova.

Pacific War Hero

Senator Kennedy received a baptism of fire in the service of his country during World War II when he received spinal injuries in performance of duties which earned him the Navy and Marine Corps medals and the purple heart. His exploits will serve as the basis of an upcoming "Navy Log" TV episode which incidentally will feature the acting of Villanova alumnus Francis X. Killmond, class of '55.

After the war, Senator Kennedy served as a correspondent for International News Service in whose employ he covered the Potsdam conference, the British elections of 1945 and other historical events.

Kennedy in Congress

1946 was a banner year. Kennedy went to Washington as a member of the House of Representatives and was chosen one of the ten outstanding young men of the year by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

SEN. JOHN KENNEDY

In 1952 Kennedy spread his political wings and banished John Cabot Lodge to the hallowed halls of the United Nations taking for himself Lodge's seat in the United States Senate and winning such a personal following in Massachuesetts that the name elect anyone to office.

And now this loyal following engineered by an unbeatable combination of political integrity and boyish charm is becoming a nationwide phenomenon. In fact, with the emergence of younger brother Bob Kennedy in the sensational labor probe, it would seem that there are enough Kennedy rooters to do for the whole family.

Senate Record

Senator Kennedy's excellent record in the Senate is more than ample justification for his great popularity. Born to wealth and position and possessed of a fine conservative education, Kennedy has given to liberalism a certain tone it lacked beforehand. For Senator Kennedy is certainly a liberal though his courage of conviction in veering from the party line of liberalism in such matters as the Eisenhower soil bank plan has caused some unjustified whines of insincerity from fem quarters.

Writes Best Seller

Kennedy should be an expert in the matter of senatorial courage of convictions though, for, when convalescing from his war wounds, he authored the best-seller "Profiles of Courage" which spotlighted senators throughout our history who voted according to their conscience at the expense of political expendiency and proved that the junior senator from Massachusetts has as eloquent command of the written as well as the spoken word.

An examination of Kennedy's voting record in this past session of Congress shows that the senator voted yea to the Eisenhower Doctrine, the extension of corporation and excise taxes, the Omnibus Housing Bill, Foreign Aid, the Hell's Canyon Dam and the jury-trail amended Civil Rights Bill, another instance of his following the path of conscience rather than least resistance.

Color Added

Color has been added to this quietly efficient record of achievement by such events as his marriage in 1953 to Jacqueline Lee Bouvier and his ill-timed but correct statement of support for the Algerian rebel nationalists.

Whether in the future course of political events, his religion proves to be an asset or liability to Senator Kennedy on the rugged road to the white house, Senator Kennedy has certainly proved to be an asset to his religion on which his entire past, and we trust future life, has reflected credit.

Peering with NORM PEER

. . . At the runway between Sheehan and Sullivan. The next new building to go up will be a control tower and regular flights will be scheduled. Just think . . . the only university with its own jet plane base.

. . . at the book line which is getting bigger and bigger and is threatening traffic in downtown Philadelphia. Two freshmen stood in it for thirty-one hours thinking it was the chow line and are still recuperating in Bryn Mawr Hospital from the shock when they found out the horrible truth. This book line is only outshone by the mammoth chow line. The standard procedure after lunch is to go back to the end of the line and move forward slowly to dinner. A few teachers are holding class in line to enable those with tight schedules to eat at all.

. . . at the literature the Opera-Classica has on all the bulletin boards. The reason for this is they have engaged three printers working full time printing leaflets. The thumb tack manufacturers, however, still cannot keep up and a real crisis is developing.

. . . at all the students with hoarse voices. This comes from being a white hat, from arguing with a Dean about, changing your schedule, from trying to get extra food in the chow hall, or trying to get another beer in the crowded beverage dispensaries in the area.

. . . at all the clubs that the freshmen are being urged to join. The most popular this year again are the Late Evening Permission Club, the Stay Up and Watch TV Club, The Spirits Committee, and the heavily populated Hang Around Dougherty Hall Idlers Association.

White Hats' True Nature Revealed

By FRANK McCORMICK

Being thrown suddenly into a completely new environment can be a trying experience for anyone, and a new freshman on a strange college campus is about as bewildered a soul as it is possible to imagine.

Hesitantly falling into line outside of the field house two weeks ago, we were all just a bit awed by our surroundings and not at all sure exactly what we were supposed to do. Suddenly a little gent in a cord jacket and a white hat strolled up to us and bawled, "Wher ya' from frosh." Taken back a little we stared at him, and then slowly, a little self-consciously, we replied, "Villanova." "Where," he demanded again. "Villanova,"—this time a little louder. "Let's go now, let's go, let's hear it. You're men now, Villanova men, not high school kids. Now, where ya' from." "VIL-LA-NO-VA."

All Sizes

The little guy we soon came to learn was known as a "white hat," — a strange type of creature possessing disarming amiability, overpowering self-confidence, and a loud, loud voice. Big ones, little ones, fat ones, skinny ones. Their diversity in appearance and personality was great, but it was completely overshadowed by their one magnificient point of unity—a fanatical love of Villanova and a determination to instill in us that same love.

To do this, they gave up a week of their vacation to come to Villanova and serve as our absolute lords and masters during orientation. They screamed at us, bossed us, fined us, mooched cigarettes off us, forced us to carry upperclassmen's trunks and generally gave all appearances of trying to make our life miserable.

Instilled Pride In Us

But appearances are often deceiving, and we frosh soon realized that because of them a change was taking place in us. They made us memorize the school songs, which helped give us a special sense of pride in our new school. They taught us to snap out cheers instantly and forcibly, thus enabling us to add our voices to the great cry which represents the spirit that is Villanova. They constantly and enthusiastically recounted the achievments of the university, and to us, the largest class ever to enter Villanova, they issued the challenge to make our accomplishments match our numbers.

Individuals Make Villanova

Gradually we came to the understanding that for the next four years we aren't just attending a school called Villanova — we are that school. Its hopes for success and glory in the future lie in us, and it is the responsibility of each of us to make his own individual contribution to the greatness that is Villanova's destiny.

For passing on to us this spirit of love, pride and responsibility we, the Class of 1961, offer a simple but heartfelt, "Thanks, White Hats."

Another striking first in the annals of this university as announced by Rev. John Klekotka, registrar, is the enrollment of a larger number of resident students than day-hops.

Villanova is also attracting students from a wider geographical area. This year the university numbers among its members Suqiura Villanova's first representative from Japan.

for a temporary greatness and brought a state of total bitterness to the integration of the colored youth into Central High School.

The "Preservator of the Peace" fulfilled his duty they say in prohibiting a scene of terror and hate that did not exist until he gave it reason to. The "Preservator" (a title he had never given himself until after a weekend visit of Georgia in whose vocabulary the word had long found an evasive paradise in favor of segregation) protected his reelection, claimed that unlike the people of Tennessee he had helped integrate the state universities and high schools and hap-hazardly rationalized his position contra Eisenhower.

Faubus vs. Clement

The fact that no violence had occurred in other areas of test integration did not by any means seem to make his Little Rock violence informants doubtful in their sincerity. Why didn't he enter the scene at Central High School himself and why didn't he evaluate the calm scene of Clinton, Tennessee this fall where Frank Clement regardless of personal feeling followed the Constitution to which he swore fealty?

The competance of that controversial statesman of Arkansas is irrelevant as is anything pertaining to his pre-political background but the historical mistake of hi sdecision to have the National Guard repel Negro students away from rights and education to the taunts of sadistically primed teenagers and "Kaspers," will be recorded among the scenes of American infamy.

To paint an historical portrait of these days in Little Rock to hang among the things of men would be an action to be regretted in time as the Nazi persecution of the Jews, or the Russian purges of opposition for in retrospect its meaningfulness is no less severe.

Faculty members are invited to participate in the dialogue Mass which will be held again this year in the University Chapel on the first Thursday of each monthat 10:30 A. M. for the remainder of the scholastic year.

Opera Society Opens Season With Beethoven

Opera-Classica will inaugurate the 1957-58 season by featuring Beethoven's 5th Symphony on the new Hi-Fi system tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall.

In connection with the desires of the members of the club, the administration has purchased music appreciation records and the first of the series will be presented tomorrow evening.

Membership Requirements

Any student, teacher or administrator of the university is eligible for membership upon the nomination of one regular member of O-C and this nominee must also possess a desire to members for the presentation of classical music.

Rifle Team Wins Top Navy Trophy

The Villanova Rifle Team under the guidance of Sergeant Edward Mulcaney has been awarded the Secretary of Navy Rifle Trophy in postal tournament completition with all fifty-two colleges with an NROTC unit.

The trophy is an annual one and is decided upon by the scoring of targets mailed in by the participating teams. The National Rifle Association scored the targets and declared the winner.

Villanova managed to edge out the University of Rochester for top spot by amassing a score of 1396 points. The University of Nebraska copped third place.

Passarella

Fred Passarella paced the team witha rousing 292, which was good enough to garner the individual high score trophy as well give the team a substantial boost to first place.

Joe Polizzotto scored a 280, Walt Gould a 276, Cass Lawler a 275 and Lou Spevetz a 273.

Fred Passarella, a marine candidate in the NROTC, returns this year to head the Rifle Team which lends high hopes for the successful completion of tough schedule.

Student Thoughts Shown By Night Division Survey

. . . and to all the questions proposed came similarly encouraging answers to a questionnaire probing the Evening Division students' understanding of the value of their college education.

The rewards of higher education constitute a multi-faceted and an endlessly debated subject. The judgment of students on this subject, however,, are all too often neglected.

Judgments Misunderstood

Sometimes their judgments are misunderstood, sometimes their opinions are denied even a hearing. That students' observations should be regarded as irrelevant is strange, for certainly the college exists for the good of the student as well as for the state of learning.

Yet often the student does not recognize his own good; and more often he mis-states it. The failure to recognize the real values, the true rewards of higher education, is itself the result of many things, not least in importance the students' immaturity.

Yet years sometimes bring maturity, and it is often the case that older students, such as the student body of a college evening division, can speak intelligently and perceptively about the aims and the achievements of their college program.

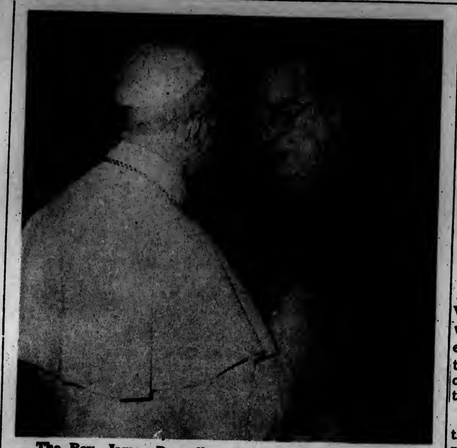
The average age of the Villanova Evening Division student is 28—nearly 10 years older than the average age of regular college students—and the average student has a larger experience background before entering the college program.

Anonymous returns from 350 students—nearly half the student body—revealed that in the students' self-appraisal their energies(time, and money are accruing to them rich rewards in intellectual, moral ,and material gain.

Because the aim of education is, in Cardinal Newman's words, "cultivation of the intellect," because the university education "gives a man a clear conscious view of his own opinions and judgments, a truth in developing them, an eloquence in expressing them, and a force in urging them," the questionnaire sought to find primarily the students' estimate of their intellectual growth measured by Newman's formularization.

Nearly 300 of the 350 students noted that they were as a result of the courses far better equipted to enter a discussions of serious intellectual matters, to attend lectures in connection with community affairs, and to evaluate the problems of human relationships intelligently.

Also 250 students had enlarged their personal libraries to a considerable extent, and this group reported that they had been stimulated to read and appreciate good literature and that they now had a better understanding of subjects in the "humanities."



Speaking Ability

An increased ability to speak effectively was admitted by 245 students, and 124 students have since the beginning of their college program written one or more articles for magazines, journals, or newspapers. Most imporatnt of all the gains was that remarked by more than 300 students: college education made them more respectful of the opinions and beliefs of others.

Villanova is a Christian University interested in the devlopment of the whole man insofar as the University can further that end.

That their education was achieving that end was attested by the more than 300 students who had been motivated to develop a willingness to accept responsibility as a result of their broadened understanding of the life problems which confront them.

Approximately 275 students felt that they had developed a better spiritual and moral outlook on life, and an equally large group noted in themselves a keener appreciation of good business ethics. The general religious environment at Villanova had profited almost 240 men and women of the Evening Division.

The Rev. James Donnellon, O.S.A., university president is shown above conversing with Pope Pius XII during the past summer. Father Donnellon, who recently celebrated his 25th anniversary as an Augustinian priest, together with the Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A., toured Europe during the summer and were granted an audience with the Pope.

Alumni Association Elects Joseph O'Donnell President

Officers of the Villanova Alumni Association for the next two years were recently announced by officials at the alumni office.

Joseph F. O'Donnell, Class of '43, will serve as president of the organization, while Martin L. Gill, '32, will be executive vice-president and Edward J. Michaels, '36, will serve as vice-president.

Other officers include: the Rev. Howard J. Richmond, '33, chaplain; George J. Pequignot, '51 secretary and the Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., '35, director of alumni relations.

Initial Outing

The Florida State gridiron contest set for Oct. 5 will be this year's homecoming day for the Villanova Alumni as well as for the student body.

Lunch will be available in the Dougherty Hall cafeteria for all alumni beginning at 11 a.m.

Alumni Honored

Alumni officials also reported that Charles S. Witkowski, '31, was recently named mayor of Jersey City, N. J. While at Villanova, he was outstanding both as a scholar and an athlete.

Robert E. O'Brien, '40, has been elected a vice-president of the Moore-McCormick Lines, Inc. O'Brien received the Bachelor of Science degree at Villanova and upon graduation served four years in the U. S. Navy.

Mr. Phelan Dies

The death of a Villanova alumnus, Mr. Matthew Phelan, was also learned by the university.

Mr. Phelan, in his mid-80's was a resident of Waterbury, Conn., and was for years noted for his travels to Fenway Park in Boston as an avid baseball fan where he has followed closely Jim Piersall, Red Sox outfielder.

Literary Club Plans Busy Program, Martinez Reveals

B. J. Bedard Moderator Of Arts Frat

By ED KARRER

Mr. Bernard J. Bedard, of the Villanova English Department was presented as the new moderator of the Delta Pi Mu Fraternity at the Arts and Sciences organization's first meeting of the year last Thursday evening.

Approximately 80 members of the fraternity greeted the new moderator, who succeeds Dr. John McEnerney, Assistant to the Dean of Student Affairs and a member of the Villanova faculty, who resigned the position this year "with reluctance," because of the increase in his academic duties.

B. J. BEDARD
Fraternity Moderator

Other business conducted by the fraternity involved the setting of dues for the forthcoming year, naming committees to work on Friday's Intra-Fraternity Ball, making arrangements to enter a team in the intramural football league and naming a committee to prepare a float for the Homecoming Game parade.

New Moderator

The new moderator received his bachelor's Degree in English from Notre Dame University, his Master's from Michigan and became a member of the Villanova faculty in 1955.

DPM President John Moynihan introduced Mr. Bedard and conducted the business meeting.

At the Literary Club's opening meeting of the semester last week Program Chairman Tom Martinez outlined a general project of vast scope to which every member of the organization may contribute by doing research, editing, copy reading, typing, etc.

The project, the first undertaking of this nature ever attempted by the club, would be spread out over the entire scholastic year and result in the compilation of selected material on a particular author, genre, or period in English or American literature.

At the present time, Martinez and the officers are accepting suggestions regarding the topic of the project from active club members. "It would be a worthwhile and self-satisfying endeavor", said Martinez, "and one that would be a tangible product of the Literary Club."

Schedule Announced

The announcement of the project followed a reading of a tentative schedule of activities by Joe Kinney, club president. Also planned by Martinez, the first semester schedule features literary recordings and a symposium at the regular bi-weekly meetings.

The first regular meeting is Wednesday, October 9 and a prominent speaker — probably from the English department— will address the group, which is one of the newest organizations on campus.

Kinney Welcomes All

Kinney announced that "any undergraduate, regardless of his major field of study, may join by submitting a criticism of a book approved by the officers and paying the $2. semester dues."

English majors may obtain membership cards from secretary Ken Miller merely by paying the semi-annual dues.

Active Organization

In its first three months of operation last spring, the Literary Club presented two speakers: Rev. Robert M. Sullivan O.S.A., Dean of Arts and Sciences and Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of Villanova's Law School—in addition to a group discussion on the poetry of Robert Frost. Mr. John H. Slater, instructor in the English Department, moderated this discussion.

The society was also represented at a "Hemingway symposium" conducted at Marymount College in New York City in May and sponsored a campus movie.

ustinian Order. Besides the prominent positions he holds as Vicar of Vatican City and Assistant at the Papal Throne, his Excellency was recently Knighted by Queen Juliana of the Netherlands.

More Residents Than Dayhops

Another striking first in the annals of this university as announced by Rev. John Klekotka, registrar, is the enrollment of a larger number of resident students than day-hops.

Villanova is also attracting students from a wider geographical area. This year the university numbers among its members Suqiura Villanova's first representative from Japan.

Bishop Peter Canisius Van Lierde, O.S.A., Vicar General of Vatican City and assistant at the Papal Throne, is shown as he officiated at this year's opening day Mass for non-resident students.

for a temporary greatness and brought a state of total bitterness to the integration of the colored youth into Central High School.

The "Preservator of the Peace" fulfilled his duty they say in prohibiting a scene of terror and hate that did not exist until he gave it reason to. The "Preservator" (a title he had never given himself until after a weekend visit of Georgia in whose vocabulary the word had long found an evasive paradise in favor of segregation) protected his reelection, claimed that unlike the people of Tennessee he had helped integrate the state universities and high schools and hap-hazardly rationalized his position contra Eisenhower.

Faubus vs. Clement

The fact that no violence had occurred in other areas of test integration did not by any means seem to make his Little Rock violence informants doubtful in their sincerity. Why didn't he enter the scene at Central High School himself and why didn't he evaluate the calm scene of Clinton, Tennessee this fall where Frank Clement regardless of personal feeling followed the Constitution to which he swore fealty?

The competance of that controversial statesman of Arkansas is irrelevant as is anything pertaining to his pre-political background but the historical mistake of hi sdecision to have the National Guard repel Negro students away from, rights and education to the taunts of sadistically primed teenagers and "Kaspers," will be recorded among the scenes of American infamy.

To paint an historical portrait of these days in Little Rock to hang among the things of men would be an action to be regretted in time as the Nazi persecution of the Jews, or the Russian purges of opposition for in retrospect its meaningfulness is no less severe.

Faculty members are invited to participate in the dialogue Mass which will be held again this year in the University Chapel on the first Thursday of each monthat 10:30 A. M. for the remainder of the scholastic year.

Opera Society Opens Season With Beethoven

Opera-Classica will inaugurate the 1957-58 season by featuring Beethoven's 5th Symphony on the new Hi-Fi system tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall.

The second concert of the season will feature two films: "Instruments of the Orchestra" and "The Telephone Hour" with Donald Voorhees conducting the Bell Telephone Orchestra and Zino Francescatti, solo violinist.

In connection with the desires of the members of the club, the administration has purchased music appreciation records and the first of the series will be presented tomorrow evening.

Membership Requirements

Any student, teacher or administrator of the university is eligible for membership upon the nomination of one regular member of O-C and this nominee must also possess a desire to members for the presentation of classical music.

On Oct. 1, Tuesday, at 7:30 p. m. in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall, the club will feature Renata Tebaldi singing the lead in Aida and this will prepare for the opera in Philadelphia on Oct. 11.

Hi-Fi—Purchased

The university administration has purchased a high quality sound system for the club in its effort to promote classical music on campus.

In addition the sound system is also equipped for stereophonic sound and O-C will have a nonmembership concert early in October which will feature Tchiakovsky's 1812 Overture, Strauss Polkas, marches, waltzes, and Saint Saens Symphony for Orchestra and Organ all on stereophonic tapes. The tape mechanism will be borrowed from Theodore Cheng who assembled and designed the present set.

Rifle Team Wins Top Navy Trophy

The Villanova Rifle Team under the guidance of Sergeant Edward Mulcaney has been awarded the Secretary of Navy Rifle Trophy in postal tournament completition with all fifty-two colleges with an NROTC unit.

The trophy is an annual one and is decided upon by the scoring of targets mailed in by the participating teams. The National Rifle Association scored the targets and declared the winner.

Villanova managed to edge out the University of Rochester for top spot by amassing a score of 1396 points. The University of Nebraska copped third place.

Passarella

Fred Passarella paced the team witha rousing 292, which was good enough to garner the individual high score trophy as well give the team a substantial boost to first place.

Joe Polizzotto scored a 280, Walt Gould a 276, Cass Lawler a 275 and Lou Spevetz a 273.

Fred Passarella, a marine candidate in the NROTC, returns this year to head the Rifle Team which lends high hopes for the successful completion of tough schedule.

. . . and to all the questions proposed came similarly encouraging answers to a questionnaire probing the Evening Division students' understanding of the value of their college education.

The rewards of higher education constitute a multi-faceted and an endlessly debated subject. The judgment of students on this subject, however,, are all too often neglected.

Judgments Misunderstood

Sometimes their judgments are misunderstood, sometimes their opinions are denied even a hearing. That students' observations should be regarded as irrelevant is strange, for certainly the college exists for the good of the student as well as for the state of learning.

Yet often the student does not recognize his own good; and more often he mis-states it. The failure to recognize the real values, the true rewards of higher education, is itself the result of many things, not least in importance the students' immaturity.

Yet years sometimes bring maturity, and it is often the case that older students, such as the student body of a college evening division, can speak intelligently and perceptively about the aims and the achievements of their college program.

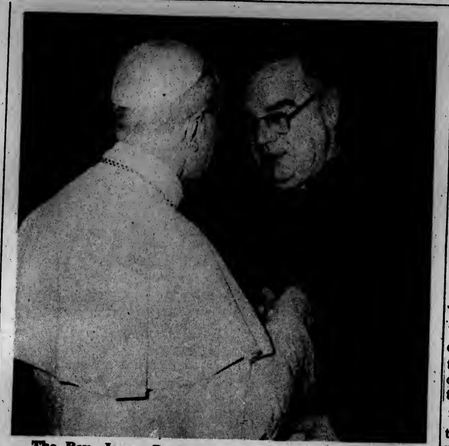
The average age of the Villanova Evening Division student is 28—nearly 10 years older than the average age of regular college students—and the average student has a larger experience background before entering the college program.

Anonymous returns from 350 students—nearly half the student body—revealed that in the students' self-appraisal their energies(time, and money are accruing to them rich rewards in intellectual, moral ,and material gain.

Because the aim of education is, in Cardinal Newman's words, "cultivation of the intellect," because the university education "gives a man a clear conscious view of his own opinions and judgments, a truth in developing them, an eloquence in expressing them, and a force in urging them," the questionnaire sought to find primarily the students' estimate of their intellectual growth measured by Newman's formularization.

Nearly 300 of the 350 students noted that they were as a result of the courses far better equipted to enter a discussions of serious intellectual matters, to attend lectures in connection with community affairs, and to evaluate the problems of human relationships intelligently.

Also 250 students had enlarged their personal libraries to a considerable extent, and this group reported that they had been stimulated to read and appreciate good literature and that they now had a better understanding of subjects in the "humanities."



Speaking Ability

An increased ability to speak effectively was admitted by 245 students, and 124 students have since the beginning of their college program written one or more articles for magazines, journals, or newspapers. Most imporatnt of all the gains was that remarked by more than 300 students: college education made them more respectful of the opinions and beliefs of others.

Villanova is a Christian University interested in the devlopment of the whole man insofar as the University can further that end.

That their education was achieving that end was attested by the more than 300 students who had been motivated to develop a willingness to accept responsibility as a result of their broadened understanding of the life problems which confront them.

Approximately 275 students felt that they had developed a better spiritual and moral outlook on life, and an equally large group noted in themselves a keener appreciation of good business ethics. The general religious environment at Villanova had profited almost 240 men and women of the Evening Division.

Alumni officials also reported that Charles S. Witkowski, '31, was recently named mayor of Jersey City, N. J. While at Villanova, he was outstanding both as a scholar and an athlete.

Robert E. O'Brien, '40, has been elected a vice-president of the Moore-McCormick Lines, Inc. O'Brien received the Bachelor of Science degree at Villanova and upon graduation served four years in the U. S. Navy.

Mr. Phelan Dies

Mr. Phelan, in his mid-80's was a resident of Waterbury, Conn., and was for years noted for his travels to Fenway Park in Boston as an avid baseball fan where he has followed closely Jim Piersall, Red Sox outfielder.

Chairman Pat Nicholson has announced that the student council will meet tonight at 6:30 in room 207 C & F.

Literary Club Plans Busy Program, Martinez Reveals

B. J. Bedard Moderator Of Arts Frat

By ED KARRER

Mr. Bernard J. Bedard, of the Villanova English Department was presented as the new moderator of the Delta Pi Mu Fraternity at the Arts and Sciences organization's first meeting of the year last Thursday evening.

Approximately 80 members of the fraternity greeted the new moderator, who succeeds Dr. John McEnerney, Assistant to the Dean of Student Affairs and a member of the Villanova faculty, who resigned the position this year "with reluctance," because of the increase in his academic duties.

B. J. BEDARD
Fraternity Moderator

Other business conducted by the fraternity involved the setting of dues for the forthcoming year, naming committees to work on Friday's Intra-Fraternity Ball, making arrangements to enter a team in the intramural football league and naming a committee to prepare a float for the Homecoming Game parade.

New Moderator

The new moderator received his bachelor's Degree in English from Notre Dame University, his Master's from Michigan and became a member of the Villanova faculty in 1955.

DPM President John Moynihan introduced Mr. Bedard and conducted the business meeting.

At the Literary Club's opening meeting of the semester last week Program Chairman Tom Martinez outlined a general project of vast scope to which every member of the organization may contribute by doing research, editing, copy reading, typing, etc.

The project, the first undertaking of this nature ever attempted by the club, would be spread out over the entire scholastic year and result in the compilation of selected material on a particular author, genre, or period in English or American literature.

At the present time, Martinez and the officers are accepting suggestions regarding the topic of the project from active club members. "It would be a worthwhile and self-satisfying endeavor", said Martinez, "and one that would be a tangible product of the Literary Club."

Schedule Announced

The announcement of the project followed a reading of a tentative schedule of activities by Joe Kinney, club president. Also planned by Martinez, the first semester schedule features literary recordings and a symposium at the regular bi-weekly meetings.

The first regular meeting is Wednesday, October 9 and a prominent speaker — probably from the English department— will address the group, which is one of the newest organizations on campus.

Kinney Welcomes All

Kinney announced that "any undergraduate, regardless of his major field of study, may join by submitting a criticism of a book approved by the officers and paying the $2. semester dues."

English majors may obtain membership cards from secretary Ken Miller merely by paying the semi-annual dues.

Active Organization

In its first three months of operation last spring, the Literary Club presented two speakers: Rev. Robert M. Sullivan O.S.A., Dean of Arts and Sciences and Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of Villanova's Law School—in addition to a group discussion on the poetry of Robert Frost. Mr. John H. Slater, instructor in the English Department, moderated this discussion.

The society was also represented at a "Hemingway symposium" conducted at Marymount College in New York City in May and sponsored a campus movie.

Simpson Hall Seeks 5th Straight

Having retired the Nick Basca Memorial Trophy after capturing its fourth consecutive championship in the "nicest decorated hall on campus" competition last year, Simpson Hall will try to extend its streak next weekend.

Every dormitory will put on an exterior display with an appropriate "Beat Florida State" theme in an effort to dislodge the perennial titlists. Judging takes place on Friday, Oct. 4, the night before the Wildcats-Seminoles football game at Goodreau Stadium. Aparade through the campus will precede the judging.

Father Klekotka Named New Director of Admissions

Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., university president announced last week that Rev. John A. Klekotka O.S.A. has been appointed director of admissions for the university, to replace Rev. Thomas A. Burke, O.S.A.

Father Klekotka has been a member of the faculty for the past 15 years. During the academic year 1956-1957, he held the position of chaplain of the university.

Father Burke was director of admissions for six years prior to his recent transfer to Merrimac College in Andover, Mass. where he will assume the duties of dean of engineering. Merrimac, like Villanova, is operated by the Augustinian Fathers.

FR. KLEKOTKA
New Registrar

A native Philadelphian, Father Klekotka received his high school education at Roman Catholic, Class of 1931. After graduating from Villanova's School of Engineering in 1935, he entered the Augustinian Order the following year. Ordination came in 1941 in Washington, D. C.

Father Klekotka was assigned to the Villanova faculty in 1942 subsequent to receiving his M.S. from Catholic University. In 1951 the new admissions director was chosen to head the department of electrical engineering.

New Buildings, Improvements Now On Campus

The ever-expanding student body of Villanova University has necessitated various improvements which were accomplished during the past summer months.

Sheehan Hall, accommodating some 500 students, is the most prominent of these new improvements. The hall was named after the late Rev. John Sheehan, former provincial of the Augustinian Order.

Another new building nearing completion and housing Villanova's largest division is the Commerce and Finance building. This structure will cost a million and one half dollars and is expected to be ready for occupancy at the beginning of the second semester.

Stadium Enlarged

The east wing of the Villanova stadium has been enlarged, seating approximately 16,000. Plans for the future include the extension of the bleachers to form a horse-shoe arrangement. A new and larger press box will be used for coming home games.

A new cafeteria has been opened on the first floor of Mendel Hall for the staff of the university. It is decorated in pink and blue tile.

Another improvement is a service bar containing food utensils, butter and dressings, placed on either side of the resident cafeteria. A new method of conveyors for the dispensing of trays has also been provided.

Parking Facilities Improved

The faculty and non-resident students parking lot has been expanded, increasing the capacity by about 300 additional cars.

Numerous pavements have been laid at strategic points of the campus. The most important of these are situated at the southwest corner of Dougherty Hall and at the southeast corner of the campus in front of Simpson Hall.

Daly Appoints 14-Man Staff To Yearbook

With the recent completion of the distribution of last year's yearbooks, the new staff of the Belle Air is prepared to begin work on its new issue.

Editor-in-Chief Jack Daly has sent out a call for any new staff members who might wish to join the group and has expressed optimism on the prospects of the 1958 edition.

"The book will appear this year, sometime in May, if everything goes according to schedule. We worked on the book over the summer and expect to receive the tentative dummies from the publisher before the first of October," Daly said.

Senior Portraits

Senior portraits are well on their way towards completion and the photographer is expected to be here within the next few weeks to take the remaining ones. The exact date of his visit will be announced in next week's issue of the Villanovan.

14 Man Staff

The editorial staff for the coming year has been decided and will consist of fourteen men:

Under the editor-in-chief Daly will come the feature editor, Paul Finan; copy editor, Leo Rogers; sports editor, Jim Gilligan; activities editor, Dave Franklin, who will supervise the activities of four subordinates: Jack Cranley, representative of the Commerce and Finance school; Ray Lopez, who will report what happens in the engineering divsion; Terry LaCorte, the Arts school representative and a lone nurse, Kathleen Collins.

The typing editor will be John Fixl; Al Stoughton will handle the photography. Circulation editor Joe Timko will distribute the finished work. Business will be handled jointly by managers Ted Macri and Al Severance. Frank Bonner will take care of the senior section.

Campus Jazz Band Has 6 New Players

The Villanovans, the school's popular jazz band, are back again this year with many new faces, but playing the same fine music which has brought them such wide acclaim in past years.

Senior Jack Emerick, veteran of three years with the group which achieved such great success under Bobby Schiller, will head this year's band.

Along with Emerick on banjo are senior Jerry Yantis, trumpet; sophomores Carlo Lo Vecchio, clarinet and sax; Lou Marrucci, piano; and Jay McAndrews who will play drums until the return of Joe Fitzpatrick. Bass and tuba will be handled by freshman Dick Morrison.

Tuba Added

The use of a tuba in dixieland numbers is something new for the band. According to Emerick, it produces a deeper bass beat and tends to give more drive and bounce to the jazz numbers.

The Villanovans, who play for dances and parties, will use the same style as in previous years.

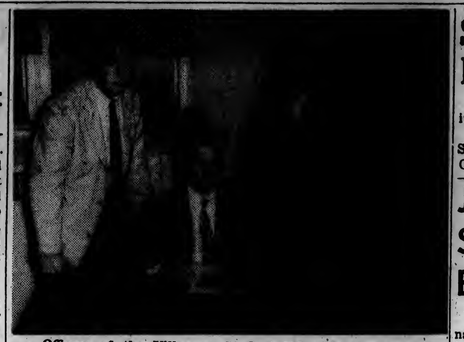
The new editor of the Villanova Engineer, John Filliman, E. E. '58, announces that work will begin immediately on the first issue. All old members and those members, who signed up for the Engineer staff last May, are asked to watch the bulletin boards for a notice of the first meeting.

Frosh Needed

Anyone interested in joining the Engineer staff, especially freshmen, should report to John Filliman in room 225 Sheehan Hall. The freshmen will be interested to know that the Villanova Engineer is one of the best college engineering publications in the country.

Each year, as will be the case this year, four issues will appear. The magazine will be published in November, January, March, and May. For the most part the articles deal with science along with such articles as Meet the Profs and Campus Activities. All articles are written by the students.



Meet Deadlines

Gerald Ratchford, the assistant editor, would like to have the articles for the November issue in his room, 307 Sheehan Hall, by October 7. The copy features should be finished by October 15. If these deadlines are met, the November issue of the Engineer will be circulated before the Thanksgiving holidays.

With the aid of more students writing articles the editors expect this years Engineer to be the largest ever. Last year the circulation reached its highest peak with publications sent to high schools throughout the country.

Other Editors

Other new editors of the Villanova Engineer; are David Borcik, associate editor, and Robert Rosko, managing editor.

Singers, Band Attract 350 Eager Frosh

The Villanova Singers and the university band, both under the direction of James Cullen, new instructor of music on campus, began their 1957-58 season with an extensive campaign for the recruiting of freshmen.

The incoming Class of 1961 has 350 members who either sing or play a musical instrument and of these one-third turned out for the two organizations.

Officers Aid Turnout

This surprising turnout was due to the work of Jim Hull, the student director of the band; George Hatton, its president; and Wilfred Boucher, its secretary-treasurer, while the Singers were reinforced through the efforts of Ken MacGillivray and Jim Corey, president and secretary-treasurer respectively.

The university band started its musical functions by playing for a pep-rally Wednesday of Orientation Week with a group composed mainly of freshmen with only one previous practice the night before.

Plans Set

Plans for the Singers include three appearances in less than a month beginning with the opening Mass for the evening division September 26, a Red Mass for the law school October 7, and the customary capping ceremonies for the Nursing Division October 13.

The director of the two groups disclosed that he was very pleased with the three rehearsals each organization held during Orientation Week.

New Consultants

The new consultants in metallurgy are: Dr. Gilbert London, Dr. Harry Makami, Dr. Samuel K. Mash, Peter Novak, Dr. Milton Schwartz, and Dr. Theodore Slawechi.

The new members of the library staff include Mrs. Esther B. Friedrich, Mrs. Charlene C. Hennessy, Mrs. Carolyn M. Langford and Mrs. George N. Quam while the Villanova Law School has added Florian J. Bartosic and Ernest J. Roberts to their staff.

SEA Holds First Meeting; Education Film Scheduled

The Student Education Association of Villanova will open its year's activities on Tuesday, October 1 at 7:30 p.m.

Featured at the meeting will be a brief orientation talk, "The SEA—Its Purposes and Functions," by the club's moderator, Dr. George Cressman of the department of education, and also to be featured will be a new Education Association film on teacher training: "Not By Chance."

Dressler to Speak

Treasurer John Hughes will report on the NEA Centennial Convention held in Phila., June 30-July 5; President Richard Dressler will speak on the PSEA fall Leaders' Conference which took place on Sept. 14 at Neshaminy High School, Langhorne, Pa. and the Second Annual Work Conference sponsored by the SEA of Pa. at Allenbury Lodge, Boiling Springs, Pa.

Jim Fox, secretary, has received a notice of salary increases for the teacher in the Philadelphia diocesan school system which he will announce at the meeting on Oct. 1.

Varied Program

Program chairman John O'Donnell has announced plans for a varied series of programs which will serve the needs and interests of those students interested in teaching.

In conjunction with the monthly meetings, there will be: speakers from the state professional organization and from the state and local board of education; current motion pictures concerning the teaching profession; joint meetings with local colleges which are engaged in teacher education; a proposed student-faculty panel discussion and field trips. Plans for social activities are now under consideration.

Interest High

Joseph Kulick, chairman of the membership committee, has announced that applications for membership are now available and those interested in joining may contact him or leave their name and address in the education office, room 140, Mendel Hall. Kulick urged that all those who are interested in some form of teaching, attend these meetings because they are the ones who will benefit.

James Cullen Set To Head Band, Singers

James W. Cullen has been named new instructor of music on campus and his present duties include the directorship of both the university band and the Villanova Singers.

Because of the efforts and success of the dean of the law school, Harold Gill Reuschlein, who guided the Singers for the past four years, the administration now feels it should start this program of music.

Temple Grad

The new director graduated from Temple in 1951 and received his E.D.M. in 1953 from the same university.

A native of Philadelphia he has had varied experiences in choral work as an assistant to the director of choral activities at Temple and directing the men's glee club.

He was also the director of choral activities and an instructor in music at Xavier of Louisiana.

Directs Local Schools

Other experience came from being the associate conductor of the Reading Philharmonic Orchestra and for a time he was the director of St. Joseph's and La-Salle High Schools here in the Philadelphia area.

As part of his activities Mr. Cullen plans to give credit courses in music beginning in February provided there is enough student participation.

Villanova Edged By Baylor, 7-0

This is part of the mob that jammed the Pennsylvania Railroad station last week to give the Wildcat football team a rousing send-off for Saturday's battle with Baylor in Waco, Texas. Spurred on by the student spirit, the Main Liners, three touchdown underdogs, just missed upsetting the Bears, lost 7-0.

Main Liners Lose Opener, Miss Upsetting Texan Unit On Two Fumbles; Luzzi Hurt

Villanova's upset-minded Wildcats came within inches of wiping out all the deep thought of the nation's pre-season football forecasters in last Saturday's opener against Baylor, in Waco, Texas, but two fumbles and a disastrous off-sides penalty combined to crush their hopes.

Highly ranked Baylor eked out a 7-0 victory, but the see-saw battle was close enough to at least shake the composure of gridiron masterminds throughout the country.

The Wildcats had said all along that they could beat the mighty Bears, and were rated the Texas eleven's toughest opening opponent in 18 years even while they were listed as two to three touchdown underdogs.

Outnumbered—Not Outclassed

Playing in the face of 90 degree-plus temperatures, the outnumbered (34 men in uniform to Baylor's 60) Main Liners were on the threshold of the Bear's goal line twice, but never managed to break into the touchdown column.

The end came late in the third quarter. Line-slamming fullback Jack Devereaux lost hold of the ball on his own 27 yard line, and Baylor recovered. Even then, despite their extensive bench strength, it took the Bears eight plays to make the 27 yards, and only with the help of a five yard off-sides penalty against the battling Wildcats.

The penalty gave Baylor a first down on the five, and back Dick Clark slammed into the valiant Wildcat line three times before he scored from the one. A Villanova off-sides nullified the missed first attempt for the extra point, and the second try was good.

Actually, Frank Reagan's nomads had been pretty much the whole show up to that point. They pushed their vaunted opponents all over the field, to the dismay of 21,000 on-lookers, and didn't allow the Bears to cross into Villanova territory until midway through the second quarter.

68-yd. March

The Main Liners set the Bears back on their "paws" with a startling power-attack right at the start, marching 68 yards with the opening kick-off, only to be stopped on the three yard line when halfback Davey Parr fumbled. Villanova forced the harassed Texans to kick, and a 44-yard run-back by Bill Halligan put them on the 20. They were forced back to the 27, and then an interception of a Jim Grazione pass ended the threat.

Villanova posed two other scoring threats in the second half, one that resulted from a mid-field interception by Billy Magee and carried the Wildcats to the three again, where Devereaux missed a first down by inches.

All-American tackle candidate Don Luzzi paced the Main Liners' defense in the first half, but was injured during a Baylor drive that opened the second. The extent of the star lineman's injuries is unknown at this writing.

The Wildcats also showed no inclination to give up their nation-leading pass defense. The Bears were able to gain only 19 yards in the air, completing three tosses out of 13 attempts.

2 Campus Games Next on Schedule For Reagan's Unit

On two successive Saturdays Villanova will be invaded by two leading southern elevens.

This Saturday afternoon Coach Homer Hobb's Purple Hurricanes of Furman will meet the charges of Frank Reagan in the recently renovated Villanova Stadium.

The Furman squad is built around senior halfback and team captain Jerry Penland. Penland was one of the top runners in the Southern Conference a year ago and should prove even better this season.

Other standouts on the team include fullback Jimmy Grant and junior center Buddy Walton. The latter was a real mainstay in the middle of the line last year.

See .500 Season

The flanks should be held down by Ray Siminski and Dick Pfeifer with Woody Stewart, Mack Edwards, and Tom Avery pressing them for their starting positions.

Ronnie Brown, Virgil Gambrell, Gene Head, Hinton Davis, and two year lettermen George Harrison and Nick Tzouvelekas are fighting it out for other starting jobs.

After years of punishment on the gridiron, the Hurricane is starting to rage again and Coach Hobb's squad is looking forward to a .500 season.

The following Saturday afternoon Tom Nugent's Florida State eleven will journey to Goodreau Stadium to play the Main Liners in the second home game of the season.

A year ago the Seminoles defeated the 'Cats at Municipal Stadium 20-13. State used its multiple offense, which includes Tom Nugent's famous "T" formation, to hand the Wildcats their second of four losses.

Changes Positions

This year State's offense will be directed by 5'11", 180-lb. Bobby Wren, a halfback a year ago, who has been moved to the quarterback slot by Nugent because of his all-around ability.

The leading linesman of the team is 6'2", 195-lb. end, Ron Schonburger. Because of his ability at the flank position State considers him to be an All-American candidate. Schonburger has been in the starting lineup for the Seminoles for the past two years.

To assist Wren in the backfield State will have 5'11", 195-lb. Eddie Johnson and 5'9", 190-lb. Stan Dobosz. Both of these men are hard running, powerful backs.

This group of veterans should be the nucleus behind the Seminole squad and with the help of last year's lettermen and freshmen, they should prove themselves to be one of the top southern independents.

Intramural 'Touch' Football Leagues Begin Today; Council Announces Plans

By Tom Goldschmidt

With the records set last year as a goal to be matched if not surpassed, the intramural council of the university today inaugurated the 1957-58 program of "within-the-walls" athletics.

Four "touch" football leagues initiate action today, and the prospects are that there will be at least as many teams participating, (52), as there were a year ago.

The four operating leagues play their schedules at 10:30 a.m., and 12:30, 4:30, and 5:30 p.m., respectively. Mendel Field and Austin Field will be used concurrently.

Devils Champs in '56

At the conclusion of the schedules of each league a round-robin tournament will take place among the champions of the respective leagues. Last year the Delurey Devils copped the university diadem.

Plans for the entire year, which have been formulated by the Intramural Council, were announced by Jim Corey, council president, who voiced hope and expectation that the intramural program will continue to play a vital part in the campus life of residents and day-hops alike.

Stressing the point that with the vast expansion in the enrollment of the university, the task of co-ordinating the on-campus athletic program has become increasingly difficult Corey said that the organization can use all the help it can find, and would appreciate hearing from interested Villanovans.

Father Dunne is Moderator

The entire intramural structure is headed by the Rev. John R. Dunne, O.S.A., the faculty moderator. Father Dunne's chief aide-de-camp is Ed Geisz, the council's executive secretary and the Villanova swimming coach.

Over-all policy fomulated by Father Dunne and Mr. Geisz is carried through to completion by student members of the council. Such prbolems as team schedules, officials schedules and participants equipment are the lot of the intramural councilors.

Present plans call for at least 25 members for the council. Corey would like more underclassmen to fill out a group now composed of Jim Klein, Pete O'Brien, Al Stoughton, Bob Fortier, Bill Vincent, Don Phillips, Don McCoy, Harry Georges, Rick Steibert, and Lee Christianson.

Calls For 40 Refs

Those on the council do much of the officiating themselves, but at least another 40 men would ensure that no one group shoulder the bulk of the work. Corey would be glad to see the men who feel they can fill the bill.

At a briefing yesterday, the present officials and the captains of the teams in the football leagues receive an explanation of the intramural football rules.

To avoid time-wasting arguments over the interpretation of rules which often crop up, the council has issued a directive to the effect that protests of non-judgment decisions will be allowed. The protest must be submitted in writing to the council as soon as possible after the contest is completed.

Frosh Get Big Chance

"Muff Day", a prominent part of the intramural scheme, took place on Monday, and the results will be in the Villanovan next week. This annual affair affords the freshmen the opportunity to dispose of their "regs"; provided the can overcome the sophomores in various contests, including touch football, tug of war, football for distance, egg football throw for distance, egg toss, wheelbarrow race.

There is a possibility that a horseshoe league will be formed, if there is enough interest shown. Tentatively the league would begin operations in early October.

Chances are that the basketball leagues won't start until after the Christmas vacation but that is subject to change and action might begin as early as the first week in December. One day during the basketball season will be set aside for a foul-shooting contest.

Ten Basketball Circuits

There were ten court leagues in 1956-57, spaced at various times, with most of the games being played in Alumni Gym, although at time the field house was used.

Single days will be set aside for wrestling championships, a swimming meet, a golf match and a track and field meet.

The softball leagues will get rolling in early March by which time it is also possible that a volley ball league might be found feasible.

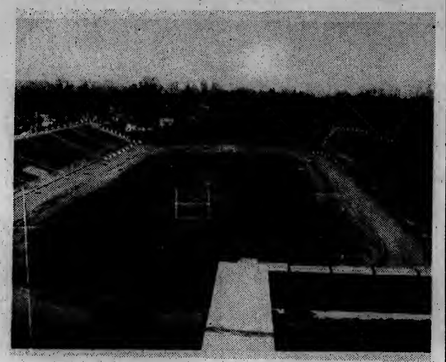
The Red Cross life saving courses and the learn-to-swim classes are also an integral part of the intramural schedule.

Senior Gets Award

Each year an Outstanding Athletic Award is presented to the senior who has been active for four years, and who has shown the highest quality of leadership and sportsmanship. Bill Hatrick garnered the award in 1957.

The approxiate participation in all intramural activities for 1956-57 was 3700. Council president Corey sees no reason why this mark should not be topped. Certainly intramurals act as a wonderful safety valve for the students of the university. The council promises full devotion to its aim of working to provide a program which will more than serve its purpose.

Frosh Win



D-Day for the Class of 1961 came to Villanova University Monday, when the frosh recorded the first yearling victory in the annual MUFF Day activities in three years.

The freshmen took the measure of their sophomore tormentors, 105-90, by piling up a large backlog of points in the track and field events to offset their 2-0 loss in the traditional "touch" football finale.

Overall, the frosh were the more consistent performers for the afternoon activities, and that spelled the margin of their victory.

Stadium Enlargement Plans

This altered photograph shows the sections of seats which are currently being installed in Goodreau Stadium. The dotted line portrays the former location of the goal posts and outlines the seat additions. The white outline on the field shows the new location of the playing field. The increased seating capacity will be appreciated by Villanova followers at the three home games on the Wildcat schedule this fall. Besides the Homecoming Game against Florida State on Oct. 5, Frank Reagan's forces will oppose Furman on Sept. 28 and close the campaign against Wichita on Nov. 23. A new and larger press box (not shown) is already completed.

Cross-Country Unit Opens Season on Oct. 12 Against St. Joe's, Georgetown Teams

On October 12, the Villanova University harriers will journey to Washington, D. C. to open their 1957 cross-country season against St. Joseph's and Georgetown.

Last year the Wildcats defeated the Hawks and Hoyas, as Ron Delany, John Kopil and Alex Breckenridge placed one, two, three for the charges of coach Jim "Jumbo" Elliott.

However, Kopil and Breckenridge, along with Al Peterson and George Browne, have been lost through graduation. The former two placed seventh and eighth respectively in the IC4A Meet last season.

The leading returnees from last season are 1,500 -meter Olympic Champion Delany and middle-distance ace Vic De Maio. Delany only ran in a few dual meets last year because of his extensive training program for the Olympic Mile.

Rahn Candidate

Other candidates for the squad include junior Bill Rahn and sophs Bob Godesky and Jonas Swenson. Rahn will be making his first appearance as a runner since his accident in Madison Square Garden during last year's indoor track season.

Dual meets this year include LaSalle on October 16 and Seton Hall on October 30. Villanova easily defeated these two squads a year ago. The harriers will end their season on November 18 with the IC4A Meet at Van Courtland Park, N. Y.

In this IC4A, Meet, the Wildcats will be attempting to win their fifth major track championship of 1957.

Earlier this year the Villanova track team won the AAU indoor and the NCAA outdoor titles and both the indoor and outdoor IC4A championships during the regular track and field season

If Coach Elliott's harriers can win the cross country title, Villanova will be the first school in history to make a clean sweep of the IC4A championships.

Geisz Announces Changes In Intramural Facilities

In conjunction with last Wednesday's Intramural council meeting, Director of Intramurals Ed Geisz has announced changes in the set-up of facilities.

The Intramural office has moved from room 102 Alumni Hall, to room 109. The former room will be the headquarters of varsity basketball coach Al Severance.

Intramural indoor activity will no longer be held in Alumni Gym, it will now utilize the facilities in the Field house; including the three cross-court basketball baskets, bowling alleys, wrestling room and swimming pool.

Request Officials

Geisz also reiterated Council President Jim Corey's request for more football officials, and asked those interested to see him in the intramural office.

There are five touch football fields in use; two on Austin Field, two on Mendel Field and one behind Sullivan Hall.

The following is reprinted from the DUBLIN EVENING PRESS of July 30. It recounts Ron Delany's victory over world mile record-holder Derek Ibbotson on the Dublin grass track just two weeks after he ran second to the Englishman in a record setting race. Sportswriter Mick Dunn gives an Irishman's view of seeing the Dublin Flash win one of the most important races of his career.

Today there are 25,000 sedate and very sensible Irishmen, women and children, calm and composed, and busily tending their day's toil. But, for one memorable moment in Lansdowne Road last night, there were 25,000 raving lunatics . . . deranged, distracted and dancing with hysterical delight and excitement. And they were not one bit ashamed of it as they hoarsely, madly acclaimed their own Ronnie Delany winning the "Santry Mile."

Who could blame them? Certainly not I. For I, too, was just as mad, just as crazy as any of them as we watched the 22-year old Olympic champion streak the tapes two priceless yards ahead of the world record holder, Derek Ibbotson, in an unforgettable mile to regain the unofficial championship title which he lost at White City a fortnight ago. It was a night to remember . . . a memory to cherish and treasure. Or as dapper Billy Morton described it: "The greatest race I've ever seen."

And there, crossing the track when it was all over, was Ronnie's father, his face flushed with paternal pride. But not one bit prouder than the mad throng of spectators packed into stands and terraces.

For this was something they had so ardently longed to see . . . Ireland first; the best of the rest behind.

Thrilling, Superb

It happened before of course. But it had happened so very far away on distant shores . . . in Melbourne at the gathering of the greatest athletes when the lean, lanky figure in the green signet showed his heels to the pick of them all. And it happened at Compton, California, where young Delany joined the elite of middle distance runners by crashing the four-minute barrier.

Last evening, the conquering was home . . . back among his own people . . . running for Ireland, repeating the wondrous form we read and heard about. And he was every inch a champion. It was as a champion Ronnie ran this race; perfectly worked-out, beautifully timed and without any sign or show of panic. Just the calm assurance of one who has conquered the best and knows he can do it again.

Perfect Timing

Of the fabulous White City mile Ronnie said he should have stayed closer to Ibbotson. That was his mistake. He wasn't repeating it last night. He was neatly tucked in behind the 25-year-old Yorkshire electrical engineer in the middle of the field as Paul Toomey and Harry Thomas, the Clonliffe pair, in turn, made the early running.

The first quarter was clocked at 58 seconds and when Peter Clark, of Thames Valley Terriers, now leading the field, went through the half mile spot in 2:2, Delany was still there, close on Ibbotson's heels in a handy third place.

He stayed comfortably there, running smoothly and easily just waiting, like a tiger menacingly threatingly following his prey poised and ready for the "kill." The third lap was a slow one. "Too slow," said Ibbotson afterwards. "If we had done the three-quarters in 3:3, or 3:2, it might have been different." Instead the watches clocked it at 3:7.

Faster . . . Faster

On that lap Ibbotson even shouted at front running Clark for a faster speed. Three times he appealed, but Peter could not do it. "And that," said Ronnie, 'was where they played into my hands. I felt quite happy when I made my effort."

What an effort! That famous 'kick" came after Ibbotson. 200 hundred yards from home, he attempted a last, desperate spurt. But he could not shake off Delany. And, as they turned the last bend into straight Derek must have felt Ronnie's breath on the back of his neck.

For a moment they were shoulder to shoulder hip to hip. And then . . . Oh, the joy . . . the supreme ecstacy of it . . . HE WAS PASSING THE ENGLISHMAN; SCORCHING UP THE LAST 20 YARDS. A perfect sportsman Ibbotson, we talked to him as a St. John ambulance man attended his scratched leg, torn by Peter Clark's flying spikes.

But no excuses from this world record-breaker, just the honest admission that "it's in the last 200 yards that Ronnie has the speed."

It was the 200-yard strip of track that sent us Irish wild. This was revenge for White City.

You yourself, Ronnie, said of that White City mile: "I shall dream about it for years." Perhaps you will. But, if we who were at Lansdowne Road dream about a mile, it will mostly be of the one you ran at Lansdowne Road last night.

Spirit Spurs Wildcats

By Frank Fleming

Working under the reins of Student Council President Pat Nicholson and Chairman Leo Rogers, the Villanova University Spirit Committee is probably the largest and most active organization of its kind in the United States.

The Spirit Committee, which in the past few years has grown from obscurity to its present stature of over 200 active members, has as its basic purpose—"building Villanova by boosting Villanova." As chairman Rogers words it, "the Spirit Committee hopes to make Villanova's name athletically and extra-curricularly known in every part of the country."

The Cinderella Story

The Spirit Committee has already helped build the spirit of Villanova during past years. Last year's record is alone a story which could be likened to that of Cinderella. The committee held rallies, bon-fires, and in general made V.U. the most spirited institution of its kind in the U.S.

It boosted spirit to a point where well over a thousand students arose early one rainy morning to welcome a defeated team back from Texas. The true spirit of Villanova was further exemplified when over three hundred Villanovans made a mid-night trip to Philadelphia's International Airport after the year's first victory, while 600 more pajama clad rooters waited until 3 o'clock in the morning for their conquering heroes to return to campus.

The committee's greatest accomplishment was the sponsorship of a student trip which sent over 1000 Villanovans on a 300 mile trek to Boston to cheer their Wildcats to victory.

Already this year the committee is in full swing. They have sponsored a freshman rally and a very successful send off for the charges of coach Frank Reagan.

The committee already has formulated most of its plans for the coming year and put many of these into operation.

Old Tradition Restored

They restored one of the campus's oldest traditions when they purchased a school mascot. The Villanova University Wildcat, Count Villan, is presently housed in the Norristown Zoo, and will be presented to the student body for the first time Saturday at the Furman game.

Plans have been formulated for the first home game this weekend. The weekend will start immediately before the Inter-Fraternity Ball with a giant rally. The next day the frosh will have float parade, with various groups of freshman working under their white hat advisors competing for awards for the best floats in the parade. The committee also plans to inaugurate a card section at this game with the freshman serving as custodians of the cards. If this section is succesful, it will be continued and enlarged for the Florida State and Wichita with possibilities for the same at the Boston College game.

To Boston Again

Plans are still being formulated for a student trip to the Boston College game. Rogers hopes to have 3400 students in Boston that weekend and is sure that over 3000 Villanovans will make the trip. Arrangements are now being made to charter a special Villanova train for the trip.

The spirit committee can help instill spirit in Villanova, but every student must do his part in order for this group of students to be successful. Committee head Rogers summed up this point when he said; "Villanova University can be, has the capacity to be, and actually is now, for the size of its student body, the most spirited College or University in the country. This spirit however is not the duty of one, two, or even 200 members of the Spirit Committee, but it is the duty of every person who has the privilege to call himself a Villanovan."

Law and Graduate Exams Announced For This Year

The Law School Admission Test and the Graduate Record Examinations will be administered four times during 1957-58. These tests are required of applicants to a number of leading law and graduate schools and they will be given at different centers throughout the United States.

Law Admission Test

The Law School Admission Test will be held on the mornings of November 9, 1957, February 15, April 19, and August 2, 1958. A candidate must make separate application for admission to each law school of his choice and should inquire of each whether it wishes him to take the test and when. Since many schools select their freshmen classes in the spring proceding their entrance, candidates for admission to next year's classes are advised ordinarily to take either the November or the February test, if possible.

The test, prepared and administered by Educational Testing Service, features objective questions measuring verbal aptitudes and reasoning ability rather than acquired information. Sample questions and information regarding registration for and administration of the test are given in a Bulletin of Information.

Bulletin Available

The Bulletin (in which an application for the test is inserted) should be obtained four to six weeks in advance of the desired testing date from Law School Admission Test, Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey. Complete applications must be received at least two weeks before the desired testing date to allow ETS time to complete the necessary testing arrangements for each candidate.

The Graduate Record Examinations, required of applicants for admission to a number of graduate schools, will be administered at examination centers throughout the country four times in the coming year, Educational Testing Service has announced. During 1956-57 more than 12,000 students took the GRE in partial fulfillment of admission requirements of graduate schools which prescribed it.

This fall candidates may take the GRE on Saturday, November 16. In 1958, the dates are January 18, April 26 and July 12. ETS advises each applicant to inquire of the graduate school of his choice which of the examinations he should take and on which dates. Applicants for graduate school fellowships should ordinarily take the designated examinations in the fall administration.

GRE Tests Twofold

The GRE tests offered in these nationwide programs include a test of general scholastic ability and and advance level tests of achievement in sixteen different subject matter fields. According to ETS, candidates are permitted to take the Aptitude Test and/or one of the Advanced Tests.

A Bulletin of Information, (in which an application is inserted) provides details of registration and administration as well as sample questions, and may be obtained from college advisers or directly from Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey, or P.O. Box 27896, Los Angeles 27, California. A completed application must reach the ETS office at least fifteen days before the date of the administration for which the candidate is applying.

Placement Office Plans Busy Year

The Placement Office, located in Room No. 114 Mendel Hall, reports that beginning September 23rd, it will register Seniors for interviews with recruiters in the Spring of 1958. The registration process consists of filling out a card giving details such as name, age, campus address and degree to be obtained upon graduation. The Senior is then given two duplicate forms, called resumes, which are to be completed at the student's leisure. Two photographs, (2 inches by 3 inches) are to be clipped to the resumes. These are to be returned to the Placement office by November 8th.

An information sheet about the placement service and another explaining details of the proper procedure in making out your resume will be supplied at the time of registration. Office hours are from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon and from 1:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.

567 Job Offers

Last year, over 150 corporations and government divisions held 2309 interviews, which resulted in 567 job offers, 145 of which were accepted. The total enrollment with the Placement office in 1957 was 364. Of this total 88 went into military service or graduate school, leaving 276 available for industrial jobs.

Present indications are that over 170 firms will visit Villanova in the Spring of 1958.

In later articles, the problem of the non-technical major and his job will be discussed.

Student Council Views

By PAT NICHOLSON, SC President

Great universities are the work of great men. Villanova certainly has seen a great many such individuals. Universities very often receive their reputations from the field of sport. Usually in this case a great deal of the tradition and spirit of the school is centered around the contributions of one man. It is he who has given the school that big something for which to be forever proud.

The life of Knute Rockne has always been the backbone of the spirit at Notre Dame University. In this respect as in all else, Villanova takes a back seat to no one. As Notre Dame has its Rockne, Villanova has its Elliot. "Jumbo" Elliot has given this university a team and a record that will live forever in the hearts of Villanovans and in the annuals of sports history.

Villanovans will never forget the track team of 1956-1957 which proved itself to be the greatest collegiate track team of all time. Nor will we ever forget their wonderful coach, the dean of American track coaches, Jim Elliot. There could be no finer way to begin the student council column for this year than to offer our most sincere congratulations and best wishes to "Jumbo" and his excellent assistant coach Jim Tuppeny.

Last week's send-off and yesterday's welcome home surely shows that the spirit committee is in for a banner year. With over two hundred active members, every activity-and there will be many—should be an outstanding success. Leo Rogers, the general chairman of the committee, and Bruce Irving, the rally chairman, have been working day and night to get the ball rolling. From the looks of things it is going to roll right over Furman. Congratulations to Bill Christy on the first issue of the Wildcat's Roar.

All organizations are reminded that Friday is the last day to submit their entry for Villanova's Homecoming Queen contest. There will be a very important meeting of the student council tonight.

Magazine Views Race Problems In The South

The use of the President's Committee on Government Contracts for "a possible economic front breakthrough on race problems" is advocated in a leading editorial in the October issue of The Sign, national Catholic magazine.

"The aim," says the editorial, "would be the economic upgrading of the Negro, particularly in the South." "At present," the magazine points out," he is largely confined to farming and service ocupations. Ror various reasons these accentuate his position of dependence and inferiority.

"Better jobs with better income would mean opportunities for improvements in housing, education and medical care. They would bring Negroes from rural areas into the cities where voting and educational rights are more likely to be respected. Economic independence can be an important first step toward other forms of independence."

Government Contracts

"Why is this approach feasible, whereas others present great difficulties?" the editorial asks. "Plants with large government contracts,' it asserts, "are usually national corporations.

603 On Dean's List For Spring Term

Thirteen students gained the perfect 4.0 academic average during the spring semester last year as some 603 Villanovans were named to the dean's list.

Chaplain's Survey

The Rev. Norbert Whitley, O.S.A., university chaplain, announced to the student body last Sunday that a Mass attendance survey will begin next week in connection with the building of a new university chapel.

According to the chaplain, all resident students will be given cards on which they will be asked to cite such facts facts as whether they attend Sunday Mass in the chapel or in the Commerce and Finance Building and the time they attend.

Bonfire, Rally Friday Night To Set Off Basca Weekend; Alumni Meet Queen at Game

By MIKE MANCUSO

This weekend, the Villanova campus will observe two social flings in one-when the Nick Basca Award and Homecoming Weekend are co-ordinated to provide the Alumni with an eventful outlook of their school's enthusiastic spirit.

Sponsored by the Spirit Committee, the activities of the weekend will be ushered in by the annual Nick Basca Award, pep rally and bonfire Friday night.

Leo Rudegeair and Jim Anderson, co-chairmen of the Basca competition and homecoming queen contest, stated that the pre-game celebration will express the ultimate in Villanova spirit.

Campus Parade

The marching band and the ever-present pep rally fire engine will lead the throng of Wildcat supporters as they march around the campus to observe the dorms dressed elaborately in their Basca wardrobes.

At the end of the campus tour, the parade will continue to the rear of Goodreau Stadium, where a gigantic bonfire will feature the rally program.

The decorations will be judged by a committee of mystery personalities to be announced later by Leo Rogers, chairman of the Spirit Committee.

Bases for Judging

The judging will be based upon theme, craftmanship and originality. The winning dorm will be entitled to hold the Basca Plaque for one year.

The judges will select, in their opinion, the most practical display during the parade and the winner will be announced afterwards at the bonfire.

The chairman of the winning hall will be awarded the plaque during the halftime of Saturday's Florida State game by the Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities.

Simpson Victorious

Simpson Hall, winner of the Basca Award for the last four years, has retired the original trophy. Simpson Hall will have tremendous competition this year, due to the unlimited spirit that the Villanova campus now enjoys.

The award is named for Michael Martin (Nick) Basca, a popular high scoring half back on Villanova's team in the late 1930's, who was killed in the South Pacific during World War II.

Introduction of Finalists

Another highlight of the evening will be the introduction of the five finalists of the homecoming queen contest at the bonfire rally.

The finalists, who will be

Basca Dance, Krechmer Jazz Sponsored by Senior Class

The senior class will highlight the Homecoming Weekend with its first major social venture of the year when it sponsors the Nick Basca Memorial Dance this Friday night in the field house from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The dance will be given in honor of a Villanova star football player and World War II hero, Nick Basca.

The proceeds of the memorial dance will be donated to the University Seminarian Scholarship Fund which will entitle an Augustinian seminarian to a college education at Villanova.

Dance Begun Last Year

The dance and its purpose was initiated by the Class of 1958 last year to bring to Villanova an affair that is expected to become an annual tradition.

Tickets are now on sale in Dougherty Hall and may also be purchased from members of the ticket committee, under John Lyons and Bill Lesko at $2.00 per couple.

The affair, which will feature Al Raymond and his Music Makers, will be gayly decorated by Charlie Boyle and Ed Ryan and their decoration committee.

The theme will be in line with the homecoming weekend and the Nick Basca Award.

Sprenger Chairman

Tom Sprenger is the chairman for the affair while Bob Kirchner will head the chores of the refreshment staff.

The publicity committee headed by Dick Colucci and Frank Bonner have directed the advertising campaign for the class function.

Paul Finan, chairman of the senior weekend, has stated that the class will leave Saturday night social affairs open to the various groups anticipating their own private gatherings.

Climaxing the weekend, the Class of 1958 will again take over the field house floor with a jazz concert on Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m.

Basca Dance Chairman

Krechmer For Jazz

Highlighting the jam session is the prominant Philadelphia night club Dixieland jazz band under the direction of Billy Krechmer.

This combo which plays nightly at Krechmer's on Ramstead Street in Philadelphia features such outstanding names as Tommy Simms on the trumpet, Mike Jefferson at the piano, Frank Root on the drums, Elwood McAdams on the trombone and Billy Krechmer on the clarinet.

Admission is $1.00 per person and the tickets are now on sale in Doughtery Hall and from all members of the ticket committee.

Bermudas or Khakis

Those attending may dress informally in either Bermudas or khakis so that they may comfortably reminisce to the bands popular style of Dixieland.

CLOSE THAT DARN LIGHT!!

Griping Never Helps

No college student is without a gripe of some sort. In American institutions, the most common is probably cafeteria food; in Hungary, it turned out to be something bigger. But these types of criticism tend to be directed at a common good.

However, there is another type—the type we're aiming our attack at—the bitter, illogical, unhealthy abuse of everything the university and its more creative students undertake in an attempt to improve its standing, both scholastically and socially.

Perhaps the most pathetic aspect of the perpetual "gripe" is his or her ability to complain, yet remain completely inert when the chance comes for the individual to help and improve the very society or organization he or she is verbally undermining.

It's costing someone a respectable amount of money to send each student to Villanova. It seems strange that if there is as much worng with the school and its operation as one would tend to believe after an hour or so in the "crie shoppe" that anyone should spend money to come here. It would be so much easier for those concerned to save their money and complain for nothing.

It would also be just for many of these individuals to request a return of their activities fee. A quick check would show that there are some people on campus so oblivious to the brighter side that they haven't bothered to pick up their yearbooks. Undoubtedly convinced that it wouldn't be worth the effort. As far as joining any particular organization aside from the S.A.P.A., these flowers of our campus have gone so far as to convince themselves that there isn't anything they can do.

Those who attended the 12:15 Mass in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium last Sunday heard an excellent sermon concerning our obligation to God in exploiting whatever personal talents we may have. It was also said that if we are unsure of our God-given gifts, we have a duty to find them, so that His work will not be wasted. Rather than criticize, why not develope an interest and enhance it with whatever work our spare time allows?

The reward from developing our talents is far greater than a sour taste in the mouth and premature wrinkles. So, to the do-nothing, to the incessant complainer, we can only say—this is your university; only as good as you make it ,only as bad as you make it.

Devotion To Mary

With the advent of the month of the Holy Rosary has come the proposal on a new initiation on the Villanova campus—that of a pledge by members of the student body to offer outward tribute to the Mother of God.

The "Marian Pledge," which has as its purpose the promotion of greater devotion to the Blessed Virgin, is being endorsed wholeheartedly by such campus groups as the VILLANOVAN staff and the Spirit Committee.

It is a personal promise to Mary and is in no way binding under pain of sin. The pledge is an easy one to fulfill in that it consists merely of stopping for a brief visit at the shrine of Our Lady of Good Counsel near the center of campus and reciting three Hail Marys.

A text of this new Marian Pledge follows:

"I (student name) pledge to love and honor the Virgin Mother, Lady of Good Counsel, the guardian and protectress of all Villanovans, this month by kneeling daily before her campus shrine and by reciting at least three Hail Marys in honor of her and her Divine Son in thanksgiving for all past graces and blessings and in petition for continued help in the future."

Although the pledge has been set for the month of October, it is hoped that the student body will resume the practice also in May—the month of Mary.

As students of a Catholic university, this small tribute is the least we can do to show our love and devotion to the mother of Almighty God.

Around The Nation!

Give Me A PHIL . . . . , Philosophy, Rah! Rah!

(ACP) - Someone is always ready to talk about school spirit or the lack of same. On that subject, Jerry Russom recently included this commentary in his column in the Long Beach State College Forty-Niner:

"One of my more intellectual friends brought up a point the other day that stimulates some serious thinking. He asked why the spirit of a college or university must always be connected with its sports program.

"Citing a definite lack of pride in intellectual conquests, he added that he would like to put on a pair of Bermudas, stand in the middle of the campus, and lead a few yells for the Philosophy department.

Athletic Overemphasis

"He's right too. All over the United States, with the possible exception of a few schools which are solely academic, the value and standing of an institution is based on its "spirit" and its football team.

"Here at Long Beach State we have heard so much about the lack of spirit on the part of the students that it is beginning to leave a bad taste in the mouth. Why should a person have to sit in the bleachers and yell his lungs out to prove that he is loyal to his college?

'Spirit' Important Too

"I am not advocating the overthrow of football or of the time-honored "spirit." This type of loyalty is just as vital to the school as intellectual spirit. It is especially important to a certain type of student. I do feel, however, that we should realize that Long Beach State has many students to whom this rah-rah bit is not essential.

"We shouldn't worry too much if our crowds at football games are not the biggest or our yells the loudest. Perhaps we already possess in mature intellect what we are seemingly missing in the boola-boola department.

Collegiate Success

(ACP) - Why do some students "succeed" scholastically in college while others fail? Lehigh University's BROWN AND WHITE asked that question and got a variety of answers from readers.

Among factors contributing to success and failure: good high school training, conducive study atmosphere, "a good beginning," too much time spent on hobbies, "luck," lack of genuine interest and dull instructors.

Spelling Course

(ACP) - The University of Connecticut DAILY CAMPUS urges a new compulsory course—spelling—and some reasons why.

There are a number of compulsory courses, some that serve their purpose and some that don't, but there is one that should definitely be offered to students if we are to end a problem that plagues a large percentage of the student body. We speak of a course in elementary spelling, and the problems in spelling today.

A frequent reference made today when discussing the educational training of American students concerns the prevalence of poor spelling among high school and college graduates. And judging from our own observations and remarks made by instructors at the University, students here rank with the best when it comes to mispelling words . . .

Poor training in the elementary school may be at fault, but it is not altogether to blame . . .

Words Ignored

The whole problem can be summed up in one sentence: words are an inexhaustible supply of knowledge, but the average student of today seems to be too exhausted to bother with them.

A business executive said recently that jobs have been lost on the grounds of a letter injected with misspelled words, while employers frown on work that contains illegible writing . . .

A large number of professors subtract valuable points from examinations at this University because of poor spelling . . .

Whether lack of training or a lack of intellectual curiosity be the reasons for poor spelling, the final blame can be placed on the shoulders of the individual . . . At any rate, with the increasing dissatisfaction arising from misspelling today, perhaps good spelling will once more assume its importance in the three R's.

Letters To The Editor

Student Criticizes Government

The main issue involved in Arkansas today is not integration and segregation but the realm of power which is to be delegated to the state as against the realm of power which is to be delegated to the federal government.

It is my unrestricted opinion that the federal government has overstepped its power to a point where it is a threat to our democratic system. I will be one of the first to admit that the President has the power to disperse troops to any area where there is a revolt against the constitution and laws of this nation. But there must be a sufficient cause; a real threat.

In the Arkansas incident I see only one school out of many, seven students out of millions and a very small group of irresponsible and irrational citizens. This does not seem to me to be a sufficient cause for what is to be sacrificed.

The action of President Eisenhower may and probably will set a precendent which will jeopardize the rights of the individual state. If the federal government is going to step in on every little violation for the sake of political gain for those who take the action, then we as citizens must demand that the implied powers of the president be no longer implied but written into the constitution and limited, otherwise democracy will become an unused word in the dictionary.

Let me add that I am very much in favor of integration and very much opposed to segration. But to be ethical about this matter I would like to say that "the end doesn't justify the means."

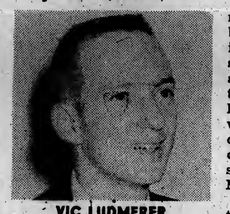
This week's question is: "Do you approve of the President's use of federal troops in Arkansas to enforce the federal court order?"

BILL PATTON



Bill Patton, Senior Education Major—"I am positive that no true American citizen wants to see the federal troops in action in this crisis. I am whole heartedly in agreement with the President's decision, my only regret being his tardiness in making his decision. In my opinion, the President should have made the decision to bring in federal troops weeks ago. It is now up to the people of the South not to revert to the jungle law when the federal troops are removed."

TOM PERETTI

Thomas R. Peretti, Sophomore Political Science Major—"It is most unfortunate that federal force was necessary. The U. S. is a government of law of men; therefore when certain individuals or groups led by professional agitators and hate-mongers seek to achieve their ends through mob violence, the federal government can and must step in to protect the interests of all citizens and preserve law and order; otherwise, there is hopless anarchy.

I believe the action was justified in view of the circumstances and the danger of establishing any dangerous precedents."

VIC LUDMERER

Vic Ludmerer, Junior Commerce and Finance—"The Arkansas problem is not simply a question of school integration alone. Enforcement of a federal legislation is the main principle now.

The answer does not lie however, in their views or ours, but in what is right for mankind, as God intended things to be.

Fathers Donnellon, McShea Enjoy European Tour, Visit With Pope Pius

By TOM MARTINEZ

Around the world in eighty days! A shorter time period and a less extensive tour afforded the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon O.S.A., president of the university, and Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A., assistant professor of English, a rather rewarding vacation this past summer.

Copenhagen, Rome, Geneva, Hamburg, Madrid, Paris, London and, of course, Dublin were the stopping points of Villanova's summer ambassadors to Europe.

Staying at the various Augustinian houses in the different countries meant little trouble with the language of the respective nations, yet Fr. Donnellon mentioned that there was a definite language barrier which made conversation difficult. This he said was true everywhere except in Paris where the people at least have some knowledge of English, and this he attributed to the number of American soldiers that had been stationed there after the second world war.

Sees Track Members Compete

The highlights of the trip were many including seeing the members of the track team compete in meets held in Europe this summer. They saw Ron Delany and also visited his family when they reached the Emerald Isle. Don Bragg and Charley Jenkins were some of the other standouts of last year's team that competed in Europe and were seen by Fathers Donnellon and McShea.

Father Donnellon related that the biggest highlight was the audience with Pope Pius XII. At Rome they were received by Bishop Van Lierde who recently said our opening Mass and dedicated Sheehan Hall, the new dormitory. The bishop is the Vicar General of Vatican City and Assistant at the Papal Throne and he showed them the Vatican, treating them in grand stylc.

Pope Pius was very interested in Catholic education and he was also aware of the problems that occur in Catholic schools in the United States. They found him very gracious as well as interested in the various problems of education itself.

Education in Europe still retains its high standards but some new advances have been added especially in Spain, reported Father Donnellon. There the women are now being admitted into the universities with little difficulty whereas the rest of the countries keep their restrictions on female students.

Progress In Spain

As far as the nation of Spain is concerned Father Donnellon stated that it has progressed more than any other country economically and educationally. In keeping with their Catholic culture they are also very religious, a fact he also found true of Italy. France which is in between these two countries geographically still holds to its lackidaisacal and flambuoyant doctrines of religion.

Germany was found to be greatly rehabilitated with hardly a trace of the past war. Although they did not get into the Russian sector they saw enough of Germany to note the progress that has occured in the last 12 years.

Europe Reconstructed

The rest of Europe has also rehabilitated itself to a great extent and the people have a great respect for the United States and its populace.

One thing that stood out in father's mind was the fact that the people and their finances are not distributed in three classes It seems that one is either very rich or very poor. This unbalance could hurt the economic reconstruction of the European countries as well as the individual working man.

New Social Column

KEMPFING OUT by junior Don Kempf is this week's new column to the VILLANOVAN'S feature pages.

The column relates interesting bits of news about various students as heard and seen by Kempf, most commonly recognized as Student Council Vice-Chairman. The column may be found on page four.

George Matouk, an undergraduate of Syrian descent, takes over POLITICAL ROUND-UP this week and comments on the Mid-East situation.

William Brennan: Active Man In High Court

Second of a Series

Just a little over a year ago President Eisenhower appointed William Joseph Brennan of Newark, New Jersey, Catholic and Democrat, to the seat on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States vacated by the resignation of Justice Sherman Minton, thus restoring the tradition of latter-day American politics that at least one member of the Supreme Court should be a member of the Roman Catholic faith.

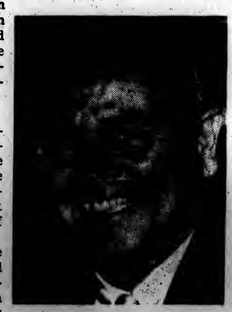
This appointment proved a happy one all around. It is to be assumed that Justice Brennan was gratified by the appointment. The President's liberality in the appointment of a Catholic and a Democrat was not lost on the electorate. And the American people gained a jurist of proven ability and integrity.

Civil Liberties

Justice Brennan arrived on the national scene in his flowing robes of justice just in time to take part in those decisions of the Supreme Court this summer which aroused even greater storm than the court's 1954 decision dooming school segregation, and brought forth more than its quota of soul-searching editorials on the increasingly dominant role the Supreme Court is playing in American politics.

These decisions on the Watkins, Service and other cases had the following results: they seriously limited the investigative power of Congress by determining that a congressional committee must have a specific purpose in mind when questioning a witness; they rendered the Smith Act practically useless as an instrument against the Communist party in the United States by declaring that the overthrow of the government as an abstract principle without an actual effort to organize such an attempt was not unlawful; and they declared it unlawful for the State Department to fire employees on the findings of a congressional committee.

Joyful Elements



Many present and ex-communists or fellow-travelers are exconvictions and many people are sincerely convinced that the paramount result of these decisions is to give aid and comfort to the subversive elements of our country.

This puts those who wrote these decisions on the legal and moral spot. And Justice Brennan was with the majority in each of these decisions, casting his lot with the 'liberals' of the court.

Back in New Jersey, on the bench of the Superior and then the State Supreme Court, Brennan was found to fit neatly into neither the conservative nor liberal category but rather won the respect and admiration of his colleagues for his sharp questions and clearly written, moderate opinions.

The Constitutional Guarantees

It would be rash therefore to assume that Justice Brennan turned suddenly into a dangerous radical in the warm political climate of Washington. Rather his decision (and that of the other justices of the majority) was based on his conception of the greater good. The decisions were for the most part based on the court's interpretation of the first amendment and their desire to adhere strictly to constitutional guarantees of individual civil liberties. It is logical to suppose that to Justice Brennan any incidental comfort to the enemies of the American life must be disregarded for the preservation of the full flower of the American way of life so worth preserving. A curtailment of individual freedom to combat those who would do away with individual freedom would certainly seem contradictory.

JUDGE BRENNAN
Supreme Court Catholic

Justice Brennan wrote his opinions then as he saw them right, despite natural prejudices he might be expected to have on the matters at hand. This is the most that any servant of the nation could be expected to do. Brennan should certainly have disproved any notions of dogmatic rigidity in the thinking of Catholics that might have been held by some.

Brennan On Obscenity

Just a short time later Justice Brennan joined the court conservatives to deal a blow for decency in upholding convictions of dealers in obscene material. Stating that "Sex has indisputably been a subject of absorbing interest to mankind through the ages," Brennan went on to write for the majority that "obscenity is utterly without redeeming social importance," and thus "not within the area of constitutionally protected speech or press." "Obscenity," he defined as that whose "dominant appeal is to prurient interests."

It was now the liberals' turn to yelp with "censorship" as their battle cry. But Brennan calls them as he sees them.

A Second-Generation American

Such stern intellectual integrity is to be expected from the son of an Irish-born immigrant who raised himself from a common laborer to Newark's Director of Public Safety. Brennan himself delivered milk and made change for trolley riders as a boy.

Brennan got his degree from Harvard Law School which he attended on a scholarship after graduating cum laude from the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School. His subsequent law practice was interrupted by a stint in the army in World War II. In the army he rose to Chief of Civilian Personnel of Army Ordnance.

Republicans Benefit Brennan

Oddly enough, staunch Democrat Brennan has always had the Republicans to thank for his judicial career. Republican Governor Alfred Driscoll of New Jersey appointed him to the Superior Court in 1949 and to the State Supreme Court in 1952 where he quietly built up the stature that won him the Supreme Court appointment last year.

A family man, Brennan has been married for 29 years and is the proud father of William J. III, Hugh L. and Nancy Brennan. As Brennan is still a comparatively young man (51), it is to be expected that he will be around for many years yet to help shape the future of American law according to a conscience formed during a fruitful Catholic life.

Political Round-Up

Syria, Russia and Israel: Mid-East Turmoil

Editors Note: George Fuad Matouk is of Syrian desent and has many relatives living in Syria, prominent members of Syria's professional life and leaders in the Christian Community.

Someone asks about Syria. What is the first answer that comes to mind? "It has very nearly become a Communist satellite." Beyond this fact, which we will later see is not true, most of us know little or nothing about this Middle East prodigal.

To understand Syria we must start with the ethnology of Greater Syria which for centuries comprised a large portion of Asia Minor and the Arabian peninsula—including the present independent nations of Syria, Lebanon, Jordan, Israel and Iraq. Damascus, the oldest inhabited city, was the capital of this Syria which was the cultural center of the world before civilization came to Western Europe.

It was only after Islam conquered Damascus that it was able to spread all over North Africa to Spain and upward to Vienna in the north.

The Christian Minority

Greater Syria, except Lebanon, was almost 100% converted to Islam. Only a very small minority, less than 5%, either remained Christian or Jewish and were only tolerated by the majority who called then "infidel." Christians lived with the Moslems until World War I when Turkish domination ended.

The first World War changed the political picture in this area. Greater Syria was liberated from the Turks. The territory was split between England and France, each taking its share of protectorate.

At this time other small nations were receiving their independence. England and France reduced these highly civilized people to a colonial status. The seeds of mistrust of the West were sown.

The policy of France, which occupied after World War I, was one of discrimination based upon keeping the difference between classes and hatred between the various religions. This lack of harmony prevented any nationalist movement or economic progress.

Government By Clique

In the dozen years since Syria received her independece, modern agricultural methods and new independence have brightened economic conditions. Modern civil rghts have elevated the masses to a new social position.

Independence did not bring complete freedom to Syria and the rest of the Arab world. Before the protectorate ended

By GEORGE MATOUK

England saw to it that the state of Israel was established in Palestine.

This brought to the Arab land one million refugees from Eastern Europe with a different culture and language who through force, bribes and threats caused one million Arabs to leave their homes and become refuges.

Because England, France and later the United States, who sponsored Israel and approved its extension beyond the original boundaries, are Christian nations, the Arab Moslem has put the blame on Christianity. The Christians in Syria are looked upon with disdain. Their future is very precarious. A poll today will show that 90% of all Christians, even the most successful professional and business men, would like to emigrate.

Israel has flourished and progressed with millions of dollars from private and government funds in the U.S. The government of Israel proclaims that they want to bring two million more Jews from Eastern Europe to their crowded nation. Syria fears this expansion program. She thinks that two million Arabs of Syria will be dislodged and become refugees while two million Jews will take their place.

Only the U.S. can put a stop to this plan of Israel for all the necessary money comes from here. However it is most unlikely that the U.S. will do anything about this for her present foreign policy leaves her hands tied. Therefore the only solution we have is to consider Syria as a very dangerous spot in the Middle East because of the leftist tendency of her government and her friendship with the Russians. But if we look at the causes of this situation objectively and impartially, we will realize that it is the result of the western policy in this area. The Syrian people have never been Communist; the Moslem religious principles are incompatible with the Communist idea of life and government.

Between Israel, Islam

The complete ignorance of the nationalist aspirations of the Arab peoples (we often call misguided patriotic nationalists, Communists), the unfair policies followed by oil companies and above all the creation of the state of Israel in the heart of the Arab World and its obvious help and support by the U.S., all have contributed to create a feeling of frustration and injustice among the Arabs. As a result they have decided not to look to the West for economic or military support whenever they can get it elsewhere.

Soviet Russia, who has no commitments in this area, offered her assistance. By this masterful bit of foreign policy Russia has indeed gained influence in Syria. It does not by any means indicate that Syria is Communist, but only that at the present the Syrian would rather be a friend of Russia than a refugee from Israel.

Harris, LaSalle Senior, Elected NFCCS President

In elections for National Officers held on August 31, 1957 at the Fourteenth National Congress at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York City, Joseph R. Harris, Vice-President of the Philadelphia Region was entrusted with the greatest office of the Federation—the National Presidency.

Joe, who has been active in the Federation ever since his matriculation at LaSalle in 1954 is a Senior and a government major. He hopes to attend graduate school for the study of law upon his graduation next June.

Mr. Dave Leahey of St. John's University made the nomination speech for Joe and Angelo Randazzo, Senior Delegate at LaSalle College gave the seconding speech.

In his acceptance speech, Joe pledged his whole-hearted effort to do all that he could on behelf of the federation to strengthen it and enable it to function more ably and actively as an arm of the Lay Apostolate.

Also at the 14th National Congress, Chestnut Hill College was granted the seat for the National Committee on Mission Study for the year 1957-58. Miss Ann Rusnack, '58, former campus CURA chairman at Chestnut Hill, will serve as chairman of the committee.

The largest turnout- ever — ninety-nine student government presidents from Catholic Colleges and Universities in the United States also met at the Hotel Roosevelt and the weekend preceding the Congress — August 23-25.

It was certainly felt that each delegate would go back to his campus with a better understanding of NFCCS and just exactly what it could do for the campus.

Peering . . . .

With NORM PEER

••At the return en masse of that institution known as the "college girl." Some of our more eager Frosh are getting callouses on their hands carrying these lovely ladies' baggage from her jammed car to her hallowed doorstep with only a slight charge. It is easy to tell one of these "college girls" from any other type because they are disguised in sun glasses, sunburn and affected accent. But the main thing is they are here in the area and are a powerful force not to be handled lightly.

••At the upperclassmen gathered in the local pubs exchanging stories on the "fabulous" jobs they held down during the summer. They talk about their three-figured salaries and then quietly ask you for a small "loan" to cover the next round.

••At the book store which is out of all textbooks except archeology 101 and that is not offered here. The book manufacturers have not changed their textbooks for a week now, so watch out, that thirty-five dollar set of books you just bought may be obsolete by next month.

••At the new terms that are floating around such as "Miami safari" and an old but very real one called the "Boston trip." These two subjects are being planned like full-scale military invasions. Boston is still reeling from last year's attack and hope is high that this year's attack may be even more complete.

••At the Massachusetts militia being readied.

KeMpFiNg Out

By DON KEMPF

I walked into the VILLANOVAN office the other day and a rotund figure from the corner by the name of Frank Delany mumbled to me, "Kempf, I want five hundred words of campus chatter and goings on in the Philadelphia area."

"Frank," I said, "get lost!" However I suddenly remembered that Frank had been an inspiration for me on my summer cruise and felt that perhaps I owed this to his tremendous influence on my life. And so, Frank, here they are, my first "words" in a case which I choose to call "Rumblings from the tomb."

'December Brido'

Joe Kinney, senior English major, received an interesting challenge this past week. It seems Joe, who is getting married in December, has a term paper due on the day he returns from his honeymoon. By the way, odds are 3 to 1 that he won't have the assignment completed—interested parties contact John Snader.

Highbrow Specials

There will be an interesting lecture tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 in the auditorium of Haverford College on "Academic Freedom as it affects the small Liberal Arts College."

Loretta Cianfrogna, president of Holy Family College's fine Arts Club invites all those interested in modern schulpture to attend a symposium on the subject at Holy Family College this Sunday afternoon.

Cherchez La Shea

Classes resumed (as was expected) with the usual cries of, "This year I'm really going to hit the books." One particular history course got off on a humorous note. The Professor, Dr. Rudhart, called the roll and then queried, "Is there anyone whose name I did not call?"

A voice came from the back of the room answering that his name was not called. When the professor asked the student's name he answered "Shea." The doctor then noted that he had called the name of Shea.

"But," said the student, now almost as confused as the professor regarding his true identity, "you called the name William Shea and my name is Edward Shea."

"Oh," remarked Dr. Rudhart, "there are two Sheas!"

"That's correct," echoed the class, 'Touche!'

Steeltown Revisited

For all those who feel the need of a good adventure series to read, Bob Powers, senior Engineer, has been chosen to serve as campus delegate for "Treasure Chest" comic books. Bob says it won't be long until the entire campus is thrilling again to tales of Chuck White. Will Chuck win his girl back from the school bully? Will he prove to team bad sport that you have to be a good guy to win ball games? Will St. John's win the state basketball title? Will it snow in Alaska this winter?

And what about the social life. Just how big a bank roll will be needed to keep up with the games and parties and proms? Things move from fast to faster this weekend. Basca Award, Bonfire rally, the dance, the parties, and, most important, the chance to get out and see the Wildcats take revenge for three years on a single afternoon—and in our own stadium.

Scandinavian Trip Offers American Youths Seminar, Studies For $900

Last week 55 American students met outside Copenhagen to evaluate their first community stay of one month in Danish and Swedish non - English - speaking families. As one student said, "I did not know one could learn so much about American by living in a Swedish community." Another commented, "I wish my friends back home could hear me talk with the Danes in their own language, and this after only one month!"

These graduate and undergraduate American students, from 45 different colleges and universities and 28 different states, are members of the 1957-58 Scandinavian Seminars.

Each student accepted to the Seminars pays approximately 75% of the actual cost of board, room and tuition for a year in Scandinavia. The balance is made up by subsidies from the respective Scandinavian governments. Therefore, the student's fee for living and learning in Scandinavia for one academic year is only $900.

Forty per cent of the seminar students are spending their year in the seminar's "Junior-Year-Abroad" program. Another 40% are college graduates in the seminar's graduate program. The rest are teachers, professors and people with an interest in education.

Broad Education

The seminars offer to all their students comprehensive programs in a Scandinavian language, literature and culture, with individual study opportunities in adult education, art, crafts and design, agriculture, physical education, history, and the social sciences.

A. R. Nielsen, the Seminar's Director, points out that the principal value of the seminar program lies in its experimental approach to person - centered, liberal-arts education in an international setting.

The Scandinvian Seminar's New York office at 127 E. 73rd Street, New York 21, N.Y. is now receiving applications for the academic year 1958-59.

A part of the trial scene will be performed on the weekend before the opening in the field house at Immaculata College for the National Catholic Theater Conference.

Belle Masque will also offer three student-directed one-act plays this year. The plays will be: "The Parade at the Devil's Bridge," by Henri Gheon; "The Sausage Maker's Interlude," also by Henri Gheon, and "The Man Who Died Because He Wore Gloves," by Henri Brochet.

All three men are contemporary French playwrights. These plays will be shown for members of the faculty and students only. They will also be performed "in the round."

Play By Student

Early in the second semester, a play written by a student of Villanova will be shown. This play will also be directed by Richard Duprey.

Belle Masque is going to award prizes to the best actor, the best actress and the best supporting actor at the end of the year. These prizes will correspond to the cinema's Oscar or TV's Emmy. The best member of the business staff will also receive one, along with the best crewman and the outstanding Belle Masque man or woman of the entire year.

The acting-meeting chairman for Belle Masque is Jim Gilligan. George Becht is treasurer. Ellen Chambers is secretary and the student council representative is Jerry McGrath. Belle Masque moderator is the Rev. William Farrell, O.S.A.

Wilder Replies

Belle Masque received a letter from Thornton Wilder, thanking them for presenting his play, "The Skin of Our Teeth," last year.

Signaling the arrival of Villanova's mascot, Count Villan V, the Wildcat cheerleaders tip their hats at last Saturday's Furman game in the university stadium. The "Count" made his initial appearance before the student body last week and he'll be present at this week's Florida State contest also.

Reverend Norbert Whitley Assumes Chaplain Position

The Reverend Norbert Whitley, O.S.A., has been assigned as the new chaplain of Villanova replacing Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., who has assumed the post of admissions director.

Born and educated in Philadelphia the new chaplain entered the Augustinian Order in September 1932 and made his profession Sept. 11 the following year.

He graduated from St. Mary's Hall at Villanova in June 1937 and in October of the same year entered the Augustinian International College of St. Monica in Rome.

Ordained in 1940

From there Fr. Whitley went to Gregorian University for his theological studies and was ordained May 25, 1940, returning to the United States before completing his studies.

REV. NORBERT WHITLEY
New Chaplain

He finished his theological work receiving his S.T.L. from Catholic University in June 1941.

Assigned to Augustinian College in Washington D.C., furthered his studies in theology at Catholic University while remaining as a teacher to the former school from 1943 until 1957.

Master of Clerics

In 1943 he was submaster of clerics professed and in 1945 he became master of clerics professed until this year when he was named as the new chaplain of the university.

Aside from his varied duties as chaplain, Fr. Whitley is also a member of the faculty, teaching religion to the undergraduates.

Juniors Set Plans To Help Day-Hop, Resident Relations

The Class of 1959 under the direction of Vic Ludmerer, its president, has announced plans for the improvement of relations between day-hop and resident students.

Two steps in connection with these ideas were announced by the class newly appointed steering committee.

It has instituted a Student Relations Board headed by Ben Hynes and composed of the following men: (a) three persons who had expressed in their letters for entrance to the steering committee a desire to unify the day-hops and residents (b) elected day-hop representatives of both the sophomore and junior classes; this group will work toward solving the problems of day-hop—resident relations.

Inquiry Board

The second phase of this plan pertains to the three elected day-hop representatives of the class who will have office hours during the student activities period on all Thursdays of the school year in room 201 Commerce and Finance Building with the only exceptions being those Thursdays in which junior class meetings will be held.

This group will answer any inquiries of students concerning student council actions and pertaining to the various night activities on campus.

The junior class steering committee was selected in a decidedly new manner this year. All elected representatives of the class turned in names of persons interested who had contacted them, and also names of persons they considered qualified for the committee.

A total number of 94 names was submitted to Ludmerer and Vice-President Matt Brennan.

Letters Sent Out

During the summer letters were sent to each person asking why they desired membership on the committee and the extent of their past experiences which might be useful to the junior class.

From the answers received an extensive card catalogue was made categorically listing under 20 separate headings the activities of each man.

Literary Club Plans Broaden

Dr. Edward McGrath, English professor, will address the Literary Club next Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

His topic will be contemporary non-English literature.

The appearance of Dr. McGrath marks the opening of the regular bi-weekly meetings of the club which feature several prominent speakers, group discussions and literary recordings in the first semester. A symposium on campus is also planned.

Research Project

Tom Martinez, program chairman, may be contacted in 157 Sheehan Hall by any member interested in doing reseach, editing, or typing, for the year long project. All material for this project must be turned over to the program chairman before the close of the first semester.

The second semester will be devoted chiefly to editing, compiling and typing all the material.

A copy of the completed project will be given to the library as well as every member of the club.

Membership Cards

Junior and senior English majors may obtain membership cards by paying the $2 semester dues although non-English majors must submit a book criticism to one of the officers.

President Joe Kinney stated that eventually some meetings and all activities of the organization will be open only to paid club members.

S.C. Makes Historical Move, Outlines Senior Privilege

The first female student ever to gain representation on the Villanova Student Council symbolically sat isolated from everyone else in the room at last Wednesday's meeting.

Miss Barbara Warner, Class of '59, sat just in back of the council proper and a few rows in front of a group of 15 interested Nursing Division classmates.

Miss Warner was chosen by her classmates to represent the division in an election held a week earlier. The nursing position was created this summer by an addition to the council constitution by the university administration.

No Floor Battle

The expected floor conflict on the legality of Miss Warner's appearance on the council did not take place.

Instead, Chairman Pat Nicholson explained to the assemblage how the nursing representative gained her seat over the summer when school authorities decided that the nurses, as a separate division, were entitled to representation.

He explained that under the newly proposed system, the nurses would elect their own representative each year, but could no longer vote for any of the male representatives.

Miss Warner was not formally inducted into the council at the meeting, but Nicholson said that "We hope to (officially) welcome her to the council at our next meeting."

The Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., moderator of the organization, opened the meeting with a prayer and welcomed council members to the first meeting of the school year.

Nicholson followed with information on the plans to reorganize the council constitution. The new constitution, which will be presented in part at the next meeting, will divide the organization into a senate and congress in an attempt to facilitate faster and more efficient action on proposals.

Car Problem Aired

The council also announced the initiation of a small library of books on parliamentary procedure, heard a report from senior delegate Paul Yurchak on the reorganization of the campus delegation of the National Federation of Catholic College Students and gave its approval to an extensive and well-prepared report on resident senior car privileges from Jerry DeGroft and Martin Dohany.

Several other motions dealing with student affairs were passed for approval by the administration.

Political Round-Up

Syria, Russia and Israel: Mid-East Turmoil

Editors Note: George Fuad Matouk is of Syrian desent and has many relatives living in Syria, prominent members of Syria's professional life and leaders in the Christian Community.

By GEORGE MATOUK

Someone asks about Syria. What is the first answer that comes to mind? "It has very nearly become a Communist satellite." Beyond this fact, which we will later see is not true, most of us know little or nothing about this Middle East prodigal.

To understand Syria we must start with the ethnology of Greater Syria which for centuries comprised a large portion of Asia Minor and the Arabian peninsula—including the present independent nations of Syria, Lebanon, Jordan, Israel and Iraq. Damascus, the oldest inhabited city, was the capital of this Syria which was the cultural center of the world before civilization came to Western Europe.

It was only after Islam conquered Damascus that it was able to spread all over North Africa to Spain and upward to Vienna in the north.

The Christian Minority

Greater Syria, except Lebanon, was almost 100% converted to Islam. Only a very small minority, less than 5%, either remained Christian or Jewish and were only tolerated by the majority who called then "infidel." Christians lived with the Moslems until World War I when Turkish domination ended.

The first World War changed the political picture in this area. Greater Syria was liberated from the Turks. The territory was split between England and France, each taking its share of protectorate.

At this time other small nations were receiving their independence. England and France reduced these highly civilized people to a colonial status. The seeds of mistrust of the West were sown.

The policy of France, which occupied after World War I, was one of discrimination based upon keeping the difference between classes and hatred between the various religions. This lack of harmony prevented any nationalist movement or economic progress.

Government By Clique

In the dozen years since Syria received her independece, modern agricultural methods and new independence have brightened economic conditions. Modern civil rghts have elevated the masses to a new social position.

Independence did not bring complete freedom to Syria and the rest of the Arab world. Before the protectorate ended England saw to it that the state of Israel was established in Palestine.

This brought to the Arab land one million refugees from Eastern Europe with a different culture and language who through force, bribes and threats caused one million Arabs to leave their homes and become refuges.

Because England, France and later the United States, who sponsored Israel and approved its extension beyond the original boundaries, are Christian nations, the Arab Moslem has put the blame on Christianity. The Christians in Syria are looked upon with disdain. Their future is very precarious. A poll today will show that 90% of all Christians, even the most successful professional and business men, would like to emigrate.

Israel has flourished and progressed with millions of dollars from private and government funds in the U.S. The government of Israel proclaims that they want to bring two million more Jews from Eastern Europe to their crowded nation. Syria fears this expansion program. She thinks that two million Arabs of Syria will be dislodged and become refugees while two million Jews will take their place.

Only the U.S. can put a stop to this plan of Israel for all the necessary money comes from here. However it is most unlikely that the U.S. will do anything about this for her present foreign policy leaves her hands tied. Therefore the only solution we have is to consider Syria as a very dangerous spot in the Middle East because of the leftist tendency of her government and her friendship with the Russians. But if we look at the causes of this situation objectively and impartially, we will realize that it is the result of the western policy in this area. The Syrian people have never been Communist; the Moslem religious principles are incompatible with the Communist idea of life and government.

Between Israel, Islam

The complete ignorance of the nationalist aspirations of the Arab peoples (we often call misguided patriotic nationalists, Communists), the unfair policies followed by oil companies and above all the creation of the state of Israel in the heart of the Arab World and its obvious help and support by the U.S., all have contributed to create a feeling of frustration and injustice among the Arabs. As a result they have decided not to look to the West for economic or military support whenever they can get it elsewhere.

Soviet Russia, who has no commitments in this area, offered her assistance. By this masterful bit of foreign policy Russia has indeed gained influence in Syria. It does not by any means indicate that Syria is Communist, but only that at the present the Syrian would rather be a friend of Russia than a refugee from Israel.

Harris, LaSalle Senior, Elected NFCCS President

In elections for National Officers held on August 31, 1957 at the Fourteenth National Congress at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York City, Joseph R. Harris, Vice-President of the Philadelphia Region was entrusted with the greatest office of the Federation—the National Presidency.

Joe, who has been active in the Federation ever since his matriculation at LaSalle in 1954 is a Senior and a government major. He hopes to attend graduate school for the study of law upon his graduation next June.

Mr. Dave Leahey of St. John's University made the nomination speech for Joe and Angelo Randazzo, Senior Delegate at LaSalle College gave the seconding speech.

In his acceptance speech, Joe pledged his whole-hearted effort to do all that he could on behelf of the federation to strengthen it and enable it to function more ably and actively as an arm of the Lay Apostolate.

Also at the 14th National Congress, Chestnut Hill College was granted the seat for the National Committee on Mission Study for the year 1957-58. Miss Ann Rusnack, '58, former campus CURA chairman at Chestnut Hill, will serve as chairman of the committee.

The largest turnout- ever — ninety-nine student government presidents from Catholic Colleges and Universities in the United States also met at the Hotel Roosevelt and the weekend preceding the Congress — August 23-25.

It was certainly felt that each delegate would go back to his campus with a better understanding of NFCCS and just exactly what it could do for the campus.

Peering . . . .

With NORM PEER

••At the return en masse of that institution known as the "college girl." Some of our more eager Frosh are getting callouses on their hands carrying these lovely ladies' baggage from her jammed car to her hallowed doorstep with only a slight charge. It is easy to tell one of these "college girls" from any other type because they are disguised in sun glasses, sunburn and affected accent. But the main thing is they are here in the area and are a powerful force not to be handled lightly.

••At the upperclassmen gathered in the local pubs exchanging stories on the "fabulous" jobs they held down during the summer. They talk about their three-figured salaries and then quietly ask you for a small "loan" to cover the next round.

••At the book store which is out of all textbooks except archeology 101 and that is not offered here. The book manufacturers have not changed their textbooks for a week now, so watch out, that thirty-five dollar set of books you just bought may be obsolete by next month.

••At the new terms that are floating around such as "Miami safari" and an old but very real one called the "Boston trip." These two subjects are being planned like full-scale military invasions. Boston is still reeling from last year's attack and hope is high that this year's attack may be even more complete.

••At the Massachusetts militia being readied.

By DON KEMPF

I walked into the VILLANOVAN office the other day and a rotund figure from the corner by the name of Frank Delany mumbled to me, "Kempf, I want five hundred words of campus chatter and goings on in the Philadelphia area."

"Frank," I said, "get lost!" However I suddenly remembered that Frank had been an inspiration for me on my summer cruise and felt that perhaps I owed this to his tremendous influence on my life. And so, Frank, here they are, my first "words" in a case which I choose to call "Rumblings from the tomb."

'December Bride'

Joe Kinney, senior English major, received an interesting challenge this past week. It seems Joe, who is getting married in December, has a term paper due on the day he returns from his honeymoon. By the way, odds are 3 to 1 that he won't have the assignment completed—interested parties contact John Snader.

There will be an interesting lecture tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 in the auditorium of Haverford College on "Academic Freedom as it affects the small Liberal Arts College."

Loretta Cianfrogna, president of Holy Family College's fine Arts Club invites all those interested in modern schulpture to attend a symposium on the subject at Holy Family College this Sunday afternoon.

Cherchez La Shea

Classes resumed (as was expected) with the usual cries of, "This year I'm really going to hit the books." One particular history course got off on a humorous note. The Professor, Dr. Rudhart, called the roll and then queried, "Is there anyone whose name I did not call?"

A voice came from the back of the room answering that his name was not called. When the professor asked the student's name he answered "Shea." The doctor then noted that he had called the name of Shea.

"But," said the student, now almost as confused as the professor regarding his true identity, "you called the name William Shea and my name is Edward Shea."

"Oh," remarked Dr. Rudhart, "there are two Sheas!"

"That's correct," echoed the class, 'Touche!'

Scandinavian Trip Offers American Youths Seminar, Studies For $900

Last week 55 American students met outside Copenhagen to evaluate their first community stay of one month in Danish and Swedish non-English-speaking families. As one student said, "I did not know one could learn so much about American by living in a Swedish community." Another commented, "I wish my friends back home could hear me talk with the Danes in their own language, and this after only one month!"

These graduate and undergraduate American students, from 45 different colleges and universities and 28 different states, are members of the 1957-58 Scandinavian Seminars.

Each student accepted to the Seminars pays approximately 75% of the actual cost of board, room and tuition for a year in Scandinavia. The balance is made up by subsidies from the respective Scandinavian governments. Therefore, the student's fee for living and learning in Scandinavia for one academic year is only $900.

Forty per cent of the seminar students are spending their year in the seminar's "Junior-Year-Abroad" program. Another 40% are college graduates in the seminar's graduate program. The rest are teachers, professors and people with an interest in education.

Broad Education

The seminars offer to all their students comprehensive programs in a Scandinavian language, literature and culture, with individual study opportunities in adult education, art, crafts and design, agriculture, physical education, history, and the social sciences.

A. R. Nielsen, the Seminar's Director, points out that the principal value of the seminar program lies in its experimental approach to person-centered, liberal-arts education in an international setting.

The Scandinvian Seminar's New York office at 127 E. 73rd Street, New York 21, N.Y. is now receiving applications for the academic year 1958-59.

Juniors Set Plans To Help Day-Hop, Resident Relations

The Class of 1959 under the direction of Vic Ludmerer, its president, has announced plans for the improvement of relations between day-hop and resident students.

Two steps in connection with these ideas were announced by the class newly appointed steering committee.

It has instituted a Student Relations Board headed by Ben Hynes and composed of the following men: (a) three persons who had expressed in their letters for entrance to the steering committee a desire to unify the day-hops and residents (b) elected day-hop representatives of both the sophomore and junior classes; this group will work toward solving the problems of day-hop—resident relations.

Inquiry Board

The second phase of this plan pertains to the three elected day-hop representatives of the class who will have office hours during the student activities period on all Thursdays of the school year in room 201 Commerce and Finance Building with the only exceptions being those Thursdays in which junior class meetings will be held.

This group will answer any inquiries of students concerning student council actions and pertaining to the various night activities on campus.

The junior class steering committee was selected in a decidedly new manner this year. All elected representatives of the class turned in names of persons interested who had contacted them, and also names of persons they considered qualified for the committee.

A total number of 94 names was submitted to Ludmerer and Vice-President Matt Brennan.

Letters Sent Out

From the answers received an extensive card catalogue was made categorically listing under 20 separate headings the activities of each man.

Literary Club Plans Broaden

Dr. Edward McGrath, English professor, will address the Literary Club next Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

The appearance of Dr. McGrath marks the opening of the regular bi-weekly meetings of the club which feature several prominent speakers, group discussions and literary recordings in the first semester. A symposium on campus is also planned.

Research Project

Tom Martinez, program chairman, may be contacted in 157 Sheehan Hall by any member interested in doing reseach, editing, or typing, for the year long project. All material for this project must be turned over to the program chairman before the close of the first semester.

The second semester will be devoted chiefly to editing, compiling and typing all the material.

A copy of the completed project will be given to the library as well as every member of the club.

Membership Cards

Junior and senior English majors may obtain membership cards by paying the $2 semester dues although non-English majors must submit a book criticism to one of the officers.

President Joe Kinney stated that eventually some meetings and all activities of the organization will be open only to paid club members.

The Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., moderator of the organization, opened the meeting with a prayer and welcomed council members to the first meeting of the school year.

Nicholson followed with information on the plans to reorganize the council constitution. The new constitution, which will be presented in part at the next meeting, will divide the organization into a senate and congress in an attempt to facilitate faster and more efficient action on proposals.

Car Problem Aired

The council also announced the initiation of a small library of books on parliamentary procedure, heard a report from senior delegate Paul Yurchak on the reorganization of the campus delegation of the National Federation of Catholic College Students and gave its approval to an extensive and well-prepared report on resident senior car privileges from Jerry DeGroft and Martin Dohany.

Several other motions dealing with student affairs were passed for approval by the administration.

Jim Anderson Is Sanctuary Society Head

Officers of the Sanctuary Society for this year assumed their positions Sept. 23 as the organization held its initial meeting of the season.

The 1957-58 officers are Jim Anderson, president; Guy Barnocky, vice-president, and Ralph Udicious, secretary.

Serving schedules for Masses were set up for the coming year and hours of adoration on First Fridays appointed.

Also discussed was a plan whereby a uniform method of serving Mass by students will be enacted.

Classes in serving Mass will be initiated in the near future following evening chapel services and all students may take part.

The society decided to conduct a drive for cancelled stamps of all kinds which will be given to the Augustinian seminarians of Villanova.

Jack Garrity is in charge of the drive which got under way today. Garrity stated that containers for the stamps will be placed in each hall on campus and said he hoped that all students take part in the drive.

Band, Singers Open Season; Cullen Directs

The Villanova singers and the university marching band formally opened their musical year this past week with the glee club singing the opening Mass for the evening division. Saturday the band played at the Furman game.

Both the singers and the band are being directed by James W. Cullen, the university's new instructor of music.

Busy Future

Future plans of the group include a Red Mass for the law school on Oct. 10, the capping ceremonies for the sophomore nurses, Oct. 13, and a possible Military Mass early in November.

The Red Mass will be a votive Mass to the Holy Ghost, used for the opening of law courts throughout the nation. It will be sung here as a formal opening of the law school.

Band Spectacle

The Furman game Saturday was the scene of the unveiling of new formations for the band which included the forming of a cage with revolving wheels as the band played "The March of the Wildcats," a cross for the "Alma Mater" and an F for Furman.

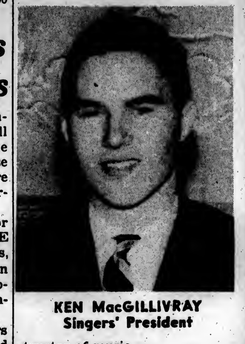
Yearbook pictures for the junior and sophomore classes will be taken tomorrow following the retreat conferences of these classes. Freshman pictures were taken during the orientation period.

Jack Daly, senior IA major and editor of the BELLE AIRE has stated that senior portraits, which have been being taken for the past three days are progressing well and should be completed soon.

Daly asked that those seniors that have not as yet returned proofs of their pictures taken in the spring do so at once.



History Forms

Senior history forms, under the direction of Frank Bonner, have been distributed this week in religion classes and their prompt completion is requested.

They are to be collected in the religion class following the one at which they were given out.

Information to be included in the forms is: Name, home address, and organizations, fraternities, societies, committees, publications. Also the number of years in each group are to be mentioned.

Forms will be available in the BELLE AIRE office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall for those that do not receive them in class.

WVIL Appoints New Heads; C. Smith Named Moderator

Charles Smith, professor of the Villanova English Department, has been appointed faculty director of WVIL, it has been announced.

Mr. Smith received his A.B. from LaSalle in 1953 and proceded then to take graduate courses on the master's level at the University of Pennsylvania, where he served as assistant instructor in English from 1953-to 54. Currently he is completing his thesis for his doctorate from Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland.

Mr. Smith has had considerable stage and radio experience at both the amateur and professional levels.

Smith Formerly at WPTZ-TV

During his undergraduate days, he wrote and participated in productions for the radio clubs of various colleges. He gained further experience working with several radio and television stations in the Philadelphia area, including WPTZ-TV now known as WRCV-TV.

While in Ireland he appeared with several professional theater groups and broadcasted with Radio Eireann. Educational Television in America was one of his better known projects.

Nichols Station Manager

Henry Nichols, a senior Educational major from Niagara Falls, N.Y., has been appointed station manager for the 1957-58 season. This is Hank's fourth year with the organization. In his first two years he served as a disc jockey, while during his junior year he held the position of music director. Nichols is attending Villanova on a baseball scholarship.

Other Appointments

The new program director, Paul Finan, is in charge of the quality of the programs transmitted over the air as well as the program schedules and the broadcasting of commercials.

The finances of the radio station are handled by

SAM Begins Membership Drive; Plans Dance, Trips

Sidney Ferguson: Say Slimo, who is Sam?

Gordon Hathaway: Don't you know, Pops? It's the Society for the Advancement of Management.

Sidney Ferguson: Okay, put me down for a fin.

Gordon: No stupid, it's a club; like all the students belong to.

Sidney: Quit bugging me Slimo. ● ● ●

For Sidney's benefit and any others who are interested, SAM is the Villanova student chapter of the nationally recognized professional organizations of management in industry. It is dedicated to the promotion and advancement of the art and science of management.

Open to All

Presently, it is composed mostly of Industrial Administration majors. However, it is open to all students, regardless of their academic major, who are interested in widening their knowledge and outlook about the actual practice of good management in industry.

The society arranges for the students to take an active part in the senior chapter's dinner meetings, seminars, lectures and conferences.

Dinner Dance Planned

Plans were laid at the first business meeting for a dinner dance to be held at the Conestoga Mill on Oct. 26. By popular demand arrangements have been made for a student tour of the Schmidts Bros. Brewery. A definite date will be set at the next meeting.

Anyone who is interested in joining the organization may obtain applications from any of the officers or from Dr. Klein's office.

The officers are Tom Whelan, president; Ed Yeaser, vice-president; Bob Kilks, treasurer, and Keren Devery, secretary.

STUDENT COUNCIL VIEWS

By PAT NICHOLSON

The Student Council of Villanova University hopes this year to greatly improve its handling of all student problems and student —administration suggestions and programs. In order to do this we will have to change the present structure of the council. Work has already started in this direction as the Ways and Means Committee under Tom Whelan and assisted by Don Kempf is preparing a new constitution for council approval. In order to greatly improve the effectiveness of the council, more will be needed than a new constitution. The Student Council needs the active support of the entire student body. It will be the purpose of this column to keep you, the student body, informed of the main proposals before the council, the decision made on them, and the action taken by the Student-Administration Committee.

New Committee

At the last meeting of the Student Council a new committee was formed to assist the administration in the management of Dougherty Hall and to handle any small problems which are brought to the attention of the council. Under the chairmanship of the Council Treasurer, Bob Murphy, this Student Union Committee will meet frequently with the administration to promote cooperation in the handling of problems involving Dougherty Hall and to facilitate the rectifying or acting upon of problems or ideas which do not have to be discussed on the council floor. The student body is urged to actively support the reccommendations of this committee for they will be in the best interests of Villanova University.

As the result of a proposal by Tom Hoffman, sophomore representative, the blazers of the Class of 1960 and following classes will be selected by the class itself, instead of by the Dean of Student Activities. The selection of blazers will be made in a manner very similar to the present method involving the selection of junior rings. The sophomore class president will name a committee of five students who will handle all bids and decide from which company the desired blazer will be purchased.

Congratulations

Congratulations are in order to Don Kempf, Steve Mahle and all the members of the Orientation Committee for the fine job that was done this year. Considering their rapid change from confused high school graduates to spirited Villanovans, it must be agreed that Father Burke certainly left us with one of the finest Freshmen classes in the country. It is up to each and every member to help make Villanova truly proud of the Class of 1961.

Wildcat quarterback Jim Grazione pushes off a Furman tackler, tucks the ball under his arm and heads up field in last Saturday's game which the 'Cats won 20-0. Rick Sapienza (24) and Al Durgin (77) are shown coming to the aid of Grazione.

Graz's Passing, Running Lead Villanova To 20-0 Win In Campus Football Opener

By JACK CURTIN

An outstanding running and passing attack by quarterback Jim Grazione paced Villanova's Wildcats to a tougher-than- expected 20-0 victory over tiny Furman last Saturday in Goodreau Stadium.

It was the home opener for the Main Liners in the newly-renovated (4,000 added seats, better sanitary facilities, ultra-modern press box) stadium, and a crowd of over 10,000 persons, the largest in recent years, was on hand for the shut-out conquest.

Grazione, who, along with starting signal caller Billy Magee, gives the Villanova eleven one of the strongest one-two punches in the nation, played a part in all three Wildcat touchdowns, and had them on the verge of another in the game's closing minutes when Coach Reagan withdrew him from play because of a slight leg injury.

Only several fumbles kept the Wildcats from rolling up an even more impressive score over their out-classed foes.

The first quarter went scoreless, as the Purple Hurricanes' were surprisingly strong against the powerful Wildcats. The home eleven took the opening kick-off all the way back to the Furman 23 in six plays—featuring Magee's 37-yard pass to Tony Varrechione on the first play from scrimmage—but "the Kid's" second pass of the day was intercepted on the two, ending the threat.

Furman pushed inside the Villanova 20 late in the period, but outstanding line play, especially that of hard-hitting Ed Michaels, ended the threat.

Villanova started moving early in the second period, running a Furman punt back 33 yards behind excellent blocking by Mike DeLucia and Jack Devereaux. The Main Liners drove 77 yards in nine plays, until Graz's two yard run around end and Rick Sapienza's kick gave them a 7-0 halftime lead.

The local unit tallied again when the second half was slightly more than three minutes old, when Grazione hit Varrechione with a 38 yard toss. The swift end outraced two defenders to nab the ball and score.

The final tally came in the fourth period, when Graz threw another perfect pass, this one hitting Sapienza, 35 yards away on the Furman five. Rick faked the lone Hurricane defender and raced across.

Kick-off ace Dick Keyser made the extra point to complete the scoring.

zIn all, the Villanovans pounded out 20 first downs, 304 yards rushing and 129 yards passing. Grazione, the former South Catholic star, led the ground-gaining departments, garnering 91 yards rushing and completing three out of eight passes for another 90.

Sapienza was also especially impressive in the backfield, gaining 46 yards with his usual display of broken-field running. Injured Dave Parr was the second leading groundgainer, with 48 yards, while his speedy substitute, soph John Daniels, also dazzled the Furman defenders.

The only disappointment of the game was the Furman pass attack, which cracked the strong Main Line defense for 91 yards on nine completions.

Frosh Open Season With Army Friday

The freshman football team opens its three-game schedule on Friday when it journeys to West Point to face the Army plebes.

Coach Ed Michaels Sr. is carrying a small, but talented, squad which will endeavor to give the Main Liners their second straight win over the cadets.

Last year, Army was one of two teams to fall before Villanova's freshmen. They lost one game, to Navy.

Navy appears again on the schedule this year, in a game to be played on Saturday, Oct 12, at Annapolis.

Bullis Prep is the third opponent, coming on Oct. 26, at Washington, D. C.

Coach Michaels has his team working hard, although the fact that there are only 24 players interferes with scrimmages at times.

Seminoles Battle 'Cats On Campus

Florida State University, led by their flashy quarterback, Bobby Renn, will invade Goodreau Stadium on Saturday, October 5, for the annual Homecoming Game.

The tilt, Villanova's third of the year, figures to be one of the stiffest tests facing the Wildcats this season. Since the series began in 1954, the Garnet and Gold have swept to victory in all three games.

The Seminoles finished their '56 season with a 5-4-1 log, including triumphs over North Carolina St., Mississippi Southern, and a tie against powerful Wake Forest.

Nugent Baffles Foes

Head Coach Tom Nugent has directed the Seminoles to a 42-35-3 record in his four years at the helm, and during that time, has consistently baffled all opponents with his "double quarterback", and "typewriter huddle" innovations.

Villanovans who attended the FSU game at Municipal Stadium last year, when the southerners won 20-13, will undoubtedly remember Nugent's "I" formation which continually sprung State stars Lee Corso and Vic Prinzi loose for many long runs.

Corso has graduated, and Prinzi is out for the season with a crippling injury, but the visitors will bring back their two fine quarterbacks, Bobby Renn, and Ted Rodrique, along with two of the best ends in the South, Ron Schomburger, and Bob Nellums, who led FSU in individual scoring last season.

Line Strong

Perhaps the strongest link in the Stater's machine is their great line, particularly when it is operating on the defense. Schomburger is an inspirational leader whose aggresive defensive play matches his glue-fingered receiving.

Tackles Bill Musselman and George Boyer both have plenty of heft and are extremely mobile for big men. The FSU starting line averages 201 pounds and will pose Don Luzzi and company quite a problem.

In the backfield, the southerners have no outstanding ball carrier of Corso's caliber, but can boast a pair of great clutch passers in Renn and Rodrique. Renn, a converted halfback, led State in ground-gaining last year with a 5.6 average.

Billy Magee, (15), Wildcat quarterback, has to do some fancy footwork to break away from this Furman lineman as another potential tackler moves in from behind. An unidentified VU man takes out one Furman player while "Pud" Nagle (72) comes running to the rescue.

An Athletic Rebirth

By FRANK FLEMING

For the past several years Villanova University has been gallantly fighting its way out of a great depression, an athletic depression. This fight has been a long, hard, sometimes discouraging one, but finally, this year, the fight seems to be over. This appears to be the year of Villanova's renaissance—its great athletic rebirth.

Already Villanova is the holder of just about every major track title which a college team could possibly win. Against teams twice as large as their own, the charges of coach Jim "Jumbo" Elliott last season brought home both the indoor and outdoor IC4A titles, along with the NCAA championship, to take the triple crown of college trackdom.

Performed Impossible

This same group of athletes was the one which performed the impossible when it outscored the New York Athletic Club, New York Pioneer Club and most of the nation's other mammoth, star studded amateur track clubs to win the national AAU indoor championship.

Out of this same group of men three made the trip to Melbourne last winter to compete in the Olympic Games. Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins and Phil Reavis carried the name of Villanova international fame when between them they won three Olympic gold medals.

Jenkins took first place in the 400 meter run and later ran on the U.S.'s winning 1600 meter relay team. Delany, running for his native Ireland, won the 1,500 meter race winning this. "Olympic" Charley Jenkins and Phil Reavis carried the name of Villanova international fame when they took three Olympic gold medals. to the ladder to athletic predominance.

Grid Team Ranked High

For the first time since the days of Gene Filipski, Villanova had a football team which can be ranked with any team in the country. This year's team has proved its potential might in the first two games of the season. Although on the short side of a high score, the Wildcats showed they were a team to be reckoned with in the opening game with Baylor. In holding the team which had yet previously undefeated Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl, the team which grid expert Herman Hickman picked as the top team in the country, to a mere seven points and by actually outplaying the same famous Bears from Texas, the Main Liners gave indication of a season of greatness.

For the first time since the golden era of 1952 Villanova seems destined to have All-American football player in Don Luzzi. Don is Villanova's huge, hard-hitting tackle who won fame for himself in Texas by taming Baylor's All-American candidate, Charlie Bradshaw. Luzzi is but one of the players who could easily rank the Wildcat's of Frank Reagan as one of the country's top ten teams at the close of the season.

Severance Aims For Top

Court coach Al Severance is expected to turn out a team which could be a contender for the city championship this winter. Severance will be banking heavily on the juniors who gained experience during last year's disastrous season. Seniors Jack Ely and Tom Brennan will be two of the area's best ballplayers. Pat Ryan who last year averaged more than 12 points a game despite a leg injury will be the mainstay of the Wildcats attack. Swimming should be another of Villanova's championship sports. Coach Ed Giesz expects to at least duplicate last season's fine record. The tank team will be strengthened by many sophomores moving up from last year's outstanding freshman team. This year can be the year that Villanova becomes the sports capital of the country.

THIS IS THE YEAR OF VILLANOVA'S ATHLETIC RENAISSANCE

Mighty Luzzi Tamed Baylor 'White Monster,' Proved He Belongs Among Grid Greats

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

After the recent Villanova-Baylor game a Waco, Texas, sportswriter asked Wildcat tackle Don Luzzi, "What the heck did you do to my 'White Monster'?"

The "White Monster" of whom he spoke was Charlie Bradshaw, 6'6", 240 pound tackle whose platinum-blond hair and uncouth manners when in the near proximtiy of rival ball carriers prompted his nickname.

As a junior last year Bradshaw terrorized the backfields of every team in the powerful Southwest Conference. Baylor's tub-thumper had him pegged as a sure fire All-American.

Ran Bradshaw's Side

That was before Luzzi met him and handled him with such complete success that the Wildcats ran to his side of the line throughout the game.

One Texas sportswriter said that Luzzi "wrote his name all over Bradshaw's back." Earl Golding of the Waco Tribune-Herald quotes Bradshaw as saying that he was the "tiredest man on the field."

Has Met Best

To those who have seen Don play since he was a sophomore in 1955, the job he did on Bradshaw came as no surprise. With rare exception, Don has faced the biggest and best tackles in the country and has shown that he belongs in their class and in many cases far above them.

It is true that Luzzi, a powerfully-built six-footer weighing 225, is mentioned on several preseason All-East squads. Yet we feel he doesn't receive near the acclaim he deserves.

Luzzi himself is not concerned by the lack of attention in the past from the sportswriters who choose the "All" teams.

Pays Ratings No Mind

He places these selections in the same category as the weekly ratings of teams which are conducted by both the Associated Press and the United Press.

"Sure these things, national rankings and all-star selections, are a lot of fun and give a guy or team a real thrill, but the satisfaction of pounding the player across from you or of playing good, solid football is far greater.

"For example, I don't think I've ever gotten as big a charge out of football as when we beat Boston University last year (27-13). Knowing that I had done my part in the team's effort meant an awful lot to me."

Michaels Was Tough

Luzzi claims that Lou Michaels, the big Kentucky tackle whom he faced when both he and Michaels were sophomores, is the best lineman he has ever played against.

However, Luzzi says that Florida State, who visits the Main Liners' stadium on Saturday afternoon, put him through the roughest 60 minutes he's yet undergone, as Villanova lost, 20-13, at the local Municipal Stadium last year.

"Boy, did I stink in that one. It wasn't that any one of their linemen was so good, but by using the "I" formation they generated a lot of power. Mainly they ran off tackle, with the end and tackle double-teaming and two backs leading the ball carrier through the hole."

State Due for Jolt

Don promises that the Seminoles won't have such an easy time running through the Villanova line as they did last time. Don't be too shocked if the co-captain of the 'Cats leads the way in keeping the vow.

Like the majority of his teammates, Luzzi heartily backs the move to bring football back to the campus. He thinks it should have been done long ago.

"When a team has to travel to the ends of the map to play, it is a sad situation. Players want and need fan appreciation and backing. This isn't possible when most of the games are played away from home.

Trips Rough On Training

"It always takes a few days to get the kinks out of your body after a long trip. That makes it awfully hard to stay in shape."

But all that is in Villanova's future. For now, Luzzi is more concerned with Florida State and the other teams on this year's card.

He has a number of appointments to deflate publicity-puffed tackles. Most likely he'll write his name on the backs of more players like Charlie Bradshaw, even if the press box occupants can't quite make out the signature.

Football League Rules Announced By 'Mural Council

With the opening of Villanova University's intramural "touch" football league, the Intramural Department has released the following rules:

No varsity athlete will be permitted to play on a team and each team will have nine men in their starting lineup, five players on the line and four in the backfield.

Forfeit If Late

All games will start on the half hour and if a team does not show up within ten minutes, the team present will receive a victory by forfeit.

A game will last 40 minutes —20 minutes per half. There will be a five minute rest period between halves.

A touchdown is six points and the extra point is one.

In case of a tie game, the team with the most first downs shall be declared the winner.

The field will be divided up into four zones and when the offensive team enters a new zone they receive a first down.

Reasons For Penalties

Teams will be penalized five yards for backfield illegally in motion, offsides, defensive holding, and delay of the game, while downfield blocking, crossbody blocking, offensive holding, clipping, personal fouls and unsportsmanlike conduct are fifteen yard penalties. The latter penalty includes disputing the ref's calls.

Those having complaints concerning interpretation of the rules may file their complaint with Jim Corey or Ed Geisz after the game has been completed.

New Equipment Rule

A new rule concerning the equipment for games has been added by the department this year. Teams must pick up a bag which has ball and a whistle in it.

The winning team will return the bag of equipment to the intramural office in room 109, Alumni Hall and post the score on the official football board.

The Intramural Department will do its best to supply an official for each game. If an official does not arrive for the start of a game, each team must supply an official.

Anyone interested in officiating may see Jim Corey or Ed Geisz in the intramural office. Freshmen are especially invited to become refs.

Parr's Fumble Appears 'Dead' Ball As Seen On Movies of Baylor Game

Baylor kicked off, the ball spiralled high into the air and then settled into the waiting arms of Villanova halfback Rick Sapienza, and hundreds of Villanova voices rent the air with their cheers as he took off on a 20-yard runback.

What was this, an unpublicized student trip across the country to the wilds of Texas? Had the Spirit Committee done the impossible once again?

Not quite, but pretty close. Figuring that Villanova couldn't go to Texas, Leo Rogers and his henchmen brought Texas to Villanova.

Only On Film

The occasion was the showing of films of the Wildcats' football opener at Waco, Texas, in the Commerce and Finance auditorium. Villanova students literally hung from the rafters as a sardine-tight crowd viewed the game that almost became one of the year's top upsets.

The story of the 7-0 loss is by now quite well known to anyone who was interested, but seeing the entire battle in full, this reporter was pleasantly surprised by the over-all defensive and offensive power shown from start to finish by Frank Reagan's Main Liners.

This was not a case of a good big school being surprised by an upset-minded little school; it was a case of two equally-matched teams battling back and forth until one got the breaks.

And the breaks, in case you're interested, were just a little larger than those reported in the nations' press.

A Fumble—Or Not?

Davy Parr's fumble on the two yard line, which cost the Wildcats their chance to score on an opening 68 yard drive, was not a fumble at all as it appeared on film.

As viewed by the motion picture camera, Parr hit the ground before he lost control of the pigskin, thereby making the loose oval a "dead" ball.

This is not by way of sour grapes. Things like these are a part of the game, but just suppose—

Villanova's line came in for a multitude of praise after the contest, and well they deserve it. It was hard to pick out the individual performers on the fast-moving film (except for perhaps Don Luzzi and Baylor's Charley Bradshaw, for our eyes were drawn to this much-heralded conflict), but it was obvious that the supposedly - mighty Bear front wall had more than met its match.

Baylor coach Sam Boyd paid the Main Line muscle guys their biggest compliment, when he said that Villanova shoved his team around so much early in the game that "we were getting goal post splinters in the seat of our pants."

A Baylor player said that the Bear team had been confident it could topple the Wildcats with ease, had been warned that this was not the case and that "finally Villanova beat it into our heads."

Backfield Terrific

However, while it was virtually impossible to keep an accurate eye on the line play, spectators were treated to a complete showing of the backfield in action.

There was Rick Sapienza, putting on some brilliant spurts of broken-field running that left the Bears flatfooted, or else Jack Devereaux, smashing his way through the supposedly solid Baylor line.

Or a hole would open in the Baylor ranks and Davey Parr would dart through so fast that it looked like someone had speeded up the camera. And how about Dave Intrabartolo, who made such a perfect handoff on a punt receival to Bill Halligan that the Texans didn't even see him?

Best In Nation

Quarterbacks Billy Magee and Jim Grazione proved conclusively that coach Reagan was not kidding when he called them "the best one-two punch in the east." That, coach, is the best one-two punch in the nation.

One particular scene will stand out in our mind, providing the tremendous power of the Villanova unit.

Jim Grazione went back to pass and stood there looking for a receiver for a full ten seconds and not a Baylor player could get through the Wildcat line to threaten him.

Finally he threw, and a perfect pass went out over Baylor heads and settled into the arms of waiting end Tom Heron.

Maybe, just maybe, the better team didn't win.

V for Villanova, V for victory and V for Count Villan V!
That was the good word last Saturday as the Wildcat cheerleaders and mascot committee parade at halftime with the VU mascot before some 10,000 fans at the Furman game.

Action A-Plenty In Muff Day Battles

The sophs are getting mighty close to that white line that spells defeat, and those cheering frosh don't seem to mind a bit. Guess those youngsters really have a lot of muscle hidden under their regs.

Gangway! Here come the frosh, trying to rack up a few more MUFF day points in the wheelbarrow race. The sophs, however, captured this event to stave off for a while the ultimate yearling victory.

A scene from the nip-and-tuck football battle, which the ophomore squad captured, 2-0, in the closing minutes of play.

They're on their mark and ready to go in the 100-yd. dash event, and those frosh in the background look mighty expectant. Well they might, for their classmates dominated the track events to clinch a MUFF Day victory.

Frosh Win Muff Day Battle On Points In Track Events

On Sept. 23, the Class of 1961 ade its first gigantic step forard by soundly beating the phomores in the annual MUFF Move Up Forward Frosh) Day stivities, 105-90, in a variety athletic contests held on Men- l Field.

he quarter mile relay was another case of the sophs ing freshman dust, as the t year men galloped to aner victory.

he football toss was another away for the beanie kids, as y scored a first and third. A t and second in the football t also added to the frosh l.

he sophs, however, copped touch football game by the margin of 2-0.

Heartbreaking Loss

his event was particularly rtbreaking to the frosh, be- e they had been dominating the game and were leading in first downs when the ball was fumbled in their own end zone and recovered by a soph for a safety and the game's only score.

Perhaps the closest event of the day was the foul shooting contest in which the frosh triumphed, 70-69.

The rope climbing event developed into a duel between soph Tom Derr and frosh John White, with Derr winning out.

Credit should be given to Jerry McGrath, manager of the victorious yearlings, and Tom Hoffman, who directed the sophs, for both boys did a commendable job in directing the numerous participants for both sides.

Take Off Regs

The afternoon's proceedings were under the direction of Director of Intramural Sports Ed Geisz, and some members of his student staff; Council President Jim Corey, Jim Kline, Pete O'Brien and Owen Klein.

The freshman victory entitled the latest addition to the Villanova student body to doff their regs (beanie, bow tie and rolled-up pants cuffs), and be recognized as official students of the university.

Managers Wanted

Already the Villanova basketball squad is getting ready for the forthcoming season. Coach Al Severance and his court unit are building up for a rough schedule for 1957. And they need help.

There are two positions open for managers for the basketball team, for either sophomores or freshmen. Anyone interested in the job is asked to contact either coach Severance in room 102 Alumni Hall or chief manager Vince Bifferato in room 109 Sullivan.

Further programs which may also be presented will be: "Opportunities in Education throughout the World" in which the following sub-topics are included: "State Department Work in Foreign Lands;" "U.S. Army Educational Division" and "Educational Opportunities in States Other than Pennsylvania."

Senior O'Connor Heads Debaters; Team Has 11 Men

Beta Gamma Debating Society will debate throughout this year the union shop, the topic being "Resolved: that the requirement of membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment should be illegal."

President Bob O'Connor has asked all students interested in debating to attend the society's regular meeting every Thursday at 10:30 a.m. in 104 Commerce and Finance.

The society participated in debates among colleges in the area.

Among this year's varsity debaters are O'Connor, Jack Serafin, Jim Corey, Oz Scogna, Frank Cunningham, Bert Gratz, Leo Burke, Dan Costa, Ron Anderson, Jim Murray and Sal DiBlasia.

Last year Beta Gamma under its coach, Mr. Richard McDonough of the Villanova Speech Department, won 60 of its 80 intercollegiate debates.

The quarterback position, a problem in the early practices, has been filled by Tim Cleary, whose brother, Vince, is a fullback on the varsity.

PUBlicly Speaking

By BOB & MIKE

Being that the paper comes out a week after this column meets its deadline, a more or less belated slap-on-the-back goes to the Shark's squad and their fine job against the Baylor eleven. As it was narrated by senior quarterback, Bill Magee, the game was hard fought but it seemed to be verbally brief to me. It is to my knowledge that Mr. Pierce of the Finance Dept. couldn't get any pertinent information from Tony Vairrichione concerning his part in the contest.

A brief look at the social calendar with the football weekends past and to come. The past weekend was a success. And with the Fla. St. game knocking at Goodreau's front door, the team and students will be resitng comfortably for a pre-game and pre-weekend strengthening, respectfully of course.

Chow Problems

The chow-line seems to fulfill all the predicted notions in the time and space areas. I suppose it is a little late to enlighten you alert residents but these turnstyles are a kickback from a Slendereila workshop. The principle being: shrinkage of the stomach by excessive pounding.

A glance at the first Belle Masque reading of their show in mid-November. A really fine cast to do the play considered too deep for college men and women. A bit dramatic but a manifesting of potential. Director Dupree smiled apeasingly upon completion but I'm sure he had a pang at heart.

Take Heed Frosh

As long as we are touching on the different organizations around campus, let me appeal to Freddie Frosh. Move yourself to join some or as many as you can of the campus organizations. They need you and you can use the experience.

The new bright color in the Commerce and Finance building will give the boys something to entertain themselve with for a couple of months . . . Dan Kelly is featuring a resounding shape-up in the employee department . . . John Bauman reports a sharp sales increase in pencils (one at a time), erasers, sheets of paper and blotters . . .

. . . A report, acknowledging a change of heart in the NROTC would-be fly boys seems to have upset the proverbial apple cart. Five years seems to wash away the glamor of the air ship, as it is a minimum service time period . . .

My Apologies

Excuse this column for its fickleness today but there was a tremendous amount of, shall we say, residue.

Mentally exhausted after an extreme amount of work in finishing this column renders useless for the rest of the week's classes. There is a feeling among friends of mine who feel there is a natural or continual exhaustion of my mental faculties.

Mike Mancuso, trip chairman, said that the sales continued yesterday. Over 25 tickets have been sold, he said. Last chance to buy tickets will be next Tuesday. By then, "we will have sold 1200," Mancuso continued.

Nurses Get Caps on Sunday; Fr. Welsh To Give Sermon

Seventeen second year nurses from Villanova's Nursing Division will receive their caps next Sunday at the fourth annual nurses' capping ceremonies in the university chapel at 4 p.m.

The Very Rev. Henry Greenlee, O.S.A., Provincial of the Augustinian Order, will preside at the exercise and will present the caps to the nurses, it was revealed by Sister Mary Alma, head of the Villanova Nursing Division.

The Rev. Robert Welsh, O.S.A., secretary to the provincial, will give the sermon, while the Villanova Singers will provide background music.

Receiving Caps

Those receiving caps include: Jacquelyn M. Beattie, Constance M. Bracken, Mary F. Corcoran, Mary L. Creedon, Miriam B. Crossman, Mary E. Halphen, Geraldine M. Hollinger, Mary B. Kelly, Suzanne B. LaRose, Maureen M. McDade, Margaret M. McLaughlin, Dolores M. McMullin, Loretta Sabo, Bernice A. Sugint, Mary K. Usher, Mary G. Weathers and Marlene M. Ward.

The traditional reception of caps ends the nurses' pre-clinical period, a probationary period equivalent to that taken by the religicus.

Symbolic Cap

The cap symbolizes three things—the circle resembles a host; the point on top resembles the miter of a bishop, since St. Augustine was a bishop, and the bringing together of the cap in the back of the head forms a V for Villanova. It is the only cap in the United States which has a symbolic nature behind it.

The nurses will proceed into the chapel carrying a lighted candle which signifies a burning for future knowledge and it also stands for a heart burning with love for Christ in the nurses' duties of caring for the sick.

Sr. Forms Late, Pictures Missing, Editor Announces

Jack Daly, Belle Air Editor-in-Chief, announced this week that one hundred seniors have not yet had their yearbook pictures taken.

Daly also announced that the senior history forms are due by the end of this week. Unless they are given to the Editor or Senior Section Editor, Francis Bonner, it will be impossible to publish them in the 1958 edition of the yearbook, Daly said.

The yearbook photographer, Carl Wolfe, was on campus for the last time last week. Seniors who have not had their pictures taken were advised by Daly to arrange the picture date with the photographer at his studio in center city Philadelphia.

Name Omitted

Daly said unless pictures are taken and history forms turned in the senior's name will be missing from the graduating list.

Bonner announced that early next week there will be a list of names posted on the bulletin board in Dougherty Hall. Bonner urged all seniors to check the board.

"There may have been slip-ups along the line, and pictures or history forms lost," Bonner said. "By checking the list seniors can make sure that their pictures will be included," he continued.

Missing Last Year

Last year a few of the pictures were missing from the yearbook. Editor Dick Schleicher said it was unfortunate that pictures had to be deleted, but deadlines imposed on the staff makes waiting for pictures impossible.

Daly said the staff has been spending much time on the layout and captions for the yearbook and he hopes to submit an original proof to the printer soon.

Two New Majors?

Order, Composition, Color Seen As Aesthetic Standards In Art

One of the typical arguments brought forth by the lay mind concerning the "unrealistic" style of modern art is whether or not the painter truly has talent. Very often because the painting is expressive to the point of distortion, the public cries out "fraud" and will not allow themselves to be taken in by any artist hoax. Of course, in the so-called 'arty' circles to raise such a question would be intellectual suicide since, here the sincerity and talent of the modern painter is accepted without question.

It is the individual merits of a painting that are scrutinized, not the principle behind the painting. It is unfortunate that the great mass of people continues to misunderstands the mistrust the aims of modern painting.

Aesthetic Standards

There are centain elements within a painting that must be present if it is to be successful. These are not merely momentary standards, but are aesthetic principles. No mater how individually expressive the painting, these principles, in essence, will be adhered to.

A painting must have unity. It must have all parts woring together as a whole .Each line of color in a painting relates to all the other lines in a certain way. They do not exist in the painting for their own merit as much as for relating to all the others elements of line and color.

Order Necessary

Further, a painting must have composition, for the mind demands order. It cannot be a hodge-podge of color, for color's sake alone. Every line must fit in a work to help the organization as a whole.

In a good painting there is a constant motion that controls the eye so that no one area interferes with the pictures's being "read"—almost as is the page of a book.

A painting is really a combination of colrs arranged in practical form, harmoniously.

GERALD LAKARNAFEAUX

Campus Game Pleased Everyone

Anyone who may have been sceptical about the change in Villanova football policy with the ascendance of Frank Reagan to the position of Athletic Director last year should take a look at the past two weekends on the Main Line campus before forming a definite opinion.

Just about ten days ago, a stubborn Furman team battled the once-beaten Wildcats, before 10,000 loyal Blue and White followers. The previous week's heartbreaking setback to a highly-regarded Baylor eleven had aroused the hopes of every Villanovan and alumnus and an intense anxiety to "see the team in person' 'increased ticket sales and stirred up local curiosity in the Goodreau opener.

By the time the featured game of the year rolled around last Saturday, Goodreau Stadium had been sold out, including the additional 4,000 seats that were constructed during the past summer. It was the Homecoming Game. Alumni from all classes returned to their Alma Mater to see if the 1957 Wildcats were the team the sports' pages were reporting them to be.

Leo Rogers and his Spirit Committee gave the Alumni a treat "off the field" by the card section exhibition, the selection of a Homecoming Queen and the introduction of Count Villan V.

A Villanova victory would complete the afternoon and send the Alumni back home happy. Well, as you know by now, the team didn't disappoint them. As a matter of fact, everyone is still talking about the hard tackling of the linemen, the 61-yard touchdown pass from Grazione to Sapienza early in the game and the fine running of Devereaux and Sapienza.

There was a strange feeling among the largest crowd ever to witness a football game in the university stadium that the present "return to the campus" policy of Mr. Reagan would meet with speedy approval by every Villanova rooter.

Rr. Reagan had done his part last Saturday afternoon by exhibiting a well-coached, spirited squad of ballplayers and the fans responded by turning out in large numbers to "see that team in action."

Everybody was glad to see Villanova football on the Villanova campus again and if Saturday's game was typical of future Reagan teams everybody will be glad to see plenty of it in years to come.

Transportation

The most direct means of transportation from the University to central Philadelphia or Main Line communities is the Pennsylvania Railroad, whose Paoli Local provides half-hourly service to Broad Street, Suburban and 30th Street Stations, as well as to Paoli in the opposite direction. The Philadelphia and Western Railway, located across Lancaster Avenue from the main part of campus, has quick and frequent service to the 69th Street area and to Norristown. The Red Arrow busses travelling along Lancaster Pike also provide service to Ardmore and to 69th Street section.

Ike's 'Arkansas Policy' Lauded

Francis Bonner contends in his letter that the Federal government overstepped its authority in sending Federal troops to Arkansas, because there was "no real threat, or sufficient cause." We stated that only nine students, one school, and a very small group of "irrational" people were involved. For this, the Federal government need not have stepped in on powers delegated to the states.

I answer that the Federal troops were used in the state of Arkansas only because the state of Arkansas itself did not use its state's rights to combat or solve the situation.

If they had used the National Guard to implement the interpretation of the Constitution, instead of turning the nine students away, and if the city and state police around Little Rock had been able to control the mob, then, Federal troops would not have been needed.

Federal troops are there enforcing Federal Rights, only because the National Guard of Arkansas refused to and city and state police failed to do their duty. States' rights will return to Arkansas when they are willing and able to carry out Federal provisions by themselves with the means that they have.

The British Outlook Since Suez

By FRANCIS COGHLAN History Instructor

The Suez crisis of 1956 brought into sharp focus British relations with the United States. At that time the British themselves were sharply divided on the question; many believed that to undertake such an action without United States support was to invite disaster and many felt that the action was altogether unethical.

Those who supported Eden's undertaking were highly critical of the United States' role in the affair, on the belief that it was to the United States' own interest to give strong support to its most important ally. These people were also strongly disappointed by Eden's failure to push the expedition to its logical conclusion.

This summer I had a first-hand opportunity to discuss the Suez affair with all classes of Britishers and I found that interest in the matter has declined considerably.

The majority of those consulted believed that the alliance with the United States would be maintained at all costs. Therefore they were willing to concede that the leadership of the United States must be followed wherever possible.

However the spirit of criticism was not dead. The belief was still prevalent that the United States leadership had become so weak that the evolution of a joint foreign policy was almost impossible. It was also stated that the United States has increased the danger of communist penetration of the middle east through its failure to take a strong line over the nationalization of the Suez Canal. Current events in Syria were believed to substantiate this point of view.

The importance of Middle East oil to the European economy and, in the future, to that of the United States must in the long run outweigh consideration of conciliating Arab nationalism and reconciling it to the West. If both Arab friendship and the safety of the oil supply can be fostered, well and good, but if not, then security must come first. So ran the current trend of British public opinion.

Suez has had two major effects on the British nation. First: it has caused a major acceleration of the development of atomic power as an alternative to Middle East oil, and second: it has sparked a growing interest in the movement toward European unity.

The possibility in European unity of erecting a third major power bloc, between the Soviet Union and the United States, is welcomed by those critical of American foreign policy, and by those who feel that Britain's final destiny as an industrial power can only be worked out in a free trade Europe. Certain parts of the economy would suffer but these would be more than offset by the stimulus to production in the aircraft, automobile, atomic and electrical industries.

Generally, during the summer months, the British were content to enjoy their vacations and the results of unprecedented prosperity. Therefore the degree of interest in the Middle East countries has waned to a negligible point as people busy themselves with the material side of life. Certainly, in my opinion, it will not seriously affect the next political campaign.

VU Midshipmen See Texas, Virginia On Summer Tour

Each summer finds a number of Villanova students who season their education with the military, and are thereby known as midshipmen of Villanova's NROTC unit, heading to the sunny southland for six weeks training in the principles of amphibious warfare at Little Creek, Va. and naval aviation at Corpus Christi, Texas.

For this period of training the midshipmen carry the identity of Villanova with them and garner credit for the name of the university in every field from aptitude for the naval service to volleyball.

1st Stop Little Creek

Besides all this, the avaition-amphibious cruise is fun. Upon their arrival at the United States Naval Amphibious in Little Creek, Va., the Villanova middies settled down to rather austere comfort with their seabags and sundry equipment, twelve men to a quonset hut.

The following day, utilities, ponchos, helmets and packs were issued and it came full home that for the next three weeks the middies were to lead willy-nilly a life as closely resembling that of the marine "snuffy" as circumstances would allow, and like it. And like it they did.

During the next three weeks, there was a constant round of excellent classroom demonstrations featuring visual aids that any educator would envy, and usually an explosion of sorts about midway through each lecture to alert those with a high degree of resistance to classroom indoctrination.

Approximately half the time though was devoted to practical work to the ends of acquiring such varied skills as negotiating cargo nets as a means of embarking upon and debarking from troopships, handling small amphibious landing craft in approaching troop ships and beaching, troop leadership and the art of passing barbed wire impediments without ventilating either clothing or personnel.

Who Goes Up Comes Down

The first pass down the cargo nets was a dry run affair with two ambulances conveniently placed nearby as a morale factor, but everyone found it was about only one-fourth as high as it looked.

The rest of a busy day was spent marching to chow, cleaning huts, marching, organized athletics, marching, water survival, marching, touring amphibious ships and marching.

Middies watch a full-scale amphibious landing from simulated A-bombs to the landing of the troops at Camp Pendleton, Va.

Diversive Tactics

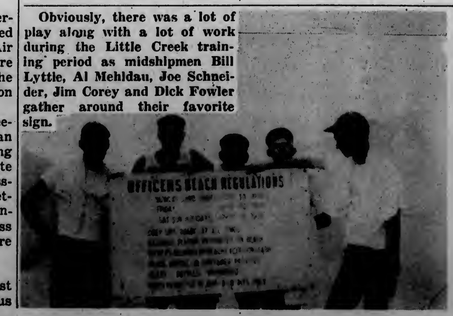
If this athletic regimer designed to unkink classroom fagged muscles began to pall, there were always the rewarding diversions of barracks life horseplay, the latest western epic at the base movie, the excellent base athletic facilities and the refreshments, liquid and otherwise of the base's Officers Club. The general concensus of opinion was that every self-respecting community should have an officer club accessible to midshipmen.

At the end of this ashore phase of amphibious training the middies were integrated with veteran marine landing forces embarked upon ships and proceeded to assault the beaches of Camp Pendleton, just a few miles south of Virginia Beach, scene of earlier midshipmen assault waves.

This is Texas!

Following the landing exercises, the middies were airlifted to Corpus Christi Naval Air Station in Texas for three more weeks less rigorous but none the less rewarding familiarization with naval aviation.

Middies were given a three-hour hop in a seaplane and an hour hop in a jet trainer. Filling in the time gap was a complete program of comprehensive classroom instruction and athletics. All were given the opportunity to quality as first-class swimmers. And of course there was marching.



Home The Warriors

August 22nd came at last bringing with it a mass exodus by train, plane and bus, and Villanova's thiry-five had now returned back to school for a slightly less stimulating way of life. All you need do is note the deep Texas tan, the renewed vigor and the general absence of former paunch to deduce that the active life was agreeable.

The middies brought back a wealth of newly-acquired professional information and left behind a warm glow for the University of Villanova.

Some battle-weary? Villanovans play the role outside of quonset hut Q-131, home for three weeks to our middies along with sister huts Q-130 and Q-132 at U.S. Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek, Va.

PUERTO RICAN PROBLEM

By TOM MARTINEZ

Since 1948 the Puerto Rican has come into a wide range of controversy, so much so that a musical - comedy - drama is about to appear under Broadway lights with the provocative title, "West Side Story".

The total number of Puerto Ricans living in the United States as of December 31, 1956 was 736,000 and of this number 577,000 were living in New York City. The problem arises as to whether these people can adjust themselves to a new way of life and how can they live in an already overpopulated city.

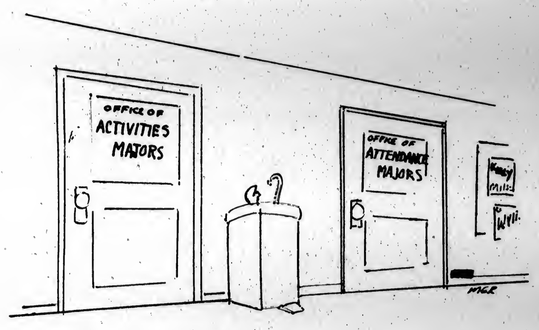
There has been much criticism of these people living on relief but the facts show that 94 or 95 out of every 100 New York - Puerto Ricans support themselves while the others who are forced to go on relief try to find work as soon as possible. This stands to reason because the sum given them would never be enough o pay their bills which in many cases are ridiculously high due to the attitude of unscrupulous landlords .

Some of their apartments have three rooms with the barest of necessities and have a $125 monthly rent attached to them. The tenants will move their entire family into the place, pay the rent, live in a depraved state and yet feel that they are existing like kings.

Why then does a yearly average of 50,000 come to the United States? Since the end of the Korean conflict, industry, business and therefore jobs have been plentiful. More money can be earned weekly here then can be earned in two weeks in Puerto Rico.

This is not to say that conditions are poor in their native land. It just means that standards and the economy are different. In 1948 "Operation Bootstrap" got under way which shows today the addition of 450 new factories employing 37,000 workers and paying an average of $46 per week. As of 1956 the average family income was $2,400 per year whereas the average yearly income of 1940 was $660 which shows a 227.6% increase.

What is the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico doing to alleviate social as well as economic disorder on the island? The introduction of new industry, plants and factories provide job opportunities for both the skilled and unskilled workingman and woman. The factories themselves train their help and therefore provide for a semi-trade education in sewing, plastics, precision instruments and varied other trades.



Housing before 1948 was a problem but now many housing projects or organizations as they are called are being constructed to give this new society decent places to live. The biggest project is the "Llorens Torres Caserio" which consists of numerous apartment houses, schools, parks, grocery and supply stores. Occupants live in four-room apartments with modern bathrooms, new stoves, refrigerators and up to date conveniences.

Rent for these vertiable "palaces" (we must keep in mind that the tenants belong to the poor or peasant class and they have been accustomed to living in complete slum environments) range from four to twenty dollars per month according to the salary made by the family.

Children are educated, foodstuffs are bought and all the comforts of a small town can be had in these organizations so that the living and social standard of these people is being constantly improved. But not until all plans have materialized, the peasant class has been adequately housed and unemployment figures have been lowered to a minimum percentage, will the population of Puerto Rico be stable enough to lower migration rates to a vacationing few.

Until this happy day for Puerto Rico arrives, we can continue to expect a heavy influx of the islanders to this country and it is to be hoped that the newcomers will match the achievements of those already here who have made their mark in almost every walk of American life.

Noted Puerto Ricans include motion picture stars Jose Ferrer, Rita Moreno and Juano Hernandez. Vic Power and Jim Rivera have made the big time in baseball while Graciela Rivera is an opera star. This is only a partial list of Puerto Ricans who have become leaders here, in Puerto Rico and abroad and they are powerful reasons why we should not sell Puerto Rico and its people short.

Two New Majors?

Order, Composition, Color Seen As Aesthetic Standards In Art

One of the typical arguments brought forth by the lay mind concerning the "unrealistic" style of modern art is whether or not the painter truly has talent. Very often because the painting is expressive to the point of distortion, the public cries out "fraud" and will not allow themselves to be taken in by any artist hoax. Of course, in the so-called 'arty' circles to raise such a question would be intellectual suicide since, here the sincerity and talent of the modern painter is accepted without question.

It is the individual merits of a painting that are scrutinized, not the principle behind the painting. It is unfortunate that the great mass of people continues to misunderstands the mistrust the aims of modern painting.

Aesthetic Standards

There are centain elements within a painting that must be present if it is to be successful. These are not merely momentary standards, but are aesthetic principles. No mater how individually expressive the painting, these principles, in essence, will be adhered to.

A painting must have unity. It must have all parts woring together as a whole .Each line of color in a painting relates to all the other lines in a certain way. They do not exist in the painting for their own merit as much as for relating to all the others elements of line and color.

Order Necessary

Further, a painting must have composition, for the mind demands order. It cannot be a hodge-podge of color, for color's sake alone. Every line must fit in a work to help the organization as a whole.

In a good painting there is a constant motion that controls the eye so that no one area interferes with the pictures's being "read"—almost as is the page of a book.

A painting is really a combination of colrs arranged in practical form, harmoniously.

Tips For Footloose Villanovans

By JOHN D. KENNEDY—Feature Editor

If you are among the less moneyed classes — too impoverished to afford extensive and expensive football weekends—it's worth your while to investigate date opportunities in Philadelphia. The old complaint that 'there's nothing to do in Philly' just isn't true.

The Philadelphia playgoer has a better than even chance to see a future Broadway hit before Broadway is aware of it. Presently in town is Merman Wouk's new comedy, "Nature's Way," starring Orson Bean and Betsy von Furstenburg—a farce and satire on success in New York. Terence Rattigan's drama, "Separate Tables," is really two small plays closely interwoven—'Table Seven' and 'Table by the Window'—concerning the lives of several different characters resident in an English resort hotel. Eric Portman and Geraldine Page have received critical plaudits for their performances.

Villanovan Ron Delany Stars

Lowell Thomas Rides Again in the fourth Cinerama venture, "Search for Paradise." In the picture are recorded the further adventures of Mr. Thomas, this time in the high Himalayas, Nepal, etc., etc. The Trans-Lux features "Melbourne Rendezvous," the only complete and official films of the 1956 Olympics, in Beautiful Technicolor, starring Ron Delany.

A powerful indictment against war is "The Last Bridge," at the 'World' with the new German star, Maria Schell. The scene is the World War II occupation of Yugoslavia; Miss Schell is a German nurse caught between the desperation of both sides.

Anita Ekberg Meets Mickey Spillane

For those whose taste or intelligence isn't very high, a double feature at the Goldman is recommended. Mickey Spillane's manly gut-buster, Mike Hammer, comes once more to the screen in an adaptation of that memorable novel, "My Gun is Quick." The other half of that bill is devoted to an Anita Ekberg epic, complete with hubby Anthony Steele.

The Bala Theatre, near City Line Avenue, is inaugurating a new 'art' film policy. The first 'art' film features the lustrous Sophia Loren in "Scandal in Sorrento."

The film better known as Howard Hughes' Folly, "Jet Pilot," ten years old and out-dated, is packing 'em in at the Stanley. Critics have judged the plot and a practically juvenile John Wayne as the chief curiosities of the picture. Janet Leigh as a Russian lady spy brings the house down.

Jazz fiends will be happy to note that the Red Hill Inn in near-by New Jersey has a 'name' jazz policy. Recently at this spot Lionel Hampton was featured. Pep's, on Broad Street—at South — is anothe mecca for the jazzically-inclined.

For dancing—if anyone is not exhausted by the strenuous campus socials—St. Alice's Social Center in Stonehurst (near 69th Street) holds Sunday evening dances with a 'name' bands frequently featured. High school kids are notable at this dance by their absence.

If any socially-inclined Villanovan with a quarter or so in his jeans cannot find any place to go after the above lengthy enumeration, he is strongly advised to contact this writer or the nearest physician.

As the Sullivan Hall Tennis Association's matches move into their third week, all eyes are beginning to focus on the little Italian with the big serve. Seventh seeded Frank Cavalier, given little hope in a tournament filled with such stars as Jack Curtin and J. P. Moran, has proven that there's still room for the little man in the world of big-time tennis.

When we consider that Frank is going into these matches without the use of his slide rule and T-square, it makes the feats accomplished by the junior engineer all the more astounding.

Which reminds me of the story of the drunk who was sitting in the bar when a friend came up and suggested that they throw a party in the drunks room. "Fine," said the drunk, "about what time should we have it."

"Oh," said his friend, "about eight-ish."

A few minutes later another friend appeared on the scene and made a similar proposal. And when the drunk inquired as to what time the party should be held his second friend answered, "About nine-ish."

The drunk guzzled down a final drink, stood up on the bar stool, and inquired, "Anyone for tenish?"

It's About The Weekend

The Villanovan won't find too much to look for this weekend on the home campus. Rosemont, however, is holding their annual Fall carnival this weekend. Rosemont's "Country Fair" will begin early Saturday and will continue throughout the afternoon and evening. Feature of the day will include rides and amusements for children, refreshments, and a square dance in the evening for adults.

The March on Blacksburg

Villanovans seeking entertainment a little farther from home, will find the homecoming weekend at Virginia Tech to be very enjoyable. The V.P.I. campus is a short seven hour drive by car and eleven hours by train. Rumor has it that a good number of Villanovans are making the trip in order to get into condition for the following week's trip to Boston.

Even now, as I gaze out the window, I can see a tall dark-haired figure with a finance book under one arm, walking back and forth behind the new C&F building practicing on a violin. And as I look into this morning's paper I find that there will be a performance of the first Italian orchestra in the United States in 37 years at the Academy of Music tonight. Could there be a connection between these two seemingly innocent observations? Who knows?

Arkansas Episode Reverberates Around World

By JOHN HUNT

The unforunate occurences in Little Rock have brought forth literally millions of words in newspapers the world over. Actually, no words are necessary to explain the basic human problem. The mute but eloquent pictures of Elizabeth Eckford turned away from Central High School by armed soldiers, jeered by faces twisted with hate are equal to any number of words written. This harvest of hate is grist for the Communist propaganda mills.

"Hypocrisy!"

"Hypocrisy!" shriek the Red headlines. The American preashers of the brotherhood of man find that message flung back in their faces. What can they answer?

Friends of America are dismayed; non-communist but anti-American factions gleefully dredge up the American disgrace. In Asia the new race-conscious nations follow the headlines, watching the American treatment of non-white race.

The prestige of the United States abroad has, prehaps, never been so low. It is difficult, if not impossible, to find an effective answer. The circumstances may be explained; Europe and Asia may be asked if their racial minorities have always been well-treated.

Our setting forth former German treatment of Jews and French feelings toward Algerians—just to name two instances — does not extenuate ourselves but just spreads the tar brush of intolerance further. Everyone is not spotless, but we seemed to have represented ourselves as so.

Perhaps when the furore has died down a bit, when heads are a trifle cooler, our explanations and answers may be listened to with the reasonableness they deserve.

Possible American Propaganda

The situation in Arkansas — as through the entire South—represents the efforts of an ignorant, strongly-united minority to oppress still another minority. It must be made clear that the ideas of these militant segregationists are repugnant to the great majority of the American people, that the same American people view with the same horror as the rest of the world the actions of the misguided Southerners.

The rapid movement of the Federal government to put an end to the impasse in Arkansas may be shown abroad as the determination of the American people to end the oustanding injustice. Although force of the courts implemented by the military is now necessary, eventually education of the people will produce the true traditions of American democracy.

Only time will soften the harsh effects of the Arkansas incident abroad. Only time and American determination will insure that such a thing will never happen again.

Off The Bottom of the Deck

By DAVE BELCHER

The game of bridge is often considered by men of college age to be an extremely dull pastime that should be restricted to unmarried women who have at some time in their lives reached the age of sixty.

If these young men would take the trouble to find out about the game they would have to admit that it is by far the most interesting and challenging card game ever formulated.

Intellectuals (nasty word!) have sanctified the game for years for its quality of restricting the element of chance as much as possible and giving full vent to the mental efforts of the individual player.

Men Best Players

For this reason, men make the best players. I mean no damaging reflections on the mentality of the fair sex but it seems that women would usually rather talk than concentrate.

The basic essentials of bridge are relatively simple. The complications come in the practical applications of these elements.

The game of course can only be played with four persons. The direct object of playing is to accumulate as many tricks as possible with the potential that your hand offers. This "trick" system is similar to that used in hearts or pinochle. If you don't know these games, see me personally or take up chess.

The game is played by partners, and a great part of the game depends on the ability of the partners to judge and anticipate the other moves and the strength of his hand. More about this later.

When the hand is first dealt, the players bid to arrive at the number of tricks which they feel that they can take between them. This bid is a contract which they must make or be penalized.

The Blind Partners

The partners work through a complicated system of bidding to arrive at a contract that will give them the most number of tricks, and thus the greatest number of points. They try to come as close as possible to the exact limit of the strength of their combined hands, Neither sees the other's hand, though.

In bidding for the number of tricks the partners also name trump. Trump is a suit of which any card will take precedence over any card of another suit to win the trick. The partners will try to name their longest suit as trump. If spades are trump, then a two of spades will take an ace of hearts for instance. Under certain unusual conditions a hand may be bid and played with no trump.

Obviously with fifty-two cards and four players, there are thirteen tricks to a hand, all the cards being dealt out evenly. When one pair of partners have successfully set their contract, they must take six tricks (called the book) plus the number of tricks they have bid. For example, if they bid three-heart, then they must take nine tricks and hearts will be trump suit. The partners who failed to reach a contract will try to prevent the other two from making their bid.

The bidding (over fifty-percent of the game) is competitive. When one player bids, another must bid higher in number of tricks and trump suit order to top the first bid. The trump suit order from bottom to top is clubs, diamonds, hearts and spades. No trump tops any of these in the bidding process. The dealer starts the bidding. A player may decline to bid and pass.

A bid becomes a contract when three players in a row pass after it. The playing of the hand now begins. This will be taken up in next week's column.

'Interview', 'Digest, 'Doubt It' Are Top WVIL Productions

By BOB RAFANO

One of the innovations which make up the new WVIL is a unique array of in-studio productions. These productions, under the direction of Gary Mara, all originate in the studios of the campus station.

From a three-hour spectacular to an extraordinary 15-minute interview can be dialed at 645 k.c.

The foremost production of WVIL is the sensational "Digest." This entertaining, fast-moving show includes music, news, sports, reviews, previews and interviews.

This three-hour presentation can be heard from 8 to 11 o'clock every Sunday night.

The entire show is co-ordinated by a host of announcers.

One of the recent program additions to the station, "I Like That Tune," heard each Monday evening from 7 to 7:30 o'clock now informs the campus listeners what a panel of Villanova students considers the best record release of the week.

Rosies vs. Cats.

Another interesting program containing this year is the quiz show "I Doubt It," presented on Monday nights from 8:30 to 9 o'clock.

This production is a weekly bout between Rosemont and Villanova students which seeks to find who the most observing newspaper readers are. Even though a panelist hasn't kept up with the daily news, he or she has the right to "bluff" an answer—a fact that makes the program all the more interesting.

Subjects of current interest are given personal viewpoints by both the faculty and student body of Villanova on "Interview," from 8:15 to 8:30 p.m. every Thursday. This weekly show can prove to be a most talked-about incident.

Keep up on Politics

"Focus on Government" presents an interesting half-hour of discussion on political affairs and their affect upon college students each Thursday night from 7:30 to 8 o'clock.

For the social "bug" of VU, "Wildcat Safari," Thursday from 8:30 to 9 p.m., presents a complete schedule of social affairs for the coming weekend. It is a detailed report of all activities at Villanova and all nearby colleges.

'Share of America' Contest Sponsored By Razor Company

Some lucky Villanova student may get to be a "Wall Street Wizard" before the semester is over.

All it takes is an entry blank for Remington Rand's "Share of America" contest, in which the winner gets stocks of his or her choice equal in value to a share of every common stock on the New York Stock Exchange. Remington Rand will pay all brokerage fees. In addition to the first prize, there are 504 other stock prizes.

Double Your Money

If the winner has purchased a Remington Electric Shaver during the contest period, from September 30 until December 1, all prizes double. First prize then becomes equivalent to two shares of every common stock on the Exchange.

Entry blanks are at any Remington sales counter and will also be found in advertisements in Life, Look, Saturday Evening Post, Parade and in newspaper supplements and comics.

Worth Millions

If Remington Rand had held this contest 20 years ago, when it turned out the first of its 20,000,000 shavers, financial authorities estimate that the $156,000 of prize money could have purchased stocks that would have a value today in the millions.

Opera Classica Will Feature 1812 Overture, Strauss

Opera Classica will conduct a three-part program at tomorrow night's meeting which will introduce the members to the new stereophonic sound setup that the club has recently acquired.

The third part of the program will be Symphony No. 3 in C minor, op. 73 by Saint-Saens.

Opera Classica will make its first cultural trip of the season this Friday when it will see a Philadelphia Grand Opera Company production of Giuseppe Verdi's "Aida" at the Academy of Music.

The cast includes Herva Nelli, Kurt Baum, Neil Rankin and Giorgio Tezzi.

Tickets are still available at two dollars each and the opera will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Homecoming Weekend - An Affair To Remember

Admiring visitors examine Simpson Hall's presentation for the Basca Award. Simpson Hall came in third in the contest to have their four-year victory streak broken.

T'n'T Offers $100 Savings Bond to Student Playwright

The Turf and Tinsel Club is offering a $100 savings bond to any Villanova student who can submit a play that will be acceptable for the Club's Spring Production.

The original prize was $25, as was announced in last year's VILLANOVAN, but has been upped to $100 this year. The idea was new, formulated by this year's president, Gerry Gobright, . beup- ning "-d un bright, to create a greater student interest in the organization.

Last year a student, Bob Schiller, wrote a show called "The Man in the Grey Flannel Toga." The glorious farce turned out to be perhaps the most successful production in the history of the organization.

This was the first time that a student had undertaken the task of writing the show. Gobright and the officers of the club feel that this would be a fine beginning for a tradition of drawing the show from the talent of the student body.

Belongs to Students

In the past, outside associates of the club have written the script and have been very successful in doing so. The fact remains, however, that the club does belong to members of the undergraduate student body and they should have complete control of the entire production.

The club realizes that the writing of a musical comedy is a tremendous undertaking. However, it is also realized that the talent is here. That is the purpose of the $100 added incentive. With this financial boost, it is often amazing how much talent can be found.

There are of course certain stipulations on the awarding of the afore mentioned sum. The show must first be examined by the reviewing committee before the actual spring production; also only entrees of undergraduate students will be considered.

Rules to be Announced

A meeting will be held for those interested in the near future and further recommendations will be made in reference to particular requirements for the script. Anyone are interested should contact Dave Belcher at Midway 9-1182 before Monday.

SchoolofLaw To Celebrate Special Mass

A Red Mass will be celebrated Oct. 10 at 10:30 a.m. in the university chapel with the Very Reverend James A. Donnellon O.S.A., as celebrant, Rev. Robert P. Russell, O.S.A., as deacon and Rev. Robert J. Welsh, O.S.A., as the sub-deacon.

The Villanova Singers will sing the Jan Mul Missa Impromptu under the direction of Mr. Cullen; Dr. Harold Gill Reuschlein, the dean of the law school will play the organ.

Medieval Custom

This Mass comes from medieval France and England and it was celebrated as an invocation for the protection of the Holy Ghost to those in the law profession.

Today this Mass is celebrated in England and France on September 29, the feast of St. Michael while in the United States the official celebration occurred on October 1 which is the opening of the Supreme Court.

The name Red Mass is used because of the fact that red vestments are worn by the celebrants.

Students Among Invited

Under-graduates, members of the law school, lawyer members of the Board of Trustees of the University and members of the Board of Consultors of the Law School are invited to attend. Fr. Robert Reagan O.S.A., will preach the sermon.

IRC Reveals Officers For Coming Year

The Industrial Relations Club recently announced the new officers for the coming year.

Attilio DiMartino was elected president, while the other officers include: Matt Brennan, vice-president; Bud Peterson, secretary; Joe Rafferty, treasurer; Frank Cernos, publicity director and Al Cascarina, student council representative.

Speakers from both industry and labor are tentatively planned. Films will also be shown dealing with interesting aspects of production and worker satisfaction.

This year the club is introducing the "incident process" method. This method involves member participation in resolving actual industrial relation problems met with in industry.

New members are invited to join the club, DiMartino said.

Dialogue Mass

Rev. Norbert W. Whitley, O.S.A., Chaplain of the university, has announced that the faculty Dialogue Mass for the month of October has been transferred from Oct. 3 to Oct. 17, due to the Day of Recollection for the student body of Villanova.

Instruments To Aid Safety Considered

Dr. Lawrence R. Hafstad, General Motors vice president in charge of research, told the Institute of Traffic Engineers that entirely new automobile instruments to help control the "chronic violator fringe" of drivers are among the possible results if teams of "competent amateur and other researchers are turned loose on traffic problems.

He emphasized that such "driver monitor" instruments were cited "not necessarily as recommendations, but as examples of the kind of unconventional ideas which are likely to emerge if more of a mixed-team or operations research approach is introduced into the traffic problem area." Among hypothetical examples of "driver monitors," he mentioned:

1. A magnetic tape to record the speeds at which a car had been driven just prior to an accident.

2. A device to relay from roadside radar installations, now used to detect speeders, a warning to the driver that he was speeding.

3. A system to duplicate roadside traffic signals inside the car, "where they would speak with considerably enhanced authority."

4. A system which would not merely signal the driver, but would control the operation of his vehicle.

Operations Research

To cope with all phases of the traffic problem, Dr. Hafstad proposed use of the "systems engineering approach, with its companion technique of operations research." This approach, he said, is "widely used and highly developed in the communications industry, in the aircraft industry, and in the missile business."

In these and other fields, Dr. Hafstad said, standard practice is to use a "mixed team" with "a generous infusion of 'outsiders'."

Such research teams should be permitted to explore "the novel and interesting as well as the obviously practical, Dr. Hafstad said. He explained that no research man expects anything impractical to be introduced .

sales booth outside the student union building.

Leave Midnight

Those going on the Villanova train excursion will board the train at the 30th St. Station in Philadelphia at 11:45 p.m. Friday, Oct. 18 and arrive at Back Bay Station in Beantown early Saturday morning.

Back Bay Station is within walking distance of the hotels in the vicinity of Villanova's Boston headquarters.

Late Departure

The trains will not depart from Boston until 3 p.m., Sunday afternoon, thus giving the Villanovans plenty of time to attend Mass, rest up and eat before the journey homeward.

The committee has already accepted numerous reservations, but hopes that many more students will take advantage of this opportunity to make this first Villanova excursion of the 1957-58 school year.

Rifle Team Gains Varsity Status, Abernethy Captain

Villanova has a new varsity sport this year, the Villanova University rifle team. Although this team has called itself varsity in the past and in the last few lears has distributed varsity letters, this is the first year that is is officially and completely classified by the university as a recognized varsity sport with all the consideration which that status implies.

Guiding the team for this important year is Jim Abernethy, a senior engineering student who dayhops from Havertown. Jim replaces Hank Miller as team captain.

A strong team is returning this year to back Abernethy up. Seniors on the team are Fred Passarella, J. Strom MacCurley and Frank Moser. Passarella made several impressive showings last year as the captain of the naval unit rifle team. Juniors are Chris Kloss and Pete Carini. Sophomores are Lou Spevetz and Frank Murtha.

The last two came up this year from the freshman team which has proven invaluable as a proving gronud for new talent. Several of this year's frosh, among them Charlie Russel, already look like excellent prospects for future varsity status.

The team opens up the season away, on Nov. 16 with Western Maryland. Other dates set so far include matches with Lehigh, St. John's and Penn State. The team will also compete in the United State Coast Guard tournament.

Hank Miller is a major loss for the team, but there is high hopes that Abernethy, Passarella or Kloss will be able to fill the gap adequately during the course of the season.

Team captain Abernethy, in an optimistic vein, predicts a successful but a very rough season for his sharpshooters. He says the keenest competition will come from St. John's.

Anyone with previous experience who would now like to try out for the team is welcome to see Sgt. Molchany in the Navy building marine office.

Listen, Don't Talk; Show Intelligence

When you attend a class lecture are you a good listener? The average person is only a "half listener." Even when he tries, he retains only about 50 percent of what he hears right after he hears it.

But, there are advantages in being a good listener say Dr. Ralph G. Nichols and Leonard A. Stevens of the University of Minnesota in an October Reader's Digest article, "Are You Listening?

"Concentration is more than half the battle," they say. "A good listener fights distraction. He will close a door . . . move closer to the person talking . . . interrupt only when it is necessary to clear up a point."

Courteous Action

"One of the reasons for paying close attention . . . is simply that it is courteous to do so. But there is a selfish reason too . . . the way you listen has a great deal of control over the way people talk to you. Intelligent listening on your part helps the speaker . . . gives you information that you may need. How you listen has a direct bearing on what you learn."

Listen and Speak

Becoming a good listener, the authors say, also makes you a better, more interesting speaker yourself.

Marine Officers On Campus Seeking Recruits This Week

A team of Marine procurement officers is at present appearing in Dougherty and Garey Halls and will be available through Friday to answer any questions concerning the present U. S. Marine Corps program.

Complete processing facilities have been set up this year and enable students to take mental and physical examinations on the Villanova campus.

Captains DeAngelo and DeLong and Lt. Darby, officers affiliated with the Villanova Marine program, will be on hand to answer any questions concerning the Platoon Leaders Class, Officers Candidate Class for seniors and Aviation Officer Candidate Course.

At present the Marine Corps is the only military service requiring only two years active duty after flight school.

'Cats Win Homecoming Game

Devereaux Paced Wildcats Beat Florida State, 21-7

A pile-driving package of muscle and determination named Jack Devereaux led the Villanova Wildcats to a revengeful 21-7 victory over Florida State before a homecoming crowd of 13,000 in Goodreau Stadium last Saturday.

The hard hitting fullback carried the ball 20 times and gained 82 yards to pace the Mainliners to their first victory over the FSU Seminoles in four tries.

Outstanding performances by backs Jim Grazione and Rick Sapienza and linemen Don Luzzi, Ed Michaels and Gene O'Pella were slightly overshadowed by Devereaux's demonstration of line-plunging determination.

Slow at First

The contest was similar to the Furman contest of a week earlier in that the Wildcats couldn't seem to get moving until the first quarter had almost run out. When they did start rolling, however, they were not to be denied.

Fine defensive play by Luzzi and Devereaux stemmed the Seminoles' threats in the early by Michaels on the Villanova 38 minutes, and a fumble recovery started the Mainliners toward their first score.

With Devereaux, Grazione and John Daniels doing most of the carrying, the Wildcats moved to the Florida two in 14 plays, where Daniels dove over for the touchdown. Sapienza's kick made it 7-0.

Pass for TD

The second touchdown came late in the same period, when Villanova took the ball on its own 22 yard line. The home unit moved to the 39, then Grazione unleashed a 36 yard pass to Sapienza, who outraced two defenders, gathered it in on the Florida 25 and went the rest of the way unmolested for the 61 yard scoring play. His kick made it 14-0 at the half.

The Seminoles completed a 14 yard pass to tally mid-way throughe the third period, but the Villanova unit came right back with the following kick-off to put the game on ice.

Mike Delucia recovered an onsides kick on the Villanova 45, and 12 plays later, Devereaux bucked across for the score, setting up the most unusual play of the game.

Placement the Hard Way

Sapienza went back to try his third placement, but a poorly passed ball got past Grazione. Rick picked up the pigskin, retreated to the 25, then unleashed a perfect pass to bill Halligan in the end zone for the extra point.

Only Florida seriously threatened for the remainder of the game, but the Seminoles were unable to score after gaining a first down on the Villanova five yard line. A pass interception in the end zone by Vince Chavernini ended the Florida threat.

Statistics-wise, the Villanova eleven pounded out 185 yards rushing and 90 passing, while holding its foes to 158 and 37, respectivelly. Sapienza (32) and Grazione (31) were behind Devereaux in the ground-gaining department, while Grazione completed four of eight tosses for the passing yardage.

The Wildcats' attempt to hold onto the top-ranking pass defense in the nation of last year received a boost in the win, as they allowed the Floridian quarterbacks to complete only four 15 tosses, to move slightly ahead of their pace for 1956.

Homecoming-Revenge Is Sure Sweet

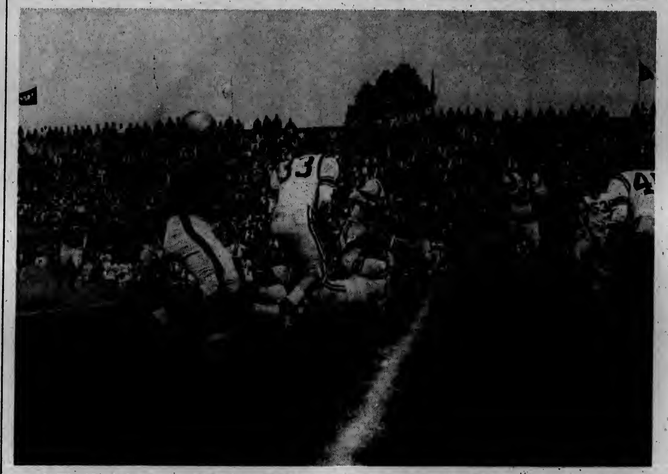
A spirited Sullivan Hall group finally took the annual Basca Award trophy from four-year defending champion Simpson Hall to open the 1957 Villanova Homecoming festivities, and, taking its cue from this, an equally-spirited Wildcat football team came up with another long awaited event—a Victory over Florida State, its first in four tries.

The Mainliners forgot all their "Christian gentleman" training in scalping the Seminoles too, as they pounded the hapless Southerners from one end of Goodreau Stadium to the other.

A large body of FSU alumnus migrated north to be a part of the largest crowd of fans ever to witness a contest in Goodreau Stadium (13,000), but about the only thing they had to cheer about was the weather, which was the best in these parts in several weeks.

Jill Savage was crowned Villanova's second annual Homecoming Queen at halftime, and, not to be outdone, the Florida unit brought along a beauty of their own. The Citrus Queen of 1957 travelled with the Seminole fans, and took part in cheerleading duties for both sides. She pranced around with the Villanova group for the first half, but had to try and stir up some interest among the downcast Floridians in the second. She should of quit while she was ahead.

Florida's Governor, LeRoy Collins, was scheduled to attend the game, but was called home to an important meeting. By the time the game was over, the FSU team probably wished it had gone with him.



The visitor's attack was weakened a little by the loss of ace quarterback Bobby Wren, but it is doubtful that even this much heralded back could have "Wrent" the massive Wildcat line for much more yardage than his three standins.

Florida didn't use its vaunted "T" formation very often, probably figuring that the Mainliners were prepared to put a rather emphatic dot on it. However, it was used during the only scoring play the Southerners could muster.

All in all, it was an enjoyable weekend for both sides. Villanova had its victory, and Florida—well, its followers felt right at home. Vendors were selling orange drinks in the stands.

Managers Wanted

The varsity basketball team still needs two freshman managers for the 1957-58 season. Any member of the Class of 1961 who is interested in applying for the job is asked to see Vince Bifferato in room 329, Sullivan Hall.

A Florida ball carrier finds out the hard way why Don Luzzi is being touted for All-American honors, as he is pulled to the ground by the burly guard. Jack Devereaux (33) and Ed Michaels (75) stand watchfully over the play as several other players close in.

Villanova Meets Virginia Tech Eleven on Saturday

By BILL VINCENT

This weekend the Wildcats of Coach Frank Reagan will be in Blacksburg, Va., to oppose the once-beaten Gobblers of Virginia Tech.

So far this season, the Gobblers have been victorious over Tulane while they dropped decisions to powerful West Virginia and William & Mary.

This year the V.P.I. squad has 19 lettermen returning from a team that had a 7-2-1 record in 1956. Besides winning seven games a year ago, they were second in the nation in rushing and seventh in scoring. However, Coach Frank Moseley's squad is weakened by the lack of reserve strength, especially in the interior line.

End Position Bright

Although Tech lost veteran end Grover Jones through graduation, the flanks are one of the bright spots of the Gobbler line. Soph Carroll Dale, a speedy pass receiver, should be one of the top ends in the country. To go along with Dale, Tech has lettermen Ed Brinkley, John Moody, Bill Tilling and John Herndon, along with rising sophs Ken Byrd and Bill Story.

Junior Jim Burks and 240 pound Russell Moon are holding down the tackle slots. To back this pair up Tech has service returnee Julian McCubbin and transfer student Doug Royals.

The team's two top guards are senior lettermen Ben Schmidt and Pat Carpenito. However, Warren Belcher a 200 pound junior will also see a lot of action. Promising Sophomores Duncan Holsclaw, Ed Bartrug and Ken Wheeler will be pressing the veterans for starting berths.

Centers Lost

Although the Gobblers lost their two top centers through graduation, this position is being capably filled by letterman Frank Webster. Webster, a guard a year ago, will be pressed for his job by junior Nich Mihalas and senior Jim Randall.

Even though Tech still has experienced backs to operate out of their split-T formation, the V.P.I. suffered heavily through graduation. Chief losses include All-Southern Conference halfback Bobby Wolfendon, Dave Ebert, a three year letterman at halfback, and the 1956 team captain, Don Divers.

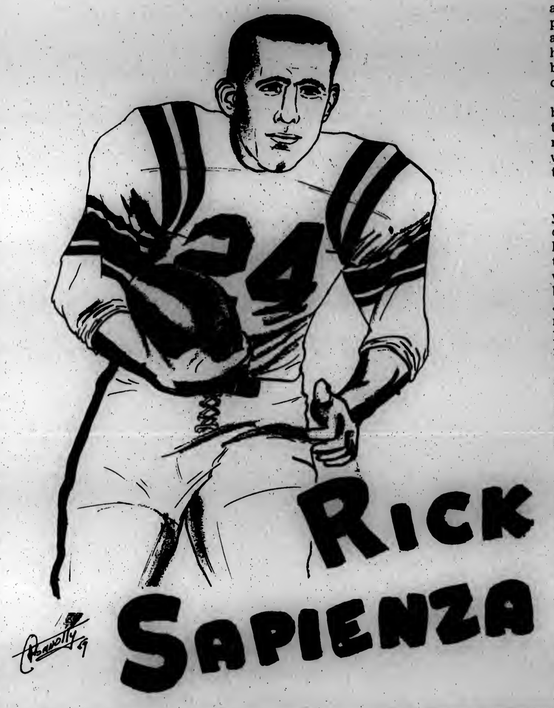
Probably the Gobbler's strongest position is at quarterback. They too can boast of two top quarterbacks to cope with Villanova's one-two punch of Jim Grazione and Bill Magee. They are seniors Jimmy Lugar and Billy Cranwell.

Quarterbacks Tough

In '56, Lugar led the Southern Conference in total yardage and was named All-Conference first team quarterback. Cranwell, a letterman in '54 and '55, was injured last year and did not play.

The leading halfback of the squad is 185 pound letterman, Ray England. He will receive help from Corbin Bailey, Barry Frazee, Jay Whitesell, Alger Pugh, and Ray Perrin. All of these men faired well in spring practice and in the early games of the season.

Bob Corner, a fast 200 pound fullback, also adds power to Tech's ground game and will probably do the punting against the Wildcats. Junior Al Sebast and soph Frank Eastman will see their share of actoin.



If Tech can get the reserved linemen to go along with their fairly deep backfield, they will receive national recognition once again.

Gritty Jack Devereaux, Villanova's leading ground-gainer in the Florida State victory with 82 yards, is pulled to the ground after a five yard carry by a maze of Seminole defenders. Mike DeLucia (54) closes in a little too late to aid his teammate.

Rick Sapienza Stand-In Performer Makes Good

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Everett, Massachusetts and Villanova have a mutual feeling of affection that is of long standing. Art Raimo, former Wildcat coach, is an Everett native. Ralph Pasquarieo, one of the greatest fullbacks in the school's history, a 1951 grad who later put in four years of service with Chicago Cardinals, came from the same town.

Now Senior Rick Sapienza, as shifty a halfback and pass-receiver as you'll find in the East, is keeping up the Everett tradition. The 5-11, 181 lb. scatback has played a vital part in the two wins the 'Cats have chalked up to date, just as he did in the 7-0 loss to Baylor.

Touchdown Pass

Just before the first half ended in Saturday's game with Florida State, with Villanova leading by seven, Sapienza broke down the sideline and caught a pass from Jim Grazione on Florida State's 25 and romped the rest of the way to score. In all the play covered 61 yards.

Sapienza later caught a 12-yard pass from Grazione on the second play of a 55-yard drive which netted the Wildcats their third TD in the third quarter.

The touchdown pass Sapienza caught was typical of the many he's latched onto since his sophomore year. Only a week before, Rick had caught a 35-yarder for a score against Furman.

Last year Sapienza was the leading pass-catcher on the squad, despite the presence of such fine ends as Van Injain, Gene O'Pella and Tony Varrechione. He snared 10 heaves for 195 yards and two touchdowns.

As a ball carrier, Rick is the team's outstanding outside runner. In the Baylor game, with Dave Parr out of action in the second half, he and Jack Devereaux combined to move the ball time and time again through the Bears' line.

Sparkled Saturday

Considering the few number of times he handled the ball, Rick sparkled on Saturday. In seven attempts, he gained 34 yards.

Rick does most of the punting for the Wildcats. Only an average kicker a year ago, he has worked daily to improve. So far this year, his kicks have averaged 36 yards, but the beauty of his work has been his ability to put the ball where he wants it Long returns of his kicks are a rarity.

Despite the fact that Sapienza must be considered one of the solid men on the squad, he had quite a struggle making it. As a soph he showed a world of promise but an awful tendency to be fooled on defense.

Suprise Performer

A regular at the start of that soph year, he gradually lost favor because of his erratic defensive work. Even last year, Rick wasn't counted on by the coaching staff to aid the cause. But when Dave Intrabartolo broke his wrist before the season got underway, and John Bauer, Dave Parr and John Ferroulo were hobbled by brief injuries, Rick was used almost as a desperate measure

Sapienza surprised everyone, probably even himself. He was the runner and pass-grabber he always seemed on the verge of becoming. But most of all, he proved no liability in the defensive secondary.

Troublesome Combination

Villanova was the nation's leading pass-defending team last year, and Rick played no small part. He placed second behind Ferroulo in interceptions with two, and first in runbacks with 95 yards, including a TD against Houston.

the early part of his season. In fact, opponents are learning that when the name Sapienza and the word "pass' are associated, the result means trouble On offsense, Rick's a favorite target in a tight spot, and on defense, he's a hard man to shake.

Frosh Gridders Lose, 33-12, To West Point In Opener

Coach Ed Michaels' Freshmen football team took a trip up the Hudson River to West Point last Friday, but they weren't given a very cordial reception, as the Army Plebes used force of numbers to overpower them, 33-12.

The Plebes ran 5 teams in and out of the game to wear down the game, but thin, Wildkittens. A pair of New Englanders proved tarters to visitors, scoring four of the five touchdowns.

John Eielson, Haverhill, Mass., accounted for three of the TDs, on runs of 3, 12 and 37 yards. Roger Zailskas, Waterbury, Conn., returned a punt 60 yards for a score. The fifth touchdown came on a run of 34 yards with a recovered fumble. Lineman Pat Fruehan was responsible.

Sore On Passes

The Wildkittens' sixpointers both came on passes, one of 25 yards from Tim Cleary to Walt Sroka in the second quarter, and the other of eight yards from Cleary to Jim Boyle in the third period.

Despite the defeat, Coach Michaels found much to praise in his club. He said that first-team for first-team, Villanova matched the Plebes. But the never-ending swarm of substitutes gradually wore down the Mainliners. Michaels has only about 25 payers on his roster.

Michaels believes, however, that there are a number of boys on the team who will help the varsity next year. Particularly in the line, there is solid strength to be found.

At one end slot, Michaels has Boyle, 6-1, 195, from Bishop Neuman in Philadelphia, which has furnished Jim Grazione, Joe Nardo, Jim Tobin and Walt Posadowski to the present varsity squad. The other spot is he'd by Conrad Bonelli, 6-0, 185 from Central Catholic in North Andover, Mass. Frank Pacello is another wing man.

Another Luzzi

Tackle Joe Luzzi, 5-10, 202, is one of three squad members who have brothers on the varsity. The New Haven, Conn. resident starts along with Larry Sopko, 5-9, 200, from St. Charles Prep in Columbus, Ohio. Pete Villa, 6-0, 215, of Bishop Neuman, and Bob Bergal, 6-0, 230, from Mt. Carmel, Pa., are two fine tackles who give the team good depth at that position.

There are four guards fighting it out for the first-string spots. Pat Forbes, 5-8, 165, from Coal Township, Pa. showed plenty in the Army game. The others are John Evers, 6-0, 190, Catholic Central in Green Island, N.Y., a relative of the Evers of double-play fame with the Chicago Cubs. Jerry Wenclawiak, 5-9, 185, from North Catholic's Philadelphia city titlists, and Frank DiMaio.

More Brothers

Alex DeLucia, whose brother Mike plays guard for the Wildcats, is center for the freshmen. He hails from Syracuse, N.Y. The

SPORTS CHATTER

What Abner Hath Wrought

By JACK CURTIN

This promises to be one of the most exciting years of Villanova's sports history in quite a while, but drawing ourselves away from Wildcat gridiron antics, frantically spirited students and the like, we'd like to pause here and note one of the saddest, to our mind, occurences in the history of modern baseball.

By this time the World Series is almost finished and the 1957 baseball season is closing. And with it goes the New York Giants.

There, my friends, is the crux of our lament. Of course, there's also the case of Walter O'Malley's to-be-or-not-be Brooklyn Dodgers, but that won't be considered here, since we don't much care what happens to the decaying Flatbush dynasty. This writer is a Giants fan. New York brand, that is, not San Francisco.

They Came To See

On Sunday, Sept. 29, 1957, 10,000 fans cried as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Giants, 9-1, in the Polo Grounds. They weren't just a group of poor losers; they were a band of loyal Giant fans who had come to watch the closing of a baseball era. To paraphrase—they came to see.

This was it, the end for the Polo Grounds, one of the oldest and most famous diamonds in the history of Abner Doubleday's creation. The end for the quaint home of John McGraw's fabulous world champions of the '20's and 30's; for the stadium that witnessed the "Miracle of Coogan's Bluff" and Bobby Thompson's historic homer; for the home park of super-stars the likes of Christy Mathewson, Carl Hubbell, Mel Ott and Willie Mays; the park where almost anybody could hit a home run down the foul line and very few could come near the center field barrier. Yes, the greats of the past and present roamed these pastures. But no more.

Unmeasurable Loss

Now, the best of the nation's sportswriters (who are certainly more talented than this columnist) have written their epitaths on the Giant tomb in long, sentimental passages, but enough can never be said concerning what may be the greatest loss suffered in Manhattan since the American Indian gave up his claim to the island for $24 worth of pretty beads. In the future, no Leo Durocher will stand and scream invectives at the world in general and baseball umpires in particular. No Willie Mays will play stickball with happy youngsters in the streets of Harlem. It is a loss for New York, and baseball, that cannot be measured in words.

Certainly we don't mean to deny our supposedly "national" pastime to the West Coast, for it certainly deserves representation in the professional ranks. It could be that the passage of the Giants may mark the beginning of a whole new concept of the baseball world. Perhaps we have seen the beginning of an age when the sport will truly be representative of America. However, not discounting the changing of the Braves, Orioles and Athletics franchises, which started the trend; they just didn't seem to matter as much.

Aside from the Dodgers, who seem more and more reluctant to follow through with the western move that owner O'Malley suggested in the first place, probably no team in baseball is bound in such tradition as the Giants. And, their legend has been built on a history of great baseball, not zany players and zanier fans.

Abner's Idea

It all resolves down to the question of whether baseball is a sport or business; a question that has been debated back and forth on the nation's sports pages with no apparent answer. Perhaps the answer lies with the renowned Mr. Doubleday, who started the whole thing. We like to believe that he meant it as a sport only.

Horace Stoneham and his team are leaving. To them, we offer the best of luck and riches in the promised land. However, we can't believe it will work out that way.

What Abner hath wrought, no one should tear asunder.

Navy Unit Upsets DPM Team On Early Score In 'Murals

By FRANK FLEMING

With six leagues in operation the current Villanova intramural football season got off to a fine start, complete with several surprising upsets.

What may perhaps turn out to be one of the biggest upsets of the intramural season was recorded in the first day of play when a highly touted Delta Pi Mu team was downed by a strong Bravo Company team 8-0.

70-Yard Pass

A 70-yard pass from Hank Nichols to Ralph Reynolds in the opening play from scrimmage accounted for the navy team's first score.

A safety on the last play of the hard-fought game gave the future ensign's their other score.

Instrumental in the win for Bravo Company were Nichols, Dave Borcik and Bob Fleming. Outstanding for D.P.M.

Pre-season favorites to win the league championship, were linemen Al Dombrowski and Mike Kletius, and back, Norm Peer.

The game is presently under protest, pending a decision by council.

Barons Win

The Opera-Classica team, playing under the name of the Music Lovers, was shown that opera and athletics don't mix as they were trounced by the Barons, 12-0.

Last year's runner-up for the league championship, the Jungle Bunnies, also fell to defeat in the opening week of the season as they were downed by Joe's Jet's, 7-6, in one of the hardest fought games to be seen on the Villanova Campus in years.

In the Austin 2:30 League, a strong Eastwingers team, composed of residents of second floor of Sullivan Hall, downed the Terrors, 13-0. Outstanding for the East Wingers were Rick Steiber, who caught one of the touchdown passes, Bill Lydle and Jack Reagan.

In a game which ended in a nothing to nothing tie at the end of regulation play the Lessers were declared victor over the Kent Men five first downs to one.

In the 5:30 Mendel Field league, the Mice downed Cumming's Plebs by outscoring the Frosh aggregation, 12-0.

Clowns Win Two

Emmanond A.C. scored but one T.D. to down the Rat Rack, 6-0, in 5:30 Austin league play. In the same circuit, Dingus A.C. defeated the Villans while the Aces outscored the Trotters, 19-0.

In the morning league, the Clowns won two games, shutting out the Screw Drivers and Undicided A.C. by impressive 13-0 and 19-0 scores.

In another intramural game Bayshores A.C. downed I.K.E. by 42 points in a free scoring 62 to 20 game.

V.U. Cross Co'try Opens Season With Dual Meet

The cross country team opens its four-meet schedule on Saturday, facing Georgetown and St. Joseph's in a triangular meet at Washington, D.C.

Ron Delany, Olympic 1500 meter champion, is expected to pace the harriers this year, after concentrating on training for the Olympics a year ago.

Another reliable for Coach Jim Elliott's outfit will be Vic DiMaio, former New Jersey half mile titlist and now a Junior at Villanova.

Rahn Returns

Bill Rahn, out of competition since his freak accident in Madison Square Garden during last year's indoor track season, also is on the squad, as are Bob Godesky and Jonas Swenson.

As a freshmen last year, Godesky won the 1000-yard Novice race in the Philadelphia Inquirer indoor meet at Convention Hall.

After the meet in Washington, the runners are to meet LaSalle next Wednesday and Seton Hall on October 30. The season will end with the IC4A meet November 18.

Another Championship

In this IC4A meet, the Wildcats will try to annex their fifth major track championship of 1957.

Frosh Lose Opening Game, Star Back Not Playing

Tim Cleary, brother of Vince, third-string fullback on the varsity, holds down the quarterback assignment, although he normally is a halfback. The 6-0, 180 lb. back, went to Gonzaga, Washington, D.C. Tony Intrieri, 5-8, 170, from Memorial, West New York, and Charles Brocky, 5-11, 175, from St. Chester, Pa., are other quarterbacks.

The starting halfbacks are Sroka, 5-9, 165, another member of North Catholic's championship team, and Don Livengood, 5-10, 190, from Lincoln High in Phila. Bill Dempsey, 5-11, 175, from Malvern Prep, John Fahey and Tony Nastri are also halfbacks.

Paczkoskie Not Playing

Tom Hopkins, 5-11, 190, one of LaSalle High's standouts when it won the Phila. city title two years ago, is the number one fullback. Bill Lahnstein, 5' 11", 195, from Shamokin, Pa. Catholic is not far behind.

Vince "Billy" Paczkoskie, among the most sought-after football players in Pennsylania when he graduated from Coal Township High last June, is enrolled in the Class of 1961, but he isn't participating in football this fall. The pre-med student had a knee operation during the summer. It is expected that he will be able to take part in spring practice, however.

Deadline For LYNX Issue Is October 23

The time is near at hand for the first publication deadline for the fall, 1957, issue of the LYNX, Villanova's literary publication. Oct. 23 is the last day for the regular submission of material. Poems, short stories, essays, two act plays and sketches are all sought by the LYNX. Anyone with an inclination towards writing is urged to try his hand and contribute.

Those who have not yet finished a work may obtain an extension of the deadline if the work seems acceptable for publication on the basis of what is already written.

Because of the favorable response to the photo essay in last year's fall issue, work has begun on a new one to appear in the next issue. In a lighter vein this time, the theme of the photo essay will be a satire in pictures on the activities of the 'collegiate' set.

Several other features are being planned to add variety to the magazine, among them another "Conversation" with a notable personality.

A new cover will be featured, a departure from the geometric design style. The art work of Alan Guimaraes is expected to be a decided asset.

Two Positions Open

Applications for the two vacant editorial positions of Exchange and Circulation are being considered by the moderators and the two appointees will be announced next week.

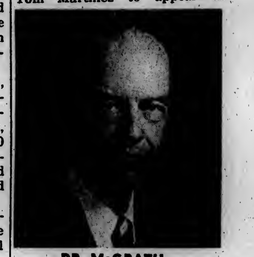
Model Railway To Be Dedicated At Famous Institute

One of the largest and most complete model railroad systems in America will be dedicated and placed into operation in the Railroad Room of the Franklin Institute at ceremonies on October 28, it has been announced.

Featuring 1,000 feet of track, nearly 400 locomotives and passenger, freight and special purpose cars, more than 100 signals, 140 switches and crossovers, 250 buildings, 37 bridges and 20 tunnels, the exhibit is sponsored jointly by the Pennsaylvania and Reading railroads.

It was constructed by the Institute in cooperation with the Association of Eastern Model Railroad Manufacturers.



Tribute To Ben

Spokesmen for the two railroads said that the model will be officially called the "Pennreading Railroad," and will use as its nickname "The Poor Richard Line" in tribute to Benjamin Franklin, one of Philadelphia's most famous citizens, after whom the Institute is named. Both companies have headquarters here.

The announcement said that the exhibit is designed especially to interest young people of the Eastern coastal states who visit the Institute and "will encourage understanding of the dramatic and important place of the railroads in the American economy."

The first speaker on the Literary Club's agenda for the semester, Dr. Edward McGrath, will address the organization tonight in one of the Seminar rooms on the first floor of the Library.

Several other prominent speakers are presently being contacted by Program Chirman Tom Martinez to appear at meetings later in the semester.

Project Topic

Martinez commented that majority opinion of the club expressed an interest in adopting "the American theater since World War II" as the year-long project and that this would be he topic of this year's project.

Several club members have already contacted the program chairman and volunteered to do research on one or two particular playwrights to be used as material for the project.

The Literary Club officers are: Joe Kinney, president; Leo Rogers, vice-president; Ken Miller, secretary; and Dave Belcher, treasurer.

Hungry 'Cats Eye Win Column As Villanova Moves On Boston

Train Leaves Friday Night; Reservation Deadline Today

"Beat Boston!" will be the cry this weekend as 1500 spirited Villanovans descend on that once quiet town to get underway the largest mass student movement the school has ever witnessed.

Be Satisfied With Beating Boston Col.

For the past few weeks the good word around campus has been "Beat Boston" but we wonder how many students mean this to be "Beat Boston College's football team" or just plain "Beat Boston."

In about 60 hours the train will be pulling out of 30th Street Station—a train loaded with one of the most spirited bunch of college students in the United States. That train will be the "Boston Limited" and as many Villanovans as possible will be on it. Those who can't get seats will go up by car; it doesn't matter — just so everyone gets to Boston so we can watch the 'Cats drub B.C. and have a real ball over the weekend.

The whole idea of the trip and the Boston weekend is to get up there and show the members of our team that we're behind them. We want to prove to the B.C. student body that what papers and magazines have been saying about the unbelievable amount of enthusiasm of Villanova is one hundred per cent true. We want to show the city of Boston what kind of school spirit we have! And we'll do just that, too!

Villanova's on top now. There's no getting around the fact that we've hit the "big time." We've hit it athletically, academically and religiously. To hit it is one thing, though—to stay up there is another.

This year we've got the best gridiron squad we've had in a long time—we've also got the largest student body we've ever had, and that means more people will be going on trips like the one this week. It also means that there are a lot more of us to be criticized if something goes wrong on one of these away trips. But it won't be "John Smith" who'll draw the criticism —it'll be Villanova University.

Our team can go up to Boston and win 60-0, and there'll be some people who won't forget it for a long time—particularly B.C. fans. But then there's always a guy in the crowd like "Jack the Joker" who isn't satisfied with the football game—instead he has to have a

The Spirit Committee, which has been preparing for this excursion for months, has considered every possible aspect to make the exodus a tremendous success.

Co-Chairman of student trips, Jed Dioguardi and Mike Mancuso, believe that the Boston movement will present to the public the ultimate in college spirit by the way a school of 3,400 students can back a team that is playing a game over 300 miles away.

Last Lap

Final preparations for the special student train are near completion. The students who are going via train by this time should have picked up their tickets.

The train tickets may be purchased at a cost of $15 plus the additional minimum costs no later than today at the special ticket and information booth across from Dougherty Hall.

Ticket Sale Ends

Tickets for the game will not be sold here for the remainder of the week. Last-minute purchasers who wish to get a ticket to the game will have to obtain it as soon as they get into Boston to insure themselves of a seat near the Villanova section.

Those going on the Villanova train excursion will board the train at 30th St. Station in Philadelphia this Friday at 11:45 p.m. The train will arrive at Back Bay Station in Beantown at approximately 7:40 a.m. Saturday.

Back Bay Station is within walking distance of the hotels in the vicinity of Villanova's Boston headquarters.

The trains will depart from Boston at 3 p.m. Sunday and arrive back in Philadelphia about 9:30 p.m.

For those students planning to travel by car, maps will be outlined to provide the best possible route to the big town.

The Spirit Committee suggests that the students driving up decorate their cars with banners to let the various town populations on the way to Boston know the spirit possessed by Villanova's students.

Circulars including all the necessary information for the weekend will be distributed around the campus.

Students are urged by the trip chairmen to stay away from team headquarters at the Kenmore Hotel until the gigantic pep rally, scheduled by the Spirit Committee, beginning at 12 noon Saturday.

Boston Awaits Villanova Invasion

By JACK CURTIN
Sports Editor

His name was Billy Beantown. I found him sitting discontentedly beneath a flagpole bearing a huge golden eagle on the Boston College campus in Boston, Mass.

Me? I'm a reporter. My job? Find out the story on the much rumored attack on Boston by aggressive forces this coming weekend.

"Pardon me," I began, thinking he looked like a likely prospect, "I wonder if you could tell me . . ."

"Eeyow!" He took one look at me, leaped up and flung himself behind the bench upon which he had been sitting with a scream. Finally he peered out from behind his barricade and, taking a closer look, rose sheepishly to his feet.

"I'm sorry," he said nervously, "It's just that I thought that . . . that . . ."

"What? What?" I queried, sensing a story.

"It's just that your dark blue coat—it looked like a Villanova blazer."

Be Calm, Boy!

And here it was that I found my story. It took a while to calm down my informant, for he had been sorely shaken by his mistake, but finally he began to talk, looking nervously around from time to time.

"I'm a student here at Boston College," he started, blushing, "and we have this football team, see, (His voice quavered on the word "team," and he seemed somewhat doubtful) and this weekend we have to play Villanova. Ooohh!"

"Holy smokes," I said, scribbling on my notepad with one hand, while supporting Billy, whose knees were shaking rather emphatically, with the other, "it can't be that bad. I know they're good, but after all, you have to play good teams sometime."

"It's not just that," he replied, "we expect to lose to them. I mean, we beat the Marines (Quantico) two weeks ago, but we certainly don't expect to take those Wildcats. After all, we know our limitations.

"But—they're not only bringing their team with them, they're taking the whole blimed student body along."

It's Like Milwaukee

"Well, that sounds like a remarkable display of student spirit," I answered, thoughtfully, "you'd think it would give you B.C. students some incentive to really cheer and outshout those Villanova fans."

"You don't understand, you don't understand," he cried. They bring everybody, all 3000 of them. And we can't outcheer them, we can't even try. You know how Milwaukee was after the Braves won the World Series, well, Boston is worse, much worse, when Villanova comes to town.

"I was here last year, when they came to play Boston University. It was terrible, terrible. Poor B.U. felt like the visiting team. We played them a week later, and were lucky enough to play on Friday night and they couldn't come to see us.

"But this year, it's on Saturday, and they're coming—all of them—coming to our stadium!"

Here Comes One

By now, Billy was sobbing pitifully, and I was about to try to comfort him, when he suddenly peered down the path behind us, gasped and dived back behind the bench where I had first found him.

Turning around, not without some trepidation, I found myself facing a tall youth in blue

Proper Flag Salute

As citizens of the United States and leaders of tomorrow it is imperative that we exhibit our loyalty with respect to the flag. Whether from laziness or ignorance, the conduct of some of the students, especially on Tuesday afternoon when the national ensign is lowered in front of Commodore John Barry Hall, it is to be deplored. For those of you who are ignorant of the correct courtesies, we will briefly state them here and appeal to your patriotism to put them into practice.

If you have occasion to salute the flag while in civilian clothes, you remove your hat with your right hand and hold it over your chest with your hand over your heart. If you are not wearing a hat, then place your right hand over your heart. Women also salute in the same manner if they are in civilian dress.

During the playing of The Star-Spangled Banner, everyone stands at attention facing the band. At colors (the ceremonial hoisting and lowering of the flag at 0800 and sunset) the national ensign is faced.

Demonstrate these simple courtesies and show you are the leaders of tomorrow.

Help The Missions: Save Stamps

"Don't Throw Away Those Stamps." Perhaps you have seen posters with these words printed on them and have taken their appeal lightly. "What good is this one little stamp?" you might ask. To you maybe it is nothing more than a federal requirement for postal services. But to us is means much more. This s one source of aiding our foreign mission. By collecting and saving stamps for us you can share in this missionary zeal.

Many years ago the stamp department was organized in St. Mary's Hall. Its chief aim was to help our Augustinian missions in all parts of the world. Our stamp contributors were then few and, consequently, the organization remained in its infant stage for many years. Since 1952, when Father Purcell, O.S.A. was sent to Japan to establish a mission school and parish, the stamp department has endeavored to assist this project through the sale of an increased number of stamps.

How do we derive profit from stamps? Contrary to popular belief, we do not process and extract dye from stamps. Rather, we indirectly sell them to stamp collectors all over the United States. Briefly, this is how our department operates. When stamps are sent to us, we prepare a "good mix" which is a combination of all kinds of stamps, commemoratives, three-centers, foreign, etc. Then they are sealed in bags of ten and twenty-five pounds. Once every two weeks our buyer picks up the stamps and sells them to his customers.

The response to our appeals over the last few years has been encouraging. But still we cannot content ourselves with stopping here. We need more stamps if we wish our work to continue. This can be realized by only your unselfish cooperation. This is how you can help us. Every time you receive a letter, tear off the stamp, leaving enough paper around it for a small border, and save it for us. If you have parents, a brother, or a sister working in business offices, ask them to join us in our stamp drive. Your efforts will not go unrewarded.

Next time you are tempted to throw away that stamp, think of us and our mission in Japan.

—Walter Vogel, O.S.A.

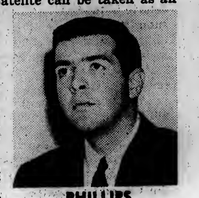
The question for this week is: "What is your reaction to Sputnik, the Russian moon?"

Red Clark, Sr. marketing major—At first, my reaction was that of fear. That is, if Russia is striving so hard to beat us in any phase of science and she developed a moon that transmits information from outer space, her technology should be farther advanced than ours.

CLARK

After reading a few articles about the United States Government reactions on this step in science by Russia, I became passive. It seems that the U.S. is developing an orbital which will reveal much more information than the Russian satelite and will be more beneficial to us in the long run.



I now feel that the Russians by their impatience have put themselves at a disadvantage by wasting time on a much less useful moon for the sake of propaganda.

Phil Fahey, frosh engineer—Russia's latest advance in the scientific world has put the U.S. and her allies in a pitiful situation. For now, the U.S.S.R's power is not spead throughout only Europe and Asia but extends to the very edge of space.

FAHEY

If Russia does succeed in landing on the moon before we do, all resorces there will be lost to us. The blame cannot be placed on the government, but it is more the government's move to secure for her people and those of her allies a security against Russias' latest threat.

Bob Phillips, Sr. electrical engineer — "The launching of the earth satelite can be taken as an index of the progress that Russia has made in her I.C.M.B. program. The satellite, itself, may not present any danger to our security, but the possibility that Russia is outstripping us in ballistic missles is something to think about.

PHILLIPS

Our missle program should be taken out of the hands of the Navy and Air Force and turned over to a commission similiar to the one that handled the atomic bomb program so successfully during World War II.

Dick Miele, Jr. I.A.—"I guess that I wasn't the only one that was surprised to hear of such a tremendous scientific feat. Those Russian scientists aren't sleeping any, or I hope not to the extent where "Sputnik" will come down in this area. I sincerely hope that this incident will not bring more hostilities between our two countries.

Student Volunteers Sought For A Scientific Experiment At Research And Development

By DR. F. C. J. McGURK
Psychology Instructor

For many centuries, man has talked about ionized air, but until recently he did not know it. Almost every civilization has attributed some of man's emotional ups and downs to the weather, and in our own time ponderous and scholarly books have attempted to show the relationships between certain aspects of climate and trends in the development of civilization.

Only recently, less than one hundred years, have the students of climate realized that the air contains electrically charged particles called ions. These scientists are not exactly sure about the nature of air ions, but they have counted the presences of two types of air ion—the positive and the negative ion. Positive ions abound on those grey-blue, drizzly days when low pressure areas are bringing northeasterly storms. Negative ions are more numerous just after a thunder storm, and during those days when high pressure areas prevail.

The Crime Rate in Europe

In some European countries, murder, suicide, and other brutalities are known to be more frequent when the wind blows from a certain quarter, and these winds have been identified recently, as bearers of large quantities of positive air ions. Certain areas of the world have become known as health-giving spas, and these areas have been identified aa areas of high negative ionization.

In this way, the theory evolved that negative air ions are beneficial to man, and positive air ions are harmful. Negative ions make man feel better; positive ions make him feel badly.

Preliminary Research

Last May, a group of VU students helped to investigate this theory. Working on a pilot study sponsored by the Research and Development Division of the university, these students helped to show that, when they worked in an environment of positive ions, they felt uncoordinated, lethargic, and inefficient — generally unpleasant. When they worked in negative ions, they felt quite different; they said pleasant things about their work, they felt efficient, and were generally more relaxed. Although these findings were tentative, they gave rise to other ideas about air ions.

If positive ions are accompanied by unpleasant feeling and if negative ions are accompanied by pleasant feelings, how much effect will these two types of ion have on the enjoyment of some artistic endeavor which is largely an emotional experience?

In conjunction with Philco, Research & Development is presently sponsoring an experiment to investigate the effects of air ions on music appreciation. An experimental room has been set up in Galberry Hall so that subjects may listen to the highly varied programs of two FM stations—WFLN and WQXR. No task will be required of the subjects except that they read or study during the hour that they are subjects for the experiment. At the end of the hour, each subject will fill out an evaluation form. Those students who wish may spend more than an hour.

Payment, But Not Money

Since this is a university-sponsored study, no funds are available for paying the subjects.

There will be payment in other terms for those who participate —pleasant music, a quiet place to study, and participation in a relatively unknown field of research. There is, incidentally, absolutely no danger involved.

If you are interested, indicate

New Council Constitution Discussed

Many suggestions, no formal motions and much discussion of the proposed new constitution prolonged last week's Student Council meeting to a now-averaged four hour length.

The ten-page work, excluding forthcoming by-laws, which is to guide the workings of student government at Villanova, was introduced by its co-author Don Kempf, vice-chairman of the Council.

The greater part of the meeting was spent in reading of the constitution article by article and section by section. Discussion of the various parts was allowed by Kempf, who chairmanned this part o fthe meeting, but, on his suggestion ,no formal motions or amendments were made.

The propsed plan contains many radical diversions from the present system. Thier existence was justified by Kempf on the grounds that the progress of the Council requires many such changes. Among the points which differ greatly from the present system are:

The new student council would be a bi-cameral legislature, consisting of a student Senate, and a student Congress. The former would consist of the officers of the entire council, the class presidents, and eight members of the council divided by years to be elected by the council at the beginning of each year. The Senate is to control all proposals submitted to the council, handle all council funds and have a limited veto power on Council legislation, pending appeal on the Congress floor.

The Congress would consist of all the members of the council, and would act on recomendations of the Senate

New Voting System

The election of members to the Council would be altered, if the new system is adopted, so that only members of the same year, division or school would elect those who are to represent them. The provision leaves the election of representatives of the freshman and sophomores classes intact.

Under the new code, two full vote members would be added to the Council and the corresponding half-vote members would be dropped. The senior class alumni representative and the representative delegate of the National Federation of Catholic College Students would be promoted to full vote status.

An intricate system of committees would come into being if the new plan is passed. Added to the present standing committees and temporary special ones would be: the Student-Faculty committee, the Council Cabinet committee and an NFCCS commission. Explanation of these committees and their functions and worth was held off until the unveiling the by-laws, which are to be submitted for vote "soon." Many other questions on parts of the constitution were met with this same answer.

One of the advantages cited in favor of the new bi-cameral system by its authors and adherents is that it will speed up the process of issuing and acting on legislation on the Council. Following the meeting, many of the members were overheard saying that this would be a long-awaited improvement.

Perspective: The WHY of Education

An education to me is synonymous with opportunity. I feel that an education will provide me with the opportunity to choose my field, my employer and even the locale of my employment upon graduation.

My education will offer the opportunity for a higher starting wage scale as compared to the average non-college trained individual.

I believe that along with this higher starting wage scale, I'll have the opportunity for advancement that is not dependent upon the old men up above dying off and therefore providing the chance for the whole organization to move up a notch but advancement that is contingent upon my own personal ability and initiative.

In order for any man to be successful, whether he educated or not, he must be able to get along with people. I feel that along these lines, an education will provide me with the necessary character development to help me get along with people.

Villanova Potpurri

Here at Villanova we have a good cross-section of the people that a graduate is likely to come in contact with. My association with this cross-section will provide me with the insight and tolerance to work with any type of man. It will provide me with the ability to sit down and discuss a job or any problem with anyone I have contact with no matter what his education or views happen to be.

Contact with this cross-section will give me the ability by the time I graduate to properly convey my thoughts and opinions to others no matter what their station in life may be.

Religious Training Applauded

It has been my experience here at Villanova to discover that there is something else for all of us to gain. We not only gain important development along the academic and character lines but we also are developed by the religious education we receive.

Personally I have gained much as far as religion and faith are concerned just from the fact that I was exposed to religious teaching.

Business Ethics

Aside from personal gain from religious instruction, we receive concepts of moral integrity in business dealings. Sometime after graduation a certain percentage of us will find ourselves no longer an employee but an employer.

We should learn from our religious education just how to deal with our employees as far as pay and extra benefits are concerned and just what our oulligations are as an employer.

Ultimate End Important

A person entering college should have some goal in sight. Without a goal, none of us can succeed. The graduate must be thoroughly trained in his chosen field first. This training should be proportionate to the goal we have set for ourselves, but in addition we should also desire a mature, intelligent attitude towards our dealings with others backed up by a firm religious training. If a person is upon graduation only an academically educated individual and not a better man in the character and moral sense than when he entered, he has not, in my opinion, received an education.

MIKE MANUCUSO
Senior C and F

Why did you take liberal arts? What in the world does it prepare you for? Every liberal arts major has heard these questions countless times. I will attempt to answer them by answering two other, more important questions. What do I want from an education? What do I expect an education to do for me?

There is an ever-increasing trend today towards the 'utility' education, i.e., an education directed to the preparation of an individual for a particular profession, e.g., accounting, civil engineering. As a result, the liberal education has been edged out in many colleges and universities as impractical. What use they say are philosophy, history, languages and the like? It all boils down to a question of values.

History, philosophy, etc., all collectively go to make up the discriminating thinker, or at least should. The discriminating thinker is the man who, by running the gamut of the efforts of man from algebra to art has learned to absorb, analyze and evalute ideas, which, [illegible] all, are the motivating for[illegible] behind the use of all the other [illegible]actical" fields of knowledge.

The Well-Rounded Individual

A person specifically educated in one narrow field of study runs the risk of being unable to understand and/or appreciate facets of life unrelated to his particular subject and thus limits his development as a well-rounded personality which should be the natural goal of anyone with the capacity to learn.

Professional training is just that: training, not education. It channels the intellect but does not necessarily cultivate it. A man who has learned to use his mind in the evaluation of ideas can always acquire necessary professional training as he needs it but a technical or specific education does not of itself prepare a man to take a position of directive leadership in his society at the intellectual level, which is where all the activity of any society begins.

A Record of Man's Knowledge

On a more personal level the value of philosophy, history, literature lies in the fact that they are the record of the ideas, activities, hopes and aspirations of mankind throughout the ages. Man is God's greatest creature and the understanding of man is the greatest achievement we can attain.

Science derives its first principles and its truth value from philosophy and it is only with a thorough knowledge of the humanities that we can most effectively apply scientific knowledge for the betterment of mankind. A reflection on the evils in our society caused by a misuse of our technological skills makes this clear. It is our knowledge of the humanities that gives purpose to the mundane activities of life and tells us how best to seek the full, happy life, the earthly goal of each man.

Unsuspected Vistas

And besides all this, the study of literature, art, music and their companions open new and unsuspected vistas of enjoyment for those who learn to love them which can never be accurately or adequately described to those who do not share in the knowledge of these things.

Perhaps to those who will measure the results of their education in terms of tangible material success, liberal arts might seem a luxury that cannot be afforded. A thorough study of the economics of American life today does not bear this out but even if it were true, it is a luxury which each of us should strive to our utmost to possess.

Cardinal Newman's Idea

But perhaps Cardinal Newman can express more clearly than I what it is I expect from my university. "A university training is the great ordinary means to a great but ordinary end; it aims at raising the intellectual tone of society, at cultivating the public mind, at purifying the national taste, at supplying true principles for popular enthusiasm and fixed aims for popular aspiration, at giving enlargement and sobriety to the ideas o fthe age, at facilitating the exercise of political power and refining the intercourse of private life. It is the education which gives a man a clear conscious view of his own opinions and judgements, a truth in developing them, an eloquence in expressing them and force in urging them."

I can only say Amen.

Political Roundup:

Proposed Restrictive Legislation On Organized Labor Criticized As Unfair

BY FRANCIS BONNER

Because of the Senate Investigations on labor in the last few months, there has been much controversy about the corruption in organized labor. From these investigations many senators and congressmen believe that they should initiate a move to pass legislation which would place stringent controls on all labor organizations. I contend that there are already too many restrictions forced on labor by acts such as the Taft-Hartley Act.

For example, the Taft-Hartley Act requires all labor union officials to sign non-communist affidavits and if they fail to comply, they then forfeit their right to use the National Labor Relations Board in elections and grievances. This may sound all well and good, but many labor leaders, especially John L. Lewis, feel that it goes against the old American axiom that all men are created equal.

One-Way Loyalty Oaths

If labor leaders are forced to sign such affidavits and the industrialists are not, then the government is pointing its finger at the working class and telling them that they cannot be trusted but management can. This is a definite attempt to make labor second-rate citizens.

The Taft-Hartley Act also calls for unions to open their financial records to be examined. This section of the act could very well destroy organized labor. If a union is forced to open its books at a time when it is striking against a large industry and it is noted that the union funds are at ebb, this industry could then use this information, to which it has no right, for the destruction of the organization which represents its men. With this type of legislation, I feel that the Federal Government had already gone too far with its restrictions on labor.

Corruption Not Limited

I will be the first to admit that there are abuses in some labor unions. But, I ask the severe critics of labor one question: "can they cite for me one human institution in the annals of history which has been free from corruption?" Statistics show there are more industrialists and bankers in penitentiaries for embezzlement of money belonging to small stock holders, than there are union laborers. If there is corruption in private industries, the Federal Government would not think of interferring. They would allow the industry involved to clean its own house. So let it be with labor.

BONNER

Let's look at the facts. The Senate Labor Investigations Committee has already probed into most of the two-hundred labor unions. And they have found corruption in only a minority of unions. I make a plea to these senators and congressmen who wish to burden labor organizations like the United Mine Workers of America and most of the affiliated unions of the A. F. L. and C. I. O. with harsh restrictions to cease future legislation which would impair the independence of free labor organizations.

On the tread-mill of entertainment this week, we ask—are movies better than ever?

Looking over current attractions at downtown movies and with soon-to-be-released pictures in mind, every other cinematographic exhibition seems to star the luscious Sophia Loren. From Italian films through to an adaption of Eugene O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms," Signorina Loren may be seen in the efforts of almost every cinema-producing country.

On the subject of movie queens, I notice that that perennial 'girl,' Joan Fontaine is once more playing her sweet young self in "Until They Sail," a tale of World War II New Zealand. Co-starring is Piper Laurie, Girl Starlet. The story itself originated in James Michener's "Return to Paradise."

A local theater in the vicinity of 40th and Market has exhumed—presumably by. popular .demand—one .of .Hollywood's more elderly hams, Joan Crawford, in two of her most notably dramatic hits, "Mildred Pierce" and "Autumn Leaves."

Cracking The Books

Quickly glancing over the titles listed in the neighborhood movie guide, it is not particularly surprising that people are being driven back—past television—to the radio and even to reading. Eye-catching among these titles are "Hot Rod Rumble," "Prehistoric Women," "Taza, Son of Cochise" and "Shoot-out at Medicine Bend"—Just to name a few.

An example of movie advertising psychology may be noted in the changing of the tepid, treacly June Allyson-Rossano Brazzi romance, "Interlude," to the more piquant "Forbidden Interlude."

At The Playhouse

On the legitimate stage—why 'legitimate?'—two new ventures have arrived for try-outs. "Fair Game" is "a New Comedy" featuring Sam Levene. Anne Baxter is presently appearing in "The Square Root of Wonderful," which interesting title is listed as "A Love Story." The play is directed by Jose Quintero whose direction of O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into Night" roused such favorable comment on Broadway.

For Anglophiles

British motion pictures of the better kind now showing locally include "Brothers in Law" an hilarious comedy about an amazingly inept lawyer. For suspense and painstaking detail of police work, "The Third Key" with Jack Hawkins is unbeatable. The Spanish Costa Brava and Dirk Bogarde are the chief attractions in the tender story by A. J. Cronin, "The Spanish Gardener." For those whose taste or curiosity runs in that direction, the Wayne Avenue Playhouse has a double feature of two Russian films.

The Rosie Razz-Ma-Tazz

Closer to home, Rosieland is sponsoring a jazz concert—of which you'll be seeing and hearing so much—in the not-too-distant future. Farther away, but still of interest, is Holy Family College's mixer—the Fall Frolic—taking place this Friday night.

Classics Jazz

. . . Making Music . . .

By AL SHEPPARD

This month is the tenth anniversary of what we know today as the long-playing record. Since this momentous occasion the recording industry has boomed with the sale of these discs of entertainment black gold. Here are a few selections to round out or bring up to date your LP collection.

In the realm of the classics, the best release of the month is Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Symphony No. 1 by Brahms for RCA Victor. Not the best Symphony No. 1 on records but one of the conductor's best jobs. Only in the final movement does he falter when tempo changes take the place of well-prepared climax.

The tops on Columbia records for the month is Zino Francescatti performing Lale's "Symphonie Espangnole" and Vieustemp's "Concerto No. 4 in D Minor." Any shortcomings of the soloist are more than made up for by the accompaniment of Mitroupolous and the New York Symphony and the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra under Normandy.

Grieg's "Peer Gynt" on Angel recordings is worthy of mention. Sir Thomas Beecham, the London Philharmonic and the soloist Ilse Hollweg render the music compelling and their expression is finesse itself. Beecham has the continental touch rarely found in American conductors.

For opera lovers, Angel records has two of the best. Victoria de los Angeles makes her debut on the Angel label singing Helisonde in Debussy's masterpiece "Pellas and Helisonde." Bellini's "La Somnambula" is also offered casting the dynamic and controversial Maria Callas in the title roles. She does a good job considering her limited range.

Turning to Jazz

Someday you too will wake up and realize the only female singer is Ella Fitzgerald. Don't bother with the Modern Jazz Quartet on the Atlantic label. Too many solos and a lack of unified swing due to a minimum of scoring.

Carmen McRae's recording for Decca, "After Glow" is very dim. She makes it a work of personality rather than one of genuine talent.

Best jazz work of the month is Lionel Hamphon's Big Four on Verve. Informal stuff this, including warm-ups where Hampton, Rick Peterson and Brown show a unique feel for melody at slow tempos. Included is another version of his beautiful "Midnight Sun."

Glad to see that "Chances Are" (J. Mathis) is number one on the popular scoreboard. Larry Flick is among the many anxiously awaiting a new release from Elvis.

Getting off the track for a moment, watch for Frank Loesser's new musical entitled "The Music Man" which opens here in Philadelphia late this fall. If it compares with his earlier successes, "Guys and Dolls" and "The Most Happy Fella", it should be a smash hit. Don't miss it.

Notable Catholics in Public Life:

George Meany: 'Rerum Novarum' vs. Racketeering

Third of a Series

Largely due to the unsavory publicity on the activities of a minority of labor leaders emanating from the current congressional probe in Washington D. C., organized labor is fast becoming the national ogre in the eyes of many thoughtful Americans, thus taking the uncomfortable stare of the reformers from more time-honored institutions such as big business.

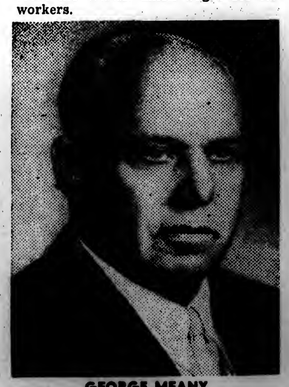
In the current crush of fashionable disparagement, one might fail to notice that the colossus of American unionism, the combined American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, is headed by a practicing Roman Catholic, namely one George Meany, who has worked tirelessly throughout his long union career to organize his workers along basic Catholic labor principles. (For those who prefer a more colorful radicalism in their labor leaders, Walter Reuther is offered as vice-president of the A. F. of L.-C. I. O.).

Irish George Meany was born in Harlem, one of the more colorful sub-metropolises of New York City, N. Y. in 1894, the son of Mike and Annie Meany. George moved north though and was raised in the Bronx.

Early Introduction To Unions

Liberalizing a standard New York City education was the steady flow of union officials and rank and file to the Meany home. Mike Meany was president of his plumbers local and local Democratic party district captain in the days before being a member of the working class was considered an unfair advantage in the battle for public opinion.

George followed his father's footsteps into the plumbers local union untroubled by serious trouble with management which may be one explanation for Meany's moderate attitude towards business.



Love on Strike

Meany found the love of his life in pretty Eugenia McMahon and married her in 1919 following a courtship that sounds as if it were out of the "Pajama Game." Meany walked with Eugenia in the picket lines when, as an embroidery machine operator, she went on strike.

About this stage of his career, Meany became a highly successful lobbyist in the state legislature of New York gaining experience in the field of labor-government relations.

Meany vs. WPA

Meany soon had a chance to show his experience when he locked horns with F.D.R.'s powerful Works Progress Administration and successfully won from the W.P.A. union wages for its workers.

GEORGE MEANY
Labor's Top Man

After heading the New York state federation of labor since 1934, Meany went on to the national scene in 1940 as secretary-treasurer of the A. F. of L. Before leaving New York though, he organized a 90,000 man labor parade for the edification of the New Yorkers. The parade was an eloquent testimony to his and labor's power.

Top Man In Labor

The powerful figure of Phil Green subdued Meany for a while but when the former died in 1952, Meany succeeded to his position as president of the A. F. of L. from which position he worked tirelessly and successfully to achieve his greatest ambition, the union of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. into one labor giant. It was no surprise that George Meany became the first president of this labor giant and today is the most powerful man in organized labor.

The opinions and attitudes of this man who guides the destiny of unionism are naturally of the utmost importance to Americans. A cursory examination shows that Meany is very close to "Rerum Novarum" and a long way from "Das Capital."

Conservative Union Man

Basically Meany wants a larger share in the national income for the working man achieved by the principles of collective bargaining within the framework of the American free enterprise system in which he has deep faith as he also believes in the rights of management. This smacks of Marxism to only the most neanderthal of American conservatives.

"Free trade unionism cannot exist where there is a dictator in control," Meany has declared and he replied to a British Labor Party member's query on the abstention of American labor from politics "When collective bargaining yields as little for us as it does for you, we may have to form a political party."

Meany Ducks Red Front

Meany refused to join the World Federation of Trade Unions in 1945 because it admitted the Russians. This action was despite the advice of such diverse elements as Henry Wallace and "Commonweal" magazine. Meany was proved right though when the W.F.T.U. proved a Red front. However, Meany was one of the founding fathers of the staunchly anti-Communist International Confederation of Trade Unions in 1949.

John L. Lewis, one of the more pugnacious of the labor leaders, met defeat at Meany's hands in the 1947 A. F. of L. when he fought for an anti-loyalty oath motion. Said Meany: "I am prepared to sign a non-communist affidavit. I am prepared to sign an affidavit that I was never a comrade to the comrades." Ouch!

Taft-Hartley Resented Bitterly

Despite this, Meany launched a million-dollar campaign to fight the Taft-Hartley law, loyalty oath and all, as an unfair and undeserved imposition on the integrity and ability for effective, independent action of unions.

In between these bursts of frantic activity, Meany has found time to raise three lovely daughters and lead an exemplary family life with his children and Eugenia, who, needless to say, no longer walks in picket lines.

Meany has fought disunion and racketeering throughout his career. There seems to be only one thing left to do to assure his reputation for all time and it is a job that challenges even a George Meany. This is to clean up the Teamsters before they bring down the vast majority of honest, constructive unions crashing down around them. Meany can probably do it.

Opera Classica Boasts 103 Members; To Meet Tonight

Charles J. Fritz, president of Opera Classica, announced that the Society will meet at 7:30 tonight in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall and also that the total membership in O-C is now 103. Although approximately 80% of the members have had no formal training in classical music, club enthusiasm is high. Active membership is defined as attendance at two meetings per month and working on one of the numerous committees.

Anthony L. P. Angeline, OC moderator, stated that last week's stereophonic sound concert broke all attendance—123 were thrilled at not only the sound reproduction but the fine music of Tschaikowsky, Strauss, Jr., and Saint Saens.

This evening, the complete "Swan Lake" on London full frequency range records will feature Anatole Fistoulari and the London Symphony. On O-C's super high-fidelity system, maximum enjoyment is assured. Program notes will enable all those in attendance to follow the four acts of this masterpiece. The program will last one hour and twenty-three minutes.

The complete "Swan Lake" can be seen on Saturday afternoon and evening in Philadelphia when it will be performed by the Royal Ballet (formerly Sadler's Wells).

Twenty-three area high schools have been contacted for the program which consists of one of the officers speaking to the seniors about the program, a question and answer period and the distribution of booklets and application forms. Commander Burge, USN, Executive Officer of Villanova's unit is in charge of the program.

Catholic Schools Contacted

British Study Aid Offered U.S. Students

United States college students can now apply for next year's Marshall Scholarship awards enabling them to study at a British university for two years. Applications must be in by Oct. 31 of this year.

The Marshall Scholarship plan was started in 1953 as a token of appreciation for Marshall Aid to Britain.

Twelve scholarships are awarded every year to any American student of either sex, married or single, but they must be under 28 on or before Oct. 1, 1958 and must have graduated from an American university.

Each award is worth $1,540 a year, passage being paid to and from the United Kingdom, while married men receive an extra allowance.

Successful candidates are chosen for their character as well as for their scholastic attainments.

Four U. S. Regions

There are four Regional Committees—the Eastern Committee in New York, the Southern Committee in New Orleans, the Middle Western Committee in Chicago and the Pacific Committee in San Francisco. These committees consider the applications first and would-be winners should apply to the British consul-general in the previously mentioned cities.

Each Regional Committee includes four distinguished Americans and a consul-general in educational or public life who selects six names from the applications and forwards them to the British Embassy in Washington.

Lord Coleraine Selects

At the Embassy the names are re-examined by a seven-member Advisory Council headed by the British Ambassador, twelve names of which are selected — three from each region—and sent to the United Kingdom for review and approval by a commission of leading British educators and businessmen set up to administer the Trust with Lord Coleraine as chairman of the Commission.

Names of the winners are announced in Washington each April for the following October. So far the 48 Americans who have taken their final degree examinations have been successful and many have done exceptionally well.

Boston Trip

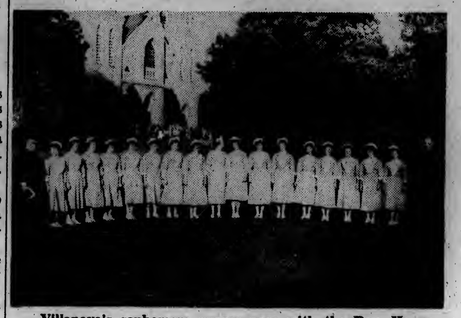
piece of one of the bleachers, a shovelful of dirt from the middle of the playing field and maybe even a street light from outside the stadium.

Now this is the thing that most people will remember for the longest time. What the football team did will be secondary. The trip will have done twice as much harm as good.



On the other hand if "Jack" can be satisfied with leaving Boston to the Bostonians, then our spirit has served a dual purpose—it's helped our team win and it's helped Villanova climb a little higher on the "Big Time" ladder.

A Joyous Sunday

Ed Currall, WVIL Sports Director, Guest on WDRF

Another first for WVIL this year was the guest appearance of WVIL's sports director on Station WDRF, Chester, Pa.

Ed Currall, sports director for WVIL, was the guest of Matt Zabitka on his show "Sports Page of the Air" last Thursday night, from 4:30 to 6.

Ed Currall is a junior English major from Elizabeth, New Jersey. Last year he served as a sports announcer and this year he was promoted to sports director for WVIL.

Gridiron Discussed

Football at Villanova was one of the important points of the interview. With one loss and two wins already, what the remaining season holds for the Wildcats received a great deal of discussion. Boston College and Miami who defeated Baylor 13-6, were considered the hardest games left this season.

Track, basketball and baseball were given pre-season discussions by Ed Currall and Matt Zabitka.

Spirit Recognized

The spirit of Villanova, a point of discussion at Villanova and other universities, received much notation, particularly the student trip to Boston.

WDRF, 1590 kc. is the Chester radio station broadcasting all the football games of Villanova away. Broadcasting of these games is done by Cy Swingley.

Catholics Called To Join In Lay Apostolate Of CCD

The Confraternity of Christian Doctrine will soon call upon Catholics to help in the work it is doing which consists of giving religious instruction to all the laity ranging from babyhood through adult life.

Pope Pius XII has said that the CCD is "a choice field of Catholic Action," explaining just exactly what the CCD is.

World-Wide Scope

The scope of the confraternity is world-wide, but on the parish level; yet it has been canonically instituted by Pope Pius X.

All the laity of high school age and older, under the direction of the hierarchy, are eligible to become a member and their help is required because the number of priests and sisters cannot suffice for the amount of work needed in this field.

Help from All

Everyone can find in the CCD an opportunity to help either as a teacher which is the most urgent need or as a helper in any of the other divisions of the CCD.

The part of the Catholic public is to learn all they can about the CCD so that when their pastors call they will be able to take their place in the field where they can give the most help.

Kinney Says Literary Club Plans Project

Following a discussion of contemporary literature by Dr. McGrath at last week's Literary Club meeting, President Joe Kinney announced that considerable progress had been made on the organization's year-long project.

Kinney explained that several members had already volunteered to do research on a particular playwright of the post-World War II period.

Christmas Deadline

He emphasized the importance of completing the research before the Christmas holidays in order that the second semester may be devoted exclusively to editing and typing the copy.

Copies of the finished project will be given to every paid club member. A copy will also be placed in the Library for general perusal.

Meeting Next Wednesday

Kinney concluded by declaring that Secretary Ken Miller will present a paper on the poetry of T. S. Eliot at next Wednesday night's meeting prior to a group discussion of the poet.

The meeting will be held in Seminar 3 in the basement of the Library at 8 o'clock.

The Literary Club president then advised "those planning to attend the meeting to acquaint themselves with Eliot's poetry so that they will better understand the comments that will be offered and be adequately prepared to enter into the discussion".

Spanish Club Meets, Sets Committees

The Spanish Club will hold its first business meeting of the year tomorrow night at 7:30 in room 206 Commerce and Finance Building.

Chief item on the agenda is the formulation of committees for the annual Spanish Night, which this year will take place on Dec. 6. The program for the affair includes an original play put on by the members, songs, and the appearance of Spanish dignitaries.

The club plans to increase its activities during the present academic year, and President Paul Tagliaferri has outlined the program. After Spanish Night, there will be a Dinner-Dance, a Communion breakfast and a series of intercollegiate activities.

The Communion breakfast will be in memory of the late Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A., former faculty moderator, who died last year.

Tagliaferri and the other officers have voiced a desire that the membership will increase. In order for the added activities to be a success, this is a necessity.

The business meetings are held bi-monthly. Monthly social meetings are highlighted by movies, guest speakers and refreshments.

SAM Sets Dinner Dance For Oct. 26

The Society for the Advancement of Management is holding its first annual dinner dance on Oct. 26 at the Conestoga Mill.

The cost of the tickets is four dollars per person. This price will cover the turkey dinner and dancing until midnight.

The music will be provided by Lou Dennison. A limited number of tickets are on sale and may be purchased from the officers of SAM or from Dr. Walter Klein, faculty moderator. Dress will be informal.

St.Bernadette Underrated, States Writer

Choosing Bernadette of Lourdes as "My Favorite Saint," Frances Parkinson Keyes, famous Catholic writer, declares in an article in the October issue of "The Sign," national Catholic magazine, that "there are great gaps" in the saint's story "which I should like to fill in."

"While the story of Lourdes as a place and the miracles that have occurred and still occur there are frequently chosen subjects and objects of great veneration," Mrs. Keyes asserts, "Bernadette Soubirous herself has emerged less clearly as an individual."

"Since she was the personification of humility," the author continues, "she probably would have been the first to be glad of this."

"But to those of us who desire or need to get close to her" Mrs. Keyes says, "it is profitable to achieve a more personal viewpoint than we can secure merely by visualizing Lourdes as a place of pilgrimage and a shrine of healing; we should know what sort of human being could create the one and reveal the other."

Early Pastoral Life

"Very few writers," the author points out, "have mentioned the fact that Bernadette spent much of her early life, not in the little dark cachot of Lourdes but in the healthful pastures surrounding the nearby village.

"Another fact which seems to be little stressed is that Bernadette was by no means an ignorant or one whose early life standards of propriety, kindliness and piety played no special part.

The third fact which seems to me underemphasized is that the last twelve years of her short life were spent in the Mother house at Nevers, first as a novice and then as a nun, and that she is entombed there — not buried, but encased in a glass coffin, where her incorruptible body, clad in the habit of her order, may be viewed by anyone who wishes to visit this shrine."

Followed a Little Way

"Except for her visions in the grotto," Mrs. Keyes concludes, "Bernadette's life and death were unmarked by the spectacular or the supernatural. Like Therese of Lisieux, she followed a Little Way — a way which is not too hard for most of us to understand and emulate, at least in some measure."

Clark Heads DPM Pledge Masters

Placement Institute Reveals World Wide Award Guide

To answer the needs of educators, The Advancement and Placement Institute announces publication of its first Annual World Wide Award Directory.

This new directory has been prepared as an aid for American teachers, administrators, scientists and social scientists who wish subsidization of their continued education, to obtain their master's or doctorate degrees, or to do post-doctorate or independent research.

The award guide includes information about the field of study, the duration of the awards, the amount of stipends, the number available, where the awards are tenable, the specific conditions and to whom and when to apply.

Over 350 universities and foundations in 45 states and 30 foreign countries have cooperated by submitting information about their awards, which range in amount from $150 to $10,000.

Wide Coverage

The directory covers a very wide geographical range from research in the Arctic to study in Ceylon.

It includes new types of educational programs, such as educational internships, graduate scholarships and fellowships.

The directory includes awards in the arts, business, education, child development, English, health and physical education, home economics, industrial arts, the languages, library science, mathematics, psychology, recreation, the field of special education, speech, social casework and groupwork, vocational education as well as the various fields of teacher education and the sciences.

First of Kind

The Graduate Award Directory will be the first guide devoted entirely to advanced graduate opportunities available to educators of the United States. It fills a specific need for an up-to-date central reference source of graduate awards.

This directory is the result of several years of research by the staff of the Advancement and Placement Institute, a non-commercial professional information and advisory service for the field of education since 1952.

Copies may be examined at graduate schools, university placement or deans offices, public or college libraries or may be ordered from the institute at Box 99E, Greenpoint Station, Brooklyn 22, New York for $2 a copy.

STUDENT COUNCIL VIEWS

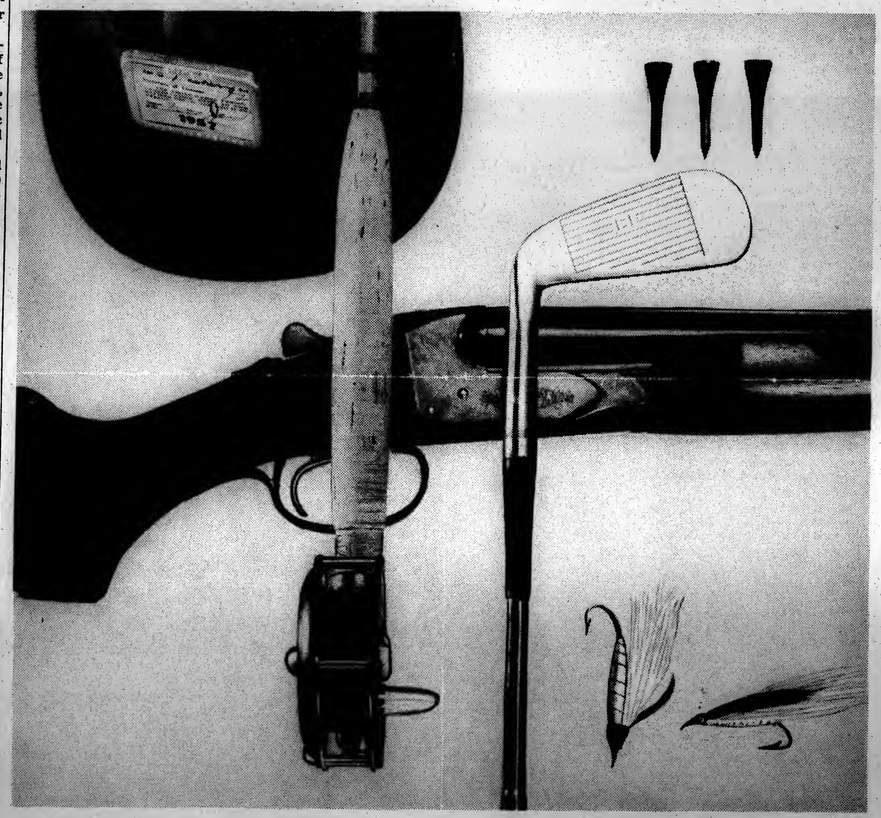
By PAT NICHOLSON

In just three days one of the greatest student trips in Eastern football history will be a reality. No one needs to be told that it is the mass movement of the Villanova student body to Boston for our second annual student trip. Our goal in Boston will be to settle some old scores by pinning a crushing defeat on Boston College.

There is, however, another very important goal which we should strive to attain this weekend. We must create a favorable impression toward Villanova. As the task of beating Boston College will be a team effort, so too will be the duty of upholding the reputation of Villanova. The team consists of each and every member of the student body who follows the 'Cats to Boston this weekend.

PAT NICHOLSON
SC Chairman

All that is necessary is that every student act at all times in a manner appropriate to the Villanova man that he represents. We hope that everyone has a safe (be careful on the roads) and wonderful weekend in "Bean Town" and that we come back from this trip with two victories; one over Boston College and one over the critics who hold that Villanova men aren't mature, responsible individuals.



Certainly we couldn't mention the Boston Trip without congratulating the Spirit Committee under Leo Rogers and Bruce Irving for the terrific job that they have done so far this year. The fact that Florida State University sent its cheerleading staff here to observe our Homecoming Weekend is a clear indication of the high esteem that other schools have for our Spirit Committee. Trip Co-Chairmen Mike Mancuso and Jed Dioguardi have done a great job making all the arrangements for the invasion of Boston.

As was clearly shown at our last home game, the spirit of the student body has a great effect upon the team and consequently upon the outcome of our games. The student body is strongly urged to continue this fine spirit during the next four away games. It is difficult for the team to play away, but if we show them that their fellow students really appreciate their efforts for victory, it will help provide that something extra that is characteristic of champions.

"Help build Villanova by boosting Villanova."

Six Nursing Grads Granted Licenses

Six graduates of the School of Nursing of Villanova have successfully completed requirements for registration in Pennsylvania.

The six, graduates last June, were notified recently that they were qualified to use the initials, R.N.

They are Dolores Cofield, Beatrice Curran, Helen Daly, Cecelia DeMuro, Sister M. Theolinda Moore, OSF., and Rita Shigo.

Until the graduates were notified of completing of requirements successfully, they were unable to practice in the state.

"The students were far above the norm set by Pennsylvania for the granting of licenses to practice nursing," according to Sister Mary Alma, C.R.S.M., head of the Villanova Nursing Division.

Jack Lumsden, All-American Swimming Star, Appointed To Intramural Department

Ed Geisz, Director of Intramurals, has announced the appointment of Jack Lumsden as assistant intramural director at Villanova University.

Lumsden was graduated from Northeast Catholic high school in 1938, just one year after Frank Regan. He took his undergraduate education at La Salle College, completing his course of study in 1949.

Outstanding Swimmer

The new assistant director of intramurals has compiled an impressive swimming record in the course of his high school and college days. He has held every record and championship in the Middle Atlantic A.A.U. district from the 50 yard to the 880 yard freestyle race.

He held the junior national 220 yard freestyle in 1937; the senior national 100 yard freestyle championship in 1944; was senior national champion and a member of the four man team which became team champions in 1944; won the eastern collegiate championship in 1947, was a member of the All-American intercollegiate swimming team 1947-48, and remained undefeated in the 50-yard freestyle championship race for eight consecutive years.

Among the clubs he competed for can be named the Germantown Y.M.C.A., the Broadwood A.C., the North Branch Y.M.C.A., the Philadelphia Turners, the Penn Athletic Club, the Brighton-Drake Swimming Club, and the Keystone Aquatic Club.

Coaching Experience

His coaching experience includes positions at St. Thomas More high school, Malvern Preparatory, assistant coach at La Salle College, swimming coach and intramural director at St. Joseph's College, coach at Philadelphia Cricket Club, Athletic Director for the U. S. Coast Guard the fourth Naval District and a membership in Philadelphia Swimming Directors Society.

Lumsden is also a recognized A.A.U. and intercollegiate referee and starter.

With the addition of Lumsden to the Intrumural department, the program for the year will also be expanded to meet the needs of the participants.

The Intramural department has obtained the use of the main gymnasium, the bowling alleys and the swimming pool, all of which are located in the Field House.

Newly added this year will be the organization of novice swimming classes. A basketball and bowling league will also be formed. Finally, track events, including cross-country running, have been planned.

Feeling quite gay and without a care, a man telephoned a friend at three in the morning.

"Hope I haven't disturbed you," he said airily.

"Oh, no," growled the friend. "It's O.K. I had to get up to answer the phone anyway."

Count Villan V Says: Beat Boston!

Main Liners Meet Eagles Saturday

BY BILL VINCENT

This week the Wildcat eleven, along with more than 2,000 Villanova students, will journey to Chestnut Hill, Mass., to encounter the Eagles of Boston College.

They will be out to avenge the 7-6 loss that the Eagles pinned on them a year ago.

Over 13,000 people were on hand to see the Cats miss a last minute field goal that would have reversed the outcome of that game.

Won Last Three

Boston College, after taking a 46-6 drubbing from Navy in its opener, has bounced back to win its last three games. The Eagles defeated Florida State, the always powerful Quantico Marines and the University of Dayton.

This season, Coach Mike Holovak, a former Eagle fullback, can boast of 23 returning lettermen. This group forms the nucleus of the squad, but sophomores will be filling out the weaker positions as the season progresses.

However, gone from last year's team which won five and dropped four, are top New England quarterback Billy Donlan, hard driving fullback Bernie Teliszewski and ends Frank Gallagher and Dick Reagon.

Ends Strong

The Bee Cees still have four lettermen returning at ends including 19 year old junior John Flanagan. Flanagan, although a top pass receiver, is a good defensive end and spends much of his time in opponents, backfields. Senior Alex Kulevich holds down the other flank. Backing up this pair are letterman Jim Cotter and sophs Don Tosi and Clem Kacergis.

Two brothers, Leon and Steve Bennett, head the list of tackles. Both have seen a lot of action, but Leon, a 6 5—240 pound giant, won a starting berth last year as a sophomore. However, he will have his hands full for the afternoon because he is playing oppsite the Main Liners' All-American candidate, Don Luzzi.

Junior Quarterback

The Boston College backfield is headed by junior quarterback Don Allard. Allard, a fine runner and ball handler, is a top passer and an adept punter. In the first four games of this season Allard's passing and all around play as a T-quarterback have been phenominal. Three weeks ago he literally beat Florida State single handed through his great passing and running.

The remaining members of Boston College's starting backfield include Alan Miller, the squads' leading ground gainer a year ago; Tom Joe Sullivan, this year's team captain, and hard-driving Don Seagar at fullback. Other top backs include Billy Alves, Jim Colclough, Bob Murphy, Larry Plenty, and John Connelly.

With a good group of experienced lettermen backed up by fast improving sophomores, the Eagles should prove to be one of the Wildcats' toughest opponents of the year.

Villanova Beaten By Virginia As Gobblers Pull 21-14 Upset

Before last Saturday's game Virginia Tech's coach warned his tem that Villanova was quite possibilly the surprise team of the country. As it turned out V.P.I. was the surprise team on the Wildcat schedule, as the Gobblers squeezed oua a 21-14 win over the charges of Frank Reagan.

It just wasn't V.U.'s day as they hit the Tech team at it's peak. The Gobblers were in top physical conlition for their first home game and were inspired to new heights by a 14,000 person Homecoming crowd.

The Wildcats were in poor physical condition when they hit Blacksburg, although they kept this a secret until shortly before the kick off. Many of Frank Reagan's prodogies were victims of the flu last week. Among those affected and not fully recovered from the clinches of the virus were four of the Wildcat's best performers.

Flu Victims

Co-captain and All-American candidate Don Luzzi was so badly infected with the flu he missed the entire week of preparatory practice. Other starting ball players who saw action in the infirmary last week and were greatly slowed by the results of their bout with the virus in Saturday's contest included halfbacks Rick Sapienza and Johnie Daniels and guard Eddie Michaels.

This was the picture as the two teams took the field. Villanova slowed by a flu epidemic facing a strong spirited VPI Team which was determined to give its alumni a homecoming victory.

With only 56 seconds played in the game, while the Wildcats were still getting the feel of their opponents from south of the Mason-Dixon Line, Tech Quarterback Jimmy Lugar kept the ball on a third and two situation and went 58 yards for a touchdown. The conversion was good and the Gooblers led 7-0.

Scored in Second

It was the second period of play before V.U. could score. The Wildcat's 63 yard touch down march began when Gene O'Pella recovered a fumble of Tech's sensational sophomore standout Alger Pugh on the Villanova 37 yard line.

After moving the ball to the Virginian's 33 the Villanova attack was further advanced by a sensational 22 yard run by senior halfback Davey Parr, who has seen only limited action this season due to a leg injury.

From the 11 Parr and Jack Deveraux moved the ball to a first down on the one. With phenonminal blocking help from Luzzi and Jack Deveraux, Parr evened the count by driving through the left side for the score. Rick Sapienza kicked a placement for the point after touchdown.

Fumbles Help

Tech scored again in the third period on a pass play from Corbin Bailey to Barry Frazee. Recovering a fumble in the end zone, alert guard Eddie Micheals teamed with extra point kicker Spienza to again tie the score in the fourth quarter.

The Gobblers stopped a Wildcat attack minutes later by intercepting a pass on their own five yard line and countered to march 95 yards for the final score o fthe game.

'Yankee' Wildcats Prove V.U. Spirit At V.P.I. Contest

A handful of Villanova "Yankees" proved to some 17,000 V.P.I. "Rebels" last Saturday that win lose or draw, "Villanova University has shown de South de greatest amount of good sportsmanship and spirit it's evah seen."

For nearly two hours as their team battled tirelessly against a highly-keyed-up V.P.I. eleven, some 30 Villanova students who made the trip to Blacksberg could be heard in the midst of the 14,000 Tech rooters.

They cheered when their team was up—they shouted encouragement even louder when their team was down and when the final gun sounded and they knew their team had lost the contest on the field, they did what was commended as "the greatest display of sportsmanship de South has evah witnessed."

A Round of Applause

They stood up and let go with three rousing cheers for the V.P.I. team and than sang solemnly the Villanova Alma Mater. Hundreds of people leaving the field turned and watched the group—then clapped when the singing was completed.

Almost immediately throngs of V.P.I. rooters poured down upon the Villanova men—some reaching for handshakes, some patting the VU men on the back, but all marveling at the show of spirit "these Yankees had given their team."

"Y'all are de greatest bunch of sports Ah've evah seen in mah life," shouted one V.P.I. alumnus as he jumped back and forth trying to shake the hand of every Villanova man.

Good Conduct Lauded

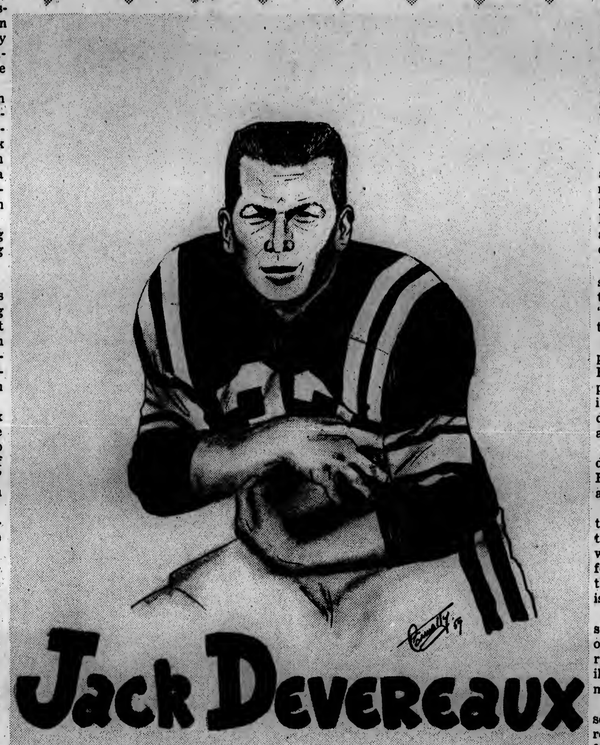
One Southern lady who had been sitting in front of the VU contingent during the game faced the group and made this statement:

"You boys have centainly conducted yourselves well — we're proud to have you here and we want you to come back."

A college reporter for the V.P.I. paper ran up to the group and began interviewing the Villanovans.

"Where'd y'all get that much spirit?" he asked. It's unbelievable they way you kept up de whole game."

A Moment of Silence



Only once during the contest was there silence among the Villanovans—that was when Co-Captain Don Luzzi was carried from the field atfer sustaining an injury early in the fourth quarter. The group then led the huge ovatio ngiven the Wildcat star for his outstanding play.

This was yet another point upon which the Southern fans commented, one man saying that "it was the silence of your group which brought a hush over the entire stadium."

Jack Devereaux — A Devastating Guy

BY TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Two Saturdays ago, during the Villanova-Florida State game, Pat Hogan, the Seminoles' Publicity Director, kept up a continuous wail of agony. Press-box occupants would have hit him on the head with a typewriter if they hadn't been more engrossed in watching what was happening down on the field.

Hogan was also peering, through face-covering fingers, at the destruction one of the Wildcat backs was inflicting on the Florida State line. Jack Devereaux a 6-2, 190 lb. fullback with a devastating capacity for piercing a defensive line, was practicing his specialty at the expense of the men from the Southland.

"Why doesn't someone stop that big horse," said Hogan, "he's murdering us."

Took Defenders Along

Jack bulled his way to 82 net yards in 20 carries, time and again pounding out the yardage necessary for a first down, on third-and-three situations. On most occasions he dragged along would-be defenders who thought that an arm-tackle would be sufficient to bring him down.

The majority of the times Devereaux ran the ball, he was running either the Wildcats' favorite "scissors" play up the middle or the ride series handoff between tackle and end. The "scissors" maneuver involves cross blocking on the part of the guards.

For his efforts, Devereaux was designated "Back-of-the-Week" by the Philadelphia Daily News.

The honor pointed up the rapid advances made by the senior fullback since his freshman year at Villanova. No more than a squad-man at the beginning of last season, he has progressed to the extent that Coach Frank Reagan now says he is "invaluable."

'Solid Man'

"It's gratifying the way Jack comes through for us when vital yardage is needed," is the way Reagan puts it. "He is my solid man."

While at Camden Catholic High, in New Jersey, Jack was an all-around athlete, playing as much basketball as he did football. His basketball coach, John McCarthy, who also was his football backfield coach, says that Jack could have been a star in basketball if he had chosen to make that his major sport.

Despite his natural ability, Devereaux couldn't win the fullback assignment on the freshman team when he first came to Villanova. He did, however, play end.

In his sophomore year, Jack was switched back to the backfield, but he saw very little action, as Al Ciarocchi and John Bauer did most of the full-backing.

No Change Foreseen

Nor did it look like there would be any change in status a year later. Bauer moved to halfback and Ciarocchi was hobbled by injuries, but sophomores Rollie West, Joe Nardo and Gene Paja, and senior Tony Esgro offered stout opposition.

As late as the second game on the schedule Jack had progressed no further than four-string. He was on the "red team" which imitated the plays of the Villanova opponents.

Then, in Dayton, Ohio, Coach Reagan played a hunch and inserted Devereaux. He responded with a heart-warming performance. He ground out 84 yards in a winning, 13-0, game. From that day forward, the Wildcats were solid at the fullback spot.

Jack led the team in rushing yardage, despite his playing in only seven games. He netted 398 yards in 90 attempts, for a 4.4 average.

Jack's defensive work has done much toward impressing his worth to the team on Coach Reagan. Particularly when Villanova works out of a box defense, and Jack is stationed at one of the corner spots in the secondary, he is a bear.

As the offensive quarterback comes sliding down the line in the split T option or on the belly series, Jack carries out his task to perfection. Ordinarily he is supposed to take the pitch man. This he does with relentless drive.

It is when the QB keeps the ball or sends the fullback off tackle that Jack responds with his "invaluable" performance. After the split-second delay to check out his own assignment, he comes flying in and more often than not, stops the runner cold before he can get up any speed.

Boston Awaits Invasion 1,500 Villanovans Expected

blazer, and I immediately surmised that this must be one of the feared Villanovans. Before I could say a word, he spoke, offering me his hand.

"How do you do, sir, my name is Willy Wildcat. I wonder if you could tell me if this Boston College."

"Why, yes, it is." I answered, "Are you from Villanova?"

"Yes, sir, I am. I came up a few days early for the game this week. I thought I'd come over here and try to find out from a few of the Boston students just where we could find a nice place to celebrate our victory Saturday night.

"Funny thing, though. There doesn't seem to be anybody on this whole campus. I thought I saw a few fellows, but they must have run away when they saw me. I can't figure it out. Tell me, do you know of any nice places around here?"

Don't Worry

"No, I'm sorry, but I'm a stranger in town mys ... Say, what do you think about the game Saturday?"

"Oh, don't worry, sir, we'll try not to hurt any of them. And we won't roll up the score too much, either, we don't want to make any serious enemies. Well, I have to go now, see you at the game."

With friendly wave, he sauntered down the path. As he disappeared around a turn, Billy Beantown rose from behind his bench.

"Is he gone?"

"Yes, and he seemed like quite a nice guy," I said. But, one thing is puzzling me. If everybody is so scared, why are you out here?"

The Reason Why

"I'm sorry you asked that," he replied, turning pale, because it's my duty to do something that has never been done before. It's . . . it's . . . I'm sorry, I just can't tell you. I'll have to ask you to leave me alone. Please!"

I agreed, but being a true reporter, I wasn't going to leave until I had the whole story. I hid behind a nearby bush and looked back at the miserable lad.

He loosened a rope at the base of the flagpole; and, then, slowly, Billy Beantown lowered the Boston College Eagle to half-mast.

Lou Spevetz New Captain Of Rifle Team

Lou Spevetz takes over this year as the captain of Vilanova's Naval Reserve Officer'sTraining Corps rifle team. His main support will come from fellow soph. sharpshooters Jon Ridsky, Joe Pollizatto and Dave Walsh.

Bolstering the four Sophs. will be junior William Hearn, and some as yet unchos en frosh. Six frosh are vying for the four open positions on the team. Charles Russell seems the most promisingof the yearling marksmen. The others are Bob Queen, Nathan Coursey John Malriat, James Rhodes, Ed Hogan and Ed O'Keefe.

Tough chedulSe

On Nov. 6 the competition is Penn and Pennsylvania Military College. On Dec. 7—it's Temple and St. Joseph's; Jan 11. Drexel and Valley Forge Military Academy; Jan. 18, Drexel and PMC; Feb. 8, La Salle and VFMA and on March 6, La Salle and Temple.

Intramural Plans Aired, Game Protest Is Upheld

BY FRANK CUNNINGHAM

"The participation by intramural football teams this fall has generally been very good, and the Intramural Department will endeavor to do all in its power to insure that all future games will be played."

Intramural Council President Jim Corey expressed these sentiments on the progress and accomplishments of the on-campus program this year, as well as announcing that the Council planned to make many new additions to their already crowded assortment of sports events.

New Projects

Projects either completed or in the planning stage are a fall swimming championship, chess, bridge and checkers tournaments, and a four mile cross-country run competition. A tentative program for the nurses is also being set up.

A new 12:30 Mendel league restricted to Engineers' teams has also been formulated. It will be under the direct supervision of Senior Terry McHugh.

Corey offered a clarification of the recent "protest" issue involving a football game between Delta Pi Mu, the Liberal Arts fraternity, and Bravo Co., the Navy team, which Bravo won 8-0.

Protest Honored

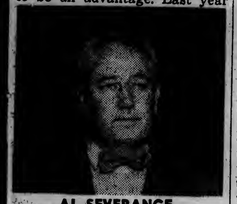
A formal protest was entered by D.P.M. to the effect that certain players on the Navy eleven were either not official members of the team, or were members of other Intramural squads, and that therefore, Bravo Co.'s victory should be nullified. The protest was honored by the Intramural Dept., and the contest ordered replayed at a later date.

Corey again reminded all teams of the departmental rules concerning forfeits, saying that two forfeits brought automatic expulsion from competition. He stated that in such cases, either reserve teams would be placed in the vacated spots, or that new schedules would be made.

Corey concluded his statement by declaring that "physical contact between teams has been much rougher this year than in the past, thus necessitating a strict adherence to all rules which are designed for the participants' safety."

Basketball Practice Begins; Sophs Key, Says Severance

BY TOM MURPHY



Villanova's basketball team under the direction of coach Alex Severance, began practice in Aliumni Hall gym yesterday. Coach Severance was neither pessimistic nor optimistic but rather realistic when interviewed about the team.

He says that the team could have a winning season this year, to compensate for last year's showing, which was the first basketball team in eleven years to have a losing season. However there are a lot of "ifs" surrounding the team.

If sophomores John Scott, George Raveling and George Rieder play the brand of basketball of which they are capable, the team should be improved forty percent, according to Coach Severance, who believes these sophomores have a chance of making starting berths this year.

Practice in Alumni

The team will have all its practice sessions in Alumni gym this season, which should prove to be an advantage. Last year

AL SEVERANCE
On The Court Again

too many practices were interrupted in the Field House.

Coach Severance must get a lowdown on opposing teams this year before he knows what kind of an offense and defense his small but good team will use.

When queried if Villanova could come up with a "sleeper" who could compare to the greatness of Ex-Villanovan Paul Arizin, Coach Severance said, "A player like that is one in a million." Severance said however that Bill Brennan, a Senior, who played in a summer basketball league this year, could be the sleeper of the team.

Rates La Salle Highly

When asked if La Salle, who is rated number seven in the country, was that good a team, the coach said, "They are the deepest team in the Philadelphia area. They have all but one of their starting players back. They'll be a tough team to beat."

Overall, Coach Severance promised Villanovas fans a finer, bigger team this season. "With our height we will be able to take more shots," he said, promising that the team, helped by eager sophomores, will have tremendous fight.

POOL HOURS

In conjunction with the new and expanded intramural program at Villanova University, Director of Intramurals Ed Geisz and Intramural Council President Jim Corey have released the following schedule for daily student use of the swimming pool in the Field House:

9:30 a.m. to 12 noon—female students only

1:00 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.—male students and faculty

DPM Trounces Charlie Co. In Intramural Game, 31-6, To Spotlight Week's Play

A strong Delta Pi Mu fraternity team got revenge for an upset that wasn't really one at all in taking their second game of the season in the 4:30 Mendel League last week.

The Arts fraternity gridders clobbered a Charlie Co. squad, 31-6, on Oct. 7, thinking they thus evened their seasonal record at 1-1. Later they learned that their protest on an 8-0 loss to Bravo Co. had been upheld by the Intramural Council and that the game would be replayed.

Peer Outstanding

Quarterback Norm Peer paced the victorious Arts men, passing brilliantly to receivers Chuck Trad, Mike Klesius and Jed Diogardi.

DPM scored early on a blocked punt by Al Dombrowski, who fell on the ball in the end zone for a score. A 30 yard pass from Peer to Klesius for a touchdown was the outstanding play of the afternoon.

Al Sheppard, Dick Sur and Gene Fogarty stood out for the losers, who fought valiantly and at times slowed up the winners' line with their intricate play formations.

Several other games were played over the week in the Austin and Mendel Leagues, with the following results:

AUSTIN LEAGUES'

The Barons and the East Wingers have been the pace setters in the depleted 2:30 Austin league. The 5:30 leagues on Austin Field have been more successful in team attendance.

Forfeitures in the 2:30 league have resulted in the dropping of two teams, the Junior C. E.'s and the Psychosacts.

Both the Barons and the East Wingers have posted 2-0 records. The Barons defeated the Terrors 18-0 while the Psychosacts forfeited a game to the East Wingers.

Last Place Tie

The remaining teams, the Terrors and Music Lovers share last place with 0-2 records. The Music Lovers have one forfeit, another will result in their withdrawal from the league.

The lack of teams in this league, says Jim Corey of the Intramural Council, is the cause of a schedule revision sometime this week."

The race for first place in Division A of the 5:30 league is closely contested, with a four way tie for the top position.

The Rat Pack defeated Dingus AC 7-6 while Emamon AC beat the Blue Raiders. 13-0. The Villans squeezed by the Austin Cats, 7-6.

Devils Replace Drill Team

In Division B, the Aces and Sixty-Niners lead the league with 2-0 records.

The Sixty-Niners outlasted the Trotters, 7-6, in last week's game, while the Drill Team forfeited a game to the Aces.

Last year's champions, the Delurey Devils, have replaced the Drill Team.

Mendel Leagues

The Intramural football games in the Mendel league are getting tremendously heated as some of the most recent scores show. No team has pulled way out in front yet but recent scores show that a few of the more powerful teams might.

Right after a tremendous showing it seems the victorious team falls down on its face. As an example, the Sixty Niners swamped Kell's Angels, 20-0, only to be defeated by the Trotters in their next game by the close score of 7-6.

7-7 Tie

Other recent scores show the Blue Raiders playing the Austin Cats to a 7-7 tie in a closely contested battle. The Blue Raiders came back from the tie only to be defeated by the Emanon A.C. 13-0, and the Austin Cats went down to defeat aganist the Villains in a close, 7-6, game. Rat Pack beat the Villains and edged Dingus A.C., 7-6.

The Trotters went down to defeat 7-0 at the hands of Kells Angels. In a game which showed tremendous defensive maneuvers, the Kent Men played another scoreless game against the Losers only to lose on first downs 5-1. They had also been beaten by the King Klowns on first downs, 3-2.

The Hawks romped over the Fangs 27-0 showing tremendous passing and a strong defensive line. Jizz - A.C. trounced the Losers by a 22-0 score. Sullivan Souses went down to defeat at the hands of the Mice by a 12-6 score. The Playboys completely outclassed Cumming's Plebes 27-0 then came back for another strong showing, downing the Hackers 27-6.

V.U. Harriers Lost In First Meet Of Year

Villanova's cross-country team slowed by the effects of the flu and competing without Olympic 1500-meter champion, Ron Delany, who was hospitalized in Philadelphia for three days, could do no better than finish last in their triangular meet with St. Joe's and Georgetown in Washington last Saturday.

St. Joe's won the meet, taking five out o fthe first seven places while scoring 33 points.

Georgetown's Bob Vinton covered the four mile course in 20:13.2 to take first place in the meet, but the local team could manage to score only 41 points dispite Vinton's effort.

Joe Sloan of St. Joes finished fourty yards behind Vinton to take second place fro the Hawks.

Villanova's best effort was by sophomore Bob Godesky who rallied to take eight place, the only Wildcat to finish in in the top ten. Vic Dimaio finished 16th for the charges of coach Jim Jumbo Elliott who totaled 65 points in cross-country's scoring system, which has the team with the least points winning.

The Wildcat harriers will meet LaSalle today in their first dual meet of the season. The Cat's hope to have Ron Delany back in action as they go for their first win this afternoon.

Luzzi, one of the most outstanding athletes in Wildcat history, ruptured a blood vessel in his leg in the fourth quarter of the Main Liners 21-14 loss to the Gobblers, and had to be taken off the field in an ambulance.

The injury to the stalwart lineman was the most serious of four suffered by Villanova in their upset defeat.

Close to a half hour after the game had ended, the Villanovans were able to leave the stadium although still escorted by a number of V.P.I. fans.

A middle-age man outside the gates caught one Villanovan with a quick handshake.

"What you boys showed here today is what Ah believe colleges all over de country should be showin'."

Ring fittings and measurements for the Class fo 1959 will be held Thursday, Oct. 24 from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. in the publication office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Further details will be published in next week's Villanovan.

Teacher Exams Scheduled for February 15

The National Teacher Examinations, prepared and administered annually by Educational Testing Service, will be given at 250 testing centers throughout the United States on Saturday, February 15, 1958.

At the one-day testing session a candidate may take the Common Examinations, which include tests in Professional Information, General Culture, English Expression, and Nonverbal Reasoning:

The college which a candidate is attending, or the school system in which he is seeking employment, will advise him whether he should take the National Teacher Examinations and which of the Optional Examinations to select.

Information Available

A Bulletin of Information (in which an application is inserted) describing registration procedure and containing sample test questions may be obtained from officials, school superintendents, or directly from the National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey.

Jack Goodyear Re-Elected Semper Fidelis President

At the last meeting of the Semper Fidelis Society, senior Jack Goodyear was re-elected president of the organization. Elected to the other positions in the Society were senior Archie Whyte, vice-president, and juniors John Neal and Jim Crowley, secretary and treasurer, respectively. The newly elected officers outlined the proposed activities of the club for the coming year. Among the plans for this semester are arrangements for a dinner dance on November 9.

Social chairman George Riehle announced that the combination dinner-dance, Marine Corps birthday party would be held at the famous 69th Street restaurant, Kosticks, and that all old members and new members are invited. The evening will celebrate the November 10 birthday of the Marine Corps. Corresponding Secretary George Wimberg has initiated a program of informing area colleges on the activities of Villanova's marines.

President Jack Goodyear in explaining the goals of the Society said that the organization sought to unite students enrolled in various Marine officer programs in the spirit of fraternal and of professional advancement. In conclusion Goodyear stated that anyone seeking further information should consult any of the officers of the society or Captain Grace, USMC, moderator, in the Marine office in CJB.

Fr. Donnellon Joins Drive To Aid Higher Education

By LARRY O'ROURKE
Managing Editor

The Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., Unievrsity President, last week joined with presidents of twenty colleges and universities in a move planned to gain increased support for higher education.

The committee of presidents issued a statement calling for greater public concern and interest in the education field.

The statement followed the completion of plans for local participation in the nationwide effort which the Advertising Council is making to acquaint the public with the financial needs of higher education.

As part of the program of activities in this area, the twenty college and university heads subscribing to the statement will be hosts to leaders in the fields of business, industry and communications at a 12:30 luncheon in the Barclay tomorrow.

Dr. Williams Presides

The guests also will include the trustees of the twenty participating institutions.

Presiding at the luncheon will be Dr. Alfred H. Williams, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, chairman of the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania and a member of the Board of Managers of Swarthmore College.

The principal address will be delivered by Dr. Frank W. Abrams, chairman of the executive committee of the Council on Financial Aid to Education and former chairman of the Standard Oil Company (New Jersey).

First Joint Effort

Issuance of last night's statement, it was pointed out, marks the first time that a large-scale cooperative effort to focus attention upon the financial needs of higher education has been made by institutions in this area.

The statement follows:

"We believe that support of

DPE Suspended Two Years For Rule Infractions

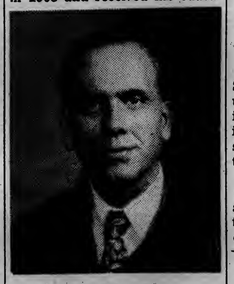
A violation of the university's regulations concerning fraternity initiations has resulted in the suspension of activities for Delta Pi Epsilon, the Commerce and Finance division's fraternity, according to the Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O.S.A., Vice-President of Student Affairs.

The ruling, effective as of Oct. 17, forbids DPE to hold any functions for the remainder of this year and also forbids DPE initiations during the school year, 1958-59.

In addition, it was ruled that the fraternity will have no vote on the Student Council before September, 1959.

Father Kemme stated that part of the infractions included failure of DPE to have its moderator present during initiation proceedings.

LIVING ROSARY



Next Tuesday night, Oct. 29, at 7:30 on Mendel Field, nine area Catholic colleges will participate in a living Rosary. This activity will be held as part of National Catholic Youth Week by the National Federation of Catholic College Students, and all students are urged to participate.

Dr. Simon has received the following degrees: License-es-Lettres, University of Paris; Diplome d'Etudes Superieures de Philosophie; Certificat d'Etudes Physiques, Chimiques, Naturelles; Licentiate in Philosophy, Institute Catholique de Paris; and Doctor of Philosophy (1934).

Students will be given the opportunity to question Dr. Simon after his talk.

A Villanova law student argues his "moot court" case before a board of judges consisting of Jerome Shestack, Esq., local attorney; the Honorable Gerald J. Flood, Judge of the Common Pleas Court of the city of Philadelphia, and John Rogers Carroll, Esq., noted criminal lawyer.

Of seven students competing for a place on Villanova's court team in the intercollegiate contests, the three qualifying were: Anthony J. Ryan, Peter P. Smith and Leo K. O'Drudy.

Villanova's Wildcat mascot wasted no time getting himself settled in Boston during last weekend's student trip to the Beantown for the Villanova-Boston College football game. While the student travellers held a mammoth rally in Kenmore Square for the football team at 11 a.m. Saturday, "Willie" made close friends with a pair of local lovelies—that's real spirit, boy!

You Are There: Villanova Re-Enacts Boston Tea Party

By JOHN KENNEDY
Feature Editor

Villanova captured Boston last Saturday for the second consecutive year. Some 1200 students, including a small party of coeds, invaded Beantown to witness a slippery football contest on Boston College's Alumni Field.

Rally-Riot At The Kenmore

A warm, wet day turned into a cold, wet day as the festivities commenced. Kicking-off the day was the 11 a.m. rally in front of the Villanova G.H.Q., the Kenmore Hotel on Boston's Kenmore Square. A surging, howling—but loyally enthusiastic—mob of Villanovans brought traffic to a standstill on Commonwealth Avenue. The halted cars, buses, beer trucks, etc., stood snarled for a distance of two miles in either direction—according to one not very reliable observer.

With fervor high and sportsmen's appetites whetted, the Villanovans set out, in a steady drizzle, for suburban Chestnut Hill, site of the gridiron battle.

'In The Wet'

Villanova fans sat damply in the downpour, undaunted and cheering, to witness an exciting contest, the outcome of which seemed always uncertain. Each tackle had a dance-like quality about it as the two (or more) players slid gracefully across the turf for six feet or so. To one rooter, skull fractures appeared imminent a number of times; once the tackled and the tackler seemed close to a head-on collision with the Villanova bench.

Necessity—Mother of Invention

In the stands, the hatless were regretting the fact; many draped their heads Arab-style with borrowed towels, others had thoughtfully purchased ladies' plastic bandanas. Still other groups huddled under shower curtains and managed to keep warm, if not dry.

Beantown Saturday Night

After the game, in the continuing moistness, Villanovans set out for the cultural and social oases of Boston. Beantown on Saturday night seemed possessed of any number of such oases. The populace were friendly, especially the lovely native girls. Parties flourished innumerably in several of the hotels where Villanovans were in the majority; various other functions of the type known as 'fish-fry-and-stomp' took place across the town.

The next day after Mass, with heavy heads and empty pockets, Villanovans set out for home. As the Boston city-limits were reached the rain ceased, the clouds parted and the sun shone. It had been a pretty wonderful weekend.

V. U. Visitors Gentlemen, Says TECH

The following editorial appeared in the October 18 edition of "Virginia Tech," weekly student publication of Virginia Polytechnical Institute entitled "The Gentlemen from Villanova."

"The cheering section from Villanova was understandably spare last weekend. Philadelphia is over four hundred miles from Blacksburg. What the Villanovaites lacked in quantity was appreciably made up in quality. Being a visitor and naturally a minority group at a football game has both advantages and disadvantages. You have the opportunity to make or break the reputation of your school. The boys from Villanova obviously chose the former.

Their team slipped a notch on the competition scale last weekend, but the reputation of Villanova for being sportsmen and gentlemen was certainly reinforced in the eyes of Techmen. It was a pleasure to have Pat Nicholson, President of Villanova's Student Body and his friends, Joe Nugent, Jr., Mike Mancuso, Don Brown, Don Kempf, Ed Karrer, Joe Gozo, Bill Kohl, John Pineer and the rest here at Virginia Tech for our Homecoming festivities. We will always welcome the gentlemen from Villanova on our campus."

Underneath the above article a special notice to the VPI student body.

It went as follows: "TECHMEN — TAKE NOTICE. The City of Richmond will be your host at the Virginia Game this weekend. Remember Villanova."

NFCCS Delegate Under SC Control

The N.F.C.C.S. is supposedly your means of representation as students of a Catholic college. The whole student body should have a hand in selecting the campus representative to the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

The Villanova delegate should be elected by the Student Council, and he should have the support of the Council and its President. As it now stands, your campus is represented by the chief officer of the N.F.C.C.S. "club," which theoretically includes every Villanovan as a "club" member!

There is no good reason for this; the N.F.C.C.S. was never meant to be a club. If the reputation of the N.F.C.C.S. is bad on this campus, it is due to your failure to see to it that you get full representation and full service from Villanova's delegate to the N.F.C.C.S.

There is a motion before the Student Council to put Villanova's N.F.C.C.S. delegate under the control of the Council. You can gain proper national representation by seeing to it that this motion passes. Tell your Student Council representative the way you want him to vote.

Dean Reuschlein And Garey Hall

Although the dedication of Villanova's own law school last spring had been the dream of Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein ever since he came to the Main Line, the realization of this dream did not eliminate his enthusiasm about encouraging young men and women to matriculate at Garey Hall.

The latest display of such enthusiasm is the program he set up recently by which undergraduates aspiring to the law profession may spend three full days in the building located at Spring Mill and County Line Roads.

The purpose of this program, of course, is to acquaint those attending with the classroom procedure, legal courses, qualities of a student lawyer and the opportunities of a law school graduate.

Last Wednesday's opening session conducted by Professor Collins was "both enlightening and interesting" and the next two meetings—December 4 and April 11—should be just as successful.

The question this week is: Do you feel that sea power is important for national defense and that it will play an important part in future military action?

Dave Borcik, 5th year Naval Eng.—Throughout history sea power has been the salvation of many a nation. From age to age, sea power has made revelutionary changes. None of these changes however can compare with the advances being made today since a great deal of a modern navy's power exists under the surface instead of on it.

The end of the sea as a power has definitely not come but instead sea power is on the verge of its newest and greatest test, revolutionary change.

Tom O'Hara, SophomoreC&F — I feel that there is a definite future in sea power. Because our population is constantly growing. No nation, even one which has a vast supply of natural resources, can afford to be anything less than one of the world's strongest sea powers. The fact that a navy is a material line of supply and a mobile base of operations should prove to any one that sea power should be the deciding factor in any future war.

Jim Merikangas, Soph Physics—Sea power is more important than it ever was before. All of our land bases are potential targets for Russian missles. Sea based forces and only sea based forces are defensible now. They would be the only means of massive retaliation in the event of attack. Every land fortress is vulnerable to attack. Our only defense is manuverability).

National Catholic Youth Week Begins Next Monday; Harris

The week of October 28 - November 3, 1957 offers us a splendid opportunity to join with our fellow Catholics throout America in the seventh annual observance of National Catholic Youth Week.

In a world beset with spiritual impoverishment and intellectual rebellion, we as Catholic college students have an important role to play. It is our responsibility to seek for ourselves and others "healthier holier and happier" lives.

Opportunity for All

The entire campus community is offered an opportunity to gain spiritual and intellectual formation through cooperative effort. We are sure that you will take advantage of this rare opportunity to offer your minds hearts to the glory of God.

We call on each and every campus in the Federation to mark the observance of Catholic Youth Week. May we call your utmost attention to the third observance of National Catholic Youth Commlnion Sunday.

Christ The King

We are proud that the National Federation of Catholic College Students is a constituent member of the National Council of Catholic Youth; and thereby we can join our fellow Catholic youth throughout the nation in the reception of Holy Communion on the Feast of Christ the King, in honor of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, the Patroness of Catholic young people.

It is our hope that each and every member of the Federation will make his or her personal contribution toward the greater development of Catholic youth in America, and sincerely observe National Catholic Youth Week.

The Faculty Says:

Sound & Fury Signifying Nothing

By CHARLES BERNARDIN
Chairman, English Department

The feature editors of the VILLANOVAN have requested me to write an article suggesting some of the classics that might appeal to students unable to take the traditional Survey of English Literature, a course which is offered at many colleges in the United States in the sophomore year.

When first approached by these editors, I replied that I thought (and still think) that faculty members, as a matter of policy, should not contribute to a student publication, for a number of reasons, not the least of which is that the VILLANOVAN, belonging as it does to the student body, should endeavor to encourage student efforts in journalistic writing. Moreover, what could a professor of English, so advanced in years as to appear almost 'antique' to a sophomore, and sequestered in the ivory tower of Academe, have to say about classics that would be original and appealing?

In spite of my brave intentions to adhere rigidly to my policy of not writing for a student publication, I gradually relented under the persuasive pressure of these young men.

The following represent some of the 'classics' one is apt to encounter from time to time in the traditional sophomore survey course on many campuses throughout the nation:

Lycidas was all wet.

Lycidas:

"Lycidas is a school chum of king George who has drowned in the sea. Lycidas feels very badly about the whole thing."

On Spenser's Prothalamion:

"(by John) Dunn: The Palmathian (The wedding of two beautiful girls on the river and how he compared them to two beautiful doves floating."

On poetic diction:

"Poetic diction is the conglamoration of versical devices."

Prose is Verse?

On prose:

"Prose is blank verse."

On Naturalism:

"Naturalism was in the air under Warner as early as 1880 but refusing to perch."

On the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle:

The Anglo-Saxon Chronical was the first English newspaper."

Dr. Sam the Man

On Johnson:

"Johnson was a great critic and writer and neo-classicist who believed in the superiority of rhyme over poetry."

On Jane Austen:

"Lord David Cecil said that Jane Austen was her father's Zeitgeist."

On Allegory:

"Stemming from Jewish poetry, it is the technique of beginning an independent clause with a subordinate conjunction."

Sandburg the Romantic

Random definitions:

"The metrical romance is a long, fanciful story. An example would be Carl Sandburg's "Chicago". The metrical tale is a shorter, less fanciful story that is very much like the metrical romance. An example would be Beowulf. The epic deals with heroes and heroines and is short."

The following "classics," fortunately, do not impede the progress of the greater majority, who end their sophomore literary careers, "trailing clouds of glory."

Malcontent Vents Spleen On Chemistry

By JACK CURTIN

I don't like chemistry very much. In fact, it is very posible that there is no one person on this campus, or even on the face of the earth, who dislikes the subject as much as I do —unless it is my laboratory professor. Besides, he tries to give the impression he enjoys it.

Anyway, when I get to talking to one of these fanatics who not only likes the blasted subject but even insists upon majoring in it, I get somewhat depressed. It is pretty discouraging for a person of my mental makeup and deep sensitivity, especially since I am burdened with an inborn faith in humanity, to come face to face with such living proof of man's lack of integrity.

For Lower Life

It would seem to me that chemistry is something to be delved into by the lower forms of life, and sort of nonchalantly ignored by thinking human beings. Somehow, mankind seems above such a trivial and boring thing.

It Was Hate Not 'Ego'

There are certain persons who would tell you that chemistry is important to our everyday life and that my numerous and frightening attacks (I have sent many a chemistry major running off, screaming) upon it are prompted by my injured ego, said ego being injured by my inability to pass the course. This is not true. I hated chemistry even while I was in the process of not passing it.

It wasn't that I didn't try either. Many's the night I spent lying awake attempting to solve a particularly ridiculous problem in my head. This was an excellent sleep inducer, but caused many nightmares. I remember one in particular in which I was held captive by a leering mad scientist who was about to place me in equilibrium. Whether this is bad or good I don't know.

Equilibrium . . . Egad!

Equilibrium is a word my instructors use with deep affection, but to my ears it has a terrifying sound. Anyway, I began screaming rather loudly and awakened my roommate who was studying at his desk. This made things rather unpleasant in our room for a while.

Another thing that used to bother me was the laboratory periods. It wasn't enough that I attended four classroom lectures a week which were definitely non-stimulating; I had to spend one afternoon a week in the lab, making a practical application of what I had learned. Applying what I had learned did not require three hours a week—as a matter of fact, some weeks it wouldn't have required my getting out of bed.

Omnipresent Test Tubes

Still, I was forced to attend these laboratory sessions. As I said before, I am a sensitive being, and anyone who has ever faced row upon row of gleaming test tubes and malicious looking acid bottles can appreciate the nervous state I was in at the end of three hours.

It wasn't too bad, however. I had an agreement with the youth next to me (a fanatic) whereby he would perform all my experiments and I would pay him reasonably generous sums of money. This removed much of my mental anguish and also most of my social life.

For a while I acted as sort of an errand boy, running back and forth to the stockroom for the necessary implements for the various experiments, but after I stumbled and broke a large and rather expensive beaker, I was more or less delegated to the role of watchful observer.

I was fairly watchful too, until one day when I suddenly realized what a beautiful view I had from my vantage point near the window. (The number of trucks that pass by our campus on a given afternoon is amazing.)

Still another thing that bothers me about the average chemist is his adoration of a man who can come up with a long mathematical equation that no one else can understand. I don't want to take anything away from Dr. Einstein, but I came up with several such mathematical mazes on my test papers and all I ever got for them were large red question marks and a failing grade. This obvious discrimination made me none too happy.

Drastic Action Needed

All in all, this supposedly revered science made a mental and physical wreck out of me and ruined my morale Having recovered, although I'll never be the person I used to be, I am preparing a fatal blow for this ogre.

I have drawn up a long petition asking our university officials to drop the course and anyone connected with it. I hope to have the whole school rally 'round and support it. As a matter of fact, the whole chemistry repeat section already has.

Political Round-Up:

Royal Role In A Democratic World

By FRANK DELANY
FEATURE EDITOR

DELANY

With the very probable exception of the Irish World and Gaelic American, one of the more self-consciously Irish-American newspapers, one can hardly pick up a newspaper or magazine these days without reading a rapturous account of the visit of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II to her Canadial subjects and her American great and good friends.

On the other hand articles in the current issues of Look and the Saturday Evening Post deal largely with the recent large volume of criticism of the Queen and the monarchy from Lord Altrincham to Malcom Muggeridge, former editor of Punch and author of current Post diatribe entitled "Does England Really Need a Queen?"

What is Queen's Function?

All this volume of print and words from panegyric to peevishness raises one question. Just who is the queen and what function does she have outside of laying cornerstones etc? Press accounts seem to dwell on such fascinating subjects as whether the Queen's wine-colored suit was claret or port but one suspects there must be something more to royalty than this.

First of all, Elizabeth has a monopoly on royal titles. She is the queen of the United Kingdom (England and all that sort of thing), Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Ceylon and Ghana, (Kwame Ankrumah and all that sort of thing). She is not Queen of Ireland. This is a dubious victory though since there are probable more Irish in England than in Eire with people leaving Eire all the time.

Most Important Title

However, the most important title of the queen is the Head of the Commonwealth of Nations, an ephemeral organization containing the previously mentioned kingdoms plus the republics of India and Pakistan and the newly formed kingdom of Malaya. Elizabeth is the sole tangible bond holding this vast land and population mass together.

This union of nations held together by moral rather than physical bonds for their mutual benefit (economic and cultural) is an example for the world which must somehow find a working formula-for a partnership of its many nations without force if peace is to prevail. The average American is unimpressed with an empire wherein all cooperation is strictly voluntary but the Kaiser was the first one to say that the British empire wouldn't stick together when the chips were down.

Chief Royal Criticism

One of the chief criticisms of the Queen is that she does not realize and exploit her position as Head of the Commonwealth to the best of her ability. Critics suggest that the court should be representative of the entire Commonwealth and that Elizabeth as a multiple queen use her influence to reconcile the viewpoints of the Commonwealth nations and advise the various prime ministers accordingly instead of reacting primarily as the queen of England.

England herself today has taken a back seat in the Commonwealth to give impetus to the community of nations viewpoint. From the line taken in her speaches in Canada, it would seem the queen is becoming more Commonwealth minded.

English Queen Primarily

For some time to come, though, the queen will remain primarily the Queen of England. And as such, her position may be taken as representative of the six other constitutional monarchies remaining in Europe and as indicative of the place, if any, of roalty in the present and future western world of democracy.

The first rule of constitutional monarchy is that the sovereign reigns but does not rule. This provides difficulty for those who cannot concieve of an authority that they cannot measure in terms of effective power. Actually, for the queen to exercise the power inherent in her position would be an indication of one thing; that democracy in England had failed.

European Difference

All governments in Western Europe have followed the parliamentary system of government as opposed to our system of checks and balances (which in such cases as a Democratic congress vs. a Republican president practically checks and balances our right out of any worthwhile legislation).

Now since the real head of government (as opposed to head of state), the prime minister is a purely political transient figure, all nations have seen the need for someone to have emergency power, call ministries to power and provide a rock of permanence upon which to base the legality of laws and government and focal point for ceremony and patriotism. In the republics, this has usually resulted in a colorless, influenceless president.

The Queen and other members of the Royal Family wave to the crowds after the annual ceremony of trooping the Color on the Horse Guards Parade. In her tricorne hat the Queen has the plume and diamond badge of the Irish Guards, whose 1st Battalion trooped their color.

QUEEN ELIZABETH
Touring States

The most successful of the Western democracies have been the monarchies (Scandinavia, the Low Countries, England and Greece) where the monarchs owing to the inherent nature of their position have been able to provide the stability and focal point for loyalty that is necessary in a head of state in a parliamentary system.

Prime ministers come and go but the monarch remains and the longer he remains the more weight his or her voice carries in the councils of state.

Strict State Secret

For the monarch must be informed of everything and her opinions must be listened to, if not acted upon. Any influence of the monarch on government policy is a strict state secret until the death of the monarch.

In Elizabeth's case, she is criticized for surrounding herself with stuffy and numerous countesses, earls etc. to the point where she has not sufficient contact with the realities of present day England to render a constructive influence. Much of this criticism is unfair, much true. Some changes should be made.

A Living Symbol

But in general it is fair to say of Elizabeth and her fellow constitutional monarchs that they are just what they ought to be: a living symbol of their country, its greatness and its virtues, a sufficient occasion for the ceremonial which is inherent in the nature of man, a fitting principal of the permanency of the state and the law, a constructive, constant and disinterested influence on the government and the repository of ultimate (emergency) sovereignty.

And then there is always King Saud.

Perspective: Pro and Con Coeducation

By ED CURRALL

Coeducation

Coeducation is a subject which is certain to cause much controversy and argument whenever a discussion of it arises. Points are bound to be brought out which are both pro and con. There are several arguments against coeducation, and it is with these arguments that we deal.

A major drawback of coeducation is the loss of academic freedom. In many courses, such as biology or English literature courses, it is necessary to bring up in class certain instances which tend to embarrass students and teachers alike. Men and women are not on the same level and therefore must be taught in different ways. The abolition of coeducation in a case such as this would be a benefit to students and teachers alike. Without coeducation the teacher would be able to express himself more fully and more clearly, and the student would be able to ask questions which give a better understanding of the course. These are questions which he might hesitate to ask in a mixed class. These questions would lead to a fuller education and a better understanding of some subjects: an understanding which might otherwise be lost. Some education, therefore, is lost because of coeducation.

Men and women living on the same campus may actually cause a poor environment for study. As ridiculous as this may seem, further investigation shows the possibility. A male student is less likely to go out at night to see a girl if she is a good distance away than if she were readily available. Granted, a person may go out whenever he wishes, the fact that there are no girls living on campus not withstanding, but he is less likely to go out as often and neglect his studies if there are no girls on campus.

Related to this is the subject of raids on women's dormitories which often occur in coeducational colleges. Everyone knows that male colleges are always seeking some means of excitement. If the temptation of this kind of excitement were removed less trouble would be caused and, consequently, incidents such as this would not occur to give unfavorable publicity to an institution of higher learning.

With girls on campus, also, many rules must be enforced which would not be necessary otherwise. Certain areas of campus may be ruled off-limits after certain hours which would not have to be ruled so were it not for the presence of female students. Certain actions and modes of dress must be enforced which, although very gentlemanly, are not really a necessity. Some may argue that coeducation, therefore, makes a gentleman. However, if a person is not a gentleman by the time he reaches college age, he does not belong in college.

Coeducation is especially unfavorable on campuses where the male students greatly outnumber the female. In this case the girls are very often ignored, even unwanted, and consequently receive little attention socially. If the male and female colleges were separated, the boys would pay more attention to the girls of neighboring colleges for social activities.

Thus coeducation is not such a boom as we are often led to believe. Trying to combine two levels of education into one, a less favorable environment for study, and other cases which have been pointed out show that coeducation is not all it is thought to be.

By J. D. MARTUCCI

Coeducation is, inevitably, an explosive topic wherever bull-sessions gather—either here at Villanova or on other all-male campuses. Misogynists—if this is the word—seem to feel that with the appearance of women on campus all standards, academic and moral, will drop away to nothingness.

It would immediately seem that all the sober, hard-working students would drop their books to set out in whole-hearted pursuit of distraction. Another view has it that classes could not frankly conducted if mixed; inhibition would be the order of the day.

The first opinion would, no doubt, be valid if the said hard-working students had never seen a woman before or had just returned from an Antarctic expedition. The latter opinion is wishful thinking: few classes outside certain science courses contain any kind of material that would be so affected.

Nice Appearance Needed

The unspoken crux of the matter is really the kind of girl appearing at a coeducational school. If she has honey-blonde hair, blue eyes, is admiring and dresses well she is a welcome addition to any school. Too many fear that the typical girl will be very unattractive in appearance, intellectually superior and extremely un-admiring.

Others are apprehensive that, taking advantage of male deference to the weaker (?) sex, the girls will in a short time take over the place and run it to suit themselves. This is a decidedly unrealistic view of current boy-girl relationships. Chivalry has become discriminating.

Intellectual Inferiors

Actually all these and many other objections to coeducation are based in fact on an outmoded concept of the opposite sex, stemming from our Victorian past. With this view we tend to look on girls as our intellectual inferiors, inclined to frivolity and definitely to be kept in their place. This is wishful thinking and if many girls we know do fit this description, it is because our current masculine-dominated society has molded them into this image. Things are definitely changing.

Coeducation will, itself, be part of our education. It will help destroy the mutual illusions of the sexes about one another (I might say delusions) and encourage a freer and more stimulating relationship between the sexes which will be of mutual benefit to both and make for a more realistic future life both in and out of marriage. At the present time, perhaps, the same process may be going on, only not so obviously, on the female college campus. Coeducation would be bringing this activity to conscious attention.

Exclusively for Men

Some of the men so vigorously opposed to coeducation regard the campus as a male preserve to be jealously guarded from female contamination. An exclusive club with a certain esprit de corps is to be maintained. To some observers this may smack of discrimination in a time of reaction against discrimination.

Whether it is admitted or not, women—on campus—are here to stay. Their role and relative importance may or may not increase. The proper way in dealing with them is to swallow whatever prejudice that exists and to accept coeds with as good a grace as possible.

It must be remembered that universities famous academically and socially have survived and actually prospered after the appearance of knee socks on campus. The hard core must submit with resignation to what is inevitable and remorseless; the core may melt with the appearance of, perhaps, one particular charmer.

The Student Council will hold a special meeting tonight to consider eight articles of the proposed revised student constitution. The meeting will be held in room 207 C and F at 6:30 p.m.

Villanova's Cuban Counterpart Thrives On the Outskirts of Havana Since 1946

By JACK McKENZIE

The early morning rush is on and autos fill the roads leading to the large metropolis. In the opposite direction come students deserting the noisy and crowded city for the quiet beauty of suburban Villanova. Resident students make their way to classes passing new buildings under construction. Does this sound familiar? It might, but the city is Havana and the school is the University of Saint Thomas of Villanova, our younger sister school to the south.

Founded 1946

This Augustinian institution was a university from its founding in 1946 and pre-dated us a university by seven years although we are 104 years older. It was founded by the Rev. Lorenzo Spirali, O.S.A. to provide a seat of Catholic learning in Catholic Cuba. It is the only private university in that nation.

The late Dennis Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia was present for the blessing of the chapel cornerstone in 1944. Other buildings were soon added and classes began on October 4, 1946. Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York laid the cornerstone for the new library and recently returned to help celebrate the university's tenth anniversary.

Eight Schools

Originally chartered with six academic schools, two more have been added. They are: The School Philosophy and Letters, The School of Education, The School of Law and Social Sciences—with degrees in Public, Consular and Diplomatic Law, the School of Business Administration, the School of Arts, and the School of Economics. When new buildings insured space a School of Engineering and a School of Architecture were added.

The seal of the University of Saint Thomas of Villanova, our Cuban counterpart, is here shown flanked, on the left, by the university library and, at right, the campus chapel.

Expansion

Eleven students were graduated in the first class including were graduated in 1953; the student body is now numbered in the thousands. Not unlike our own Villanova, this Latin counterpart is expanding greatly. Its buildings are modern, Spanish in design but retain much Old World charm with rounded arches and shaded patios.

From its founding, Santo Tomas has published a year book, Villanueva, and the student paper is called Quibu. There are also other specialized student publications. Although the university is about haif coed, a comprehensive sports program is operative including basketball, touch football, baseball and even squash. The school teams have as their mascot the Bulldog.

Let's Trade Students

Having a foreign counterpart is fairly rare among universities yet very little has been said here at Villanova concerning our sister school with whom we share so much in common. Indeed, here is an excellent opportunity for the establishment of a student exchange program, one which would be uniquely Villanovan in every aspect.

The U.S. carries on more trade with Cuba than either England or France; certainly we have common interests. The nearness of Havana, less than an hour from Miami, makes transportation much less a question than the current, popular but expensive European exchange programs. St. Thomas also has a summer school which might be used with, or in lieu of a full-year program. The various details would have to be outlined by the administrations involved but there is definitely much that could be gained by such a program.

Fashionable Flu the Rage In the U. S.

Sharing chief billing in the newspapers this past week, together with Queen Elizabeth, is that ambiguous pest, the Asian flu. Everyone you know seems to be either coming down with it or slowly convalescing. One of the chief attractions in concontracting the 'bug' are the numerous and interesting remedies offered by the infirmary. One freshman was noticed carryin gfour different kinds of pills, a bottle of purple cough medicine, and tw obottles of drops for, respectively, eyes and nose.

Those Holdouts

Those people — as yet — immuned to the invisible plague are being rather looked down upon as being either disgustingly healthy or having no sensibility. Their remarks on the subject appear to be lacking even elementary humor; inevitably after much boasting they are laid low by the dread malady. Moans and sneezes justly replace the flip phrases.

Another angle to this overweening problem is the suspicions of many faculty members. A rumor hath it that the Villanova Press in Galberry Hall is printing four different doctor's heads on vast orders of notepaper. A reliable source has announced that rates are quite reasonable.

The Remedy

One or two of the local pubs have seized the chance to post signs announcing "Asian Flu Shots—30c, 35c, 40c, 50c."

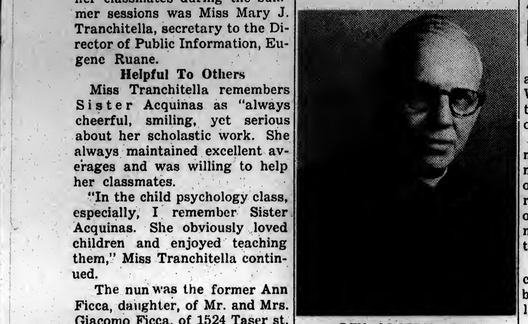
One of the more non-germ posts is the person who insists that you can't know that you have Asian flu. After all, he points out — kindly, it takes two weeks to complete tests for the flu and by that time you're over it. Nothing could be more disheartening than to be told—while hovering this side of death's door—that one does not have the prevailing and fashionable malady. Another expianation might be that you are the possessor of a more exclusive, rarer disease than that affecting the commonalty.

The Ranks of the College Student

Only the more important sections of the community seem to have been inoculated, such as factory workers, police and firemen and hospital staffs. According to this ranking, the genus college student is pretty low on the scale, next—perhaps—to migratory farm workers and wetbacks.

If you haven't contracted this year's epidemic disease, don't be down-hearted by this lack on you rpart. Chin up, you may catch the very next thing going around.

Editors note. The VILLANOVAN apoligizes to senior C and F student Mike Mancusco and junior engineer Frank Lane for the mistake in the installment: "Perspective: the WHY of Education" which appeared on page 3 of last week's issue. Mancusco's commentary was misplaced at the publisher's and Lane's article was printed with Mancusco's name credited to it.



Why walk when you can ride? These Villanovans commandeered a gasoline truck to take their part in the gigantic Villanova rally and send-off for the football team in Kenmore Square. The spirited display held up traffic in Boston for blocks and necessitated city police detouring cars around the square for half an hour.

Father Boyle Attends Annual Catholic Educational Meet

The Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., Vice-President of Academic Affairs for Villanova and President of the Catholic Educational Association of Pennsylvania, recently returned from the 37th annual convention of the C.E.A.P., held this year at Marywood College, Scranton, Pa.

The convention, which convened on Oct. 16 and closed on the 18th, had for its general theme "An Evaluation of the Potential Resources of Catholic Education in the State of Pennsylvania."

The organization and coordination of the convention was under the direction of the local chairman, Rt. Rev. Msgr. John Maher, Superintendent of Diocesan Schools of Scranton and

REV. JOSEPH BOYLE At Educational Meet

Rev. Thomas F. Reidy, O.S.F.S., Editor of the C.E.A.P. Bulletin, Philadelphia.

Covered in the meetings were topics dealing with the problems involved in elementary, secondary, college and university education. The discussions and lectures included also seminary, special and adult education problems of interest.

A total of approximately 25 separate sessions were offered besides exhibits numbering more than 60.

Former Villanova Nun Dies Trying To Rescue Child

Sister Thomas Aquinas, a member of the order of Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament, was drowned last Thursday as she attempted to save the life of one of her girl pupils in Cleveland.

Sister Thomas Acquinas, a native of South Philadelphia graduated from Villanova University in 1956 with a B.S. in Education degree.

She attended summer classes here before graduating. One of her classmates during the summer sessions was Miss Mary J. Tranchitella, secretary to the Director of Public Information, Eugene Ruane.

Helpful To Others

Miss Tranchitella remembers Sister Acquinas as "always cheerful, smiling, yet serious about her scholastic work. She always maintained excellent averages and was willing to help her classmates.

"In the child psychology class, especially, I remember Sister Acquinas. She obviously loved children and enjoyed teaching them," Miss Tranchitella continued.

The nun was the former Ann Ficca, daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. Giacomo Ficca, of 1524 Taser st. The gkirl victom was Anita Black, 10, of Cleveland.

In Order 20 Years

Sister Thomas, a member of the sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for Indians and Colored People for the last 20 years had been a teacher at Our Lady of the Blessed Sacrament School in the Ohio city for nine years.

Yesterday she was on an outing with the pupils at a park in Benleyville, a suburb. The girl slipped four feet down an embankment into the water. Sister Thomas plunged in after her and reached the child, but both were borne away by the strong current.

Her father, a retired Reading Co. employe, said Sister Thomas was a good swimmer and expressed the belief she was weighed down by her nun's habit.

Attended St. Rita's

Her father said she attended St. Rita's School and was graduated from South Philadelphia High School for Girls at the age of 16.

Villanovans Play At Rosemont

The Social Committee of Rosemont College is presenting a jazz concert, "Jazz In The Rose Bowl," to be held this Sunday from 2 to 5 o'clock at Rosemont. The new Villanovans will be featured. Admission is one dollar per person.

Accounting Society Holds First Meeting

The Accounting Society held its first meeting of the year Oct. 10, at which time, Mr. George Chorba, moderator, announced that he would be assisted in this post by Mr. Alvin Clay.

The new officers, elected last year, were also introduced. They are: Al Jacobs, President, Fran Gray, Vice-president, Frank Miller, Secretary and Al Zimmerman Treasirer.

The meeting, conducted by Gray, in the absence of Al Jacobs, was primarily an organizational one during which committee chairmen were appointed. Also representatives to the society were nominated from the sophomore class.

Chairmen Named

The banquet committee chairman is Lou Minotti and the publicity committee co-chairmen named were Gerry Dougherty and Frank Guarranacia. The latter two will also publish a society newspaper which will contain information of interest to all accounting majors.

Field Trips

The society's educational phase will consist mainly of field trips and conferences. These will familiarize the members with important accounting procedures and manufacturing processes, through observation, lecture and discussion, Jacobs said.

Entertainment will be provided by activities such as the annual accounting banquet, private dances and other functions to be decided at a later date.

WVIL Music Staff Begins New Policies

Like most other university and commercial radio stations, WVIL has recently announced that less emphasis will be placed on rock 'n' roll music this year.

Last year's rock 'n' roll was a major component in the popular music field but this year the record companies are "cutting" less rock 'n roll records and because of this lack, WVIL will present more of the standard popular type of music.

The music department of the campus station will bring the best of popular music to its listening audience.

Summer Work

William Washington, station music director, with his staff, has been working since June of the past summer to organize the present music department.

One of the functions of the music department is to acquire record contracts from the leading record companies of the country. Some of these major companies under contract at present are: Decca, R.C.A. Victor, Capitol, Mercury, Dot, Roulette, A.B.C., Paramount, Columbia, Atlantic, London, Verb, and Liberty.

The records are purchased for a reduced rate through a radio promotion contract.

All music shows are scheduled one week in advance by specific members of the department. Eugene Brochu, junior English major, is responsible for the scheduling of all "light music" shows, particularily "Campus Serenade" which at present can be heard every evening 6 to 6:30.

LC Picks New Moderator, Discusses Eliot Tonight

Mr Raymond S. Burns, English Instructor, has replaced Mr. Joseph Ratigan as moderator of the Ltierary Club, according to club president Joe Kinney.

Mr. Ratigan, also in the English Department, relinquished the position because of personal reasons.

Eliot's 'Quartets'

The new moderator will direct a discussion of the "Four Quartets" of T. S. Eliot tonight after club Secretary Ken Miller presents a brief biography and personal criticism of the modern poet.

The meeting is open to all students and will be held in Seminar 3 in the basement of the library at 8 o'clock.

Those planning to attend tonight's meeting are urged to review the "Quartets" in order to be better prepared to enter into the discussion.

Project Progress

Program Chairman Tom Martinez reminds all club members who intend to contribute to the project by doing research should contact him in 157 Sheehan before picking an American playwright of the post-World War II period.

Martinez stated that George S. Kaufman, Norman Krasma, Maxwell Anderson, John Van Druten and Anita Loos are among some 15 playwrights who have not been picked by a club member.

Library References

Those doing research might be helped by the Best Plays series by editors John Chapman and Louis Kronenberger and Theatre Book of the Year by George Jean Nathan. Both series may be found on the fourth stack level of the library under the general call number: PN 2266.

Membership

Regarding membership, President Kinney stated that the same requirements for joining apply now as at the beginning of the semester. English majors may join and receive a membership card for the $2. semester dues.

Marketing Club To Hold Hayride; Dinner Dance Set

At the last meeting of the Villanova Collegiate Chapter of the American Marketing Association (Marketing Club) the activities for the year were outlined.

Arrangements have been made for a hayride at the Bishop Hallow Farms this Friday. In addition plans have been completed for the dinner dance on Nov. 9. The club will participate in intramural football program, playing under the name of the Terrors.

Magazine Contest

It was further announced that by cooperating with the BUSINESS WHIRL, the Commerce and Finance magazine, a contest has been initiated whereby members may submit manuscripts which, if accepted by the magazine, will be judged and awarded cash prizes for the three most valuable entries.

The aims of the organization this year include a greater emphasis on the activities of the marketing student and his contribution to the school. A more active participation between the club and the downtown American Marketing Association chapter, along with a regular group of speakers, should round out the club's activities for this semester.

150 Members

The club now lists over 150 members but the membership drive is not completed. Prospective members are urged to attend one of the regular 10:30 Thursday morning meetings, or contact one of the following officers: Joe McHugh, President; Dick Poli, Vice-President; Jim Speitel, Program Chairman; Bill Bonner, Treasurer; Frank Pension, Secretary; or Archie Whyte, Student Council Representative.

RING FITTINGS

Ring chairman Don McNelis announces that junior rings are almost completed but will require a final fitting. Tomorrow, Thursday, will be the only day rings will be fitted prior to delivery.

Fittings will take place in the Villanovan office, second floor Dougherty Hall, from 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Juniors who wish prompt delivery must have this final fitting, McNelis added.

7th Catholic Youth Week Observed

The Rev. Norbert Whitley, O.S.A., Villanova Chaplain, has announced that the Seventh Annual Catholic Youth Week will be observed next week-Oct. 27 through Nov. 3.

This Sunday marks the feast of Christ the King and is also National Youth Communion Sunday. Father Whitley asks as many Villanovans as possible to receive Holy Communion on that day.

Rain, Mud During Boston Weekend Fail To Halt Mass Invasion of Saturated VU Student Body; Unique 'Snake Dance' Stops Traffic For Blocks

There's a rather apprehensive look on the face of Coach Frank Reagan as he prepares to board the bus that carried the team to Boston College's Alumni Field, as if he had a premonition that defeat was in store for his squad.

Mud was the order of the day, and this Villanova Wildcat finds out the hard way. He got a face full of mud, but managed to down an Eagle who almost made away with a Billy Magee pass.

These students turned their back on the Hotel Kenmore for just a few seconds to obligingly pose for the VILLANOVAN photographers, as they awaited the football team's exit from the hotel.

Here's a view of the jam-packed Villanova stands during the rainy battle on Alumni Field. Protected by umbrellas, cardboard cartons, newspapers and what-have-you, the spirited travellers maintained a booming crescendo of noise throughout the game.

This hapless cab driver found himself in the midst of the spirited Villanova rally in Kenmore Square on Saturday morning. C'mon now, fellows, you can't take that home as a souvenir.

Not all the drama of the ball game took place on the field. Big Gene O'Pella (84) and center Vince Cheverini (53), two of the Wildcats' stars in the loss, pause for a well-deserved rest. Behind O'Pella, Villanova's All-American tackle candidate, Don Luzzi, watches the game anxiously, wishing he could be in there playing.

They may not have ridden in style, but these Villanova juniors had an unusual trip to Boston to say the least. Clad in straw cowboy hats marked with a big blue "V", they made the 300 mile trip in a rented truck. The above picture shows them parking behind the team bus in Kenmore Square, preparing to depart for the stadium.

U. S. Foreign Service Exam Offered to Students Dec. 9

The Department of State has announced that the annual Foreign Service Examination will be given on Dec. 9, 1957, in approximately 65 centers throughout the United States. This examination is open to all who meet the age and citizenship requirements.

A number of the successful Foreign Service candidates will take up duties at one of the 275 American Embassies, Legations, and Consulates around the world. At these posts, which range in size from the large missions such as Paris and London to the one-man posts such as Perth, Australia, the new officer may expect to do a variety of tasks, including administrative work, political, economic, commercial and labor reporting, consular duties, and assisting and protecting Americans and United States property abroad.

Other new officers will be assigned to the Department's headquarters in Washington, where they will engage in research or other substantive work, or in many administrative tasks which are essential to the day-to-day conduct of our foreign affairs.

Officers Visit Campus

To explain fully these opportunities in the Foreign Service which await the qualified young men and women of the United States, Foreign Service officers will visit a number of colleges and universities this fall.

In order to make known the diversified needs of the Department of State and Foreign Service, these officers will talk not only with promising students of history, political science and international relations, but also with those who are specializing in economics, foreign languages, and business and public administration.

Written, Oral Exams

Those successful in the one-day written examination, which tests the candidate's facility in English expression, general ability and background, as well as his proficiency in a modern foreign language, will subsequently be given an oral examination by panels which will meet in regional centers throughout the United States.

Those candidates who pass the oral test will then be given a physical examination and a security investigation. Upon completion of these phases the candidate will be nominated by the President as a Foreign Service officer of Class 8, Vice Consul and Secretary in the Diplomatic Service.

To be eligible to take the examination, candidates must be at least 20 years of age and under 31, as of Oct. 28, 1957 and must also be American citizens of at least 9 years' standing. Although a candidate's spouse need not be a citizen on the date of the examinations, citizenship must have been obtained prior to the date of the officer's appointment.

Good Salaries

Starting salaries for successful candidates range from $4750 to $5350 per year depending upon the age, experience, and family status of the individual. In addition, insurance, medical, educational and retirement benefits are granted, as well as annual and sick leaves.

Application forms may be obtained by writing to the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, Department of State, Washington, 25, D.C.

Glory In Defeat

By JACK CURTIN

Boston is a fairly pleasant little town, but Boston in a pouring rain is not quite so nice and Boston in the rain when your football team loses cannot really be classified as the place in the world. The thoughts of the thousand-plus Villanovans who wended their weary way home from the Wildcat's fifth game of the season last weekend probably han along these lines, because no matter how much fun you have, it's mighty nice to win.

But there is glory even in defeat, and we'd lige to take note here of a couple of guys who sloshed through the rain-soaked Boston College Field last Saturday in mud-stained Villanova Contumes and who didn't get too much notice in the newspapers because they don't talk about you when you lose, but who deserve a lot more credit than they got.

They were a couple of fellows named Luzzi and O'Pella.

An Outstanding Pair

This is not meant to discredit the play of Ed Michaels, who may have played one of the finest games of his career; or Vince Cheverini, who blocked the kick that gave Villanova a safety in the final seconds of the game; or Bill Craig, who led a valiant Wildcat goal line stand in the closing minutes of the first half, or any of the other gladiators in white and blue, but, to these eyes, the enormous end the mighty tackle were outstanding.

From the stands, it seemed as though big Gene O'Pella was in on every play. As huge as he is, "Gine" is the easiest man on the field to identify in any game, but he made it even easier in Boston. Just follow the ball and there he was—storming through the Eagle line to make a key tackle, receiving a pass, blocking for the backfield. Still suffering from a shoulder injury sustained in the Virginia Tech game, O'Pella was one of the finest ballplayers on the field.

The big story however, was that of a guy who only played for part of the first half; and while he was a teriffic performer, the outstanding thing about his efforts was that he was even on the field in the first place.

Even On Crutches

When Don Luzzi, the Main Liners' All-American tackle candidate, was severely injured in the Tech battle and Hospitalized, doctors said he'd be lucky to make the Boston trip, let alone play. Luzzi told the Philadelphia newspapers that he'd be there and ready to play—and he was, for as one student put it, "Luz would play if he had to do itoncrutches."

The burly Wildcat was hampered by his injury, and you could almost feel the pain in the stands as he slowly rose from the ground after each play., but hewas still a solid rock in the defensive line. For his display of pure courage, Luzzi received two tributes—one a roaring recognition from the stands when his injury finally forced him to leave the game, and the other from a B.C. player.

. . . but They Conquered

An Eagle lineman told one of the Villanova student managers that "he (Luzi) is the best tackle I've ever played against. We read in the paper that he's hurt so we figured we could run right over him, but he still held us.z He's really something."

And these are just a couple of the stories to come out of Boston this past weekend. There are hundreds more, and some of them are probably every bit as interesting; but when you think about it, you can tell the whole story in a few words, with a slight assist from a fellow named Julius Caesar—

We came, we saw, but unfortunately, they conquered.

THROUGH THE MUD

Fullback Jack Devereaux, almost obscured by an Eagle end, darts in to intercept one of Don Allard's bullet passes and halt another B.C. threat. Devereaux intercepted another pass later in the game.

Villanova quarterback Jim Grazione is about to be thrown for a loss as he goes back to attempt a pass on muddy Alumni Field in Boston during Saturday's 12-9 loss to the Beantown Eagles.

McNamor Wins Intramural Cross Country Meet In 9:38.4

On Monday, Oct. 14, at 4:30 the annual intra-mural cross country track meet was held. The two and a half mile course covered the perimeter of the campus.

Richard McNamar, a frosh was not pressed at any time, winning 9:38.4. Taking an early lead McNamar led the pack throughout the entire race.

Tie For Second

At the half-way mark McNamar opened his lead to a quarter of a mile and finished the same distance ahead of the pack. He was followed by the double combination of George Emma and Ken Harrison who crossed the finish line in a perfect tie for second.

The first ten men to finish were: Richard McNamar, (tie) George Emma and Ken Harrison, Bob Goudlock, Dom Falini, John Constanzo, Bill Cianfrani, George Raveling, George Reider, Norm Huddy and Tom Brennan.

On the same day the first annual intra-mural swimming meet was held. The meet consisted of both swimming and diving events.

Swim Meet

Among the contestants John McCarthy, Frank Dunn and Bill Cassin stood out notably. McCarthy proved himself to be quite proficent at both swimming and diving.

The events were 50-yard freestyle: Frank Dunn (26.0), Bill Cassin, Harvey; 50 yard backstroke: McCarthy (37.5), Moariaty Hogan; Diving: McCarthy (21 points), (tie) Sutton, Harvey; 75 yard medley: Dunn, Bourne, Moariaty; 50 yard breaststroke: Dunn, McCarthy. Sutton; 50 yard butterfly: Harvey, Moariaty, McCarthy; 100 yard freestyle: Cassin, Bourne, Keathing; 200 yard medley relay: Class of "61" (McCarthy, Dunn, Bourne, Cassin); 200-yard freestyle: D.P.M. (Rinkac, Rumbarger, Shea, Rodney).

Intramural Council Lists Appointments

Intramural Council Director Ed Geisz has made several new appointments among his student staff. In addition to the selection of junior Jim Corey as Department President, Mr. Geisz has delegated to Pete O'Brien, junior C&F, the office of Commissioner of Sports.

Also appointed was a publicity committee consisting of Don Phillips, Bob Fortier, Bruce McCready, and Frank Bonner. The general office staff of the Council will be Bill Vincent, Don Phillips, and Bruce McCready. The Council meets every Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in the Intramural Office in Alumni Hall.

Committe President Jim Corey announced that this year's swimming meet, held on the 10th of October, had several innovations. Among these were two relay contests between different campus organizations: the 200 yard relay freestyle, and the 150 yard relay consisting of 50 yds.

The Council is also contemplating a lifesaving instruction program for the nurses to be held some week-day morning from 9:00-11:00 in the morning. Furthermore, on the tentative list is a Spring volley ball league. The Council is attempting to locate feasible court space for this event.

Another new project being discussed is the lending of sports equipment to prefect of the various dorms which the students may take out when they so desire.

Tryouts for the Villanova University Swimming Team will be held tommorow in the University Pool. These tryouts will be held from 9:30 A.M. to 6:00 P.M. for the convenience of anyone who wishes to try out.

By FRANK FLEMING

Despite driving rain which threatened postponement of the contest, 12,000 people-including more than 1,700 Villanovans who made a 300 mile trip to Beantown to cheer "their Wildcats" watched Boston College squeeze out a 12-9 victory over the charges of Frank Reagan in B.C.'s new Alumni Stadium.

Still licking their wounds sustained as results of battles with Virginia Tech and the flu, the Wildcats did not look like the same team that only a month before received national recognition by holding a powerful Baylor team to a seven point victory and out-playing these demons of the southwest in everything but the score.

Several Hurt

Captain and All-American candidate, Don Luzzi, was still recovering from a badly bruised leg which hospitalized him early last week and played only part of the game. Guards Eddie Michaels and Mike DeLucia along with big Gene O'Pella were all still nursing injuries sustained in the Virginia Tech tilt. Several other Wildcat stalwarts had been on the disabled list all last week due to the effects of the flu, among them stellar fullback Jack Deveraux who was confined to bed with the virus until game time Saturday.

B.C. Scores Early

It was a weak Villanova team on which the Eagles scored in the opening minutes of the game. Villanova had received the opening kickoff, but on the second play from scrimmage Davey Parr's fumble was caught by B.C. tackle Leon Bennett who arried it 22 yards to the V.U. eight yard line. Four plays later Boston's All-Amerian Candidate, Don Allard, completed a 20-yard touchdown pass to Jim Colcough.

Being on the short side of a 6-0 score so early in the ball game did not weaken the spirits of the already physically weak Villanova team. Jim Grazione, the former South Catholic star who has paced the Wildcats' offense all season, returned Boston Colleges kickoff 76 yards for a six-pionter.

Rick Sapienza's point after touchdown attempt was good and, still with only several minutes of the first period gone by, Villanova took the lead 7-6.

Michaels Recovers

Despite opportunities, the score remained the same as both teams retired to the dressing rooms at half time. Neither team had been able to capitalize on the many opportunities afforded them since the initial scoring plays.

Villanova's Eddie Michaels had recovered two fumbles for the Wildcats, but neither of these breaks could be turned into scoring plays. B.C. also failed to take advantage of several changes. One came in the last seconds of the first half when a touchdown was called back on the Eagles, both teams being off-sides on the play.

Taking the third period kickoff the Eagles moved the ball 67 yards in ten plays to score their second touchdown of the contest. Alan Miller scored for Boston on a two yard plunge. Again B.C.'s extra point attempt was no good, but the Eagles led 12-7. Villanova managed to get into Boston territory once in both the third and fourth periods.

Magee, Grazione Took Varied Paths to Glory

The football careers of Bill Magee and Jim Grazione, despite their intertwining, offer a marked contrast. Forming a quarterback twosome that has been called the East's finest, the pair are examples of the disparate individuals that comprise a college football team.

Magee should be a source of inspiration to high school athletes who fail to attract hordes of college scouts with scholarships-in-hand who are at the doorsteps of hundreds of schoolboys every year.

Billy never had to make a choice of schools when graduation time came at LaSalle High in Philadelphia. There was no bidding for services on the part of various colleges.

Best In League

Magee had been a better than fair quarterback for the Little Explorers of LaSalle. Truth to tell, some said he was the best passer in the Catholic League. But, he had no size. And sad though it may be, size is a prime requisite for a college gridder.

Quarterbacks are especially expected to be rangy, so that they can spot their receivers over the heads of the linemen blocking in front of them. Magee stood just 5--9 and, although he was rather stockily built at 165 lbs., he did not present an imposing sight under center.

Footing his own bill, Magee enrolled at Villanova four years ago. Ostensibility, an education was the lone thought in his mind. But, Bill sincerely believed that he could play college football and he set out to prove his point.

In that class which entered Villanova in the fall of 1954, there were two quarterbacks who came to the Main Line with outstanding credentials. Tim Etter had been outstanding for Hammond High in Munster, Indiana. Art DeStephano won All-State honors as a touchdown-throwing quarterback at Newton High in Massachusetts.

But in the long run, Magee proved the best of the lot.

Best of Lot

Not at first, of course, but eventually the day came when Magee even proved better than more experienced quarterbacks who were throwing the football for Villanova when Billy was only a senior at LaSalle.

Before half the season was over in Magee's sophomore year, he had jumped ahead, not only of his fellow sophs, but also game-tried John Ferroulo, John Lammers and Ronnie Gorton.

Although Villanova's grid fortunes had yet to climb out of the depths, Magee was impressive in losing causes. When the Wildcats rode to the Southwest to meet Houston, he first drew real attention.

Against a line which refused to budge so that the Wildcats could get their running game operating, Billy early decided to stick to chucking. He threw long, he threw short. Houston sportswriter dubbed him "Billy the Kid" for his exploits.

Last year Magee really matured, as the confidence he acquired playing regularly made him a better passer, and above all, a better play caller.

His field generalship led the Wildcats to their first winning season in four, 5-4 against top-notch competetion.

On a percentage basis, Magee was the best passer in the East last year, completing 47 of 86 for 648 yards. That latter figure placed him fifth in the East in passing yardage.

Graz Was Different

Jim Grazione, the other half of Villanova's quarterback brigade, and the one currently deservedly drawing the headlines for his outstanding play, came to the university under vastly different circumstances than did Magee.

Grazione was one of the finest high-school athletes in this country. In his senior year at Southeast Catholic High in Philadelphia, he received mention on the All-American Scholastic squads for both football and basketball.

Offeres from schools in every sector of the U.S. poured into the Grazione house. It took a bookkeeping job to handle the various scholarships applications.

Ultimately, Graz chose Villanova. Neither he nor the university are sorry that Jim made that decision.

Tse freshmen team which Jim quarterbacked in 1955 was the best in the school's history, and was the best of a large and talented group of future Wildcats.

Tall yet solid at 6-2, 190, Grazione looked the part of the accomplished quarterback, and he was.

In these days of limited substitution, a team must have two units to win. Jim perfectly fit into the picture as a soph last year. Magee had charge of the first unit, and Jim the second.

A Good Ball-Carrier

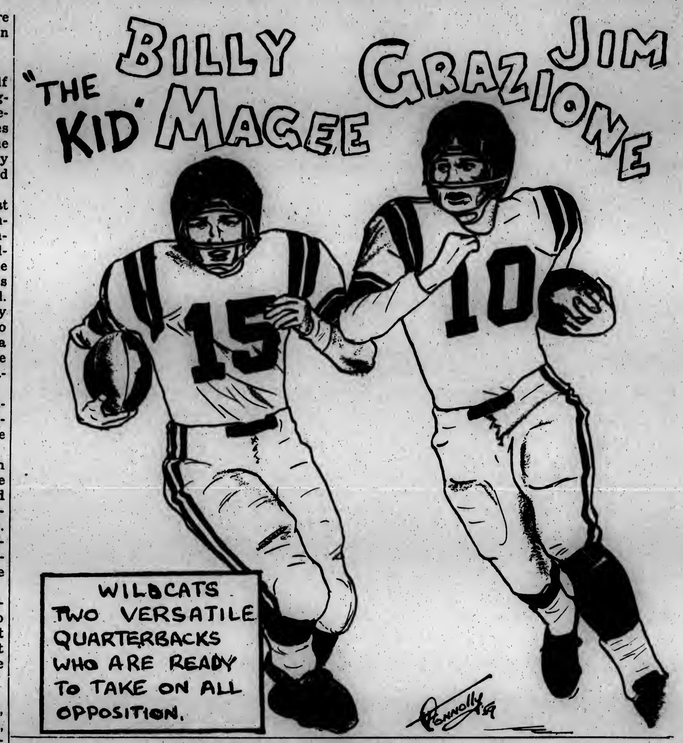
Whereas, with his lack of size, Magee seldom runs with the ball, Grazione is as good a ball-carrier as he is a passer. He has that just-right combination of speed, agility and open-field sense to run the option plays and roll-outs with rare success.

Grazione ran the ball 21 times in 1956, gaining 130 yards, for a 6.2 average.

Off his fine work in the opening-game loss to Baylor, Grazione was switched to the first unit when the Wildcats played Furman a week later. Since then, he has been nothing short of sensational.

Grazione was responsible for all the touchdowns in the 20-0 win over Furman. He hit Rick Sapienza and Tony Varrechione with TD passes of 35 and 38 yards, respectively, and scored himself from the two to climax a 77-yard drive which he had sparked with his accurate throwing and speed running.

Against Florida State, Graz continued his steller play. The twinkler that day was a 61-yard bulls-eye to Spaienza for a score. Jim waited until Rick had inched behind the defender before the threw, leading him perfectly.



Reagan Has Both

Grazione gave the Wildcats a temporary lead in the BC game on aturSday with a 76-yard kick-off return, the first of his college career.

Last week's NCAA statistics showed Grazione in eighth-place in total offense in the nation, 466 yards on 76 plays.

All the while, Magee continues to handle the QB duties for the second unit. The situation is a fortunate one for Villanova.

Most teams feel lucky if they have one top-calibre field-general on whom to call. The Wildcats have two, and Coach Frank Reagan considers himself right fortunate that he has both the player no-one wanted and the one they all sought.

Revenge-Seeking Wildcats Play Indiana Away Saturday

This Saturday the much travelled Villanova Wildcats, who will be making their fourth away appearance of the season, will encounter the Fighting Hoosiers of Indiana.

Frank Reagan's squad will be out to avenge the 14-7 defeat they received from the Hoosiers two years ago. That game featured fine defensive play as both teams made several goal line stands.

The injury-ridden Cats are also seeking their third victory of the season while the Hoosiers are still looking for win number one. However, Indina has lost to Michigan State, Notre Dame, Iowa and Ohio taSte, all nationally ranked powerhouses.

Coach Suspended

To go along with their murdersome schedule, Indina has suffered heavily through last June's graduation exercises and through the suspension of new head coach Phil Dickens by the Big Ten for illegal recruiting. The installation of a new offense and a lack of experienced manpower are making things difficult for Bob Hicks, who has taken over as head coach during Dickens' one-year suspension.

This year Hicks has been building his team around sophomores and returning lettermen. However, 20 of last years 38 letermen have graduated.

The biggest losses from last year's team are Chick Cichwski, one of the Conferences' best passers; center Joe Tmstutz, fullback Bob Fee, tackle Bob Sobczak, and Brad Bomba, the Big Ten's leading pass receiver last year.

Although Bomba is not back this year, the end position is one of the strongest on the squad. The left flank is being filled by experienced Norm Craft, two year letterman Delnor Gales, and Big Ten high and low hurdles champion Willie May. Soph Bob Corrigan and service returnee Tony Aloiso are the two to pright ends.

Experienced Tackle

Mike Rabold, the Hoosiers' most experienced lineman, is their top tackle. Ray Slampyak and Sam Congie, both of whom suffered from injuries most of last year, are the two other returning lettermen at tackle. The other leading tackles are Sophomores Bob DiMarco and Wayne Brusewitz.

Although there are four returning lettermen at the guard position, it is still wide open. Lettermen Don Howell and Tom Cousineau along with soph Elvin Caldwell have been seeing most of the action on the left side. However, Don Noone and Joe Moore, two reserves who never got off the bench last year, are battling it out for the starting job.

Top man at center this year is John Razmic. He also didn't get into a single game in 1956 but has been seein ga lot of action this year. In back of him are Joe DeFillippo, Ray Plain, and soph Fred Unger.

Backfield Key

The key to Indiana's success the rest of this year lies in its backfield. Their backs must further undergo the big change from T-football to Dickens' famous Side Saddle-T, which is really a modified Single Wing.

Wildcat Harriers Lose to LaSalle In Second Meet

Cach Jim Tupenny's cross-country team dropped their second straight meet to a powerful LaSalle team by an 18-37 score on the losers course, last Wednesday, October 16.

LaSalle, now 2-1 for the year, garnered the first four places with Earl Jefferson finishing in front with a time of 27:31. Closely behind him were teammates Jim Sumner, Tommy Lynaugh, and Ed McCabe.

Villanova, minus the services of Olympian Ron Delany, couldn't manage to stay with the LaSalle barriers. Delany, who has been ill with the flu, was unable to run after spending three days in a Philadelphia hospital.

Another key man who has been injured is Jimmy Blackburn, who broke his arm prior to the start of the season. Blackburn, also runs on the regular track team for Coach Jim "Jumbo" Elliott, and is expected to be completely recuperated by the time track season arrives.

The Wildcats Bob Godesky was their first man to cross the finish line. Godesky kept a steady pace throughout the run to cop a fifth place.

The Villanova harriers have two major meets to look forward to; on October 30, they tangle with Seton Hall in the home stadium. The "Orangemen" are expected to be strong. Then eighteen days later the Wildcats travel to New York City for the IC4A Cross-country Championships. By that time it is hoped that the full team will be in to phealth.

PIGSKIN BALLET

Teams Near Halfway Mark In Intramural Competition

As the Mendel football league approaches the half-way mark in the season, the Mendel Maulers seem to be proving their superiority over the other teams in the league. At the present time they are the only team which remains undefeated. However, very exciting games, drawing both ire and blood, were shown to all interested spectators. The latter half of the season will show not only the winning team but a lot more competitive football, both defensively and offensively.

Some of the most recent scores show the Mendel Maulers downing the Austin Devil-Dogs 15-0, and then squeezing out a victory over the previously unbeaten Clowns by a score of 6-0. This game, between two unbeaten teams, showed more tense, action-packed play than any other game in the Intramurals so far. Prior to this game, the Clowns defeated Tripodi in a close one, 14-6. This was the first team to score against the Clowns powerful defense.

In other exciting games recently, Joe's Jets shut out the Malcolms by a score of 14-0. The Hawks defeated Jizz A.C. on first downs by a count of 3-1. In this game, neither team was able to crack through the other's line for a tally.

With the Mendel Maulers undefeated and hoping to finish that way, some very good action is expected in upcoming games.

The East Wingers, strong contenders for intramural honors took over undisputed possession of first place in the 2:30 Division of the Austin league while the Rat Pack with a 3-1 record leads the A Division of the 5:30 league. The Aces in the B Division pace their division with a 3-0 slate.

The East Wingers from second floor Sullivan Hall appear to be the favorites in the 2:30 section. With quarterback Mike Lombardo, Bob Best and Roy Mathias, "The Wingers" have rolled over all opposition to date. Their latest victim was the previously undefeated Barons. Outstanding linemen for the Wingers have been Pete Steiber and Hank Frendo at ends and Jack Reagan, Jim Risceo and Skip Hanshaw. The East Wingers have a 3-0 slate.

The Barons with a 2-1 record and Mr. Angeline's Music Lovers who finally won a game by forfeit follow the "Wingers", with a 1-2 record. The Terrors, 0-2, are in last place. The new schedule for this league will be posted on Monday. All teams in the league will follow the new schedule.

In the A division of the 5:30 league, the Rat Pack with a 3-1 record are in first place followed by Emanon A C, 1-1, and three teams with 1-2 records; Dingus A.C, the Villans, and the Blue Raiders. The Austin Cats, 0-1-1, are in last place. The Rat Pack defeated the Blue Raiders 7-0 however, the Raiders rebounded to defeat Dingus A C by the same score.

In B division, the Aces 3-0 show the way with the Delurey Devils 1-0 close behind. The Aces defeated the 69er's 26-0 while Kell's Angels swamped the the Mendeliers 15-0.

Following the Aces in B division the 69ers, Kell's Angels and the Trotters.

RING FITTINGS

Ring Chairman Don McNellis announces that junior rings are almost completed but will require a final fitting. Tomorrow, Thursday, will be the only day rings will be fitted prior to delivery.

Delivery of rings is scheduled for shortly before Thanksgiving. The Ring Committee believe that this year's ring morks an improvement over last year's design.

Fr. Donnellon Joins Presidents' Drive For Public Aid to Higher Education

higher education should be the concern of every responsible citizen. It is for this reason that we are endeavoring to implement locally the advertising campaign now being conducted nationally by the Advertising Council and sponsored by the Council for Financial Aid to Education.

Enrollments To Double

"Colleges and universities in the United States now enroll an average of three out of ten college-age youth. The proportion is rising with the increase in our college-age population and enrollments are expected to double by 1967.

"Locally—as well as nationally—the situation is critical. Our cal and professional school face colleges, universities, technologiserious problems of oxertaxed facilities, shortage of teachers and inadequate salary scales. Increased financial support from all sources must be forthcoming. Without this, it will be impossible to maintain the quality of higher education, characteristic of local institutions, let alone make any provision for expansion.

Advertising Council

"We are confident that wider public knowledge of the financial plight of our colleges and universities will insure the support they need. The Advertising Council's campaign in behalf of higher education is making a major contribution to the creation of a better understanding of this situation.

"We welcome the cooperation of business, industry, and the information media in this important public service undertaking."

Villanova Loses Third

Villanova's other score came with seconds left in the game. Vince Chaverini broke through the line and blocked a Boston punt which rolled into and out of the Eagles end zone for an automatic safety and two points for Villanova. Had a Villanova ballplayer fallen on the ball in the end zone, it would have been a Wildcat touchdown, but no player was around the ball before it went out-of-bounds and was declared dead.

'Opera Classica' To Hear Marie Callas This Evening

Opera Classica will feature Bellini's "Norma" with Maria Callas this evening, at 7:30, in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Marie Callas makes her first appearance of the season on the Angel recording of "Norma." The members of Opera Classica saw Callas in this role in Philadelphia last year.

ANTHONY ANGELINE
O.C. Moderator

The opera's story in brief is that Norma is the high priestess of the Druid Temple of Esus located in Gaul in the First Century B.C. during the Roman occupation.

She is secretly married to Pollione, the Roman proconsul, thus violating her sacred vows. Pollione tires of Norma and falls in love with Adalgisa begging the latter to return with him to Rome.

Norma finds out and decides to kill him, their two children and destroy herself on a funeral pyre. She doesn't go through with her plan.

Instead she urges her people to fight relentlessly against the Romans. She backs down on this and confesses to her people that she has desecrated her vows and must be sacrificed. Norma repeates her love to Pollione who is so moved that he joins her in death on the funeral pyre.

Nursing Dean at State Meet

Sister Mary Alma, Dean of the Villanova Nursing Division and Miss Harriet Murphy, an instructor in public health, attended a meeting this week called by Dr. Berwyn F. Mattison, Secretary of Health for the State of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Mattison's purpose for this meeting was to discuss the nursing programs of the various universities and colleges which prepare nurses for beginning positions in public health nursing.

Field and Class Work

The public health program of Villanova requires that the student nurses of the basic degree program and the graduate nurses of the general program take courses in several public health subjects and do field work in the public health area before graduating. This experience prepares the students for beginning positions in public health, in addition to giving them a broad background applicable to other fields of nursing.

Among those present at the meeting were the Deans of Nursing of Duquesne, Mt. Mercy, University of Pennsylvania and Villa Marie.

SEA to Send Two to Area Convention

Richard Dressler, President of the Student Education Association announced that John Hughes, Treasurer, and Jim Fox, Secretary, will attend the annual convention of the Southeastern District of the P.S.E.A. on Saturday, Nov. 2, at Ridley Township Senior High School.

All members of the S.E.A. chapter of Villanova are invited to attend the business sessions.

Round Table Held

On Oct. 16, the executive committee of the Student Education Association of Villanova University held a round-table discussion of future organizational affairs.

It was stated that the publishing of a monthly news letter covering the various routine committee reports would eliminate the time-consuming reports during the monthly meetings.

Executive policy concerning the constitution and procedure of adding amendments was discussed by the committee.

Amendments Discussed

This brought about a discussion of three proposed amendments which will be presented at the general assembly at the next general business meeting on Nov. 5. The amendments are (1.) Authorization for expenditures (2.) Permanency of the membership committee (3.) Compulsory attendance of the membership committee.

Joseph Kulick, Chairman of the membership committee, also announced that membership is still available and that anyone interested in joining the S.E.A. may contact him.

Student Council Views

By PAT NICHOLSON

With the one of the finest weekends of our college life memory, the Student Council is faced with a very serious decision. Last year it was the general consensus that the Student Council was not organized or functioning as well as possible. Consequently early in September of this year a committee was formed by the Student Council ti investigate our present constitution and by-laws and to make recommendations concerning their revision.

After a study of a great many other school's Student Government Constitutions, it was decided that many changes were advisable to assist in the continued growth of a successful and active Student Government Program at Villanova University. Two weeks ago the committee presented its proposed new constitution to the Council. Tonight, a large part of the proposed constitution will be voted upon.

Undoubtedly the most discussed Article of the Constitution will be the powers and Duties of the Student Council. Proposed Sections 2 and 5 will make the Student Council the student governing body of all undergraduate students of Villanova University . . . and Consequently all organizations recognized by the Dean of Student Activities will be subject to this Constitution and to all University Administration approved rullings of the Student Council. An Amendment to be proposed tonight will impower the Student Council to take disciplinary action against any organization which violates this Constitution or the Council rulings.

The new constitution proposes a different method of electing Junior and Senior Class division representatives. Instead of being elected by the entire class as in the past, they will be elected only by the class members in their particular division. The proposed constitution reclassifies all committees and calls for the introduction of new Student-Faculty Committee which will discuss all problems of an academic or educational nature.

The biggest innovation of a bi-cameral legislative system. It provides for a separation of power between the Student Senate, a group of 15 elerted students, and the Student Congress, the composition of which is almost the same as our present Student Council.

The proposed by-laws are very extensive in nature and are designed to greatly assist in the administration of this Constitution and all Council rulings and recommendations, in the growth of student government and student leadership programs, and in the continued development of Student-Administration, Student-Faculty, and Student-Alumni cooperation for the best interests of Villanova University,

A & S Assembly

Rev. Robert Sullivan O.S.A., Dean of Arts and Sciences, has announced that there will be an assembly of all teachers and students in the division of Arts and Sciences Wednesday, Nov. 6 at 4:30 p.m. in the C&F auditorium.

The matter of the assembly will consist of an illustrated talk by Dr. Chester R. Longwell, on the subject of "Geology in Liberal Education."

Belle Masque's 'Saint Joan' Set to Open On Nov. 13

By JOE WHEELER
News Editor

Belle Masque Dramatic Society players entered into the final week of rehearsal today in preparation for the Wednesday, Nov. 13, opening of George Bernard Shaw's Saint Joan.

The show, set to begin at 8:30 in the field house, will have a five-night stand, running from Nov. 13 through 17.

The three principal characters in this production of Saint Joan are Claire Sigerson, who played Mrs. Antrobus in The Skin of Our Teeth, as the peasant girl made saint, Joan, Norm Peer, who had minor parts in the past, as the weak willed Dauphin and Dick Dressler as Joan's arch enemy, the Bishop of Beauvais.

Court of Chinon

Shaw first introduces us to Joan as a foul smelling farm girl who forces her way from a remote military garrison into the decadent Court of Chinon. She does this with a mixture of peasant shrewdness and natural holiness.

Joan burst upon the strife-ridden court of Charles VII like the proverbial bombshell. The Dauphin, a rather foppish character, attempts to hide his identity but to no avail. Once again she forces a man to go against his will and in the process Joan fashions a backbone for the Dauphin. She is put in charge of his ragglety-taggle troops and in subsequent scenes molds them into an inspired and somewhat purified army.

After a string of victories she brings the inspired young Charles to the altar of Rheims where he is transformed by the traditional processes into a king in both name and reality.

Joan A Symbol

As tradition has recorded and Shaw interpreted, Joan's many enemies are at work planning to destroy the girl who has become a symbol of the rising French Nationalism. By treachery they bring Joan before a Bishops Court on a charge of heresy. Despite her wit and innocence she is found guilty and the well known fate conferred. As an interesting note the court was later proved to be completely out of its jurisdiction in handing down its verdict.

This play deals with one of the most tragic injustices of human history, but Shaw's dialogue gives it a warm humor and a certain believable air of reality.

Audience Critiques

On Wednesday, opening night, as a critique of the play and performers the cast will appear after the final curtain and with the director, discuss with the audience the flaws, foibles and the dramatic aspects of the production. This is to enable the faculty and cast to discuss the work together to the obvious educational benefit from such a

Annual Senior Prom, Dinner Dance Set for Feb. 14, 15

Juniors Set Plans For '57 Orphans' Fete

By CLEM BIRCH

Vic Ludmerer, president of the Class of 1959, has named the chairmen of the Orphans' Weekend, and annual activity of the junior class, to be held this year the weekend of Dec. 15.

Overall chairman of the weekend will be Matt Brennan, vice-president of the class. He has scheduled the usual events to include: the Charity Ball, on Friday night; the orphans' outing Saturday and a party at the orphanage the following Monday.

For Johnnies

All activities are for the benefit of the boys of the St. John's Orphanage and, with the exception of the party, are open to all Villanovans.

Arrangements for the Charity Ball will be under the chairmanship of Al Dumbrowski, junior IA major, who has stated that he will announce his committee soon. The theme is to be Christmas, but its treatment will remain secret until the night of the dance.

The collection of contributions for the party and the purchase of gifts will be under Co-Chairmen Gene O'Pella and Gene Paja. They will visit all religion classes prior to the weekend to make the collections.

Tots Get Full Day

The outing on Saturday, highpoint of the weekend for both the students and the Johnnies, will be handled by Brennan. The day's activities will includes: a visit to Santa Claus at a Philadelphia department store, lunch at a downtown restaurant and a movie in the afternoon. Contacts have been made with various stores, but none has been chosen as yet, the decision pending on which store can best accommodate the large group expected.

Richard Maltby and his orchestra, a 16-piece musical outfit that is recognized as one of the top bands in the country, have been signed by the Class of 1958 for the Senior Prom, "The Belle Air Ball," to be held on Feb. 14.

Maltby's unit is known for its fine style of danceable music, and was considered perfect by the seniors in light of the type of promenade they are planning.

FRED LEISENTRITT
Prom Co-Chairman

Fred Leisentritt and Dave Ogle, who have been appointed co-chairmen of the affair, state "that the general theme of the Ball will not be disclosed until the week before the great upper class weekend."

Completely New Idea

They also state that the "dance itself will be changed from the basic idea of the Villanova Prom" and will be so completely different that its effect will alter the conception of every Prom following it.

For the seniors, the following night, Feb. 15, will be taken up by the unforgettable Senior Dinner-Dance.

Gresh Returns

Chairman Joe D'Aquila has revealed to the VILLANOVAN that Charlie Gresh (last year's band) has once more been signed to blend with the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

Gene Fogarty, who has been appointed chairman of the entire weekend, states that plans are being made to accommodate seniors and their dates with a closed Mass on Sunday, Feb. 16.

According to Fogarty, as arrangements appear now, the weekend will be perhaps the best that Villanova has ever seen.

This weekend will mark the final fling for the Class of 1958 in its undergraduate days at Villanova.

Hint: The Belle Air Ball is dated for Valentine's Day.

Sophs Name Band

Gresh to Play for Cotillion

Charlie Gresh and his Philadelphia society band has been named by the Class of '60 to play for the annual Sophomore Cotillion on Nov. 22, according to John Mulcahy, Chairman of the dance.

The Gresh aggregation played last year for the Class of '58 at the annual Junior Dinner Dance and is noted as one of the top groups in the Philadelphia area.

Theme Revealed

Co-Chairmen of Decorations Ron Dobies and John Halas have stated that the theme of the dance will be "Persian Nights," and that work on the decorations is now underway.

Tickets for sophomores will go on sale next week, according to Ray Rafferty and Paul Iffland, Co-Cairmen of Tickets. Open ticket sales will begin the following week.

Tickets $2.50

The price of all tickets is $2.50 per couple.

The dance will be held as in past years at the field house and the hours will be from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

YOUTH WEEK MASS

A Solemn Votive Mass of the Most Holy Eucharist as a part of National Catholic Youth Week will be celebrated tomorrow morning at 10:30 in the university chapel.

The celebrant will be Rev. James Wenzel, O.S.A., while Rev. Harry Erdlen, O.S.A., will serve as Deacon and Rev. David Duffy, O.S.A., as Sub-Deacon.

Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., will speak at the Mass and the student body is asked to attend.

Youth Display Faith

The week of October 27 - November 3 has been proclaimed Catholic Youth Week at Villanova. Villanovans are asked to pray for divine help in their problems as students, as Catholics and as citizens about to take their places in the world.

A certain week has been set aside so that we may all join our prayers as the Villanova community of students beseeching heaven in concert.

The National Federation of Catholic College Students, as a constituent member of the National Council of Catholic Youth, has undertaken the task of promoting the spiritual exercises commemorating the seventh annual observance of N.C.Y.W.

Here at Villanova we were privileged to have been selected as the host to students from nine educational institutions in the area who made a public profession of faith by participating in a "living rosary," last night in Mendel field.

There has always been much talk among students about the quality of the administration's efforts to help us attain our collegiate goals. This week, being a students' week, we might well ask ourselves about our particular contributions to the commond good. Students are sometimes selfish and self-seeking in their relations with their fellow students and with the school. This week presents an opportunity to work in the contrary direction: we are called to join in prayer that we may better fulfill our lives as students.

Catholic Youth Week is a time for concern for our common aims as students, a time for serious looking ahead, a time for unselfish judgements. It is a time for prayer.

Time For Reflection

In the past six weeks Messrs. Nicholson, Kempf and Whalen have been drafting a new more concrete and efficient body of laws for a stronger Student Council. Its value cannot be decided upon by this paper or by impulsive reaction of the student body, for its true value will be in its actual operation.

But there is one deciding factor — that of mature delineating thought on the constitution on the part of the individual Villanovan. The time has arrived when we all must realize that we are part of the fastest growing universities in the East, one which will undoubtedly be in time of the greatest in the country.

With this thought in mind we must scan with care that base which will detemine how great this university will be.

At this time we ask you, the student body, to judge with adequate justice the Student Senate and Student Congress powers and organization, thereby helping the men that you have chosen as your leaders to make Villanova a mature institution for you while you are here and for all future Villanovans.

A vote of confidence is graciously extended to the Student Council for its foresight and its loyalty to the students and the administration.

Political Round-up:

Recent Foreign Policy Considered Historically

BONNER

In the past few weeks with the developments in the middle-east between Turkey and Syria and the launching of Sputnik, I began to scrutinize our foreign policy of the past few years and attempted to answer the question, "Where did we come from and where are we going?"

When this nation was in the embryonic stage, the leaders of the newly conceived state stood up in defiance of the great British Empire and against overwhelming odds they won. When it reached the stage of a vigorous youth, it again stood up against Britain and won. During this stage one of our greatest presidents put forth the famous Monroe Doctrine and the nation was sworn to defend its principles.

But when we reached the teenage stage, the powerful German army under the leadership of the Kaiser was on the march in Europe. Then the German military machine rose once again. The Communists attempted to subjugate a small freedom loving country and our strong leaders took steps to stop them. We went to the aid of the freedom loving peoples of the world and victory was ours once again.

But then what happened to our aid of the freedom loving peoples of the world we the defenders of freedom? For the first time in our glorious history we had backed down and gained a peace without honor. In gaining this type of peace, we lost much of the faith which was placed in us by the free nations of which we were the leaders and defenders.

We then took issue with India over Kashmere and defended the stand of Pakistan. But when India sent troops into Kashmere our state department did not even issue a statement. This lost for us much prestige among the members of the Southeast Asia Pact. Our Secretary of State then advised the English Prime Minister to have England relinquish her rights to the Suez Canal before the time of their lease was up. They did so with the understanding that we would propose to the U.N. international control. Mr. Dulles warned the Dictator Nassar not to move in. When Egypt took violent steps to gain control of the Canal, Britain tried to stop him and our government came to the assistance of Nassar, thus, we strained relationships with our most trusted ally.

Russian propaganda began to seep into the near East, and for the first time Russia was able to gain allies in the Mediterranean. We then lost the friendship of the new state of Israel because of our shipment of arms to Egypt. Oh, but our propaganda machine was still in operation in Europe. Radio Free Europe was instrumental in getting the Hungarians to revolt against the Communist government with a promise to aid them. But when the freedom fighters did take this drastic step and gained control of the Hungarian government for five days our State department did not recognize them as the true government of Hungary. We have left the Russians beat us to outer space and by so doing we have lost more prestige.

We still have time to regain the love, adoration and respect of all the freedom loving peoples of the world. It is now the time to take a stand and not backtrack. Let us once again take up the torch of liberty and carry it throughout the world so that we will not enter into our manhood a depleted powerless nation.

PUBlicly Speaking

By MIKE KLESIUS

I think it can be generally understood that our wildcat's ferociousness is somewhat limited. However, Count Villan V is a fine looking beast and a member of the Felidae family. His well groomed coat of fur is the greatest example of the loving care, of which he is the recipient. His cool, calm and collected attitude is merely a sheepskin on the wolf. The deepness of color, the clearness and sharpness of the count's eyes are a quality possessed only by a Florida bred animal..

KLESIUS

I noted at my last encounter with the cat, that he contained his non-domestic beastliness very neatly. When Florida State played ball here a few weeks ago, my parents and I were able to observe the count's fierce pacing, up and down, up and down, in his cage. His unsettled movements seemed to agitate the fourteen thousand fans.

As the count's beady black eyes surveyed the crowd, each and every person felt a chill run in their blood. "Suppose it broke out". An actual fright covered the stadium. Count Villan was, in some people's minds, stalking his prey . . . 14,000 football fans. Waiting, simply waiting for the opportune moment.

As the flimsy house of captivity was wheeled around Villanova Stadium, I was moved to compassion and felt it my duty to help my parents to safety. Another look at the Count confirmed my anxiety—saliva running unrestrained from his mouth, steel set eyes, every muscle poised for the mental signal to break.

I especially noticed the fur ruffled between his head and back as he was braced for action in his corner. Men began to take position between the women and children. The stadium was showing the first signs of panic.

The Count began to move, he teetered, and a hush fell over the crowd. Count Villan V slid forward on his chin in a state of unconsciousness, he was fast asleep. We sat back in an exhaustive relief. There went the Count, looking as lifeless as a dead fish. The attendants quickly hurried the cage to a more remote area. At the beginning of this column I noted the Count's limited viciousness and ferociousness of which we all may agree. It's not the material, it's the thought behind it.

Many thanks to President Pat and his intention but don't release it from bondage . . . I'm sure it would live life in a state of pure inactivity.

Pet Peeve . . . Kentucky blue grass and gravel.

Worth Voting For

One of the saddest yet truthful commentaries on modern American life is that the people are forgetting how to think and act as conscientious citizens.

Every November, theoretically, a new set of officials of government is elected. The national elections every four years and the minor elections every year add up to a system of government that was established by and for the people.

But the percentages show that of the over one hundred million eligible voters, rarely even in a national election year, does the amount of voters exceed sixty percent.

How then, can the electorate cry out when a poor slate of officials is elected if the electorate itself is too busy to walk to the corner and pull a lever or put a mark with a crayon on a piece of paper.

Next Tuesday is election day. Most of the contests are of a minor nature. There are a few gubernatorial contests, but mainly the day will be one dedicated to the election of municipal governments.

The usual apathy will run high and the news commentators will drone monotonously that the rain or the cold or the heat or something else kept the voters home.

In the 18th century, people fought to become citizens of a free United States. In the 19th century, citizens fought to preserve a free United States. In the 20th century, wars have been waged repeatedly to protect the right of that freedom.

It is now a question of whether or not freedom is worth walking to the corner polling place to protect.

Novel Stage Arrangement To be Featured in 'St. Joan'

By BILL FREIND

If you are one of the many people who will flock to the field house Nov. 13 to 17, you are in for a twofold treat. Not only will you see the Belle Masque's production of Shaw's St. Joan but you will also see it performed for the first time in Villanova history in a technique called "theater-in-the-round," a system where the stage is completely encircled by the audience.

Theater-in-the-round, which is also called arena theater and central staging, is not a new idea in dramatics. In fact it is probably as old as dramatics itself, beginning in prehistoric times when, around the campfire at night, a young cave man told his tribe of his struggle with a dinosaur.

Actors Surrounded

The main idea of the theater in the round is to have its actors surrounded by the audience. There are many reasons for this, one of which is that the audience is closer to the stage, thus creating a greater degree of communication between the actors and the audience. The people in the audience can better see the faces and gestures of the actors and thereby come to enjoy the play more.

Advantages in Staging

Another advantage of theater-in-the-round is that it is more life-like than the ordinary proscenium stage (referred to as a picture-frame stage). On a regular stage actors have limited freedom because they have to "play to the audience" and due to this fact, some of their gestures and steps seem very artificial at times.

With theater-in-the-round the actor has unlimited mobility because any way he turns he is facing the audience.

The whole idea of the theater-in-the-round can be summed up in the words of Mr. Richard Duprey, director of this year's show; "We're taking the play out of the hole-in-the-wall where it normally hides and giving it back to the audience who have come to be amused, thrilled and taken out of their own every day experiences."

Practical Campus Application

In addition to these advantages, the Belle Masque had another very good reason for the use of this type of stage. Due to the fact that Villanova has no real theater on the campus, the field house must be used and the acoustics there are such that the actors cannot be heard in many parts of the room. But with theater-in-the round the rows will only extend four deep, seating about 430 people who will all be close enough to hear every word of the play.

Theater-in-the-round although not new historically is becoming increasingly popular in professional, university and civic theaters throughout the country. Such major theatrical companies as "Theater 57" in Dallas, "Fred I. Miller Theater" in Milwaukee, and "The Circle in the Square Theater" in New York have been specializing in this dynamic form of staging for a number of years.

So, if you wish to be well-entertained, do not miss the Belle Masque's production of St. Joan.

Plight of Church Critical In Fight Against Soviets

The ten-year-old struggle between Communist dictatorship and Catholic Church "has reached the 'limiting-point' foreseen by Lenin," according to an article in the November issue of The Sign, national Catholic magazine published here today. "Communism and Christianity are standing alone face to face, in single combat," it says.

Written by Albert Galter, pseudonym for a writer whose real identity had to be hidden for fear of reprisals to his relatives still living behind the Iron Curtain, the article sums up the results of the ten-year struggle against religion in these words: "In no country behind the Iron Curtain does there exist a single independent ecclesiastical organization. Everything is directed and controlled by the States."

The article was adapted from "The Red Book of the Persecuted Church," written by Galter under the direction of the Commission for the Persecuted Church of the International Catholic Organizations. It is published in the U. S. by the Newman Press.

No Legal Right

Galter declares: "In those churches which Communists have allowed to remain open, there is still quite satisfactory church attendance. People may still profess their faith by going to church. Yet it must be admitted that the Christian community no longer has the legal right to live publicly according to its faith. Ecclesiastical organization has either been undermined or abolished. The Church has been excluded from all activities which do not pertain strictly to worship."

Galter points out that the degree of persecution varies from country to country depending on the number of Catholics, their degree of organization, the intensity of Christian life in the country, and the seriousness of the impact on world opinion.

Cautious Approach

Thus, he indicates persecution has been most serious in countries like Russia and Red China where Catholics were a minority and where the impact on world opinion was not great. In other countries like Hungary, Poland, and East Germany, the persecution has followed a more cautious approach.

He also asserts the Communists "look upon Christianity . . . as the greatest obstacle to the establishment and consolidation of their atheistic dictatorship" and "the identity of operation."

Existentialism: Definition and Origin

By DR. RAYMOND PIERZCHALSKI
Assistant Professor, Philosophy

Man is a composite, a paradoxical composite, and even more than that, an enigma, because he is an unique synthesis of the soulish and bodily, of spirit and matter, of existence and essence, a synthesis which readily lends itself to paradoxical and enigmatic expressions about man. Philosophers are wont to dwell on enigmas and take special delight in paradoxical notions—such countless references to finite and infinite, to the temporal and eternal elements in man, that man must die to live.

Hegel and Kierkegaard

However, when Hegel tried to philosophize about man in terms of essence, or rather absolute essence, other philosophers asked the master, "What about existence?" One of these others was Soren Kierkegaard, a Danish philosopher, although he preferred to be called a poet, who was educated under Hegelian principles which he knew very well, and yet he, too, wanted to know about existence. Naturally then, if Hegel's philosophy was an Essentialism, Kierkegaard's became Existentialism.

But at this very outset we want to point out that the word "Existentialism" does not hold any one specific comprehension or denotation, although, strictly speaking, one might try to defend the position that it ought to have a proper comprehension, and therefore, a proper meaning and reference. In any case, contemporary emphasis on the word "Existentialism" is new, even though the philosophical study of existence is as old as history. "Existentialism, the philosophical discovery of existence, is nothing new. The history of philosophy is full of it." (Gustave E. Miller, "Existence and Existentialism" in The Personalist Vol. 34, No. 1, Jan. 1954, p. 26)

The Origin of The Term

Kierkegaard, however, is acknowledged as the first poet of recent times to speak of Existentialism. He is the harbinger and initiator of the term, even though the word has assumed or suffered diverse denotations since his own use in the early 19th century. As Jacques Maritain states, "as to vocabulary, it is commonly known that it is chiefly owing to the influence of Kierkegaard that the word Existential has become part of current speech, particularly in Germany." ("Existence and The Existent"—p. 2)

"Ism" implies a system, an organized body of truths, and therefore any system of philosophy which dwells at length on existence may be called Existentialism. More specifically, however, an Existentialism is a system of philosophy that announces the primacy of Existence, as against a system which may hold to the primacy of essence. And so it is that the word, "Existentialism," has various notes in its comprehension with reference to different philosophers.

For instance, Thomism may be called an intellectual Existential system, since the primacy of existence is held as an intellectual capture, just as Kierkegaard's philosophy is identified as an ethical Existence system, because the emphasis is on the practical exercise of existence in Christianity, and Jean Paul Sartre's may be described as Atheistic Existentialism because he denies the existence of God, or rather denies God as The Existent.

DR. RAYMOND PIERZCHALSKI

Truly enough then, Kierkegaard was the first to use the term repeatedly, and yet he never defined it precisely, never gave it a detailed comprehension. "Although modern Existential philosophy largely derives from the thought of Kierkegaard, he himself never precisely defined the term. But he stated what Existence implied for him." (Edited by Donald Attwater, "Modern Christian Revolutionaries" p. 21). Similarly, anyone who expresses his views on Existence and dwells at length on the subject is an Existentialist, regardless of divergence of his tenets from those of Kierkegaard or anyone else.

War of The Existentialists

It was not too surprising, nor entirely humorous, then, to read an Associated Press bulletin when it reported, "Warring factions of the Existentialists clashed in Paris' Latin Quarter in what one group called 'Operation Mothball'. The aggressive forces were neatly-groomed youths who rode through the district in taxis, pelting mothballs and spraying with disinfectant the long-haired, sloppily-dressed Bohemians who crowd the cafes of the Quarter. The group conducting 'Operation Mothball' claims the unshaven contingent in blue jeans and sandals are not true Existentialists, but fakers."

Much confusion dwells under the same aegis. The greatest difficulty created by loose interpretation of the term today is the fact that Existentialism includes within its scope systems that admit the reality of God, as well as those which exclude Him. Since Kierkegaard never defined the term precisely, he left the gate wide open, so to speak, for all who treated of Existence to be called Existentialist. Inadvertently, or else with malicious intent, a Godless philosophy of Existence is an injustice to Kierkegaard, who certainly was a God-fearing man who dedicated his life to the proposition. "How to become a Christian".

The Father of Existentialism

Kierkegaard as Father of Existentialism is hardly the progenitor of all species of Existentialism. This fatherhood is a pronouncement of history which Kierkegaard must not have anticipated, even though he was suspicious that posterity would hold a place for his works. Nevertheless, had his foresight been clearer, he probably would have specified the meaning of Existentialism, so as to tie only similar philosophical thoughts and tenets to his toga, but to leave no loose strings free for dissimilar trends. He certainly would have been careful to disinherit a Godless philosophy from any claim of kinship to his own reflections, because he vociferously denounced Godlessness of his day, and even vehemently inveighed against the shallow acceptance of man's God-relationship by his contemporaries.

MEIN KEMPF

By DON KEMPF

A timely announcement from the university proclaiming a four-day weekend has provided Villanovans with the needed excuse for doing their trick-or-treating at home this Halloween. Most of the Wildcats have already decided which costumes they will take to this season.

Al Sheppard and Gerry Givnish have chosen to go around together dressed in old fashioned swim suits. It seems the pair did quite a bit of swimming in the pond to the rear of the Boston College football field while on a student trip to that area in the past. Frank Delany has decided to wear his traditional armadillo costume again this year. Jack Curtin will wear that of a mushroom.

KEMPF

Commuters Dave Belcher, Norm Peer and Mike Klesius are going to make the rounds as three monsters; Peer will be disguised as Frankenstein, Belcher as Dracula, and Klesius as Belcher.

You Are Invited

For all those who live in the Philadelphia area, John Smader, senior education major, is holding a house party at his home in Clifton Heights. The party will feature bobbing for apples, taffy-chewing contests, and a weight lifting contest (John Kennedy has volunteered his services as the weight). All those who are interested are asked to contact Joan Beechwood.

I notice that one of the less significant girls' colleges in the area published their student newspaper. (Or was it their year book? . . . It's hard to tell, they appear with about the same frequency.) It seems that this same home of the stereotyped bridge player sponsored a jazz concert last weekend. The refreshments were good . . . so were the Villanovans.

I also noticed that their school play will be in the near future. It should be very good considering the large number of "role-players" residing on the premises.

The Ides of November

A good date to keep in the back of your mind is the fifteenth of November, which is the date of Immaculata's next mixer. If it turns out as well as the last one, it should be a must on the social calender.

Literary Club Recognized By National Honor Society

It was disclosed this week that the Literary Club has received acknowledgment of being accepted into Lambda Iota Tau as the Alpha Psi chapter, an honorary organization for those members who could qualify for membership.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held Nov. 6 in Seminar 3 of the library where a member of the English department of Villanova will speak on some form of literature.

Joe Kinney, president of the club, urges that all members contact him or any of the other officers concerning the playwright they wish to study for the club project.

Letters have been sent to some of the neighboring colleges requesting them to participate in a symposium on "Art and Morality" to be held November 20.

Other schools will be asked to be present at this discussion and it will also be open to students of the university as well as to faculty members.

Paul Yurchak, senior philosophy major, will moderate the panel while Frank Delany, senior English major, will be the representative of the literary club and Villanova.

All members are urged to submit their dues by the Nov. 6 meeting and after that date only members holding membership cards will be allowed to attend the meetings, or any other functions of the club.

Any one who wishes to join should see either Joe Kinney, Leo Rogers, Ken Miller, Dave Belcher, Tom Martinez or Mr. Raymond Burns, the moderator of the club.

English majors may become members by paying the semester dues and others must submit a criticism of a recent book they have read plus the initial fees.

One Thousand Wilson Fellows To Be Named

More than 1,000 June 1958 graduates have the opportunity of obtaining a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship amounting to approximately $1400 plus tuition expenses.

The Woodrow Wilson Fellowships are awarded only upon nomination by members of the academic profession. The acceptance of the award does not entail any obligation to enter the teaching profession, but the Foundation does ask that the Fellow seriously consider the possibilities the career affords.

Graduate School

The grants, usually $1,400 plus an amount to cover tuition, is applicable to any graduate school in the United States and Canada with the consent of the National Committee.

Villanova's nominees should be sent to the Regional Chairman Professor Richard Ludwig contacted at the Humanities Office, Firestone Library, Princeton University, Princeton, N.J.

Nominations should be sent as soon as possible, but in no case later than Nov. 9.

Final Selection

Having been notified of his nomination, the nominee should forward the requested information no later than Dec. 7.

Should the interview with the Regional Committee prove favorable, the nominee's name is sent to the National Committee for final selection. Selected candidates will be notified about the end of Feb. 1958 and will be assisted in gaining admission to graduate school. The announcement of the Fellowship awards will be made by the National Director about April 1, 1958.

President Dohaney Appoints New LKD Committee Heads

Marty Dohaney, president of Lambda Kappa Delta, recently initiated several committees and named committee heads to aid in the administration of the fraternity.

Irv Becker as chairman of the dinner dance committee disclosed that tentative plans are under consideration to hold the function at some nearby country club.

Dinner Dance

Other members of the dinner dance committee include Jack Quigley, Irv Keller and Joe Pittelli.

Dave Brian, Tom McKenna and Jack Fisher have completed arrangements for a new fraternity pin. The contract for the pins, expected to be delivered sometime between Thanksgiving and Christmas, has been signed.

Greg Lignelli has been appointed pledge master, and the initiation period will be announced at a later date.

Sports Committee

Bill Phillips and Connie McGinnis have been appointed social chairmen. Ed McLaughlin, Frank Murtha and Charlie Bannon are in charge of the sports committee for the fraternity, while Tony Esposito has been chosen to take care of new beer mug orders.

IRS Attends UN Assembly On First Trip

Members of the International Relations Society, together with their moderator, Dr. Fritz Nova, traveled to the United Nations in New York last Wednesday on the society's initial trip of the school year.

The group left Philadelphia by train at 8 a.m. and arrived at the UN in time for the morning program of meetings at 10:30.

Group Splits

Half of the IRS members attended the session of the First Committee which was meeting on the problem of disarmament. Among the topics discussed were regulation, limitation and balanced reduction of all armed forces and all armaments; discontinuance under international control of tests of atomic and hydrogen weapons, and effects of atom radiation.

The other half of the group attended a meeting of the Fourth Committee which dealt with information from Non-Self Governing Territories. Delegates from various countries discussed economic conditions of such territories, as well as various educational and training programs.

Discuss Disarmament

The IRS group ate lunch at the UN following its attendance at the morning sessions and then met in one of the UN's conference rooms with a native of Belgium who is an expert on the subject of disarmament and a member of the UN Disarmament Commission. This period consisted of a lecture followed by questions from the IRS members.

critical approach.

Belle Masque director, Mr. Richard Duprey, hopes to initiate the critique as a part of all future Belle Masque productions.

Critics have said that this play is possibly Shaw's greatest work. Joan is one of the few characters for whom Shaw had any true respect.

In this production, the epilogue that Shaw wrote attempting to prove Joan a Protestant, has been dropped in order to present the more important and dramatic body of the play in its entirety.

Marine Society Announces Final Dinner Dance Plans

Social Chairman George Riehe has announced completion of the arrangements for the Nov. 9 dinner dance of the Semper Fidelis Society celebrating the one-hundred eighty-second birthday of the founding of the Marine Corps by an act of the Continental Congress, Nov. 10th, 1775.

Villanova's Semper Fidelis Society will be host to all the college Marines of the Philadelphia area on this evening. Chairmen George Wimberg and Bill Ganz have invited students enrolled in Marine officer programs at Penn., Drexel, West Chester, Temple, La Salle and St. Joseph's; thus making it possible for P.L.C.'s and N.R.O.T.C. option students to renew friendships made during summer training.

Riehe said that Lt. Col. Arthur A. Poindexter, U.S.M.C., Deputy Director of the Fourth Marine Reserve and Recruitment District, will be the guest speaker for the celebration.

The Society will hear the music of Tommy Scott and his Tartans.

Scott and his group are not well known on campus but their music is similar to that of Charlie Gresch and his orchestra which already enjoys wide popularity. Gresch played at the Junior Class dinner dance last spring.

One of the highlights of the evening will be the traditional cake-cutting ceremony, replete with military pomp. The cake cut with a saber is first offered to the guest of honor, or to the oldest and youngest Marines present.

The site of the festivities will be Kostic's Restaurant at 69th Street and Marshall Road.

Riehle said the dinner dance is open to not only members of the Semper Fidelis Society, but also to interested students and Marine veterans. Reservations for the affair must be made before Wednesday, Nov. 6th.

Tickets may be procured in Barry Hall, or from any of the officers of the society, Jack Goodyear, Archie Whyte, John Neal, Jim Crowley, or George Wimberg at eight dollars per couple. Attire for the event will be informal, but those possessing dress uniforms are requested to wear them, Goodyear said.

SEA to Hear Halsey Speak Next Month

Richard Dressler, president of the Villanova chapter announced that Charles Marzen, a senior, has been named as chairman of the nominating committee.

William McFadden has been named social chairman for this semester.

The room for the meeting will be announced on the various bulletin boards throughout the campus.

Dean Powers Attends A-V Convention

Dr. Eugene Powers, Dean of the Evening Division, took part in the conference held last Thursday, Friday and Saturday by the Audio-Visual Instruction Directors of the Pennsylvania Audio-Visual Association for Teacher Education in York, Pa.

Dr. Powers, President of the Audio-Visual Association, served as chairman of the committee which evaluated conference findings on Saturday.

The conference opened with a tour of Gettysburg Battlefield, 20 miles from York, then moved to that city for discussion meetings and visits to the public school system and the adult education system.

Swim Season Outlook Good As Many Veterans Return

Heading the large number of returning swimmers are seniors Lou Schoener, who captained last year's highly successful team and is expected to carry the brunt of the Cats strength in the distance events, the 220 and 440; and Lou Pinto, who is one of two returning butter-flyers and is a consistent placer in competition.

Juniors make up the mass of this year's team including two transfer students, Joe Mason, from Pitt, who showed astounding form in the sprints, the 50 and 100; along with Wyn Wilson, who attended Lehigh and was one of that school's top men.

Bob Pinto, a boy who surprised everyone last year with his consistent improvement. is expected to give Mason his stiffest competition. Ken MacGillivray, John Rumbarger, Nelson Baker and Joe Lynch also showed a great deal of improvement in their freestyle specialties.

Jim Gregory and John Flynn have the orthodox breaststroke tied down between them. Gregory just missed a berth on the Philadelphia Area A.A.U. team which competed in the National A.A.U. Championships last spring and he is generally regarded as one of the top orthodox men in the east; while Flynn, a New York City boy, has shown in the past that he has the raw materials to develop into an excellent othodox man.

Larry Palacio, a former butterfly ace from St. Joe's Prep of Philadelphia, will probably compete in the 200 Butterfly, and the 400 Medley Relay, in which he starred last year.

Jerry Cechony, junior engineer, is the only returning backstroker on the team and will take over for Don Couig, who departed last year from the Villanova campus.

Another departed who will definitely be missed is Dennis Rinkacs, a fifth year naval student unable to compete this year due to the NCAA ruling concerning five year students, who was one of the top sprinters on the early V.U. teams.

Frank Keefe, of East Haven, Connecticut and Gene Hewitt, from nearby Ardmore, impressed coaches Geisz and Lumsden in the backstroke.

Two sophomore freestylers who have made the jump from freshmen to varsity competition are Bruce McCreedy from Long Island, N.Y., who excels in the 220 and 440; and Bill Lyons, a sprinter from Bellmawr, N.J.

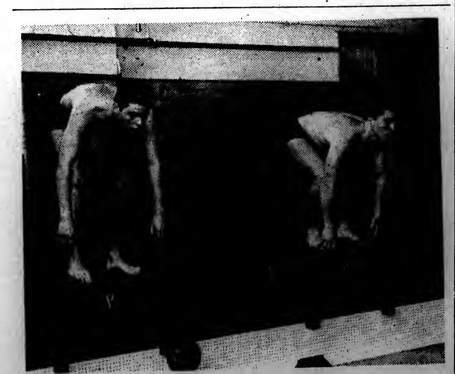
Practice started Monday for the 1957-58 season which sees the swimming team facing Army, West Chester and Princeton before Christmas.

Intramurals Add Hexathon Contest To Fall Schedule

Ed Geisz, Director of the Intramural Council, announced the inception of a ten event "hexathon", for the participation of all undergraduates, exclusive of varsity athletes, to determine the most outstanding intramural athlete at Villanova.



The hexathon, similar in theory to the Olympic decathlon, is to be held some time in November, and will extend from Monday through Thursday of the week specified by the Department. The entire program will be administered on a point system, and every event will be prerated to adjust differences in the competitors' respective abilities.

Rifle Competition Included

The initial competition, Geisz declared, is to be a timed mile run, consisting of four laps around the track in Goodreau Stadium. Succeeding events include a 200 yard freestyle swim, a riflery contest, rope climbing, basketball foul shooting, and punting for distance. A baseball and football throw for distance, a "chinning" competition, and a broad jump contest will also be included.

All events will proceed on schedule rain or shine.

Geisz also stated that November would see the beginning of the chess, checkers and bridge tournaments to be staged in Dougherty Hall. All undergrads may secure chess equipment from any of the Dougherty Hall guards and begin practicing for the tournament later in the month. This program, Geisz said, is designed to be a winter-long affair and should provide much indoor activity for all students.

A pair of sophomore hopefuls prepare to dive into the Villanova swimming pool during a practice session earlier this week. Practice began Monday for the 1957-58 season.

Villanova Loses Fourth; Hoosiers Upset Floundering 'Cats, 14-7

By FRANK FLEMING

Action like this is evident in the weekly intramural touch football contests that are played on Mendal and Austin Fields. Kundreds of Villanova undergraduates participate in the fiercely contested leagues.

Perhaps Indiana is the doormat of the Big Ten football-wise, but they still are a Big Ten team. This was one fact Villanova University gridmen learned, much to their chargin, last Saturday as they fell prey to the previously winless Hoosiers, 14-7.

In the scoring vein, the game was an exact duplicate of the Wildcats' trip to Bloomington two years ago when a poorer Villanova team lost to a better Indiana team by the same score.

Opening TD

The Wildcats of Frank Reagan seemed to take complete charge of proceedings in the opening minutes of Saturday's contest, when they drove 66 yards for a touchdown the second time they got the ball.

High point of this early touchdown drive was a 47 yard pass play from Jim Grazione to Gene O'Pella. The 6-5, 230 pound end carried the ball for 21 yards after catching the pass, warding off would-be tacklers with the finesse of an All-American back.

Jack Devereaux moved the ball from the five yard line to score the Cats only touchdown, while Rick Sapenza kicked the point after touchdown.

On the next series of downs Indiana drove to the Villanova three where the chargers of Frank Reagan held them and took possession of the ball. Two plays later Davey Parr's fumble gave the Hoosiers four plays to move the ball four yards for a touchdown.

Perhaps this was the break which changed the spirit of the winless eleven, for the Hoosiers suddenly came to life. The same players who earlier in the week were ready to quit their football team, were inspired to unknown heights by this small stroke of luck. Norm Makin went the distance for the Hoosiers on the next play.

Won In Third Period

In the third period Indiana moved the ball 30 yards— despite two 15 yard penalties—to score the tie-breaking and winning touchdown. Faced with a third and 23 situation, Indiana's brilliant quarterback, Tommy McDonald, completed a pass which gave the Big Ten team a first down on the Villanova seven.

Ken Hubbart scored for the Hoosiers on a one yard plunge on fourth down. Quarterback McDonald made his second extra point kick of the day, and the score read 14-7.

Early in the first period two Wildcats touched a Indiana fumble before a Hoosier recovered it in his own end zone for a harmless touchback. Had one of them recovered it, it would have in all likelihood resulted in a Villanova touchdown.

Almost—Not Enough

Villanova's other scoring opportunity came at the end of an 84 yard drive as the clock ran out. In a desperation attack in the closing minutes of the game Davey Parr moved the ball 30 yards and was on the receiving end of Billy Magee's ten yard pass as he sparked the Cats final attack of the game. This drive was ended as Devereaux went 23 yards before being stopped on the one on the last play of the game.

Hurricane Under The Guise Of Miami U. Faces Gridders

By BILL VINCENT

Lull the Hurricane! That'll be the cry of Coach Frank Reagan's charges this coming weekend as they journey to the Orange Bowl to play the Golden Hurricane of Miami University.

Although the Miami Hurricane has been beaten twice this year, the squad of Coach Andy Gustafson still must be considered a powerhouse.

Thirteen Returnees

Thirteen of 30 lettermen have returned from a team that was rated sixth nationally last year. However, gone from last year is Miami's All-American fullback Don Bosseler.

Last season Miami ranked number one in the country in total defense, but Coach Gustafson wants this year's team to better last year's 300 yards per game that they piled up offensively against their opponents. In doing this he is building a powerful offensive line, centered around All-American candidate Vester Newcomb and a well-rounded backfield, led by team captain John Varone.

The main problem for Miami this year is their lack of experienced personnel in the line, especially at the end slot. The top ends this year are letterman Phil Geatz, juniors Doug Hilderbrant and Bill Poole, and promising sophomores Walt Corey and Jon Mirolovich. Mirolovich was All City, All Conference, All State, and All American at Archbishop Curley High School in Miami.

Tackles Strong

The tackle positions are better off than the flanks as lettermen Gary Greaves and Charles Diamond return. Both of these men are juniors and have already drawn the attention of pro scouts through their outstanding line play. John Burdsall and Jing team, are alternating with Frank Nodoline, are alternating with two great prospects up from last season's veterans.

This year's Miami team has only four seniors and the coaches are depending heavily on the 27 sophomores and 18 juniors to bring their squad to national acclaim once again.

Flu Slows Action In Football Loops During Past Week

That old bug from out Asia way caused havoc in the intramural football leagues last week.

The Mendel Football League has entered the second half of its season and it seems that the flu will have an outstanding effect on the seasons final standings.

Only two games were actually played this week and as exciting as they were, they can not overshadow the fact that six teams won their games by forfeit.

The most important forfeit was the Clowns bowing out of their scheduled game with Tripodi. This was the Clowns second defeat and it paved the way for the Mendel Maulers to increase the strength of their grasp on first place.

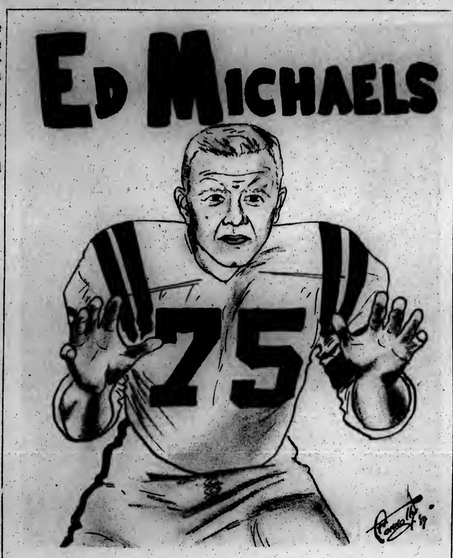
They are undefeated and were the only team to defeat the Clowns before Tripodi sat back and chalked up a victory.

Well Played Game

In one of the games played, Bravo Company just edged Charlie Company by a score of 8-6. This game was exceptionally well played.

The score was tied 6-6 after each team had scored and missed the point after touchdown. It was a heartbreaking moment for Charlie Compay when their quarterback was caught in their own end zone trying to throw a long pass. It was a safety, two points and a victory for the hard hitting Bravo Company team.

The other game between Joe's Jets and Charlie Company ended with no touchdowns being scored. Charlie Company lost another tough one however when they were one shy of first downs, 4-3.



Juggled Standings

The games which were forfeited juggled the standings somewhat. The following results

Steady Ed Michaels Gives Villanova Line Efficiency

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Villanova's grid fortunes have not been very happy of late. The early-season hopes have floundered on a sea of injuries, flu cases and disappointments. While at the start of the year the Wildcats lost a game to a highly-rated team, Baylor, they now are falling victims to such nonenities as Virginia Tech and Indiana.

Amidst the heart-breaking setbacks, there has been a lineman who continues to perform as he did at the beginning of the year. Alike in victory and defeat, he has maintained the same level of efficiency at his guard position.

Always That Way

That's the way it has always been with Eddie Michaels, Jr. The calibre of his play surprises neither his coaches nor his fans.

His steadiness has probably cost him headlines on many occasions. Fans and sportswriters alike are more impressed by a sensational single play than they are by continual steady work.

The workman-like job which Ed does and that which a number of other Wildcat linemen do, are only worthy of note because of the repetition on play after play, game after game. In Ed's case it can be added, season after season.

The depenability of Michaels' performances on the field is matched by the tenor of his personality off it. For a former scholastic All-American tackle, he shows a surprising lack of appreciation for his own talents.

Scholar Too

Ed refreshingly mixes his football with his preparation for a career. He is in the school of Arts and Science and will graduate A.B. Future plans lean toward law.

Ed's dad is coach of the freshmen and was the varsity line coach when his son was a sophomore. Has this ever led to any strained feelings between Ed and his teammates?

"Never!" is the unanimous answer of everyone concerned. Michaels, Sr. insists that Ed was never treated any differently from any other member of the team. From the first time that Ed reported to varsity practice in his soph year, he had to earn his promotions.

Coach Reagan asserts that the situation could have been very troublesome under most circumstances, but Ed is "too solid a boy to let pettiness intrude. I wish I had 40 more like him. It would be a pleasure to coach such a group."

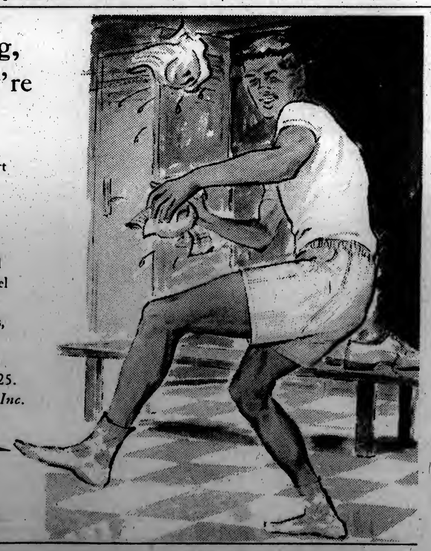
Of course, when Ed's father is mentioned, there are the usual comparisons made. The Old Man is a Villanova institution.

It's About Dad . . .

In 1935 he became the first All-American football player in the history of the Main Line school. Before and after the war, he was playing or coaching in professional football right up until 1951. In the NFL, he saw service with the Chicago Bears, the Washington Redskins and the Philadelphia Eagles. He also spent two years with Ottawa in the Canadian League.

Except for one year Michaels, Sr., has coached at Villanova continuously since 1951.

But as soon as you meet and talk to the two Michaels, you realize that the father has chosen his professions and the son will choose his. There is no doubt but that the choice will be different.



Ed Michaels, Jr. will never be known as a great football player. But give a team a squad of players such as he and it can't help but win.

Any organization so composed, even outside the realm of sports, will be a successful one.

have been recorded in the Intramural Office even though no game was actually played. Joe's Jets over the Bno Aires, the Jungle Bunnies over A Company, Jizz over the Losers, the Playboys over Cummings Plebes, the Screwdrivers over the Austin Devil Dogs and as mentioned before, Tripodi over the Clowns.

With the influenza just about over, the league is expected to get started full-force again and all the teams are out to win the championship which the Mendel Maulers have not yet sown away.

SCIENCE MADE SIMPLE: No. 1

Though this column is intended to be a source of innocent merriment for all sexes and not to concern itself with weighty matters, I have asked my sponsors, the makers of Marlboro, whether I might not, from time to time, use this space for a short lesson in science. "Makers," I said to them, "might I not, from time to time, use this space for a short lesson in science?"

They agreed with many a kindly smile, the makers of Marlboro, for they are the most agreeable of men. Their benevolence is due in no small measure to the cigarettes they smoke, for Marlboro is a cigarette to soothe the most savage of breasts. I refer not only to the flavor which, as everyone knows, is a delight to the palate, but also to the Marlboro container. Here is no fiendishly contrived device to fray the fingernails and rasp the nerves; here, instead, is a flip-top box that opens like a charm, and inside you find a handy red tape to lift out the cigarettes with ease and dispatch. Add to all this the best filter ever made, and you can see that you get a lot to like.

Let us begin our series of science lessons with chemistry. It is fitting that chemistry should be the first, for it is the oldest of sciences, having been discovered by Benjamin Franklin in 468 B.C. when an apple fell on his head while he was shooting the breeze with Pythagoras one day outside the Acropolis. (The reason they were outside the Acropolis and not inside was that Pythagoras had been thrown out for drawing right triangles all over the walls.)

They had several meetings outside the Acropolis, but finally Franklin said, "Look, Pythagoras, this is nothing against you, see, but I'm no youngster anymore and if I keep laying around on this wet grass with you, I'm liable to get the breakbone fever. I'm going inside." Pythagoras, friendless now, moped around Athens for awhile, then drifted off to Monaco where he married a girl named Harriet Sigafoos and went into the chuck-a-luck business. (He would certainly be forgotten today had not Shakespeare written "You Know Me, Al.")

But I digress. We were beginning a discussion of chemistry, and the best way to begin is with fundamentals. Chemicals are divided into elements. There are four: air, earth, fire, and water. Any number of delightful combinations can be made from these elements, such as firewater, dacron, and chef's salad.

Chemicals can be further divided into the classes of explosive and non-explosive. A wise chemist always touches a match to his chemicals before he begins an experiment.

A variety of vessels of different sizes and shapes are used in a chemistry lab. There are tubes, vials, beakers, flasks, pipettes, and retorts. A retort is also a snappy comeback, such as "Oh, yeah?" and "So's your Uncle Oscar."

I have now told you the most important aspects of chemistry, but there are many more—far too many to cover in the space remaining here. However, I am sure there is a fine chemistry lab on your very own campus. Why don't you go up some afternoon and poke around? Make a fun day out of it. Bring ukeleles. Wear humorous hats. Toast frankfurters on the Bunsen burners. Be gay. Be merry. Be loose . . . For chemistry is your friend!

Student Council Views

By PAT NICHOLSON

"What's wrong with the Student Council?" This is the type of question heard all too frequently by members of the Student Council. It was the opinion of the committee our present system created too many problems. The size of the council made full discussion of important proposals practically impossible. The council spent too much time on relatively small proposals and small points which were ultimately approved or disapproved by practically a unanimous vote. This type of discussion often tended to create a lackadaisical attitude among many of the representitives.

Often very little thought was given to motions prior to meetings and as the representitives did not know what new business was to be discussed, no preparation was made in this field thus long meetings often resulted in very little being accomplished. For this reason the committee has recommended some definite changes in our operational system. An intense investigation, highlighted by many personal conferences during the summer at the 10th annual Convention of the National Student Associations, helped the committee to decide upon its recommended changes.

The proposed bi-cameral system would be composed of the Student Congress, whose membership would be similiar to our present Student Council, and the Student Senate, which would be composed of fifteen elected members. The Student Congress would be the final governing body of the Student Council, maintaining at all times the ultimate authority. All activities of any organization recognized by the Dean of Student Activities and proposals pertaining thereto will be subject to the approval of the Student Congress. All recommendations to the Student-Administration Committee and/or the Student-Faculty Committee must be approved by the Student Congress. Consequently the final decisions of all major proposals will be made by the Student Congress.

The Student Senate will perform four important functions. It will consider all major proposals and then send each proposal on to the congress with a recommendation based on the known facts. In the case of minor proposals (those not under the direct jurisdiction of the Congress) the senate would be empowered to take immediate action if in unanimous agreement on the motion.

This would primarily deal with small problems as for example some of the suggestions concerning Dougerty Hall. The two most important functions of the Student Senate would be its right to make final decisions concerning Student Council funds and to take disciplinary action against any organization which violates the constitution, the by-laws, or any university approved rulings of the Student Council. The size of the Senate makes it far better suited to carry out these functions as the large size of congress would make the efficient handling of these matters impossible. However, in both of the latter functions all student recommendations would come from a standing committee of the Student Congress.

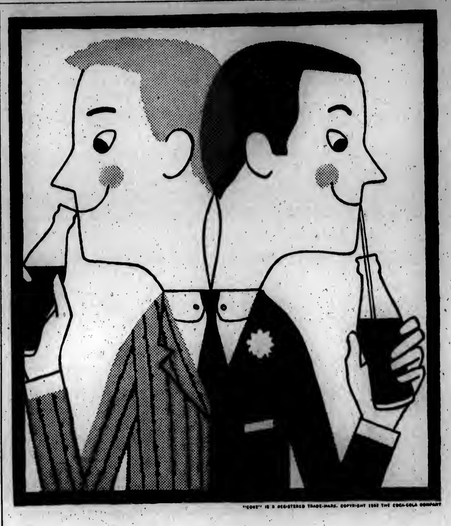
Arts Majors Fail to Sign For Interview

The Villanova Placement Office has announced that at present, relatively few Liberal Arts majors have registered for recruitment in the spring.

A number of firms have expressed a desire to interview these Arts majors for managerial training programs and for non-technical sales.

Mr. George Harris, of the Department of Education, is also interested in having senior Education majors register with the Placement Office so that a complete list of seniors will be available to principals interested in employing teachers.

390 Register



Currently, over 390 seniors have registered. Registrations will remain open until Nov. 8 and a senior cannot receive an interview unless he has previously registered.

In order to enable seniors to fill in their summaries properly for recruitment, the following range of salaries is indicated, together with the median and represents the actual offers made to last year's graduates.

Salaries Listed

The salaries for the engineers ranges from $380.00 to $560.00 per month, with a median of $452.00. For the Commerce and Finance majors, the range was $300.00 to $480.00 per month, with a median of $380.00.

The returns from Arts majors were too scattered to furnish information for a range of salaries, but in general, they would be about the same as Commerce and Finance majors.

Belle Masque's 'St. Joan' to Open This Evening Sigerson, Peer Star in Shaw's Classic Drama

By BILL ICKES

"No eggs! No eggs! Thousand thunders, man, what do you mean by no eggs!"

These are the opening lines, spoken by the somewhat-flustered Captain Robert de Baudricourt, in tonight's Belle Masque initial prduoction of George Bernard Shaw's 'Saint Joan.' The play, commonly considered by most critics to be Shaw's finest, begins at 8:30 p.m. in the field house and will be presented tonight and for the next four evenings, under the direction of Richard Duprey.

Actor Bill Fremd, portrays Captain Robert de Baudricourt in the presentation. Stage managers for the show are Elaine Coke and Eileen Grayson. Eileen appears in the show in a minor role as well.

Claire Sigerson, senior at Rosemont College who was seen as Mrs. Antrobus last year in Oscar Wilde's "The Skin of Our Teeth," is appearing in the lead role of the courageous, but betrayed, peasant girl. Elaine Cake, who comes from Philadelphia and is a secretary at the University of Pennsylvania, is the understudy to Joan.

Dressler Portrays Bishop

In the second major role appears Norm Peer as the supercilious and weak-willed Dauphin, who abandons Joan in her hours of tribulations. Peer hails from Orange, New Jersey, and is a senior History major. Richard Dressler, senior Education major, portrays the third major character in the play, the Bishop of Beauvais, Joan's arch enemy.

Long-Winded Inquisitor

Another of the leading players is Clem Birch, senior Political Science major from Haverford, who appears as the Inquisitor. The Inquisitor enters fairly late in the play, but is an important figure in the trial scene. The Inquisitor has probably the longest single speech in the entire history of English Drama. It encompasses some one-hundred lines and takes about eight to ten minutes to act out and to recite.

Mike Klesius, senior Social Science major from Alexandria, Va., plays Dunois and John Sigerson, a sophomore Commerce and Finance student, plays La Tremouille. Both are soldier-companions to Joan. Warrick, an Englishman who is against the church officials and also against Joan, is portrayed by Ronald Anderson.

In the play 'Saint Joan,' Shaw tries to justify Joan's appearance as a Protestant in the epilogue, but in this production, the epilogue is dropped in order to present the more important and dramatic body of the play itself.

Another feature which will be unique for the Belle Masue Society is the arrangement of the stage into the theater-in-the-round. The theater-in-the-round style almost commands the members of the audience to associate themselves with a particular character merely by understanding of the play.

SC Assents To Constitution Change; Military Mass In Chapel Saturday

NROTC Unit To Inaugurate New Tradition

This Saturday Villanova's NROTC unit will make campus history and initiate a new tradition when it is the focal point of a Military Mass in the university chapel at 11 a.m.

The military color will be combined with the ceremonial splendor of a solemn high mass. The midshipman battalion, under the command of midshipman William Scott, will march to the chapel where it will be met on the chapel steps by the celebrant and attendants who will bless the colors. The United States, papal, NROTC and Marine Corps colors will be blessed.

Blessing of Colors

The battalion will then follow the celebrant into the church and the colors displayed in the sanctuary. At the beginning of the canon of the Mass, an honor guard drawn from the championship NROTC drill team will take places across the front of the church facing the altar and will come to present arms at the elevation of the sacred host and precious blood.

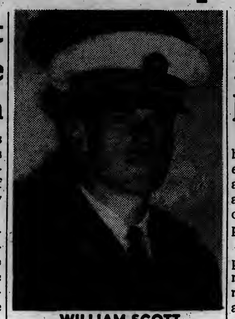
At the end of the Mass, the national anthem followed by "Holy God We Praise Thy Name" will be sung before the priest leaves the sanctuary.

The general intention of the Mass is to invoke God's blessing on the efforts of our midshipmen as future naval officers.

The Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, university president, will celebrate the Mass assisted by the Rev. John J. Daly as deacon and the Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell as sub-deacon, both former navy chaplains.

Master of Ceremonies

Master of Ceremonies will be the Rev. J. L. LaMonde, O.S.A., an instructor at Monsignor Bonner High School and also a former navy chaplain. Midshipmen members of the Sanctuary Society will perform the other minor offices of the Mass.



Harold G. Reuschlein, Dean of the university law school, and the Villanova Singers will provide the music for the mass.

The Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O.S.A., Commander in United States Naval Reserve, will preach the sermon. Guests in the Sanctuary will include the Revs. J. Conte, V. Casey and J. Heffernan, United States navy chaplains in the Philadelphia area.

Breakfast In Dougherty Hall

Following the mass and communion there will be a breakfast for the battallion in the day-student cafeteria in Dougherty Hall. Captain Donnelly will speak at the breakfast on the theme of moral leadership which is the underlying theme of the entire affair.

The student body, faculty, and parishioners of Villanova are cordially invited to the mass although warned that space will be limited.

Two Houses Featured In Innovations

Villanova's Student Council has been divided into a bicarmeral legislature and will now "be able to function more efficiently and decisively for the betterment of Villanova," according to its president, Pat Nicholson.

The innovation came with the partial adoption of the Council's new constitution at last week's meeting and will go into effect as soon as a few minor points of the constitution and its by-laws are submitted and approved. The change should come "before the Christmas vacation," according to Nicholson.

Council's Senate, Congress

The new body to be set up will consist of a Student Senate and a Congress. The former is to be selected from the members of the Council and will include: the four Student Council officers, the three class presidents, four seniors, two juniors and two sophomores, all of whom will have equal power in senate decisions.

The senate will have the judiciary power and the final decision in financial matters. The Student Senate will send recommendations to the Congress on all important legislative matters. This will allow for greater investigation and discussion on all matters and permit more out-of-meeting deliberation by the Congress. The new method is designed to speed the work of the Council, as the senate can investigate and present the arguments of all motions before they come to a vote before the Congress.

The Student Congress will consist of all the members of the Council including those acting on

Cotillion Tickets Sale Announced For All Students

Tickets for the annual Sophomore Cotillion to be held at the field house on Nov. 22 are now on sale to the entire Villanova student body, it was announced by co-chairmen Paul Iffland and Ray Rafferty.

The first week of sales was confined strictly to sophomores.

The tickets will continue to be sold until the number of tickets is exhausted.

Music By Gresh

The Cotillion this year will feature the society band of Charlie Gresh. The Gresh aggregation played at last year's Junior Dinner Dance and was well received by those in attendance.

"Persian Nights" will be the theme of the dance, and Co-Chairmen Ron Dobies and John Halas have announced that this year's decorations will be among the best that have been seen on the Villanova campus.

Ticket Sales Good

Steve Mahle, president of the sophomore class and John Mulcahy, chairman of the Cotillion stated that ticket sales so far have been good, but more support could be used. They especially urged that members of the class of '60 support to the fullest this first class function.

Dancing will commence at 9 p.m. and will end at 1 o'clock. A program expressing the theme will be given as a remembrance.

Radical Changes Necessary Step

The recent action of the Student Council adopting a bi-cameral system of legislature seems at this time to be a step in the right direction. Its worth cannot yet be determined; only the test of use can show whether imitation of the system practiced in colleges throughout the country will prove beneficial to Villanova. Individual circumstances must be considered and in the final analysis the use of this system will depend on the students of Villanova themselves. Some change was obviously necessary.

The meetings of the Council during the past two years have become more and more prolonged, stretched out by the endless discussions of trivial matters. At first inspection, the cause of these wastes of time would appear to be the physical bulk of that body. Villanova's Student Council is proportionally one of the largest in the country. If this is the case, the new constitution should cure the situation. There is a possibility, however, that the cause lies with the body's members, not with its size. Bodies of much larger bulk have been handled efficiently through parliamentary procedure.

The problem of size will be corrected by the new plan, if it is properly carried out. The means of operation will be contained in the forthcoming by-laws which are to be contained the practical application of the principle of "government for the many by the few" contained in the constitution. The by-laws and the constitution itself have been prepared by a committee of the Council, headed by Don Kempf and Bob Whelan. These men deserve considerable credit for the work they have done for the betterment of the Council and Villanova. Their work, and that of the Council is not over yet. The coming laws are the most important part of the system and deserve not only the consideration of the Council, but of every student in the school. The decision to lesson some powers of the council at large and to invest increased power in a smaller body has already been made. The by-laws will determine the practical workings of the Council. Every student should take part in this decision, for it will effect them through their representatives. The present constitution states that all students of Villanova are members of the Student Council, that this is an opportunity for these members to assert their power, and to approve or disapprove this final action of the Council as it now exists. Take this chance to take part in the future of Villanova.

SENATOR ANSWERS

The following letter was sent recently from Senator John Kennedy of Massachusetts to Mr. Eugene Ruane, Public Relations Director for Villanova, in expression of gratitude for the "Notable Catholics in Public Life" article which appeared in the Sept. 25 edition of the VILLANOVAN.

Dear Mr. Ruane:

The article in the Villanovan entitled "Notable Catholics in Public Life" and your accompanying letter have been brought to my attention.

This is just a line to tell all of you at Villanova how much I appreciatethe thoughtfulness that prompted your campus publication to devote an article to my career and I sincerely hope that I will continue to merit your confidence and approval.

Again, my sincere thanks and with kind regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

PUBlicly Speaking . . .

By MIKE KLESIUS

The quarter is over and it is time for reflection. A smitter look at your nasty self. The actual hobnobbing is over as the social light dims somewhat until the spring. However, there is no, reason to run around looking for a big fat state of apathy. In the past the cold weather of winter has been a dampener for organized social affairs,I certainly don't intend to establish standards around this main line education factory—be brave and forge ahead—the annual Soph Cotillion appears to be and they have picked a good weekend because I really believe the Senior football club members have a victory left in them. Not sure, but there is some talk of a win.

Let's reverse the calander—two weekends with great games (two wins) and plenty of excitement. The Boston trip, and of course great picnics. This next quarter will be long in days but short in "seeming" time. So broken up and then mid-year exams. Even the Court will find this winter a bit chilly. Official weather reports abnormal amounts of snow and cold weather.

Sheehan Halls' room floors will be nice and warm, that is if you get up and rub'em down with a wool cloth. There ought to be some nice draughts between Sullivan and Sheehan Halls — down the airstrip and wham into the new C and F building. And of course the age old spot—clad in a soking wet seveat suit standing on the left corner of the campus chapel in a stiff twenty-five mile an hour, ten degree wind.

Oh yes—winter is a blessed season in Villanova, Penna. Those snow covered walls in the picture boys are nothing more than a five inch layer of slush. How about the colds that grab hold about January 10th and are still around on March 15th. We all revel with the short hitch back to school from downtown. Ears, nose and general face area with those devastated cracks and big, ugly red spots. Writing off on this tangent moves me to thought of the standard, Villanovan slipping and slidding around campus on the ice. That point when the feet assume, a split second higher position than the head.

Usually this situation exhibits and creates unusual circumstances and brings the publics eye upon you. Avoid, if possible condition but by all means laugh at anyone it the condition. So as we are on the brink of....

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

See Here — Arts!

To the editor:

There appeared on page 3 of your Oct. 16 issue an article about the purpose of liberal arts written by a Mr. Fred Fortin. I feel that Mr. Fortin misconstrued some important aspect and purpose of technical education in his article. I would like to disagree with him on a few of these.

He mentions that aperson who has had what he refers to as a specialized education "runs the risk of being unable to understand and appreciate facets of life unrelated to his particular subject." He further implies that this "limits his development as a well-rounded personality." These ideas inspire questions: Does Mr. Fortin" understand and appreciate facets of life to his particular subject" when he implies that" "accounting, civil engineering" are inferior to the liberal arts? Are the only "discriminating thinkers" liberal arts men? Are they the only ones who are able "absorb, analyze and evaluate" ideas? Does professional training "channel the intellect" but "not necessarily cultivate it"?

The reader should respect that Mr. Fortin in his enthusiasm for the arts has neglected the merits of other pursuits. He forgets in his discussion of specialization that one can just as easily specialize in liberal arts as he could in technology. Mr. Fortin fails to differentiate between education and schooling; he assumes that the technology student knows technolgy from college and therefore knows nothing else. The achievement of intellectual matirity does not reduce the mechinized procedure of four years of college equalling one educated man; certainly much is to be learned outside of college? Does it seem plausable that an active scientific mind should ever want to cease learning? Should this same mind content itself with knowledge of one field and one field only? It seems that Mr. Fortin does not know understand his so-called practically educated man. He mentions that interdependence of the humanities and science in the application of scientific knowledge; then as an example of this he suggests "a reflection of the evils of our society caused by the misuse of our technical skills." As though physical evil was not the result of moral evil and technology not intrinsically good!

Mr. Fortin has grossly underestimated the technically educated man. He seems to think that libertl education is a panacea for the minds of our day. He assumes an attitude that literature, art and music are unknown to one possessed of a liberal education (Is it not true that a great artist is not a great specialist?) He tries to prove the value of liberal education by attacking technology and then showing liberal education to be superior to his distortion if it. Even assuming that his presentation of technology is correct, is a liberal aducation good because it is better than a pitful inadquacy? The writer is to be commended for his support of liberal education—certainly a liberal education is a worthwhile thing—but not for his method of attacking technology.

Perhaps this misunderstanding fo Mr. Fortin's indicates the need of a similar article on the "WHY" of technical education. It is my sincere hope that I have been able to clarify some obscured points in the essay.

Yours truly,

THAT TIME OF YEAR

by Bill Jones

Now is the time of year
When a student begins to look,
With many a sigh of woe,
Into his empty pocketbook.

He sees with great alarm
And with greater despair,
That this thin little vault
Is so terribly, terribly bare.

He writes a letter home,
And asks for a little dough.
But in the sweet reply
The answer is always no.

Opinions Clash

As Villanovans Speak Out

By FRANK DELANY
Feature Editor

At last our vast reading public has awakened and some have even been moved to write letters expressing their objection with vary degrees of passion to views previously presented in this paper. The VILLANOVAN views this joy since one must read an article through to completion before taking exception to it and if we have not pleased everyone we must have interested at least a vocal few.

Jack Curtin's article "A Malcontent Vents his Spleen" has roused the most campus ire. The opposition have found an eloquent spokesman in the person of Anthony Silvestri, an honor student majoring in chemistry. Mr. Silvestri questions the integrity and/or capability of the author for writing the offensive article and the newspaper for publishing it. Mr. Curtin rebuts with a defense of humor and a plea for a less literal interpretation of the written word.

If this keeps up we might even hear from the faculty!

But please gentlemen! keep your sense of humor. An ancient Hindu classic says that three things are certain in this life; God, man and laughter. We cannot completely know God here on earth, we cannot do much about changing man and so we must do what we can with laughter.

Informative and Inspiring

Villanova's law dean pointed out that the complexity, size and wealth of our culture has created a demand for a larger number of high calibre people in the field of law but, Reuschlein continued, "it appears that the aims and methods of the law profession are less understood by possible candidates than those of any other profession. It is our hope that this program will provide the information and inspiration heretofore lacking in the law field."

Curtin Delves Into Nature Of Humor in Self-Defense

By JACK CURTIN

I, a stranger and afraid, In a world I never made.
A. E. Houseman

The above lines by a great Anglo-American poet are printed here not only for their beauty, but also because, if they are taken in relationship to the problem of modern humor, they may be considered strangely prophetic.

If Mr. Silvestri has ever, between his considerations of technical works and the writings of the Supreme Pontiffs, given any attention to current newspapers and magazines, he will have found that most of the great modern humorists have fallen out of favor with that great medium, television, and have been replaced with the safer and more easily understood form of entertainment known as the western.

The reasons for the decline and fall of the American comedian have been expounded in the various literary publications to be found on the public newsstands. It seems that Jerry Lewis' "Melvin" character offends all the people named Melvin; that Jackie Gleason's Ralph Kramden," of "Honeymooners" fame, offends bus drivers; that the characterization of a bumbling, near-sighted fool by a comedian offends all near-sighted persons, bumbling or not.

The very essence of all humor —except for the childish and unamusing slapstick variety —is satire, i. e., it depends on the dramatization of those characteristics within mankind, or a particular segment thereof, which, when exaggerated, make him ridiculous. However, modern man seems to have become such a pompous individual, that the contemporary humorist is left to draw his sources of the comic from himself, the enemy or something that is presently in disfavor. Either that, or retire to the relative obscurity of the nightclub circuit.

The Narrowing Field For Humor

And this basic problem of humor, that of fighting against an ever-growing and ridiculous system of taboos, is the same one faced in a consideration of the discussed piece about chemistry (not the Villanova Chemistry Department, we might note here). Admittedly, had such an essay been written in an attempt to discredit the whole field of chemistry, had it been a serious attack on the study of this science, it would have been "below the level of an adult college student." Conversly anyone who could have taken the afore mentioned article seriously, has attained a level of pomposity heretofore thought impossible— or is a fool.

Granted, the reading of said article may have been an "unpeasant experience," but that is due to writing defects of the author, not to the fact that it is a slur on the Villanova Chemistry Department. The piece was intended to present—satirically —the despair of the non-technical mind when it comes into contact with a purely technical field. Anyone who can construe it as destroying the reputations of the faculty of Villanova is letting his emotions run rampant over his common sense.

Even if, in some way, the article did cast aspersions upon these gentlemen, it is difficult to conceive of its effects on the future of that "particular segment" of the university student body to which the author of the letter referred. Unless, of course, after reading the essay, this group lost respect for its own aims. And certainly, no interviewer is going to pull out an old copy of the VILLANOVAN and confront a student with it when said student is applying for a job.

No Attack On Chemistry

No, the article cannot be considered as serious, and Mr. Silvestri is advised to re-read it— this time sensibly—for it's made ridiculous by some of the statements contained within it. If we are to be deadly serious, certainly it is not right to consider chemistry as an utter waste of time, below the level of mankind. Obviously, it has performed all the wondrous tasks that Mr. Silvestri has outlined. (Although we must note his emotional paragraph sounds like it belongs on the base of the Statue of Liberty rather than on these unhallowed pages.)

Cartoonist Walt Kelly, creator or the famous "Pogo" strip, seems to have summed up the beliefs of this writer in his introduction to a collection of his satirical strips. He said:

"Thank goodness, we have become a hugely comic race, the fit toil of cartoonists and similar busybodies who, even as they stand apart and declaim, realize with a sad and wonderful joy that we are all in it together. Huddled and cuddled as if we worked for a large ad agency and were running a test proof of the slogan for the pudding, we may acheive our end, we may even escape it. But the ride together is good for a moment or two of beauty and a number of laughs."

It is maintained here that anything that has become too large to be laughed at has become dangerous—a diseased, tyrannical thing. And, as the man said long ago, laughter is the best medicine.

Unfortunately, like any medicine, it is useless if one refuses to recognize the disease.

Chemistry Major Makes Defense of His Science

Dear Editors

In the October 23, 1957 issue of the VILLANOVAN, I had the unpleasant experience of reading an article about our Chemistry Department. In my most charitable moments, I try to imagine it as an attempt at humor. However, I cannot help but think of it as being in extremely poor taste, far below the level of an adult college student and the official publication of an academic institute.

The article presents a direct slur upon the faculty members of the Chemistry Department. It is upon the reputation of these particular gentlemen that the future of many graduates, particularly chemistry majors, depends. By allowing such a potentially detrimental feature to be printed, the Villanovan has failed, as the representative of the entire University, in its duty to a particular segment of the student body.

Although the staff has seen fit to waste one-third of a page in detracting from the esteem of the Chemistry Department, have they ever thought of giving an equivalent amount of space to a feature describing its many varied activities? I daresay this would benefit the University a great deal more.

In regard to the context of the article, it amazes me that a mature person would seek to publicize the fact, that as a result of his own negligence, he failed a required course. Judging from his own description the author was waiting for his laboratory instructor to pour the knowledge of chemistry into his brain with a funnel.

Although this chemical misanthrope feels that chemistry is "something to be delved into by the lower forms of life," this thought is not held by all men. If he ever took the time to read, even in a cursory manner, the writings of the Supreme Pontiffs, he would come upon the statement "Second only to the contemplation of God Himself is the contemplation of His works."

As far as the importance of chemistry is concerned, perhaps no other group in recent years has done more to feed the hungry, give drink to the thirsty, harbor the harborless and clothe the naked than have chemists. By whose work is it possible for an ever shrinking world to support an ever increasing population?

The amount of damage which you have done to chemistry and Villanova remains to be seen. Fairness demands a retraction.

Sincerely,
Anthony Silvestri

Someone Say Conventions Are Dull? Editors Say 'No'

By JOSEPH A. KINNEY
Associate Editor

Combine a trio of fun-loving Villanovans with almost a thousand collegians from every section of the nation, mix well (academically and socially) and serve to a receptive metropolitan American city. The result is apt to be an exciting reacction.

Last Thursday through Saturday, Messrs. Robert E. Mulcahy III, Lawrence M. O'Rourke, Jr., and yours truly possessed all the above ingredients at the annual Associated Collegiate Press Convention in New York City and did not disappoint the scientific mind.

Oddly enough, the three members of the editorial hierarchy of the VILLANOVAN did benefit journalisticly from the lectures and panel discussions in the New Yorker Hotel.

Noted Journalists Speaks

The experience of hearing columnist Hal Boyle; Max "Rally Round the Flag, Boys" Shulman; and Allen Keller, feature writer of the World Telegram and Sun (to mention a few) was exciting enough but exshanging ideas with fellow journalists of our own age level was even more exciting, especially if the atmosphere was less formal than the average lecture room.

Failing to accomplish the purpose of the "get acquained" dance on the first night, we wandered along the "Great White Way."

Our First Friends

Disappointed in our attempt to obtain tickets for a running show, including Jack Paar's "Tonight" program, we joined a couple of newly-acquired friends from Muhlenberg's weekly at Jack Dempsey's "house" where I picked up my firstsouvenir—a pair of official IBC boxing gloves that looked as if they had attended their diminutive appearance through the magic of a tribe of head-shrinkers.

Besides witnessing a deluge that submerged half of Manhattan and halted subway traffic for 10½ hours, our first night in thebig city was spent trying to catch up on our studies.

Where's Shakespeare!

Conferences from 9 to 5 on Friday demanded a nocturnal social outlet. We cheerfully accepted a local college editor's invitation to a party on the hotel's twenty-first floor. When we arrived, shortly before we left, the altitude wasn't the only thing that was high.

"I do not teach Shakespeare but direct my class to appreciate the master", explained a fair complected, dark haired gentleman who looked as if he had just reached the voting age during the first Eisenhower-Stevenso Campaign.

We later discovered that the deliberate speaking individual was really teaching ("directing as he said) the man whose poetry he was praising and we left him in the midst of a group of wide-eyed Elizabethan neophytes.

Back To Philly

Concluding conferences, highlighted by a free luncheon featuring a naddress by Tom Hamilton of the New York Times took up most of our time on Saturday before we rushed through Macy's for several family gifts on our way to the train station.

Almost all f tohe hour and forty minutes back to hilPly was filled with sporadic remarks, about the memorable weekend such as "What do you thing of (Max) Shulman encuoraging the overthrow of the "mariarchy' " and "how about all the praise heaped on our paper by that journalism prof".

Yes, it surely was an unforgetable trip!

Record Industries Hit Selling Peak

Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 Tops In Record Production

By AL SHEPPARD

The fall finds the recording industry at a peak in production. Many of their offerings, I feel sure, would enhance any hi-fi collection. I would like to discuss a few of these new releases with you and offer some personal ideas for your observation.

Tops in the classical field is the Epic recording of Beethoven Symphony No. 3 with the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra conducted by George Szell. There is so much that is truly exemplary about this performance that it is regretable that the recommendation can be only a partial one. Szell draws a comprehensive blueprint of virtually every subtlety the score contains and the orchestra executes it faultlessly. However, as an emotional communication, this "Eroica" is a rather confined, unconvincing statement of the turmoil and exaltation in this score.

London offers Liszt: Concertos Nos. 1 and 2 ON THE LONDON LABEL with the London Philharmonic with Julius Katchen, piano. Two highly creditable accomplishments for Katchen, especially the second, lesser played of the two works, to which he gives a good deal of stylistic distinction as well as continuity.

Rudolph Firkusny returns for Capitol to do Czech Polkas and Dances by Smetana. The quality of these pieces is variable, some of them hardly providing the matter for a pianist of Firkkusny's resources without stint, and they include freshness of feeling, rhythmic zest and special knowledge of the idiom.

Another well done recording is the Angel disc of Chopin Etudes (Op. 25), and Trois Nouvelles Etudes with Claudio Arrau, piano.

A Statement On Maria Callas

Before turning to the better releases of opera I would like to clarify a statement I made in my previous column concerning Maria Callas. It is acknowledged by the better music critics that Miss Callas wobbles and is sometimes weak and unsure of her notes. This to me is a limitation —therefore, my reference to her limited range. This, however, does not in my estimation detract from her greatness as an opera singer.

A wonderful new Angel recording of Puccini's La Boheme has been released featuring Callas as Mimi, Anna Moffo as Musetta, diStefano as Rodolfo and Penerai as Marcello—conducted by Antonio Votto. Here Miss Callas creates an unseen character by sheer musical intelligence. Because of her believing in Mimi tentative, Mimi in love, Mimi's sad and Mimi drink —and because she sings with deep musicality (which includes a true musician's sense of the musical line and the musical phrase) she makes Mimi a real person.

Roberta, Roberta And Rigoletto

RCA Victor has released an All "Star" Rigoletto, with Roberta Peters, Jussi Bjoerling, Robert Merrill and the company of the Rome Opera. Those who are primarily interested in the Rigoletto of Verdi will find of it here in full flower than they might have anticipated.

Turning to jazz—Duke Ellington's Such Sweet Thunder (Columbia) is, according to the feverish label copy, a "major Work." The album contains disarmingly expert monologues by such strolling players as Clark Terry, Sonny Hodges, and Harry Carney.

Young modernists pay tribute to Bird Parker when they play a Memorial Concert Dedicated to the Music of Charlie Parker (Signal)—recorded at the "Five Spot" in New York. A good job.

On The Esoteric Side

New on Esoteric, The Harlem Jazz Scene 1941, with Charley Christian and Dizzy Gillespie. These are unique recordings of musicians jamming after hours for their own pleasure and enlightenment.

A final note—Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers Play Lerner and Lowe on Vik. The gimmick of "show tunes" hardly interferes with the characteristic pushing swing of this group.

Watch for Elvis Presley's "Jailhouse Rock" from his new movie. Whether we like it or not, it will inevitably hit the top. These crazy kids!

Coming Features

Kinney revealed that he has been working on the project in secret for weeks and will be able to present an article that is both informative and entertaining.

Coming soon in Villanovan will be a feature story on how the campus newspaper is prepared for publication, Associate Editor Joe Kinney has announced.

Also appearing will be features on campus activities and articles spotlighting interesting students.

Political Round-up:

U. S. Senators Indicted For Insincerity of Vote

By JOHN HUNT

During this past August, just after the Civil Rights fight in Congress, there appeared two articles in the Evening Bulletin.

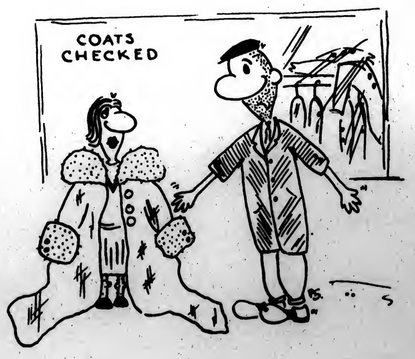
I will treat of the latter article first, an article by syndicated columnist Stewart Alsop on August 21. This article was written about two weeks after the Civil Rights Bill was passed.

Alsop gave statistics compiled by political statisticians to prove his point. Pennsylvania had 385,000 negro votes, 6% of the electorate of that state, Illinois had 350,000, 7.5% of the electorate of Illinois, and New York had 450,000 negro votes, or 6.5% of New York's electorate. While the percentage is small, examples can be given to show how decisive it can be:

One: In 1954 Governor Harriman polled 79% of the negro vote of New York, or roughly close to 200,000 votes. Harriman only won the election by 15,000 votes. Hence, had the negroes shifted, Iver would now be the New York Governor.

Two: In 1956 Senator Clark of Pennsylvania polled 76% of negro votes—those who voted—roughly 150,000 votes. Clark only won the election by 18,000 votes. Again, a parallel can be drawn between him and Governor Harriman.

Clark of Pennsylvania and Douglas of Illinois were two of the very few Democrats vehemently supporting the Civil Rights Bill. The other Democrats were from the South, naturally opposed to the Bill, and from the Northwest, in such states as Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, etc., where the negro population is only on the average of a few hundred in each of these states, and where politicians do not have to worry about a "negro vote."



The other article was by the Bulletin Washington Bureau, on August 12. It was a report on a 101 million dollar appropriation to Pennsylvania, in order to build a reservoir on the ground of a Seneca Indian Reservation. It is significant to note that this was the first measure passed by Congress after the Civil Rights Bill. It was passed under pressure from Mayor Lawrence of Pittsburgh and Pittsburgh industrialists. The reservoir would give more water to the industrialists of Pittsburgh.

The Bill had the backing of both Senators Martin Republican) and Clark (Democrat), two senators who strongly fought for a Civil Rights Bill. Yet this Bill that Clark and Martin supported would flood the reservation of the Seneca Indians, ruin their land, and make them homeless.

Clark answered that it was a problem of the "greatest good for the greatest number." He further stated that while the Reservoir would drive the Indians from their land; it would also create a large recreational area. Those Indians who choose to remain may make some money from this.

In concluding, we might say that the two articles, compared one to the other, point to the lack of sincerity among many members of our senate. Yet, when another minority, who are more American than both whites or Negroes, with little voting power, gets "in the way", a 163 year-old treaty is junked and they are simply told to get out.

CAMPUS LIFE BY CARTOON

"What did you expect, the same coat?"

Main Purpose of Education Is Development of Abilities

By MIKE MANCUSO
C and F Senior

The main purpose of a college education is learning. It is the duty of any person who says that he is a college student to attain that number one collegiate attribute of learning—whether it be intehtional or unintentional.

By intentional, I mean any knowledge grasped by the student purposely for the sake of learning. Unintentional learning, whether it be academically or socially, provides the student with an education that he acquires through his college career via such things as habits, bull sessions or plain old informal chats with his accounting professor.

Education and Youth Today

Any youth today should want an education merely for the sake of learning how to develop his abilities and interests into a framework that will help him fulfill his ambitions.

Many people may then say that they know what their ambitions in life are and do not have to go to college to develop their abilities. In a sense, this may be true but let us remember that everything in this world has a purpose, even education.

It prepares him with an understanding of the world today and the histories of the past which contributed to making it what it is today.

It places in him an education which develops him personally by what he acquires from the learnings of men before him and scholars of his time.

Purpose of Education?

In general, the purpose of education is to make man a man.

I have found it hard to clearly say what an education means to someone merely because each man is unique and my ideas would not hold to someone else. But with a free will of my own I do believe that I should be able to give an authentic interpretation of why I want an education.

To me, a college education means a life that was not witnessed in my family before my generation—a life that will have to be witnessed by almost every youth in my generation and beyond.

To me, a college education means a necessity to anyone who has ever thought of his future, a necessity that is needed to fulfill one's vocation in life.

I want a college education because it is a life necessity, necessary to induce in me qualities that will be beneficial to live a free and meaningful life.

It is easy to ramble on and on about what an education will do for a person but it is quite hard to be serious and say what an education will do for me. I may easily say what I expect of an education but its final influence on me is up to what I grasp and hold in my college life.

Goals and Achievements

What goals one now expects to attain in life and what he finally achieves in life are two distinct concepts. With high ideals in mind and a faithful and hopeful attitude, the goals can and will be acquired in that period of life one believes one can achieve no more.

The fulfillment of the attribute of learning in college will provide a person with an unique attitude of life. With this in mind, the purpose of a college education will be achieved.

Sincerity in learning leads to knowledge; sincerity in accepting knowledge follows from accepting that God-given gift—education.

Mid East Observer Speaks To IRS of Red Threat

The International Relations Society had its regular monthly meeting on Nov. 5. The Society was privileged to have Dr Keith Wheelock, a professor at the University of Pennsylvania and former press observer reporting from the Middle East.

Dr. Wheelock spoke on the Mid-Eastern peoples and their problems. Some of the points that were included were the Syrian "Conspiracy."—the ideas that motivated Syria and Turkey to take the action they did.

Arab Nationalism Discussed

He also discussed Arab Nationalism and interjected a few opinions on "Friend" Dulles tactics in the Mid-East.

Also discussed, was the U.S.I.A., which in the Speaker's opinion was doing a very poor job in appealing to the Arab nation by printing articles of democracy vs. communism, while the Russians are taking advantage of current situations for propaganda.

In line with the above statement, it was pointed out that the Arabs are an impressionistic and emotional people. In the scientific field, as an example of how impressionistic the people are, the Soviet launching of the satellite brought to front this headline in an Egyptian paper, "Russia can now destroy the U.S."

Plans For Conventions

There was a business meeting previous to the speakers meeting and President Peter O'Kane mentioned the prospective plans for future meetings.

Reports were heard from the different committees and a report was made on the prospective convention's plans that will be held at the University of Pennsylvania on Feb. 7 and 8, 1958.

O-C Society Will Feature Puccini Opera

By L. P. STAVINSKY

Opera-Classica Music Society will feature Puccini's La Boheme tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Members of Opera Classica made four cultural trips during the past two weeks. On Oct. 30, it attended the first Philadelphia Orchestra student concert which began with a dull selection by Mozart— Symphonia Concertante. Equally as dull was the Vivaldi Concerto in C for piccolo. Mr. Ormandy should take more care in the preparation of his program—he is dealing with college and secondary school students not masters of classical music. The ballet portion of the program with Maria Tallchief and Andre Eglevsky was excellent.

On Oct. 31, Opera-Classica saw and heard Bellini's Norma with the new sensational soprano Anita Cerquetti whose portrayal of the Druid priestess made operatic history. Nell Rankin was an excellent Aldagisa. The male cast was mediocre to say the least.

Appealing Opera

On Nov. 5, O-C attended the opening of the Met season in Philadelphia with the new production of Tchiakovsky's Eugene Onegin sung in English. Lucine Amara, Richard Tucker, and Giorgio Tozzi were the outstanding members of the cast. The music was in many instances appealing. Many could not understand the opera even in English. In the future, let's have it in Russian.

And finally, on Nov. 7 O-C saw Gluck's Paris and Helen performed by the American Opera Society with a stellar cast including David Poleri, Laurel Hurley, Phyliss Curtin, and of course, Anita Cerquetti.

Dissertation Required

William A. Barry, Jr. a junior accounting major will deliver a 10-minute lecture on Giacomo Puccini this evening before we feature the London recording of La Boheme. Everyone in the society is required to deliver a paper on a composer or composition in order to retain membership.

Despite the best efforts of our Society to find the proper prescription for the social malady of ignorance and prejudice, many individuals still think they have to know the foreign language to appreciate opera. La Boheme should appeal even to the most opera-ignorant person. A carefully prepared Italian-English liberetto will assure the listener of a complete understanding of the opera.

"Down To Earth" Opera

Puccini's La Boheme is certainly his most down to earth opera. In it you'll follow the joys and sorrows of Mimi sung by Renata Tebaldi and Rodolfo sung by Giacinto Prandelli. The arias are designed to shed light on the character of the principals.

Career Guidance Program Planned By Law School

A unique career guidance program designed for college juniors and seniors interested in the study of law has been inaugurated by Villanova University's School of Law, it was announced this week by Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein.

A series of meetings, open to colleges and universities in Eastern United States, will be held throughout the winter at Villanova's School of Law under the direction of Professor Donald M. Collins of the Law School staff.

"Three basic phases will be discussed during the orientation meetings," Reuschlein said. The first will take up "Methods of Fundamental Legal Education"; this will be followed by discussions on the "Curricular and Extra-Curricular Activities in the Law School Directly Related to the Practice" and "Methods and Objectives of the Practice Itself."

Orient Law Aspirants

Participants in the program will sit in actual law classes and will be given aid by the instructors before and after the classes to orient them as to what is taking place. The program is recommended not only for prospective law school students, but for those in related fields as well.

Reuschlein described the orientation meetings as "an opportunity for men and women who have an interest in pursuing law or a related profession to see of what the profession consists and how the educational preparation for the practice of the profession is accomplished."

IRC Will Hear Spillane On Labor Unions

John Spillane, of the United Auto Workers, will address the Industrial Relations Club tomorrow morning at 10:30 in 204 Commerce and Finance.

Spillane has been with the U.A.W. for over twenty years and has been instrumental in organizing a large number of industrial plants.

The meeting and lecture are open to the entire university and the officers of the club cordially invite non-members to attend.

Villanova Astronomy Club Records and Sees Sputnik

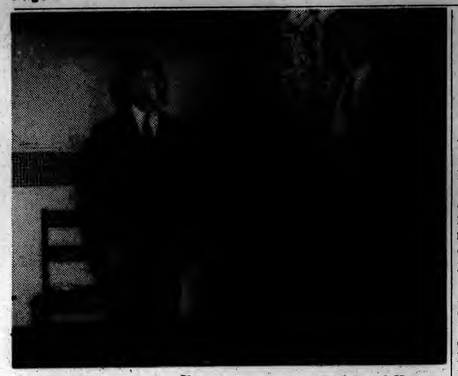
Since Sputnik's launching, the Villanova Astronomy Club has kept active. Visual sightings and a tape recording were made of the artificial satellite recently circling the earth.

Besides members who have seen Sputnik, the club's moderator, Rev. Edward Jenkins, O.S.A., has made a visual observation of the satellite's rocket.

Observed for 20 Seconds

On Tuesday, Oct. 22, the rocket was seen traveling from the Southeast to the Northeast skies approximately 30 degrees above the horizon. Fr. Jenkins observed it at 6:53 E.D.T. and commented that it was brighter than the stars, travelling very fast and disappearing within 20 seconds in the Northeast.

A seven minute tape recording has also been made from Sputnik's radio signals. Astronomy club president, Jim McCook, had the newly founded Radio club's help in making the recording.



Father Jenkins Explains Sputnik

The recording was made on Oct. 10 at 10:49 p.m. under the direction of Jim Lawless, president of the Radio club.

A slow motion playback of the tape at the following Astronomy club meetings revealed a possible code in the signals. A talk on Sputnik by Rev. Edward Jenkins O.S.A. also highlighted the meeting.

Fr. Regan to Speak At Camden Mass

Reverend Robert E. Regan, O.S.A., chairman of Villanova Religion Department and lecturer in legal ethics in the Law School, will deliver the address at the fourth annual Red Mass of the Diocese of Camden, New Jersey, at 12 noon, Sunday, Nov. 24.

The European-born ceremony, which traditionally marks the opening of the court sessions, will be held in the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Camden.

Bishop Justin J. McCarthy of the Camden Diocese will be the celebrant of the Mass.

Justice Brennan To Attend

Federal Judge Thomas M. Madden, general chairman, has announced that United States Supreme Court Justice William J. Brennan heads an extensive list of jurists and attorneys who have been invited to attend. Justice Brennan was present at last year's Mass.

The Red Mass is a legal and judicial tradition. It was so named because of the color of the vestments worn by the priests who celebrated the Mass.

It was first instituted in the 13th Century and seems to have sprung up spontaneously in England, France and Italy.

Red Mass A Tradition

The opening of the court sessions was the usual time for the celebration of this Mass. It was related to the traditions and processes of the courts then prevailing. Its main purpose was that of calling upon God, the Holy Ghost, the Third Person of the Blessed Trinity, to grant light and inspiration to the lawyer in pleading, and to the judge in adjudicating during the coming court term.

Since its rebirth in the Camden Diocese, the celebration of the Red Mass has grown in size and in prominence each year. This has been reflected in the committee's ability to obtain positive response from noted jurists and lawyers who have been invited to the Mass.

Last year the Red Mass was a part of the Diamond Jubilee of the Camden County Bar Association.

"Design Patent" Subjects Of PLA Monthly Meeting

At the invitation of Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the Villanova Law School, the Philadelphia Patent Law Association held its monthly meeting at Garey Hall last Monday.

The program was devoted to "Design Patents," which in part constituted the re-enactment of the now renowned case of Palmer vs. Loudens, previously argued before the Federal Court of Appeals in Philadelphia in Dec. 1955.

The case involved an action for infringement of a patent for chocolate animals, and the arguments of the counsel ranged the field from the "flash of genius" test for invention to the history of the German candy-making industry. Guest speakers for the evening were the two attorneys who argued the case, Henry N. Paul, Jr., and Kennard N. Ware.

Additional guests included C. Willard Hayes, of New York City, President of the American Patent Law Association.

In addition, this organization is preparing a procedure for surveying the quality of Audio-Visual Instruction in secondary and elementary schools.

Smith and Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the Villanova School of Law.

McGraw-Hill Changes Plan For Recruiting Arts Majors

The Placement Office announced today that all Liberal Arts majors who were interested in having interviews with the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. will have to change their plans.

The company will be unable to send representatives to the campus for interviews as had been originally announced.

In lieu of the former plans, McGraw-Hill employment literature will be sent to the Placement Office.

Those students who decide that they are interested in McGraw-Hill may send an autobiographical letter to Peter J. Davies, 330 W. 42nd St., New York 36, N. Y.

These letters will be read for their content and excellence of expression. Candidates will be selected for interviews in New York.

McGraw-Hill also has positions open for students other than those in the Arts school. Further information may be obtained by consulting John A. Moritz, Placement Director.

Scott Paper Co. Addresses SAM

Richard Miller, Personnel Director of Scott Paper Company, was the guest speaker at the last meeting of the Society for the Advancement of Management.

Miller outlined the rise of the Scott Co., which started in Philadelphia under the management of two brothers and later moved to nearby Chester. Today Scott is one of the world's leading paper products manufacturers.

Miller, speaking on manpower recruitment on the college level, said that many companies will hire college graduates even though they are eligible for the draft.

The hiring is with the provision that the recruitees will have time to serve at least three months' service with the company before they are tabbed for military service.

Scott Paper makes a special effort to keep in touch with their personnel while they are in the service. They are assured of the same job or a comparable one upon their return to civilian life.

Mulcahy, O'Rourke, Kinney Attend ACP Convention

Three VILLANOVAN editors represented the paper last week at the annual Associated Collegiate Press Conference in New York.

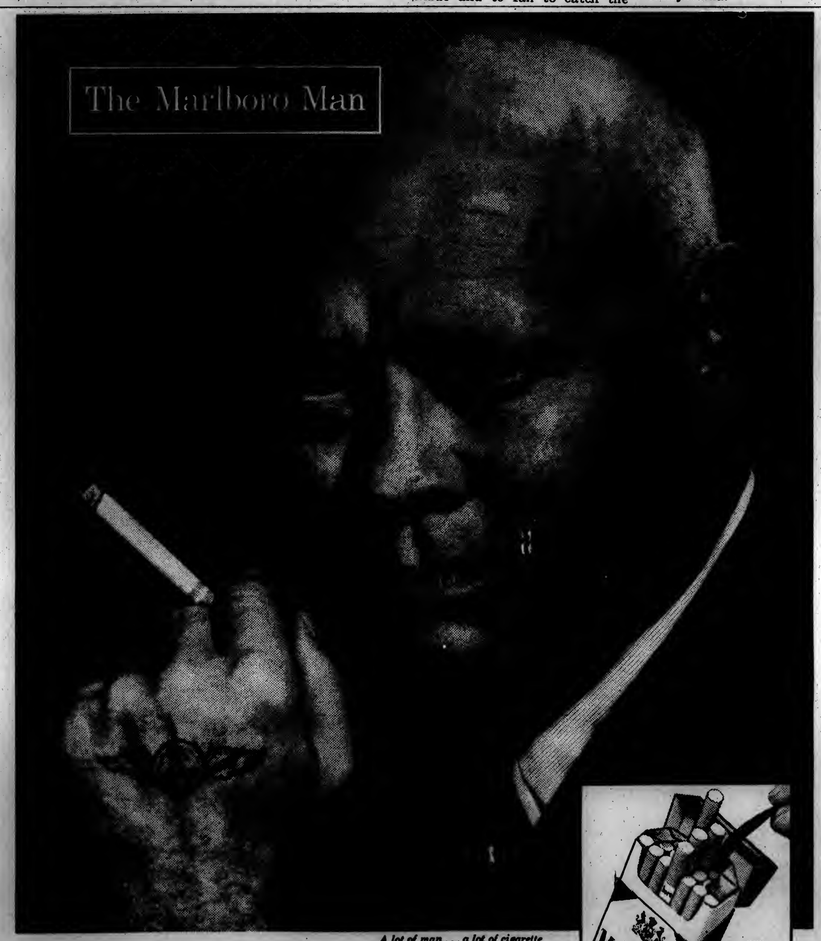
Challenged Editors

Hamilton called upon the 850 editors present to "reawaken in the college youth the America the feelings of freedom and interest in government prevalent in academic circles in the last century."

Speaking at the luncheon on Saturday Hamilton described his position in behind the scenes reporting at the UN. He said, "Here you see history being made and to fail to catch the spirit is to deny individual imagination."

Convention Opening



The convention opened Thursday morning with registration and informal gatherings. Official opening was that night.

Conferences and discussion periods were held Friday and Saturday and the conference ended Saturday night.

Nurses Get Full Vote

Other innovations of the new constitution include the addition of a voting member from the nursing division to the council. Last week's acceptance of this clause marked the first official recognition of the provision calling for such a seat added to the original constitution over the summer. The new delegate is to be elected by the members of the junior and senior classes in the nursing division and she will cast one full vote. The freshman and sophomore nurses will continue to vote only for their respective class representative, for if they were to vote in the nurses' election, they would be receiving double representation.

Election and Voting Changes

Another change was rendered to the system of electing representatives. The present system allows students of all schools to vote for all their class representatives. Under the change, they will vote only for those men who are to represent their school, that is, the engineering students will elect only the engineering representative and so on.

Two half-votes presently seated on the Council were changed to full votes at the meeting. The alumni representative will in the future cast a full vote, as will the senior delegate of the National Federation of Catholic College Students. The first will be elected as formerly in the class elections, but the latter's selection has not as yet been decided on and will be provided for in the forthcoming by-laws.

The elevation of the NFCCS delegate to full vote status caused some controversy and discussion, but its adherents contended that the delegate, who represented the entire school at national conventions, should be more than the leading member of a campus club. Accordingly, the NFCCS is to be disbanded as a club and will assume the status of a standing president's committee, as the Spirit Committee is, with its casting a full vote in the council.

By the tenents of the approved changes, the Council will also have increased power over student organizations, which will consist of council supervision of all activities of those organizations recognized by the Dean of Student Activities.

Detroit, Miami Topple Villanova

By JACK CURTIN

Perhaps the 1957 motto of the Villanova football team should have been—"Walk big, but carry a soft stick."

Accoladed before and after every game as an excellent team, capable of crushing any of their opponents, the Mainliners seem to do every thing but score as they move along their path of frustration.

The Wildcats closed out their on-the-road season last Saturday with a 16-7 loss to Detroit that assured them of not winning a game away from home this year.

A 13-7 defeat by Miami University a week earlier had burdened the Villanovans with a losing season.

Loss of Trophy

The Detroit loss, fifth straight and sixth of the season, forced the 'Cats to give up possession of the Cyril J. Burke trophy, symbol of supremacy in this oldest (25 years) of all Vilanova gridiron rivaries, and snapped their streak of somewhat dubious distinction that they had not lost a game this year by more than a touchdown.

Playing a typical "almost, but not quite enough" game, the Mainliners threatened often to score, and, at the start of the game, looked as though they might run all over the Titans. However, several potential scoring drives died out in Detroit territory, three of them inside the 20.

Leon Horin, substituting at fullback for Jack Devereaux, who had a charleyhorse, seemed to have the Wildcats on the move in the initial moments of play, driving 44 yards on three carries through the Titan line the first time Villanova got the ball. This drive, however, died on the Detroit 21 on an incompleted Billy Magee pass.

Dump Graz For Safety

The Mainliners did all the moving in the first period, but their foes took over in the second frame. Jim Grazione started to direct the Villanova offense on its own 11, but was dumped back on the four trying to pass, and then trapped again on the next play, this time in his own end zone, for a safety and two points for Detroit.

The Titans added a touchdown—after a 40 yard drive that gave them a first down on the four—before the half ended to give them a 9-0 lead at the mid-way break.

Grazione went into the end zone for Villanova in the third period on an eight yard rollout play, but this score was nullified by a backfield-in-motion penalty and the 'Cats bogged down on the six.

Villanova went 57 yards in eight plays early in the final quarter to close the gap to 9-7, when Grazione, who had sparked the drive with his running, hit Tony Varrechione with a short pass, and the senior end scampered 15 yards for the TD. Dick Keyser added the point after touchdown.

Game On Ice

However, with less than six minutes left, the Titans unleashed a 50 yard touchdown pass play to put the game on ice.

Villanova's chances of winning the game, rated as a toss-up by the pre-game experts, were injured by the absence of Rick Sapienza (due to an injured leg) and the necessarily sparce usage of Devereaux.

The Mainliners lost the ball on fumbles only once during the Detroit game, but the Miami defeat was a repeat of the season long mishaps that cost the Wildcats at least four of their six losses.

Behind At Half

Behind 6-0 at the half, the Wildcats battled back to a 7-6 lead in the third period and seemed to be on their way to a tidy upset. A fumble on their own 35 at the close of that frame, however, left them open to Miami's second touchdown and a 13-6 defeat.

It was during Miami's drive to this score—in 11 plays against a fighting Villanova line—that Sapienza suffered the leg injury that kept him out of the Detroit battle.

The Hurricane's first TD came on an 80 yard run midway through the first period. Sapienza punted to the Miami 20, and on the first play from scrimmage, Joe Plevel went all the way for the tally.

57 Yd. Drive

Villanova scored in the third period, going 57 yards in 13 plays. Davey Parr went over from the one for the touchdown and Sapienza converted to give the Mainliners the lead.

Magee, who completed nine out of 14 passes, and Devereaux, who gained 52 yards, were outstanding in the Villanova backfield, while the line played its usual excellent game, with Gene O'Pella and Don Luzzi being particularly outstanding.

A relatively unimportant home game with one victorious Wichita a week from this Saturday will close out the 1957 season.

Varsity Court Team Rounds Into Shape During Practice

By Tom Murphy

After some fifteen days of practice, the Villanova basketball team is beginning to take shape.

Five Look Hot

Half-way through the practice season, Tom Brennan, Bill Brennan, Harrison, Ryan and Scott have showed the skill, offensively and defensively, to deserve starting berths. They are being closely pressed by Emma and Raveling.

When Ryan has a good game he is unstoppable. His 30 points against St. John's last year point out this fact.

The Wildcats should have tremendous board strength this year with big John Scott taking some of the pressure off last years big man, Tom Brennan. Harrison, a real hustling ball player, doesn't slouch on rebounds either and he will give the big boys a good fight under the boards.

Coach Alex Severance is tremendously pleased with his team so far. He feels that the use of Alumni gym for all basketball sessions has had a terrific effect on the spirit of the team. With no practices interrupted like they have been in the past few years more training is had by the basketballers and valuable coaching knowledge is drilled into their heads.

No Distractions

"They (the team) are not subject to the distraction so evident in the field house for the past two or three years," he said. "Good lights, daily availability of a floor, non-interference of spectators, quiet and general all-around conditions themselves make it easier for coaching and practicing." The players have worked better under these conditions and it should show in their play.

Severance also said, "personnel can be given individual attention and they are not subject to the detractors so evident last year."

Open at Home

The court schedule this year starts on Dec. 3, with a home game against the Philadelphia Textile School. Such teams as Duke, North Carolina State, Canisius, Niagara, West Virginia, LaSalle, Duquesne, Seton Hall, St. Joe's, St. Bonaventure, Temple, Muhlenberg and St. Francis cross the Wildcats' path and show the power of the opposition they will be up against this year.

Last year the team was very erratic. They lost what should have been easy games, upset some top-notch clubs and finished with a losing record. From the looks of things, it will be a different story this year.

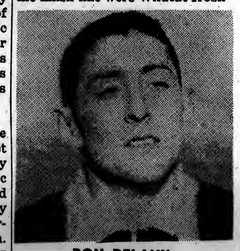
Delany Back In Action, Wildcat Harriers Gain Split In Latest Meets

By BILL VINCENT

Having split their last two meets, Villanova's cross country team is preparing for the IC4A Championship which is less than a week away. This meet will be held on November 18 at at Van Courtland Park, New York, and it will feature some of the best college distance runners in the country.

The Wildcat harriers easily defeated Seton Hall by a 15-40 score after dropping a tough one to highly regarded St. Johns of Brooklyn. Ron Delany, Villanova's Champ, finished first in both of these meets. Previously Delany had been kept out of action by an attack of Asiatic Flu which hospitalized him for a couple of days. However, this didn't seem to bother Ronnie as he easily defeated the best his opponents had to offer.

Followed Delany



Following Delany across the finish line in the Seton Hall meet were soph Bob Godesky, Terry McHugh, Jonas Swenson and Vic De Maio. All of these men did well against St. John's but they couldn't overcome the experience and depth of the Redmen.

In earlier meets of the year the Main Line harriers—minus Delany—dropped an 18-37 decision to LaSalle and were third in triangular meet with St. Joe's and Georgetown.

Outstanding for the Wildcats in these meets were Bob Godesky and Vic De Maio. Godesky won the 1000 Yard Novice race in the Inquirer Games a year ago while De Maio has been one of the Wildcat's leading middle distance men.

Although Villanova's great middle distance and distance star Ron Delany will graduate this June, the future of the Wildcats cross country team is a bright one. To go along with such veterans as De Maio, Godesky, Swenson and Tinney, the Mainliners have a fine group of freshmen harriers. They include Nick D'Angelis, Gene Rogers, Hank Neill, Lance Huglemeyer, George Montey and Tim McNamar.

McNamar, who comes from Tulsa, Oklahoma, is undefeated in freshmen competition. Two days after easily winning the intramural cross country meet, he won the La Salle meet, covering the special three mile freshmen course in 18 minutes, 39 seconds. Following him across the finish line were Wildcat frosh harriers Lance Huglemeyer and Hank Neill.

RON DELANY
Back In Action

Two weeks later McNamar literally ran away with the Seton Hall freshmen as he covered the course in 18 minutes, 36 seconds. Hank Neill and Gene Rogers placed fourth and fifth respectively for the Main Liner's freshmen squad.

Frosh Never Ran Before

McNamar, who will be the freshman's squad leading contender for the Frosh IC4A Championships, never ran in a cross country meet until he came to Villanova from Cascia Hall, which is an Augustinian High School in Tulsa.

Varrechione, O'Pella Offer Wildcats Top Play At Ends

By FRANK CUNNINGHAM

One of the positions that every football coach must solidly set to spark both his offensive and defensive alignments is the flanker spot at the ends of the line. The men that fill these critical posts must be fast, elusive, aggressive athletes; they must be able to snare bullet passes thrown at blinding speed and the long, arching throws which gain so much yardage in a touchdown drive. They must be hard-nosed competitors who can crash through the enemy line to break up plays before they can come to fruition. And, above all else, they must be men who can inspire the team by their determination and desire to play the game.

Villanova is fortunate to have a pair of ends who "play the game" and play it well. Their names are Tony Varrechione and Gene O'Pella. They both have played the game to the hilt for the last two seasons, through last year's successes and this year's failures. And they play as hard this season in disappointment as they did when the squad was winning. Coach Frank Reagan knows that no other pair of ends could have given him any more than did Tony and Gene.

An Outstanding Pair

As you watch them play, it becomes evident that they have played the game before. Varrechione, a muscular six-footer, goes about his job without flamboyance, making the key tackles, snatching passes, all in such a routine manner that one could underestimate his consistently fine performances. O'Pella, a mountain of a man at 6'5" and 230 lbs., stands head and shoulders over everyone on the field, and his headlong line plunges and sterling offensive play command the instant attention of the crowd. Big "Gino" is mighty hard to overlook.

The paths which lead the two men to Villanova were diverse ones. Tony was a two-year All-State selection at West Warwick H.S. in Rhode Island, and helped guide his team to their class championships in those two seasons. Gene played no high school ball at St. John's of Philadelphia, but, while in the Army in Germany, put in two years of service competition, and both years won All-Service designation at end. O'Pella met Coach Frank Reagan at a banquet after he got out of the Army, and was offered a scholarship. Villanova got him over bids from Notre Dame and Illinois.

First Chances in '56

Varrechione got his first varsity chance last year and once he got in the starting lineup no one was able to replace him. He nabbed seven passes for 89 yds., demonstrated superb blocking ability, and made himself the most consistently valuable lineman on the club. Big O'Pella established himself last year, too, but in his sophomore year. Gene caught eight passes for 150 yds., and was unstoppable on short throws right over the line, where he could bring his tremendous strength to advantage in picking up vital yardage.

And so the Wildcats were set at the ends for the '57 campaign. Senior Varrechione got off to a great start in the home opener against Furman, grabbing two 37 yd. passes, one for a T.D. His blazing speed carried him past a Florida State defenseman for a 49 yd. pass play. Presently, Tony ranks in the top ten in the East in pass receiving with 12 grabs for 187 yds. and one touchdown. Coach Joe Rogers calls Tony "the most underrated, consistent player on the team." Quite an accolade to receive two seasons in a row!

Most Improved Player

O'Pella, meanwhile, was complementing his teammate's performance with illustrious ones of his own. Gene, after a fair start, began playing inspired football in the V.P.I. game at Blacksburg, Va. He started a scoring drive of 33 yds. by alertly recovering a fumble. Although he hurt his shoulder later in the game, Gene came back the next week against Boston College and gave a magnificent display of defensive end play on a rainsoaked, muddy field which was not conducive to effective tackling. Following a fine offensive show at Indiana, Gene played his best all-around game at Miami, putting on such an exhibition that rival coach Andy Gustafson remarked: "O'Pella is as good as any end I've ever seen play in the Orange Bowl" during my seven years as Head Coach." Needless to say, the coaches regard Gene as the most improved player on the team this season.

Both Tony and Gene are at a loss to explain the Wildcat's poor record this year, though they both insist that the club has as much desire as it did against Baylor seven weeks ago. What ever the season's outcome, however, one thing is certain: the two guys on the ends of the line will never stop hustling for Villanova, they will never stop playing the game.

V. U. Traveling Sickness

By FRANK FLEMING

"Have tux, will travel" is a saying which has grown in popularity around the Vilanova campus during the current football campaign. But to the members of the Wildcat grid squad this statement is not a joke, for when it is reworded to read "have football uniform, will travel" it is the summation of the 1957 Villanova football story. Playing one of the hardest schedules in their history, the 'Cats of Frank Reagan also have the honor-or more likely, the misfortune—of being the most traveled team in the U.S.

Playing six of their nine games on the road this season, the Wildcats have traveled over 8,000 miles to and from these contests. The travelers started their season off by journeying to Waco, Texas, where they outplayed but were beaten by the Baylor Bears. The 'Cats came home to play on two consective weekends in Goodreau Stadium. Coach Reagan and the boys began a disastorous five game road stand. On consecutive weekends, the Cats traveled to Virginia, Massachuetts, Indiana, Florida and Michigan—returning home only long enough to have their uniforms cleaned for their next trip.

Without A Chevy

To most people, this seems like a fine way to see the U. S. A. without buying a Chevrolet, but a football team's purpose is not to see the U. S. A., it is to win games. And extensive traveling far from helps them meet this purpose. Many gridiron authorities believe that traveling more than anything else can injure a football team. Looking at Villanova, it would seem that these men are right, for in their two encounters at home the Wildcats played like one of the best teams in the country, but on the road there is just one little unknown thing missing which keeps them from winning ball games. It could be a form of travel sickness.

Traveling does definitely hurt a ball club in many respects. A traveling ball club has less practice time than the home team. Travel time cuts practice time and thereby the visiting team is at disadvantage. Any person who travels frequently, for any reason, after spending a relatively sleepless inght on a train or plane? The will tell you how tiring traveling is. How can any player be his best answer is simple they can't. But a ballplayer on a traveling club must. How can a football player who is a victim of air sickness play his best game while recovering from his last battle with the clouds? He can't, but again he must if his team is to win. Is a noisy hotel the place to rest for a game? No, but the members of a traveling ball club must do so.

Away From Friends

Physical disadvantages are not the only ones which a traveling ball club face. Many ballplayers are married or engaged, while almost all the others have girl friends. Traveling takes the ball players away from these people to whom they want to be close. This is a definite demoralizing factor which hits every traveling ball club. As one Villanova player put it "The only time I see my girl is when she is saying goodbye before a trip or welcoming me back after one."

To most the students at Villanova the ballplayers are virtually unknown. They are the guys who fill the vacant seats in class during the middle of the week.

A Definite Discourage

Yes, traveling does hurt a ball club in more ways than one. It has a definite physical effect on a team in that no team is at its best after traveling half way around the country to play a game. A traveling team is also a demoralized team. It hurts a team to walk onthe field and know that up in the packed stands every person is against you. How can a team be expected to beat some of the best teams in the country with all these factors against them, and do it for five straight weeks?

Had Villanova played its last five games at home instead of on the road, more than likely the Wildcat's record would now stand at seven and one rather than two and six, for Villanova was not beaten by its opponent this season but by The Wildcats' own brand of traveling sickness.

Joe Scancerella, quarterback and captain of Joe's Jets, carries the ball through the line in last week's game with the Barons on Mendel Field. The Jets, one of the favored teams for the campus title, won the contest to keep their undefeated record intact.

Five Teams Seem Headed For Play-Offs As Intramural Season Draws To Close

By PAUL BUCKLEY

With the Intermural football final just around the corner, the mad dash for places in the Austin and Mendel leagues has become very intense.

Semi-final games will begin on Tuesday, November 19. It looks as if the semi-finals will feature Joe's Jets, the East Wingers, the Mendel Maulers, the Delurey Devils and the Aces. All are undefeated with the Maulers showing a 6-0 record, the East Wingers and the Jets both 5-0 and the Delurey Devils and the Aces at 4-0.

D.P.M. Upset

Last week the previously undefeated D.P.M. team was dumped by the Jungle Bunnies by a 6-0 score.

Four games were played last week in the 10:30 Mendel League. The Mendel Maulers picked up two important victories in this action. The Maulers beat the Clowns, 6-0, and won by forfeit from the Screwdrivers. With this forfeit, the Screwdrivers are out of the league. In the two other games, the Hops, who are six and two on the year, defeated the Clowns and the Srewdrivers.

In the A Division at 4:30 on Mendel field the East Wingers kept their slate clean with a win over Jizz A.C. on first downs.

In the B league, the Jungle Bunnies upset the powerful D.P.M. team, 6-0, while Bravo Company knocked off Charlie Company, 12-0.

Only two games were played in the Austin league last week. The Delurey Devils won by forfeit over the Mendeliers and the Aces clobbered the Trotters by a score of 26-0.

Joe's Jets Idle

Undefeated Joe's Jets were idle this week, but with the upset of D.P.M., they moved into the top spot in their division. Outstanding players for the Jets so far this year have been Don Cashman and Bill Glennon at ends, Gene Duffy and Bob Draghi at tackles, with an able backfield consisting of Joe Scancarella, Frank Connolly, Terry Johnson and Jack Mulhall.

Close behind the five undefeated teams are the Barons, 4-1, the Rat Pack, 4-1, and the Hops, who are 6-1. Any of these teams could end up the intramural champion.

Hexathlon Begun

Beginning last Monday, November 11, the intramural office unveilled a new sport to determine the all-around athlete at Villanova. This new test of athletic prowess is the Hexathlon, consisting of six phases of athletics. Each phase will consist of several events to be held over a six-day period.

The first phase consisted of three track events; the 60 yard dash, the 440, and the broad jump. Following Track, there was swimming which consisted of the 25-yard sprint, the 50-yard sprint and a middle distance of 100 yards. Today, the third day of competition, there will be punting for distance, passing for distance and a place kick for accuracy.

There will also be riflery, basketball and gym. The events will be based on a point system with the all-around athlete being the man who has accumulated the highest number of points at the end of the sixth day.

Nurses' Program

Another new intramural feature is the initiation of an active program for the nurses. There will be swimming and diving championships; a chess, checker and bridge tournament and a foul shooting contest. A golf driving contest and a tennis tournament are planned for November 20 and 21.

Villanova, Burdened By Losing Season, Gets Praise From Opponents

The best losing team in the country!

That's the unwanted tribute thrown Villanova way two weeks ago. It came from Miami, and was echoed around the country from Texas to Indiana as the Wildcat gridironers plummeted to their fifth loss of 1957 to assure themselves of a losing record for the season—a season that may go down as one of the most frustrating in the annals of the game.

Worse Teams in Bowl

Claiming that it was "ludicrous" that this Villanova team should lose five games, a Miami sportswriter claimed that "much worse teams have appeared in the Orange Bowl here on New Year's Day."

However, ludicrous or not, fate, fumbles and flu have relegated the Main Liners to a losing record in this, their "comeback" year.

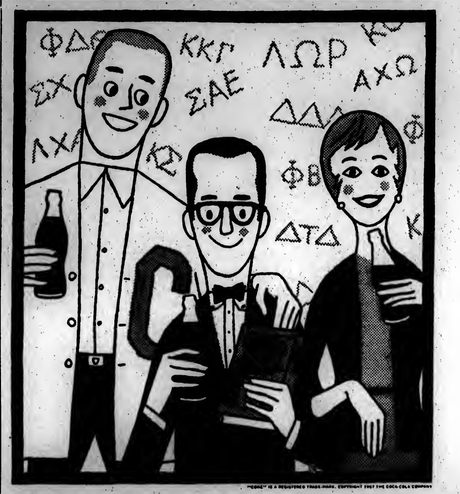
The reason? Well, a lot of people, including Head Coach Frank Reagan, would give their right arms to find out. The talent is there—fine coaching, an excellent backfield and a solid line that must be ranked with the country's best.

But it seems that when the Villanova nomads hit the road, Lady Luck doesn't go along for the ride. Fumbles did it in Baylor; flu, along with a costly injury to Don Luzzi, turned the trick in Virginia and Boston, along with a blocked kick that wouldn't stay in the end zone; another badly bouncing pigskin in the end zone brought about the Indiana loss, and then it was a fumble again in Miami.

Five Losses by T.D.

That adds up to five losses, by a touchdown or less, for a team that has outgained, outpassed and generally outplayed its opposition in most contests.

Statistics (see elsewhere on this page) show that, up to and including the Miami game, Villanova had more first downs (94 to 92), had outgained (1694 yds. to 1643 yds) and had outscored (78 to 74) their opposition in seven contests. And yet, they lost five of those games, by a combined total of 30 points.



The reason for Villanova's lack of success then seems to stem from mistakes. As one of the players on the team put it, "We're great for 58 minutes a game, but those other two—look out!"

One Consolation

And, unfortunately, the Wildcats' opposition has been quick to capitalize on any mistakes made. Of such capitalization, winning teams are born—and so are losing ones, if you happen to be on the wrong side.

So, it looks as though Villanova will have to be content this year with knowing that they are a better team than the records show.

There is one consolation, though. There's no better place than Philadelphia to have a losing record. It's becoming quite a tradition around these parts.

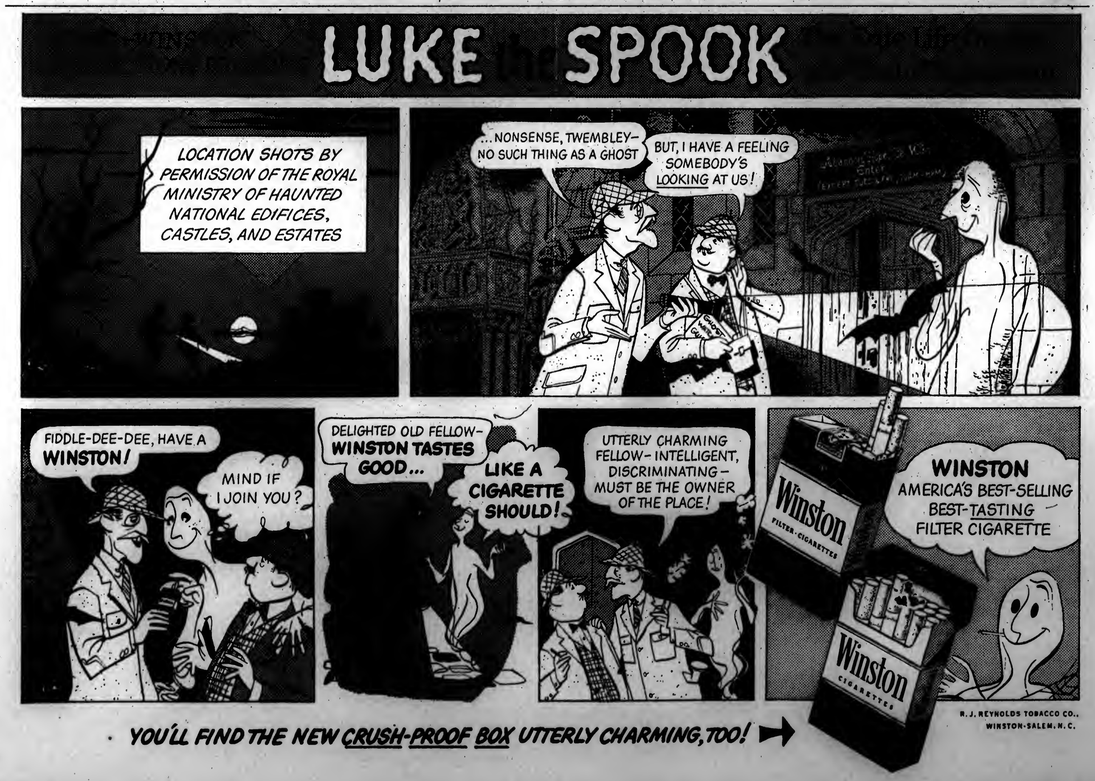
STUDENT COUNCIL VIEWS

By PAT NICHOLSON

One week ago tonight the Student Council of Villanova University made one of the most important forward steps in its history. The approval of a new Constitution based on the proposals of a constitutional committee headed by Tom Whelan and Don Kempf was necessary in the development of our Student Council to correspond with the present popularly accepted concept of student government in American colleges and universities. The new constitutional system as such will not go into effect until its corresponding by-laws have been approved by the council and the present tenitive approval of the administration is made final. It is hoped that the new system will go into effect prior to the Christmas vacation.



Just what is the present Student Government concept in American colleges and universities? In 1806 Thomas Jefferson sent a letter to the University of Virginia urging their continuation of a fine student government program. He said "The student government by giving authority and responsibility to students greatly aids in their development into outstanding citizens." Unfortunately very few schools followed the example of the University of Virginia. It wasn't for the most part until after World War II that student government programs actually became of a worthwhile nature. Since that time however, their development has been very rapid. Their great importance to the American college student has been recognized throughout the country. This summer in a letter to the 10th annual convention of the National Student Association of the United States the President of the United States, Dwight D. Eisenhower, stated that student governments are not only greatly beneficial to the colleges and universities, but what is more important, they train the students of today to be the leaders of tomorrow.

It has been generally recognized that to be worthwhile, Student Councils must be given a great deal of student responsibility. Rather than being only an advisory group, the Student Council, composed of duly elected representatives on the entire student body, should be the actual governing body of all undergraduate students. The opportunity to make important decisions and to assume definite responsibilities is a necessity in the development of capable student leaders. This is certainly a very important function of the educational system. Student government as well as Student Advisory Council, rather than the latter alone, is a short, but accurate way, of stating the student government concept prevalent in most colleges and universities.

Villanova has long realized the Value of student responsibility. In the Villanova handbook it is stated that "a considerable portion of the government devolves upon the students, who are expected to prepare for the future by assuming responsibility for their opinions and actions in university relations. However, under the old constitution the Student Council was no more than an advisory group to the administration. All decisions regarding the student body and organizations within the student body were nothing more than recommendations. Under the new constitution decisions of such a nature will be subject to review by the administration. If they are found not to be in opposition with the better interests of Villanova University, then such rulings will automatically become laws or enactments whichever the case may be. In all matters dealing with university policy or initiation of new programs or other matters of such a nature, the Student Council will continue to act in an advisory capacity. However the new system is designed to greatly facilitate the presentation, investigation, discussion, and decision on such matters.

The new constitution is constructed that all campus organizations will be dealing in many ways with the Student Council. As it will be the student leaders of the various organizations who are working with the council, the number of students profiting from the opportunity to assume definite responsibility for their decisions and activities shall be sizably increased.

There are many other advantages which should result from the new system of the Student Council. The most important advantages will be discussed in this column next week.

Cotillion, Wichita Game Highlight Last Fall Social Weekend; Gresh Featured

By JACK SERAFIN

Dancing to the music of the Charlie Gresh band will be the featured attraction at this Friday evening's Sophomore Cotillion. The favorable impression left by Gresh's organization at last year's Junior dinner dance is certain to be repeated.

Combined with Philadelphia's top society band, the sophomore class, headed by President Steve Mahle, will present as its theme "Persian Nights."

The decorations for this theme are being handled by Co-Chairmen Ron Dobies and John Halas who have announced that extensive preparations have been made to insure the success of this important part of the dance. The unusual theme of "Persian Nights" admits of an abundance of ideas that can be employed in the decorations, and the co-chairmen are taking full advantage of this fact in their work.

Ticket Sales Urged

Tickets for the Cotillion are $2.50 per couple. Chairman of the Cotillion, John Mulcahy, stated that the tickets will be sold during the remaining three days in the Pie Shoppe. In addition, they can be acquired from members of the sophomore class, and also at the door the night of the dance.

Both Mulcahy and Mahle stated that the event promises to be the highlight of this semester's social activities but can only be a success if full cooperation of the student body is given.

Open To All Students

Dancing will commence at 9 p.m. Friday evening and will continue until 1 a.m. The field house will serve as the site of the affair, continuing the tradition of past years. The affair anticipates a large sophomore attendance, but John Mulcahy emphasized that the affair is open to all classes. The combination of the Cotillion, Friday night, and the Wichita game, Saturday should make this the social highlight of the fall calendar.

580 Seniors Sign Application Forms For Interviews

Some 580 members of the class of 1958 have registered in the Placement Office for interviews during the spring recruitment season. This figure compares with 365 registrations last year, according to John A. Moritz, Placement Director.

The Arts majors have shown great interest in the forthcoming exam for the National Security Agency, which will be held on Saturday, Dec. 7, here at Villanova. Interviews will be held for those who successfully complete this examination on Feb. 10, 20, 21, 1958.

Engineers, who are not required to take the agency's exam, will also be interviewed at this time.

The pictures of Villanova's senior Collegiate Who's Who students appear on pages 8, 9 and 10 of this issue of the VILLANOVAN.

AL DOMBROWSKI
Charity Ball Chairman

The task of planning and constructing the decorations will be undr the supervision of Ed Knepley. The theme will be Christmas, but its treatment will remain secret until the night of the dance.

Buy Tickets Early

Ticket sales will begin Dec. 2, two weeks in advance. Co-chairmen Jack Frazer and Harry Georges have asked that all who plan to attend buy their tickets early to allow time for the selection of gifts for the orphans.

Ed Zeaser and Jerry McGrath will be in charge of the refreshments and the publicity will be handled by Jack Curtin and Bill Christy.

"Johnnies" Party

All proceeds from the dance will be used for the benefit of the children of St. John's Orphanage. They will go towards the party given the "Johnnies" the following Monday and the excess will be given to the orphanage.

The dance will start the annual Orphans' Weekend and will be followed Saturday with the orphans' outing, when the boys are taken into town by Villanova Students.

Debaters Win Over St. Joe's In Tourney

Bob O'Connor, president, Oz Scogna, treasurer, Frank Cunningham, recording secretary, and Bert Gratz represented the blue and white very well at the Brown University Invitational Debating Tournament recently bringing back to campus an 8-2 record including a victory over the debaters from St. Joe's.

Moderator Richard McDonough of the Speech Department and President Bob O'Conner announced that the emphasis for the first semester is on the training of the new members that have joined the society this year.

Serafin Novice Head

Jack Serafin has been appointed novice head and will conduct the various novice affairs that are scheduled. In conjunction with this, it was also announced that all novices will have ample opportunity to debate, because the society is now engaged in the Temple Circuit, which pits novice members from the various Philadelphia schools against each other.

The present novice members now have had a total of six debates in the circuit and have won four.

Tournaments Set

Other activities scheduled for this month include the Rutgers Novice Tournament, the University of Delaware Novice Tournament and a varsity tournament which will be held at Brown University, Rhode Island.

The newly-chosen list of Who's Who is being announced by the Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities through the VILLANOVAN.

The criteria which is necessary for consideration in this national honorary society are the participation in at least three extra-curricular activities and a 2.4 cumulative average. Also important in the appointment are other requirements which have been set up by the administration. They include acceptable disciplinary and chapel records.

Record Enrollment

In this, the 115th academic year of the university the enrollment reached an all-time high of 3,643 full time day students. It was upon this figure that Villanova's Who's Who was determined.

The list of candidates for this high collegiate honor was submitted by Student Council Chairman, Pat Nicholson; Class President, Clem Birch; Class of 1958 Sophomore President, Paul Laughlin; the VILLANOVAN Editor-in-Chief, Bob Mulcahy and the BELLE AIR Editor-in-Chief, Jack Daly.

The university deans and moderators of campus organizations submitted a list of 75 names while the above mentioned students submitted a list of 50 candidates.

Special Committee

After comprehensive discussions among the Who's Who Committee, which consisted of the Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., Dean of Men; Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., Vice President of Student Affairs; Rev. William Farrell, O.S.A., Assistant Chaplain; Nicholson and Birch, the lists were finally narrowed down to the quota of 32 names.

MONKey Business

. . . By Leo Rogers

First Things First

Who, of us does not feel the hair on the back of his neck bristle when he sees reading "Merry Xmas?" Yes, even at this early date. It would seem that the modern business world cannot even afford to allot to the typically American holiday of Thanksgiving its proper due for all their interest in boosting the Christmas (spirit?). No, not precisely spirit, but more exactly sales.

Perhaps this is an antiquated opinion, but the fact remains that the season has lost most of its true significance for much of the public. The woman-in-the-store is more concerned with whether rich old Uncle Freddy will realize that the sweater for his toy bulldog is not genuine cashmire, but just run-of-the-mill orlon and only cost $2.50 to boot. A real bargain, at any rate good enough for the mangy mutt—the canine that is.

What happened to the spirit of Tiny Tim? We're not advocating that everyone should be sent into raptures over the thrill of having plum pudding for the family feast. (No offense to Messrs. R&R. Their plum pudding in the glass jar is scrumptious, especially when more liberally doused with rum filled vanilla sauce). We are, however, wondering if the average American family is not losing a great deal in being bullied into conformity with the commercialized notion of Christmas.

It has already been mentioned above that this short airing of a point of view may seem slightly anticipatory, but the current gripe, viz. "Xmas" in particular and all that goes with it can be seen rearing its ugly head in the decor of the commercial establishments in any and all vicinities. The brine in the wound will become even moreirritating the closer we approach December 25, culminating in the departmental heads of stores clapping their hand with glee over the last minute ringing of the cash registers.

Commercialization has resulted in such heart warming little oddities as "Happy Birthday To My Mother-in-law's Brother", and "We were sorry to hear your dog was ill." Ridiculous as these may seem they should strike a familiar note.

It is here that we come back to our first point. With a little less of the "X" in the holidays and a little more of Christ in the holydays, the problem of commercialization and its kindred faults will be more than half solved.

New Student Council Constitution Praised for Bi-Cameral Provisions

By AL LAWLOR

The new constitution is designed to give a stronger and more workable foundation to the Student Council. The major revision is the introduction of a bi-cameral system. The Council will now consist of a Student Congress, whose membership will be the same as the membership in the Student Council now and a Student Senate composed of fifteen members elected from the student body.

GIAMARINO

I think that this system is the solid foundation upon which a more efficient governing body than we have had in the past can be built. Each body has definite powers. The Student be voted upon in the Senate and financial and judicial matters. All major proposals will first be voted upon in the senate and then sent to the Congress.

TOM MOAKLEY
Soph Engineer

In order to assure the student body of a better form of government, it has been deemed necessary that the present constitution and by-laws be revised.

In my opinion, this is a definite step toward advancement for our future Villanovans; for the bicameral legislature, which is to be used, is the most beneficiary factor in promoting democratic forms of government.

BETTY GIAMARINO
Frosh Nurse

The proposed constitution of the Student Council is a step in the right direction towards a stronger student government at Villanova University. The bicameral government proposed will facilitate the introduction of only important proposals to the Student Congress as all proposals must first be discussed by the Student Senate.

This will also hasten and make more efficient the actual meeting of the Student Congress. The creation of a Student Faculty Committee and Academic Affairs Committee as standing committees of the Council will enhance student-faculty relationships and provide a means by which any academic problems that arise may be ironed out efficiently and satisfactorily.

DE GROFT

If passed, the proposed consituation should place the Student Council in its proper prospective as a revered and strong student government.

W. J. DeGROFT
Senior C and F

I am of the opinion that with the new constitution in effect Villanova will realize a true governing body with definite powers and duties and effective operation.

In instituting this new constitution the Student Council has eliminated the main obstacle that had faced its dealings in the past the lack of efficiency. With the large council here at Villanova, a bi-cameral type of arrangement with a delegation of come the many problems that authorities was needed to overare presented at each meeting. The full advantage of this move will be completely realized in later years as the council assumes greater responsibility in a larger university.

Men of Science Always Need Humanities

By MR. GEORGE HARRIS
Chairman, Education Dept.

The advent of earth satellites is another dramatic reminder of the fantastic age in which we live. We have been assured that it is but the forerunner of even more spectacular achievements in man's conquest of outer space and in a general acceleration of scientific and technolical advancement. Such an event only tends to emphasize the importance of having a well educated citizenry to cope with the realities of today's kaleidoscopic changes.

Since the announcement of the launching of "Sputnik" we have read in our daily papers statements by national leaders expressing shock and amazement over the possibility that we have fallen behind Russia in the field of science. It is difficult to understand why this should come as a shock to our national leaders.

Certainly we should expect them to be familiar with the problems of education in our country. Our possible second place in this field of science has been caused not by problems that apply to all facets of education. "Sputnik" has rendered us a real service by emphasizing the problems in a specific field, let us hope that an attempt will be made to solve the problems in all phases of education and not just in the one phase that have been given national attention.

We are all familiar with the suggestions that have been made in the past few weeks to produce more and better scientists. Uudoubtedly tremendous amounts of money will be provided for buildings, scholarships, research and equipment in the field of science. In such a situation it is possible that we may lose our perspective. We need a careful study of our entire system of education from first grade through our universities that will result in an improved quality of education, we need a reassessment of our attitude toward teachers so that the status and compensation of teachers will be improved, we need the school buildings and equipment that are necessary for the education of the youth of our country.

It may be that as a result of the challenge created by the launching of "Sputnik" American colleges and universities will take upon themselves the important and necessary function of our technological institutes in training technicians. To do this would result in a neglect of the broad objectives of our colleges and universities in the training of true men of science. The true scientist needs not only technological training but also needs training in the humanities. It is one thing to unlock secrets of the universe-it is something else to harness these new discoveries for the good of mankind. It is here that the scientist needs training in the humanities. He finds in literature, in philosophy, and in history, the wisdom that he needs. The sciences and the humanities are not opposites but serve to complement each other.

The launching of "Sputnik" can serve as a blessing to us if it helps to point out the need for a thorough reappraisal of our entire system of education.

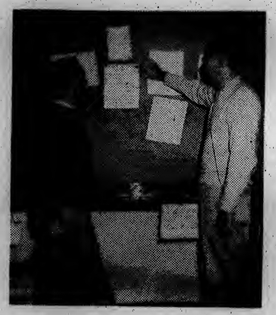
There's More To It Than You Think!

By JOE KINNEY Associate Editor

Wednesdays at Villanova are just like any other day with one outstanding exception—the VILLANOVAN is distributed throughout the university.



Dougherty Hall is filled with students walking hurriedly through the main corridor, standing in the resident chow line or huddled around a table in the day hop cafeteria—all preoccupied with what the VILLANOVAN has to say to them.

After the ordinary reader has scanned the front page, skipped the inside news and feature sections and glanced at the goings-on of Villanova's athletic teams before either stuffing the tabloid between a stack of books or throwing it away, seldom does he realize that the newspaper staff has already begun working on the following edition.

Go Get Him!

The preceding couple of days have been filled with reporters running around the campus (and sometimes far from Lancaster Pike) tracking down some student, faculty member or outsider who is said to possess "good copy" for the next edition.

The result of all this running around

is written and typed, before 6 p.m. on Wednesday (at least, that's the deadline the editors established at the beginning of the school year and reiterated at a special meeting just last week). About that time the Publications Office in Dougherty Hall (on the second floor if you're interested in joining the staff) is visited by the more ambitious members of the student organ for the purpose of rewriting, typing, writing headlines and even dashing off a story on the latest recording session sponsored by the Oper-Classica Society, which some negligent reporter failed to produce.

Ready For Action

Don't ever think the Villanovan office at this time is a quiet, orderly, smoky room with a silence broken only by the clickety-click of three or four typewriters. Far from it! A stranger from the radio station down the hall who might accidentally enter the "writing" office would probably find the center table surrounded by six or seven supposed journalistic geniuses moulding a possible page one story out of loose bits of information succeeded by others who type these loose bits into that page one story.

In one corner is Larry O'Rourke, managing editor, whose main task is layout of the inside news pages but who may be judged to be scribbling lines and penciling boxes on what is professionally recognized as a "dummy sheet". I do approximately the same damage to the editorial and feature pages, after discussing the content of the material to take up the space on these pages with Feature Co-editors, Frank Delany and John Kennedy.

The latter two gentlemen, producers of a score of interesting and controversial articles over the past couple of years, usually contribute at least one feature per week as well as writing the headlines and making sure that "their" pages are well-stocked with appropriate pictures.

Troubles Already

In the early part of the evening News Editors Ed Karrer and Joe Wheeler are extraordinarily optimistic about the possibility of submitting some truly "All-American" stories but by 9 o'clock, after failing to receive even the slightest notice from several of the bigger campus activities, in addition to having been disappointed by their best reporter's neglect to go see "soand so about that big dance in the Field House," the ambitious duo are almost ready to throw up their hands, leave the office, and forget about "next week's VILLANOVAN". If perseverance is a virtue, then Ed and Joe must be virtuous.

Jack Curtin and Frank Fleming when he can make it) are the isolationists of the group. They usually pick the far corner of the room as a base of Sports Operations. Jack and Frank are the Sports Editors, although the former is more widely known to those of our readers whose main interest is criticising the feature material of the paper or chemistry.

Error Committee

Still later, after the majority of the stories to be used have been written, John Fixl and his Copy Editor sidekick Ken Miller, a new appointee two weeks ago, begin their arduous job of digging for grammatical errors, separating each story into paragraphs and sometimes, retyping an inadequate article.

Our friend from the radio station, if he has the time and the curiosity to stay with us, could distinquish an editor from a regular staff member by noticing the facial expression, vocal tone and general actions of the inhabitants of the room. Editors have a worried, pessimistic expression; shout at the failure of one of their reporters to "Produce" ; and occasionally may be discovered dashing from another editor to the copy desk and back again over some disputed point.

Most Worried Fella

In the midst of all this confusion is Bob Mulcahy, the Chief, who has the most worried expression of any of the editors, doesn't shout unless absolutely necessary and wears out almost as much shoe leather as he does walking to classes all week.

Hours later, after headlines have been written for every story, the copy is assembled, stuffed into an envelope and sent to the printer in Philly via a VILLANOVAN staff editor.

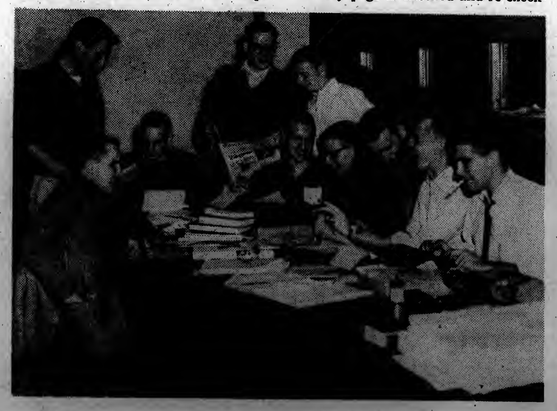
Managing Editor Larry O'Rourke explains how to set a story to linotype operator Leon Feirman at Long Publishing Co. Associate Editor Joe Kinney watches the process.

News that develops on Thursday goes through the same process as the night before, although on a much smaller scale.

Gimmo A Big Smile!

As the writing segment of the paper slackens, the photography department picks up. The stars of Campus Camera as well as every other print appearing in the following week's edition are photographed (or should be) on Thursday and Friday. If not, the shutter-snappers don't get too much studying done over the weekend.

Since the staff photographers develop their own "shots" in the dark room on the second floor of Good Counsel Hall, pictures taken as late as Monday afternoon may sometimes be found in the paper two days later.



Not every department of the VILLANAVAN is faced with a rigid deadline, however. Paul Terruso handles the advertising; John Mulcahy, Bob's younger brother, keeps the "photo morgue" up to date; and Jack Garrity manages the largest part of the staff, the Circulation Department.

Sunday Proofreading

Although the trio might not suffer from "deadline ulcers", they have consistently completed their allotted assignments week after week, even enough the major part of their duties go unnoticed by the VILLANOVAN readers.

It's been a long time since Editor Mulcahy and News Editor Karrer have spent Sunday evening at home or even off-campus. The pair, with the assistance of the copy editors, have a lot to do before every school week commences, since the "page proofs" are returned by the printer over the weekend.

Every page is checked and re-checked for typographical errors, grammatical and spelling mistakes. Pictures that were taken in the past few days are assembled and reserved for various positions on every page. Last-minute stories are written, typed and copy-read in order that almost every "hole" in the paper is filled.

Platemaker Art Martin describes how negative plates are made of every page before the VILLANOVAN is sent to press to O'Rourke and Kinney.

To The Printer Again

Just before my first class on Monday morning, Ed Karrer hands me a present, a proofread VILLANOVAN, a mess of pictures and more likely than not, two or three late stories to go back again to the printer.

Trying to drive to Long Publishing Co. on Cherry St. near Broad and back to the campus again for my next class in less than two hours is hard enough but when there's city traffic to contend with, then the race to Philly and the return is even more exciting.

After a relaxing "afternoonful" of classes succeeded by an editorial meeting at 4:30 to plan the following issue, the top three editors are usually joined by Karrer, Curtin and Bill Christy on their trip to the printer for an ordinarily interesting, although tedious, evening. It's "make-up" night.

A Long Night Ahead

As Ed Karrer proofreads, Curtin is busy pasting in sports stories that developed over the weekend while Mulcahy and O'Rourke mull over the news pages. I have my hands full with the feature section so I always pick out a bright and comfortable "paste-up" desk for my nocturnal companion.

Each page is proofed again, up-to-the-minute editorials are written, pictures are inserted on each page with corresponding "cutlines" under each photo and ads are pasted in. After every "hole" has been filled and all corrections made, the paper is "put to bed" with a prayer that everything comes out alright.

This may sound like a "one-two--three" routine but it's not. Probably, a truer statement than Monday is "paste-up" night would be Monday night and a major portion of early Tuesday morning is "paste-up" time.

Since the VILLANOVAN uses the offset process, each page must be photographed befor being "run off" on the press.

Tuesdays are editorial holidays at Villanova. As the reporters start the cycle again, the editors catch up on studies and lost sleep in preparation for Wednesday night and the beginning of another "newspaper" week.

After today's edition, the VILLANOVAN will not appear until Dec. 11 due to the Thanksgiving holidays. By that time the staff will be so restless from having nothing to do for almost three weeks that the lone December issue should be a journalistic masterpiece.

An Outsider Gives Inside Story On The BMOC

By JACK CURTIN

CURTIN

I suppose all of us have, at one time or another, dreamed of becoming members of that legendary breed, the Big Man On Campus. I guess I have. There is something thrilling in the idea of being looked up to around campus, and I suppose it gives one a certain romantic air that fascinates the female members of the collegiate set. However, I have decided that a life of fame isn't for me. I just wasn't made to be a leader of men.

One thing I guess I lack is self-confidence. There is a definite need for the typical B.M.O.C. to feel that he is somewhat infallible. Unfortunately, I am rather prone to making mistakes. Why, I have been known to bet against the Yankees, Notre Dame and President Eisenhower, and do it all within one week. Mistakes in judgment such as these are not acceptable in the character of a campus leader.

Just A Big, Simple Boy

Possibly my biggest disadvantage is my shyness. I am quick to follow the lead at a party, rally or other such function, and have even been known to come up with some pretty good ideas of my own; but it is quite impossible for me to jump to my feet and excitedly explain some plan of mine. The sight of all those anxious and expectant faces reduces me to a quivering mass, unable to speak coherently (although, at times, this seems to be an admirable trait in the campus leader). Usually I just mumble my suggestion in a plaintive tone and am quite overjoyed should anyone find it to his liking.

Another thing that bothers me about the B.M.O.C. is his relationships with the aforementioned female collegiate group. He usually conforms to one of two patterns: either he is a rather footloose individual who has a different date every weekend, or is madly in love with one particular young lady. My own lack of faith in what I have to offer eliminates the second possibility and womanhood's lack of faith in the same eliminates the first. Obviously, I am handicapped in every way.

The Price Of Greatness

However, I don't want to give the impression that I don't admire those who have succeeded in becoming a part of this select group. They are very happy it seems—although a few have confided in me during a weak moment that theirs is not an easy life. And, once you really begin to think about it, this is very understandable.

The Big Man On Campus must dedicate himself to the general public since it is to them that he owes his existence. While you or I may shuffle from class unshaven and shabbily dressed, the B.M.O.C. must be bright and cheery, walk briskly and present a shining, clean-shaven countenance for the inspection of all. And he must be impeccably dressed in the latest collegiate style, lest he dissappoint that small contingent of students who have chosen him for their own special ideal. Laundry bills alone are a terrific burden on the campus idol.

Blessed Are The Over-Informed

The campus leader must also be well informed. It is his duty, his supreme obligation to always know the story behind the story so that he may enlighten those less fortunate individuals who have become confused by the distorted facts emanating from official sources. He must have an inside knowledge of all campus affairs and be able to give an opinion on them. This often necessitates his being awake far into the night, running about campus to confer with other B.M.O.C.'s behind locked doors. Naturally, his health is none too good. And most of all, the B.M.O.C. must discover a cause. Whether he moves toward it or not, the campus leader must have some objective which he claims is his. And, with the ever increasing number of B.M.O.C.s, it is very hard for the struggling newcomer to find an unchampioned cause to claim for his own.

With only these few examples, we can see the strain upon these members of the higher echelon. I feel that it is about time we common students gave these men some sort of recognition for their work. I hereby propose that varsity letters, similar to those awarded our athletes, be given at the end of the year to the B.M.O.C.'s who fulfill adequately all the requirements of their position. After all, a four minute mile is nothing compared to a cross campus run at three in the morning.

Political Round-up

Democrats Are Heady With Success In Recent Election

BY FRANCIS BONNER

On Nov. 5, the voters of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Virginia and Kentucky went to the polls to decide which political party was going to direct the course of government in their states and cities for the next four years. When the count was taken it was quite evident that they had placed their trust in the Democratic Party.

What result will this election have on the national scene? Many political observers feel that the result of this election acted as a weather vane which indicated a strong Democratic trend for the national elections of '58 and '60.

Democrats Win Negro Vote

They have come to this conclusion, first, because President Eisenhower gave strong support to the Republican candidates in all these states. He stated that a Republican victory would be the shot in the arm his administration needed. Secondly, it showed that the Republican appeal to the Northern Negro was rejected, to the extent that the Republican Party lost ground among negro voters.

BONNER

The administration has indicated in the last week that it is considering calling in former President Harry S. Truman and his Secretary of State Dean Acheson to discuss the nation's critical problems. The White House has also announced that it has asked the leading Democrat Adlai Stevenson for advice on N.A.T.O.

Belatedly Bipartisan

Many observers feel that this is an attempt by the Republicans to show that their policies are bipartisan. Thus they could not be held entirely responsible for THEIR failures when 1960 rolls around.

Many other observers feel that the administration has finally come to the realization that the American people want a co-operative effort between both political parties where the security of the nation is concerned. This was indicated by the results of last week's election.

The Scoreboard

Now let us look at the break down state by state. The Democratic party captured six cities from the Republicans. They carried Lancaster for the first time since 1933 and Pottsville for the first time since it became a city 47 years ago.

They retained Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Scranton by huge majorities and lost no offices throughout the state to the Republicans. It has also been reported that Republican leaders are warring over candidates for the Governorship and the United States Senate. Because of this and in view of the recent Democratic victories it looks mighty good for the Democrats.

Senatorial Hopeful

New York—With Robert Wagner's landslide victory by over 800,000 votes, he has put himself in a position to capture the Democratic nomination for United States Senate. His party's tremendous victories in heavily Republican upstate N. Y. indicates that he will be elected.

New Jersey—Governor Meyner's tremendous victory in which he carried in with him a democratic Assembly for the first time in 20 years places him in contention for the Democratic nomination for President in 1960. But this writer feels that Senator John Kennedy still holds a commanding lead.

All This and Segregation Too

Virginia—The victories of the segregationists in Virginia places Senator Byrd as the leader of the Southern element of the Democratic party. It is conceivable that he and his friends will form a third party in 1960. But even if this should happen, I feel that the result will be the same as in 1948.

The Democrats are singing "Happy Days are Here Again."

Feature Staff Meeting

All columist and feature writers must attend a meeting of the VILLANOVAN feature staff today at 4:30 p.m. in the Publications Office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall to consider the content of material for the remaining editions this semester. Ideas for new columns, another series and more interesting features may be submitted at this time. Any undergraduate interested in joining this department is urged to attend today's meeting.

Mein Kempf

Of Men, Maids, Social Events, The Team and A Little Spleen

By DON KEMPF

The sudden increase in the sale of tuxedoes along the Mainline during the past week would indicate that there might be some sort of prom in the offing for many Villanovans. The fact is that there are three: Chestnut Hill, Immaculata and that other girl's school (the name of which escapes me for the moment) have all scheduled proms on what should prove to be a rather eventful weekend.

The former two will hold their dances on Friday evening, while that other school has scheduled theirs for Saturday—perhaps through fear of competition with the others. Well Villanovans, look over the field, sit back, relax, wait for those phone calls and then take your pick.

Cotillion Spotlight

Villanovans will also find quite a bit of activity on the home campus this weekend. Friday evening the Class of 1960 will sponsor its first dance, the Sophomore Cotillion. It will be interesting to see if John Mulcahy and his hard working group of assistants can match the job turned in last year.

KEMPF

Plans so far promise an enjoyable evening; one enthused sophomore said that the entire Belle Masque production might be used again this week—as the centerpiece.

Lies, Lies, Lies!

Another question of great interest, especially among the sophomores, about the coming weekend concerns a certain Irish Vice-President of the Class of 1960 (whose name we will not mention). Word is out that he does not have a date yet for the class function . . . in fact according to a certain rumor being spread, he has never had a date in his life.

Saturday afternoon Villanova's travel-worn football team returns home for the season's last engagement. A victory over Wichita would at least provide the distinction of having won all of this year's home games. To many observers the final gun will sound a sad note, for it will mark the last appearance of Don Luzzi in his familiar number 71 on the Villanova grid iron.

Kempf Vents Spleen On Curtin

The current rash of articles in which various members of our automated nonconformist society creep from beneath their rocks waving pens which they clearly perceive to be mightier than swords in order to "vent spleen" or refute or defend or counter-refute or counter-defend or whathaveyou on this and that and any old thing is an example of a modern man in a modern world striving onward ever onward to create a new and a louder sound and fury signifying a great deal but doing nothing.

Rosemont College of the Main Line will hold another jazz concert this Sunday afternoon; and, if it is anything like the last one, it should prove to be quite enjoyable.

POETRY CORNER

Pseudo-Gothic

I wandered through the maze,
I stumbled in the dark—
I smelled the blood of dying men
I heard the rattling bones of death
Then came the cry of dying light—
The drowned in sulphurous clouds of doom.
I stepped upon a lifeless friend
His eyes were eyes that inward turned
His jaw was in a ghastly set
His hair was frosty white and thinned
A chilly cold seemed to my rear
A grating chill flashed my spine.
I turned to meet my pending death—
He smiled and said "You've passed your English lit."

Judge Reimel Competition Ends Tonight; $100 Award

Tonight at 8:15, the final moot court argument in the Judge Reimel Award Competition will be held in the courtroom at Villanova University School of Law.

Juniors Explain What Class Ring Means to Them

The Junior Class recently conducted a unique survey on campus, the purpose of which was to discover what its members considered the significance of the traditional class ring to be.

A cross section of the replies follows:

Bill Grant, Pre-Law—"In years to come my ring will represent a symbol of the happiest years of my life. I will take great pride in answering a strangers question—"Villanova!"

Bill Somerville—Engineering—"It represents the wonderful experiences I have enjoyed here at Villanova and the people that I'll look upon as friends for the rest of my life. The ring on my finger is a reality of the memories in my heart."

Francisco J. Pacheco, C&F—"My class ring is more than just a piece of gold and stone. It symbolizes everything that has come to be part of my life. It will serve as a reminder, for the rest of my life, of what I am and what I am to be."

Dick Kerr, C&F—"My class ring will serve as a reminder of my struggles toward a degree, my accomplishments and the good times I had here at VU. It is something I will always be proud to wear and I will try to live up to the standards it represents."

Jim Corey, Arts —"To me, our class ring means the prospective culmination of four years of undergraduate study at Villanova—those four years marked with a pleasurable association of classmates—the class of 1959."

Joe Rice, Engineering—"Our class ring is to our person as the chapel is to our campus. It is Villanova."

Ken Corman, Arts—"Since my ring will be with me all my life, it will serve as a constant reflection of the good times, my friends and everything else that is Villanova."

Ed Stroud, Engineering—"My class ring symbolizes a feeling of belonging to Villanova and to the class of '59—a certain intangible quality that will remain as part of me, throughout my entire life."

The facts of the case are based upon the now famous Girard College litigation. The winning team will be the recipients of the one hundred dollar award which the Hon. Theodore L. Reimel, Judge of Common Pleas Court No. 5, Philadelphia County, each year donates to the best moot court team.

Three Judges On Bench

Hearing the argument and judging the contestants will be a distinguished group of justices. In addition to Judge Reimel, the bench will be made up of the Hon. Thomas M. Madden, Judge of the Federal District Court for the district of New Jersey and the Hon. John V. Diggins, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, Delaware County.

The two teams that will take part in the competition will be selected through a series of elimination rounds. The entire student body of the school is divided into eight law clubs, each of which enter one three-man team.

Girard College Case

The facts of the case involve two Negro youths (petitioners) who applied for admission to Girard College, a school supported by a private fund for the benefit of "poor, male white orphans." After considerable litigation the Supreme Court of the United States ruled that the school could not continue to discriminate against the petitioners since the board of trustees in charge of the school was made in part of city officials. On reconsideration of the case, however, the Orphan's Court for the County of Philadelphia substituted a new board of trustees, composed of private citizens, and this board reaffirmed the exclusion of the petitioners.

Tonight it will be assumed that the argument is being made before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and petitioners will be contending that, in effect, the Orphan's Court could not substitute private trustees to do what public trustees could not do.

Alternatively counsel for the new board of trustees will argue that no matter how much such discrimination may offend private conscience, it was and is the right of a person to endow a private institution for the benefit of any group he chooses, regardless of race or religion.

Cast and Director Garner Credit For 'Joan' Success

By JOE WHEELER
Drama Critic

It is unfortunate that this show must be reviewed on opening night. This is never the rule in the professional field as almost every play that reaches Broadway has had at least two weeks tryout in Philadelphia or Boston. This gives the cast a chance to grow in their parts and develop a certain stage presence.

At the opening the most glaring mistakes were found in the first night nervousness of the cast. Even till the fifth scene there was a small degree of raggedness. The pace of the show was alternately fast and then lagging. This may be attributed to the fact that this was the first time the majority of the cast, if not all, had performed in the arena theater.

There was a comparatively small house on opening night, and it may be said that it was a rather cold and aloof audience. It wasn't till the third scene that they warmed up, despite this there were a few very strong performances given in the first two scenes.

Sigerson Stars

Claire Sigerson was excellent as the maid og Orleans, giving an interpretation of the part that should have pleased even Shaw, who was very rarely pleased by interpretations other than his own. Miss Sigerson in the early scenes was a little weak in her development of Joan but in scene three on the bank of the Loire River she finally becomes Joan, up till then she was only a shell, a shadow that at times showed potential. This we could see in scene two in her conference with the Dauphin whom I shall say more of later. Miss Sigerson reaches true greatness in the trial scene, very little can be said except that one could feel that this girl was actually what she claimed to be and you developed a strong dislike for the members of the court. You are left with the feeling that this Joan, a determined child of 17 who commanded an amazing amount of force and vitality, was really a saint.

In the second lead Norm Peer was outstanding as the weak willed vacillating Dauphin. This part could be interpreted as the comic relief, but despite the humor of the character there was a strong dramatic development. This weakling is the cause of all the problems. He is weak where Joan is strong and this basic weakness finally turns him against her. Peer did quite well. He milked the part for all that it was worth but to his credit he didn't over play it as he so easily could have.

Dave McDermott had the difficult part as the snobbish and high handed Archbishop of Rheims a master diplomat that could foresee the potential of allowing this girl to lead the armies of France.

Future Star

The Pompus Robert De Baudicourt was played by Bill Friend Mr. Friend at times evidenced some obvious signs of nervousness but in spite of this he gave a very good performance. This young man has a good future in Belle Masque and he is the one actor that we pick for you to watch in the future Belle Masque productions.

Mike Klesius was strong in the role of Dunois, Bastard of Orleans, the French General. The most striking thing about Mr. Klesius is his powerful voice, an attribute that he took advantage of to a good effect.

The Earl of Warwick, Ronald Anderson, cut quite a striking figure while on stage. Mr. Anderson is also gifted with an exceptional voice. His role was that of the political interest in Joan's Burning. This was a part that if interpreted too liberally could have caused the play to degenerate into a fiasco, but fortunately the part was treated with respect and taste.

An unusual character, but typical of Shaw, was Chaplain De Stogumber. A character that is a symbol of British Nationalism, a nationalism that was very extreme. In this challanging role was Owen Klein who after a slight falter at the onset did quite well.

Stuffy Bishop

Dick Dressler turned in a excellent performance as the Bishop of Beauvais, Peter Cauchon. Cauchon is the rationalist who wants to burn Joan as a heretic but he must justify his action. This is in direct opposition to Stogumber who wanted her burned because she insulted the honor of the English. Dressler as the bishop was properly superior and dignified to suit the needs of the part.

It would be unfair to omit the fine performances of Jim Gilligan and John Walsh in the trial scene. One the demanding prosecutor the other the pleading monk who wanted to save Joan, two extremes that complimented each other and added strength to the scene.

Inquisitor Birch

One of the better performances of the night was contributed by Clem Birch as the Inquisitor. This part is demanding on any actor as it has what might be the longest single speech in English drama, a speech that runs close to 10 minutes in duration and which can easily become boring in the hands of an inadequate actor. Mr.Birch never once came close to being dull.

At this point I feel slightly guilty in not commenting in detail on the performances of Tom Flynn, Charles Maier, John Sigerson, Ed McCarthy, John Cannon and the rest of the cast all of which gave admirable performances, but space restricts me.

The critique held after the performance on Wednesday night was considered by the cast very helpful although some of the comments seemed to be rather petty in the eyes of this reporter.

Field House Echo Chamber

Again the one problem that confronted Belle Masque was acoustics. When an actor attempted to project he came in the danger of yelling or not being heard. This is one thing that always mars the Masque productions and for that matter anything else of similar nature that is attempted in the Field House. The audience should take this into consideration when they attend functions in that echo chamber.

Mr. Richard Duprey, masque director has developed some fine young actors and good work can be expected from them in the future.

I would conclude by saving, Belle Masque has another hit to add to its already long list of successes. And St. Joan can be classified with the best.

An Outsider Gives Inside Story On The BMOC

By JACK CURTIN

CURTIN

I suppose all of us have, at one time or another, dreamed of becoming members of that legendary breed, the Big Man On Campus. I guess I have. There is something thrilling in the idea of being looked up to around campus, and I suppose it gives one a certain romantic air that fascinates the female members of the collegiate set. However, I have decided that a life of fame isn't for me. I just wasn't made to be a leader of men.

One thing I guess I lack is self-confidence. There is a definite need for the typical B.M.O.C. to feel that he is somewhat infallible. Unfortunately, I am rather prone to making mistakes. Why, I have been known to bet against the Yankees, Notre Dame and President Eisenhower, and do it all within one week. Mistakes in judgment such as these are not acceptable in the character of a campus leader.

Just A Big, Simple Boy

Possibly my biggest disadvantage is my shyness. I am quick to follow the lead at a party, rally or other such function, and have even been known to come up with some pretty good ideas of my own; but it is quite impossible for me to jump to my feet and excitedly explain some plan of mine. The sight of all those anxious and expectant faces reduces me to a quivering mass, unable to speak coherently (although, at times, this seems to be an admirable trait in the campus leader). Usually I just mumble my suggestion in a plaintive tone and am quite overjoyed should anyone find it to his liking.

Another thing that bothers me about the B.M.O.C. is his relationships with the aforementioned female collegiate group. He usually conforms to one of two patterns: either he is a rather footloose individual who has a different date every weekend, or is madly in love with one particular young lady. My own lack of faith in what I have to offer eliminates the second possibility and womanhood's lack of faith in the same eliminates the first. Obviously, I am handicapped in every way.

The Price Of Greatness

However, I don't want to give the impression that I don't admire those who have succeeded in becoming a part of this select group. They are very happy it seems—although a few have confided in me during a weak moment that theirs is not an easy life. And, once you really begin to think about it, this is very understandable.

The Big Man On Campus must dedicate himself to the general public since it is to them that he owes his existence. While you or I may shuffle from class unshaven and shabbily dressed, the B.M.O.C. must be bright and cheery, walk briskly and present a shining, clean-shaven countenance for the inspection of all. And he must be impeccably dressed in the latest collegiate style, lest he dissappoint that small contingent of students who have chosen him for their own special ideal. Laundry bills alone are a terrific burden on the campus idol.

Blessed Are The Over-Informed

The campus leader must also be well informed. It is his duty, his supreme obligation to always know the story behind the story so that he may enlighten those less fortunate individuals who have become confused by the distorted facts emanating from official sources. He must have an inside knowledge of all campus affairs and be able to give an opinion on them. This often necessitates his being awake far into the night, running about campus to confer with other B.M.O.C.'s behind locked doors. Naturally, his health is none too good. And most of all, the B.M.O.C. must discover a cause. Whether he moves toward it or not, the campus leader must have some objective which he claims is his. And, with the ever increasing number of B.M.O.C.s, it is very hard for the struggling newcomer to find an unchampioned cause to claim for his own.

With only these few examples, we can see the strain upon these members of the higher echelon. I feel that it is about time we common students gave these men some sort of recognition for their work. Miss Sigerson in the early scenes was a little weak in her development of Joan but in scene three on the bank of the Loire River she finally becomes Joan, up till then she was only a shell, a shadow that at times showed potential. This we could see in scene two in her conference with the Dauphin whom I shall say more of later. Miss Sigerson reaches true greatness in the trial scene, very little can be said except that one could feel that this girl was actually what she claimed to be and you developed a strong dislike for the members of the court. You are left with the feeling that this Joan, a determined child of 17 who commanded an amazing amount of force and vitality, was really a saint.

In the second lead Norm Peer was outstanding as the weak willed vacillating Dauphin. This part could be interpreted as the comic relief, but despite the humor of the character there was a strong dramatic development. This weakling is the cause of all the problems. He is weak where Joan is strong and this basic weakness finally turns him against her. Peer did quite well. He milked the part for all that it was worth but to his credit he didn't over play it as he so easily could have.

Dave McDermott had the difficult part as the snobbish and high handed Archbishop of Rheims a master diplomat that could foresee the potential of allowing this girl to lead the armies of France.

Future Star

The Pompus Robert De Baudicourt was played by Bill Friend Mr. Friend at times evidenced some obvious signs of nervousness but in spite of this he gave a very good performance. This young man has a good future in Belle Masque and he is the one actor that we pick for you to watch in the future Belle Masque productions.

Mike Klesius was strong in the role of Dunois, Bastard of Orleans, the French General. The most striking thing about Mr. Klesius is his powerful voice, an attribute that he took advantage of to a good effect.

The Earl of Warwick, Ronald Anderson, cut quite a striking figure while on stage. Mr. Anderson is also gifted with an exceptional voice. His role was that of the political interest in Joan's Burning. This was a part that if interpreted too liberally could have caused the play to degenerate into a fiasco, but fortunately the part was treated with respect and taste.

An unusual character, but typical of Shaw, was Chaplain De Stogumber. A character that is a symbol of British Nationalism, a nationalism that was very extreme. In this challanging role was Owen Klein who after a slight falter at the onset did quite well.

Stuffy Bishop

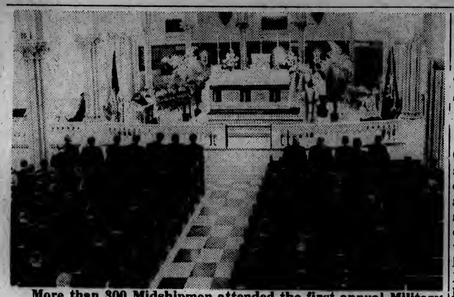
Dick Dressler turned in a excellent performance as the Bishop of Beauvais, Peter Cauchon. Cauchon is the rationalist who wants to burn Joan as a heretic but he must justify his action. This is in direct opposition to Stogumber who wanted her burned because she insulted the honor of the English. Dressler as the bishop was properly superior and dignified to suit the needs of the part.

It would be unfair to omit the fine performances of Jim Gilligan and John Walsh in the trial scene. One the demanding prosecutor the other the pleading monk who wanted to save Joan, two extremes that complimented each other and added strength to the scene.

Inquisitor Birch

One of the better performances of the night was contributed by Clem Birch as the Inquisitor. This part is demanding on any actor as it has what might be the longest single speech in English drama, a speech that runs close to 10 minutes in duration and which can easily become boring in the hands of an inadequate actor. Mr.Birch never once came close to being dull.

At this point I feel slightly guilty in not commenting in detail on the performances of Tom Flynn, Charles Maier, John Sigerson, Ed McCarthy, John Cannon and the rest of the cast all of which gave admirable performances, but space restricts me.



The critique held after the performance on Wednesday night was considered by the cast very helpful although some of the comments seemed to be rather petty in the eyes of this reporter.

Field House Echo Chamber

Again the one problem that confronted Belle Masque was acoustics. When an actor attempted to project he came in the danger of yelling or not being heard. This is one thing that always mars the Masque productions and for that matter anything else of similar nature that is attempted in the Field House. The audience should take this into consideration when they attend functions in that echo chamber.

Mr. Richard Duprey, masque director has developed some fine young actors and good work can be expected from them in the future.

I would conclude by saving, Belle Masque has another hit to add to its already long list of successes. And St. Joan can be classified with the best.

More than 300 Midshipmen attended the first annual Military Mass last Saturday in the University Chapel.

Villanova Singers Begin Work On Concert Season

The Villanova Singers, after successfully completing several liturgical commitments in the beginning of the semester, are starting work on their concert season which will begin with the Annual Faculty Banquet, Dec. 17.

Immediately following the concert, volunteer members of the organization will carol at the neighboring girls colleges.

At the last rehearsal Ken MacGillivray, president of the Singers, announced a tentative schedule of forthcoming concerts including appearances at Rosemont and Immaculata Colleges and Notre Dame of Villanova High School.

The biggest and most important showing for the singers is in the second semester when the Choral Festival will be held at St. Joseph's College, March 1.

First Foreign Adventure

This will be the third annual grouping of the area glee clubs, the first two having been held in the Villanova field house.

The only other such festival is held annually in the spring in the Mid-west with the glee clubs of the Big Ten schools participating.

Each choral organization will appear for ten to 15 minutes singing a few of its best songs and at the end all the glee clubs will perform en masse, singing two songs arranged for both male and female voices.

Some of the repertoire for the Faculty Banquet will include a Bach Chorale, "Break Forth! O Beauteous Heavenly Light"; Sigmond Romberg's "Stouthearted Men"; some Christmas carols, "Lo! How a Rose," "Silent Night," "Willie Bring Your Little Drum", and "Aura Lee".

HERBERT FISS
Directing Singers

Singing Deans

Harold Gill Reuschein, Dean of the Law School, will sing the first verse of the Alma Mater while Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., Dean of Arts and Sciences, will do a solo of "O Holy Night" and other Chirstmas carols.

the singers this year are forming

In place of the old Mainliners, an octet which will do specialty numbers in a barbershop harmony style.

As of now there are nine boys in the group which include top tenors Tom McCahn and Jim O'Leary; second tenors Paul Muller and Bill Henry (the only seniors of the group); baritones Pat Grossi and Jim Corey and basses Frank Connelly, Dave O'Conner and Charlie Carroll.

Interesting Repertoire

A few of the songs they are working on are: "Kentucky Babe," "Mood Indigo" and "The Whiffenpoof Song" which will be part of their offering at the banquet.

They will also sing some Christmas songs that will include a special arrangement of "God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen."

This year Mr. Herbert Fiss is directing the singers who in past years were led by Dean Reuschlein.

NSA Inquiry Slated For Next Month

The National Security Agency has announced that the Professional Qualification Test will be given on this campus Saturday Dec. 7.

The announcement indicated that students with majors in English, languages, economics, political science, history, geography, international relations, foreign affairs, journalism and other similar areas of study are needed for appointments to permanent National Security Agency positions in the Washington D.C. area.

Advancement in this field is assured by training programs, work with experts in various fields, tuition subsidies for study in local institutions and N.S.A. fellowship plan for full time study with full salary and tuition paid.

In addition to the degree requirements, the N.S.A. demands ingenuity and flexibility in starting and pursuing research projects, purposeful, creative curiosity and a broad comprehension of world affairs.

Further information and admission to the examination may be obtained from the Placement Office or by writing to the Education Testing Service, 20 Nassau St., Princeton, New Jersey.

Father Krupa Assigned To Japan

The Rev. George Krupa, O.S.A., formerly of Villanova and moderator of the Belle Masque Dramatic Society has been assigned to the Augustinian missions in Japan. At present he is on the last leg of his journey to that country. In a letter to his brother, Jake Krupa, Father Krupa disclosed the details of his itinerary.

Father Krupa stated that his stay in Rome was "the most pleasant and most interesting" part of the whole trip. While there he visited many churches and historical places both in Rome and in the vicinity.

Among the religious sites which he visited were the four great basilicas of St. Peter's St. John Laeran Library, St. Paul's Outside the Walls, St. Mary Major, and the Vatican Library and Museum. The historical sites which he visited were, the Roman Forum, the Baths of Caricalla, the arch of Constantine, and the Colosseum.

Mass At Crypt

Father Krupa's visit was highlighted by seeing the Holy Pontiff and receiving his blessing. Father Krupa was both fortunate and generous in offering a Mass for all Villanovans in the Crypt of St. Peter's

On the first part of his journey Father Krupa stayed for approximately a week in London with the Irish Augustinians. He expressed delight in seeing and visiting the cathedrals, abbeys and government buildings of London. He said however that his memories of Rome make it difficult to describe London.

Visits London

Nevertheless, Father Krupa did enjoy London and visited among other places the London Tower, Parliament and Westminster Cathedral.

Lynx Meets First Deadline Due For Campus Sale Dec.

The first issue of the LYNX, Villanova's literary magazine, for this academic year goes to press tomorrow. The issue will reappear on campus for sale on Dec. 12.

Since this publication date is two months in advance of last year's publication date, it raises the possibility of a third issue, thus making the LYNX truly a quarterly. This however is entirely contingent upon the flow of material from the student body. The response so far in terms of submitted material has been very gratifying according to Frank Delany, editor-in-chief.

The final steps in the preparation of the issue will be accomplished by the LYNX staff which will meet in the publications office of Dougherty Hall at 7:30 this evening. All interested are invited to pitch in and help.

All those interested in writing are reminded of the deadline for the second issue which is Jan. 18. Delany suggests that the Christmas vacation is a good time to get something written.

Opera Classica Attendance Up; Party Planned

Opera Classica will feature the second in the Music Appreciation Series records this evening, Anthony P. Angeline, club moderator, has announced.

Before giving the performance of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto, an analysis will be given of the three movements.

Opera Classica gets between five and seven new members each week and Charles J. Fritz, president, fears that larger accomodations will be needed by next semester.

Attendance Pleasing

Turnouts at weekly concerts whether they be symphonic or operatic have been extremely large.

On Dec. 2 the London recording of Richard Strauss's Der-Rosenkavalier (The Knight of the Rose) will be heard in preparation for the Metropolitan Opera production on Dec. 3 in Philadelphia.

In view of the requests for another stereophonic concert, O-C will schedule one on Sunday, Dec. 8 at 7 p.m. in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Tape Recording Planned

The complete Tchiakovsky "Nutcracker Ballet Suite" on sonatape will be featured and a party will follow the concert.

Dues for the stereophonic and Christmas party will be one dollar and this meeting will be open to non-members.

A 38 page Program Guide listing all classical music activities on campus as well as at the Academy of Music was released on Nov. 20 and it also includes a complete listing of all operatic programs for the year on Radio Station WVIL.

O-C Has Tickets

After an absence of almost two years from Philadelphia, Renata Tebaldi will sing Violetta in "La Traviata" in a Metropolitan production.

Although tickets at the Academy are all sold out, O-C is accepting orders for a limited amount of tickets which it owns. Only Section A amphitheatre seats are available at three dollars.

Math Club Reorganized; Officers, Speakers Named

By JOE KULICK

The Mathematics Club of Villanova University, long dormant in the ever-changing scene of campus activities, has been subject to reorganization and modernization.

The three previous meetings this semester of the organization have developed what was once merely the title of a campus activity into an active, compact group of determined and imaginative individuals.

Faculty and Guest Speakers

A series of interesting and thought-provoking topics has been arranged which will cater to the tastes of all students. Speakers at the forthcoming meetings will come not only from the club members, but from the faculty of our own university, from the faculties of area colleges and from various industrial firms and research laboratories of the Delaware Valley area.

Computers and Numbers

The initial address of the semester was delivered by Joseph A. Celia, Senior Mathematics Major and President of the Mathematics Club. His subject —"The Roll of the Mathematician in the Field of Computers" —was a timely and informative lecture. At the meeting tomorrow, Thursday, November 21 the topic will be "Numbers—Past and Present" presented by Daniel M. Ramsey, Junior Mathematics Major.

Students whose interests are of technical, scientific or philosophical nature are invited to attend the meeting of the Mathematics Club tomorrow in Room 105, Annex Hall at 10:30 a.m.

Officers for the current academic year are: Joseph A. Celia, Senior, Pres.; Robt. F. Baxter, Junior, Vice-Pres.; Daniel M. Ramsey, Junior Sect.; Paul E. Tenfer, Sophomore, Treas.

Night School Gives Courses In Insurance

The Evening Division of Villanova University is offering for the second year courses designed to prepare life insurance men and women for the Chartered Life Underwriter examinations.

This year, two courses are being offered which will prepare the student for two of the five C.L.U. exams. These courses are (1) Fundamentals of Life Insurance and Annuities and (2) Business Life Insurance, Accident and Sickness Insurance, Group Insurance and Pensions.

Underwriters Cooperation

Other courses will be offered in subsequent years. The courses are being given in co-operation with the Life Underwriters Association of Chester and Delaware Counties and of Norristown and Pottstown. Classes started in September and meet from 4 to 5:50 p.m. Thursday evenings.

The instructors in the two parts of the course are Mr. Benjamin M. Gaston and Mr. Howard F. Riley. Mr. Gaston, a resident of Bryn Mawr, received his B.A. at Tennessee, his M.B.A. with a major in Insurance at Penn. He entered the insurance business in 1932 at the age of 25. He has been a CLU since 1936.

North American Vice-Pres.

Mr. Gaston was discharged from the army a Lt. Colonel after five years service. At present, he is Philadelphia Branch Manager of the North American Life Insurance Company of Canada.

In addition, he serves as a member of the Examination Board of the American College of Life Underwriters, and of the Board of Graders. He is also an ex-president of the Philadelphia Chapter of the ACLU.

Graduate of Penn.

Mr. Riley, who taught the course last year, is a permanent member of the Villanova Faculty. Mr. Riley received his B.A. at St. Joseph's College in 1936, his LL.B. at Penn in 1939. In addition to this, he has taken graduate work at both Penn and Temple in the period 1949-53. He has been a Chartered Life Underwriter and a member of the A.C.L.U. since 1951.

Nursing Dean To Assist State Board

Sister Mary Alma, Dean of the Nursing Division, has been appointed a member of a newly-organized committee which is to be called the "Committee To Advise With The State Board of Nurse Examiners." The State Board of Nurse Examiners has as its function the establishment of nursing standards to be met by every graduate nurse before registration.

The committee will consist of five members appointed by a Board of Directors. Sister Mary Alma, as a Board Member of the Pennsylvania League for Nursing, attended a convention in Pittsburgh this past Sunday.

Miss Harriet Murphy, a nursing instructor, also was present at the same meeting as a representative of Villanova University.

Initiation Ends Tomorrow Night for 30 LKD Pledges

Greg Lignelli, pledgemaster of Lambda Kappa Delta, has announced that the initiation period for aspiring members of the fraternity will terminate tomorrow night. Approximately 30 pledges are expected to be accepted into the fraternity.

Richard Hamburger, chairman of the annual Communion Breakfast, revealed that the affair was a commendable success. Approximately 60 members attended the breakfast last Sunday at Stouffer's Restaurant, following the nine o'clock Mass in the university chapel.

The Rev. Charles Kropp, O.S.A., was guest speaker. Other honored guests included the faculty members of the Biology Department.

Another problem solved during the past month was the selection of a new fraternity pin by the entire membership. Dave Brian, chairman of the Pin Committee, has announced that orders have already been taken

Spanish Club

The Spanish Club will continue plans for the annual Spanish Night at its regular meeting tomorrow morning at 10:30 in 208 Commerce and Finance Building.

Spanish Night will be held this year on Dec. 6 in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium.

Father Sullivan To Nominate Danforth Fellows

The Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., President of Villanova has named the Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., Dean of Arts and Science, Liason Officer to nominate candidates for the 1958 Danforth Foundation fellowships.

The Danforth Foundation, an educational foundation located in St. Louis, Mo., invites applications for the seventh class (1958) of Danforth Graduate Fellows from senior college men and recent graduates who are preparing for a career of college teaching, and who are planning to enter graduate school in September, 1958.

The Foundation welcomes applicants from the areas of Natural and Biological Sciences, Social Sciences, Humanities and all fields of specialization found in undergraduate college.

Financial Grants

The maximum annual grant for single Fellows is $1400 plus tuition and fees charged to all graduate students; for married Fellows, $2400 plus tuition and fees charged to all graduate students with an additional stipend of $350 for children. Students with or without financial need are invited to apply.

A Danforth Fellow is allowed to carry other scholarship appointments, such as Rhodes, Fulbright, Woodrow Wilson, Marshall, etc., concurrently with his Danforth Fellowship, and applicants for these appointments are invited to apply at the same time for a Danforth Fellowship.

If a man receives the Danforth appointment, together with a Rhodes Scholarship, Fulbright Fellowship, or Woodrow Wilson Fellowship, he becomes a Danforth Fellow without stipend, until these other relationships are completed.

All Danforth Fellows will participate in the annual Danforth Foundation Conference on Teaching, to be held at Camp Miniwanca in Michigan next September.

Qualifications Listed

The qualifications of the candidates as listed in the announcement from the Foundation are: men of outstanding academic ability, personality congenial to the classroom, integrity and character, including serious inquiry within the Christian tradition.

All applications, including the recommendations, must be completed by Jan. 31, 1958. Any student wishing further information should get in touch with our Father Sullivan.

Paddy Chayefsky, William Inge, Henry Miller, Herman Wouk and Tennessee Williams.

All members are to participate in this project in one form or another. Since there are approximately 23 authors to be written about it is urged that each member choose one of the above mentioned men and write a five or more page paper on the man chosen.

To facilitate research, those working on an author may refer to the Best Plays series edited by John Chapman and Louis Kronenberger, and The Theatre Book of the Year by George Jean Nathan; these can be found under the general call number: PN 2266.

The next meeting will be held Monday, Dec. 2, in the library with Dr. Robert S. O'Shea, of the Philosophy department speaking on "Aesthetics in Literature.

Bracken, McMullen Represents Nurses

Miss Connie Bracken and Miss Dolores McMullen represented the Nursing Division of Villanova University last month at the Catholic College Day exhibit. This affair was the fifth one sponsored by the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae.

The purpose of Catholic College Day, which was held at the West Philadelphia Catholic Girls' High School, was to answer the questions of prospective college students who are interested in the various college programs and who are seeking a college to meet their specific needs.

VU Chess Club To Be Founded

An organizational meeting of the Chess club will be held in 104 AC at 10:30 tomorrow morning.

All those interested are urged to attend. If, however, interested parties are unavailable at that time, they should leave their names with Dr. O'Shea in the Philsophy office in Mendel Hall as soon as possible.

The purpose of the club will be recreational, with a possibility of procuring a room on campus for the meetings.

Tentative plans include competition only among the students of Villanova, but arrangements for matches with other colleges could easily be arranged if it were so desired.

Jets, Devils, Maulers Seem Teams to Watch for Title In Intramural Final Play

By TOM MURPHY

There've been a lot of exciting games played in the Intramural Leagues recently and most of the teams are beginning to realize that they don't have the skill required to make the finals.

Teams play great football in one game but when they play one of the top teams in their next, they always fall below par. At the present time, the Delurey Devils, a senior team, Mendel Maulers, a freshman team, or Joe's Jets, a junior group, appear to be headed for a clash in the championship game of Nov. 26. They are the only teams which remain unbeaten.

Playboys Whip Eastwingers

In recent games, the Playboys whipped the Eastwingers 13-0 in a well-played game. The Trotters were given a solid trouncing by the Aces 26-0 and then the Aces lost their first game of the year to the undefeated Delurey Devils by a score 6-0.

Delta Pi Mu just edged Bravo Company, in a replay of a protested game, by a score of 4-3 on first downs. Both lines held both teams scoreless in this fine defensive game.

Maulers Are Hot

The Hops downed the Clowns 14-0 only to come back and lose to the powerful, undefeated Mendel Maulers by a score of 21-7. A superbly executed ninety yard pass-play from Phil Sheets to Chet Buttonow broke this game wide open.

The Maulers then whipped the Clowns for the third straight time. The difference in this game was large as the Clowns lost 21-0. The Mendel Mauler's star end Buttonow did all the scoring in both these games as he caught six touchdown passes from the Mauler's Sheets.

An All-American?

Buttonow has scored the Maulers last seven touchdowns with electrifying catches and bursts of speed. He has thrown terror into all teams and is regarded by some, as the All-American end of the intramural leagues.

The feeling around the league is that the Delurey Devils will meet the Mendel Maulers in the championship game. However, a few upsets could change the entire picture.

Clowns Pick Maulers

The Clowns, who have lost to the Maulers three times, should have the best "book" on the Maulers. Quarterback and captain of the Clowns, Rich Parrin, said, "they're the best team we've played so far. They have a great passing team and if they play the Devils for the championship, their passing offense will tell the story. All the teams we've played believe the Mendel Maulers will represent us in the the championship game. We haven't given up hope but we realize how great a team they are."

Captain of the Mendel Maulers Phil Sheets said, "we haven't lost a game and we don't expect too. We expect to make the championship game and we don't care who we play. We hear that it should be the Delurey Devils but it makes no difference to us.

Watch The Jets

So the football intramurals are drawing to an end. Semi-finals begin on the 19th and unless there are some tremendous upsets, we should be seeing the Mendel Maulers and the Delurey Devils battling it out on the championship game of Nov, 26. If these are the two finalists, it will pit an aggressive freshmen team against an experienced senior team with the big prize up for grabs.

But remember the Jets. Joe Scancarella, captain and quarterback, warned the other teams "we're going all the way. This is the best team in the league and we're going to prove it."

So bet your money and take your choice. It should be interesting.

Villanova Returns Home to Meet Wichita in Season's Finale Saturday

By PAUL BUCKLEY

After five weeks of touring the country, the Wildcats will return to Villanova Stadium on November 23 to meet the Wheatshockers of Wichita in the season's finale.

The travel weary Cats will meet a team who have won one game while dropping six to such teams as Arizona State, Cincinnati, Oklahoma State, Detroit, Hardin-Simmons and Dayton. Their one win was over Drake by a score of 14 to 7.

Wichita has a new coach this year in the person of Woody Woodward who, after spending three years at Southern Methodist, has returned to his native state. Last year, the Shockers posted a record of four wins and six defeats in finishing near the bottom in the Missouri Valley standings.

Has 19 Lettermen

Of the candidates who greeted Woodward in the spring, 19 were lettermen. Fourteen men were lost through graduation. Woodward has built this year's team around his senior tri-captains, Harry Horton, Bruce Bierig and Ray Vogl.

Horton, who stands 6-3 and tips the scales at 212 pounds, is a rugged defensive end, and a team leader. Bierig, a guard, stands at an even six feet and weighs 195. He is an experienced aggressive guard. Ray Vogl is a stubby back of considerable all-around ability.

In addition to these three established players, the Shockers are graced with two promising sophomores. One is sensational end, Curtis McClinton, and the other is Ted Dean, Radnor High boy. Ted is a huge (6-3, 215) fast moving half back who has been hampered by scholastic difficulties.

Other sophmores who have looked good for Wichita are fullbacks Jerry Brooks and Terry Hansley.

Uses T Offense

To direct the T, Woodward can call on a pair of Bobs, Liles and Sherman. Opposite Vogl and Dean who will alternate at right half, will be left half backs Gaylord Bellamy and Larry Simkins.

The Wheatshockers line is spearheaded by two fine ends. The left flank has senior Harry Horton with soph Mc Clinton at the other end of the line.

Jack Deeter and Don Seazy are solid tackles. Bruce Bierig, Wichita's most experienced lineman is their top guard. Joining Bierig, at guard will be Lee Beatty. Both are hard-charging lineman. The center position will be filled by Bill Badger.

Key Factor

The ability of the quarterbacks to use the many variations devised by Woodward will be a key factor when Wichita meets the Wildcats. The quarterback must make full pivots to the left and right. The halfbacks and the ends are often split or flanked. Evolving from these variations are many intricate pass patterns.

The Wichita team, though it has faired poorly this year, is dominated by sophomores and juniors, who are capable of holding their own against good opposition.

SPORTS CHATTER

A Dual Tribute

By JACK CURTIN

"(Frank) Reagan in his four Villanova years has won nine and lost 28. Yet no columnists have attacked his competence, no one has hung him in effigy, no student journalists have bellowed for his departure."

Sandy Grady,
PHILADELPHIA
DAILY NEWS,
Nov. 12

The Villanova football situation this year is such that it should be only natural for the student body to look for a scapegoat. This was supposedly (and still is in this writer's mind) the best football team Villanova has had in many years. Yet with only one game remaining for the season, it is the far-from-proud possessor of a 2-6 record and did not win a game away from home. Still, excepting a few widely scattered cases, no disgruntled finger has been pointed at head coach Francis X. Reagan. Rather than attack Reagan, the students have been sympathetic with him, realizing the frustrating experience the 1957 schedule has been.

This is a tribute to both the coach and the Villanova student body. Certainly the Villanova student attitude is much more commendable than the rather immature and frantic outbursts of other schools which are currently engaged in the same sort of football doldrums. But most of all, it is a firm recognition of Reagan's coaching talents—an assertation of Villanova's faith in his abilities in the face of discouraging conditions.

A Bright Spot

Of course, there is no way to salvage the 1957 season. Whatever the reason—and far be it from the writer to try and figure it out—Villanova has fallen flat on its face. The Wildcats are a better team than the record shows, but that doesn't matter. Only records count. However, despite the loss of, to quote Reagan, "75% of our experienced ballplayers," the prospects for next year look brighter, if not from a winning viewpoint.

Reagan, in his dual role of Athletic Director and coach is the father of the Villanova "back-to-campus" movement. His influence has already been felt this year in that there will have been three games played in Goodreau Stadium (the largest number in quite a while), and that the basketball team will play several games in the Field House. To stay within the realm of football, we will admit that three games is not a highly excitable number, but there is reason to suspect that the 1958 schedule, when it is revealed, will finally bring football back to the Main Line.

One Will Affect Other

In an interview with this writer last summer, Reagan stated that he would like to see the Wildcats play four or five games at home next year. He reiterated the same belief in the above quoted column by Sandy Grady. Since Reagan the football coach and Reagan the athletic director are one and the same person, and since this (1958) will be the first year that our schedule will be in charge of the same, it is highly probable that the desire of one personality will have a profound effect on the other. And football on campus, win or lose, is preferable to football hundreds of miles away.

Until the schedule is announced, of course, this can only be a supposition. But we have reason to believe that such an announcement will be a pleasant surprise to everyone, for Villanova's schedule has been a major problem for the past few years. Aside from the travel difficulties, the Mainliners have had trouble scheduling games in their class. Also, and this is probably the most important consideration of the whole problem, they have not built up a traditional rivalry. There are, of course, the Detroit battles, but there the distance between the two schools makes a truly spirited rivalry impossible. And college football without a rivalry is lacking one of the basic ingredients necessary to campus life.

So, football will probably return to the campus in force. Better times are in the offing.

Three Unsung Linemen Deserve Great Praise

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

How do you start to write a feature story on members of a losing football team? How can another addition be made to the already over-full lineup of profiles, when the team is burdened with the dreary faculty of losing games?

After this one and that one has received his proper due of praise, the assumption would seem to be that but for a few outstanding individuals, there can't be much to say for a team which has lost six ball games, five of them consecutively.

Well, gentlemen, we will have to dismiss from our minds the notion that the 1957 edition of the Villanova Wildcats is a normal team.

This was (I use 'was' purposely, since a victory on Saturday would not take the dreary pallor from the team's record) a team which could have faced Michigan State and Muhlenberg on consecutive weekends and lost both games by 13-7, or some such teasing and frustrating score.

Not A Poor Club

Why the Wildcats have not lived up to the expectations of the coaches and the fans, I won't venture to guess. But I don't think that they can be dismissed as a poor club.

The Villanova line can be matched against any other seven men in the country. Coach Frank Reagan, among others, subscribes to this declaration.

After the exploits of stalwarts such as Don Luzzi, Ed Michaels, Tony Varrechione and Gene O'Pella have been duly chronicled, the story of the Villanova line has not received its proper acclaim.

The remaining three linemen have upheld their end, although the Philadelphia press and, I must admit, the VILLANOVAN have not given them publicity.

Would Be Raved About

On a team with less line talent than the Wildcats, Vince Chaverini, Bill Craig and Mike DeLucia would be drawing rave notices.

The biggest surprise among the three has been Chaverini. Vince, a senior, had never started a game until the Cats faced Baylor in the season's opener. For two years he had been understudy to Joe Ryan.

Chaverini had always been highly thought of. He had fair size (6-1,195) and hit very hard on defense. He had no trouble with T-snaps, nor with the long pass from center for punts and extra points.

But Vince was more prone to injury than the usual football player of his size. Even playing just part-time, behind Ryan, he came up with injuries in both his sophomore and junior years which kept him out of action for days at a time.

This season Chaverini has not suffered any mishaps and he has consistently turned in solid performances. Whereas the coaching staff naturally had some qualms about depending on Vince before the season started, they have disappeared in the face of his steady play.

Almost A Hero

Chaverini almost was the hero up in Boston against BC, when he blocked a kick in the last few seconds of action with the Cats only trailing by five points. The ball bounded off Vince's chest and out of the Boston College end zone before he or any other Villanova player could hop on it. All the Cats got out of the effort was a safety.

The PHILADELPHIA DAILY NEWS bestowed its Lineman-of-the-week award on Chaverini for his defensive work in that game.

Bill Craig and Mike DeLucia, as the only juniors on the interior line, must be accorded places of importance in the 1958 plans of Coach Reagan.

Line coach John Sandusky says that the two will form a solid base from which to build the new line. "Nobody's made much commotion about them all year, but they must be classed with the senior members of the lines," said the former All-Pro tackle.

Don't Compare With Luzzi

"You really can't make comparisons between Craig and Don Luzzi, as some people have tried to do. They are different types of players. Billy has that real good pursuit and maneuverability which often makes up for an initial mistake. Don might be a little stronger. Let's just leave it at this—both are first-rate tackles."

As for DeLucia, Sandusky feels that he has the speed to be an outstanding linebacker when the Cats are in an odd defense, and enough power to make up for his comparative lack of size when he shifts into the line in an even alignment.

DeLucia will continue to play guard next year, although he was a center in high school and actually prefers that position. One of the reasons that he is not being moved back to center to replace the departing Chaverini is that his brother Alex, a member of the freshmen team, will be one of the candidates for center.

Ron Delany Second In IC4A Contest

Ron Delany, Villanova's Olympic 1,000 meter champion, finished second in the IC4A cross-country championship meet on Monday on the hilly five mile Van Courtlandt Park course in New York.

Crawford Kennedy, a Michigan State sophomore, led the Spartan team to the collegiate title as he raced to victory in 24:14.8 minutes to best Delany by 50 yards.

Delany staved off a last minute rush by Peter Close, of St. John's, to take the second position. The pair ran shoulder to shoulder to the finish to finish 75 yards ahead of the fourth place contestant.

It was Delany's first defeat of the 1957 cross country season, as he had been victorious in his only two other outings this year.

Going into the IC4A meet, the cross country team had posted a record of one win and three losses in meet competition.

The team was hampered at the beginning of the season by the illness of Olympic Champion, Ron Delany, who was suffering from the Asiatic flu.

Meanwhile his teammates were defeated by Georgetown and St. Joe's in a triangular meet and suffered a loss at the hands of La Salle. Top men for the Wildcats in these meets were sophomores Bob Godesky and junior letterman Vic De Maio.

Godesky won the 1,000 Yard Novice Run at the Inquirer Meet a year ago as a freshman. De Maio was a middle distance man on last year's track team, which swept all the major track titles.

Then Ron Came Back

Upon Delany's return the Villanova harriers defeated Seton Hall and dropped a tough one to strong St. John's of Brooklyn. However, Delany was still in his old form as he finished first in both meets. By his victory against St. John's, he defeated Pete Close and Lionel Stevens, two of the top cross country runners in the country.

In the Seton Hall meet, Delany led four other Villanova men across the finish line as the Main Liners swept the first five places of the meet. Following Delany across the line were Bob Godesky, Terry McHugh, Jonas Swenson, and Vic DeMaio.

All of the men mentioned along with Bill Tinney and freshman Tim McNamar participated in the IC4A Meet in New York.

Undefeated Frosh

McNamar is undefeated this year in freshman dual meet competition. He led all freshman across the finish line in the frosh meets with La Salle and Seton Hall and is definitely a bright prospect for next year's varsity squad.

However, sophs Bob Godesky, Jonas Swenson, and Bill Tinney, along with junior Vic De Maio will be the nucleus of next year's team.

Ed Geisz, Villanova swimming coach, squats at the edge of the Field House pool last Saturday morning during practice session to talk to a group of his Wildcat mer-men. Jim Gregory stands apart in the lefthand corner, while the other swimmers are Bob Pinto, Wynn Wilson, Frank Keefe, John Flynn, Joe Mason and Luke Pape.

Schoener, Pinto To Captain Swimmers For 57-58 Season

Seniors Lou Schoener and Lou Pinto were elected co-captains of the swimming team for the 1957-58 season last Monday. Coach Ed Geisz remarked that the team could have made no better choice for co-captains. He also expressed the hope that the team would follow the example set by those two fine competitors.

It was the secodn time Schoener, an English major, has received this honor. Lou was captain of last year's team. A standout breast stroker while in high school, Schoener was successfully converted to a middle distance swimmer by coach Geisz in his sophomore year. He became one of the area's better swimmers at this distance last year. He lost only two races at 220 yards and two in the quarter mile as a junior. This year Schoener has set his eye on the school 220 yard mark of 2:150.0 set in 1940.

The other co-captain, Lou Pinto, is less known than Schoener, but only because of his versatility. Like Schoener, Pinto was a star breast stroker in high school. Only those who are close to swimming can appreciate the contribution of Pinto to the team. For the past two years his breast stroking efforts have been obsured by the great Don Couig. But this year, with Couig graduated, Pinto will have to shoulder much of the burden formerly carried by that man.

Both men expressed their gratitude for being elected and promised to fulfill their responsibilities to the best of their ability.

With two such capable men for captains, the swimming team is looking frwoard to their best season since the sport was revived in 1952. This year the team faces the best opposition in the East. Thse include V.M.I., the Southeastern Conference champions; LaSalle College, the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate champions; West Chester State Teachers College, the Pennsylvania Teachers College Conference champions; and Army, always a top independent. Coach Ed Geisz, however, feels confident that the team can better last year's 11-1 recrod.

He bases this conviction on several reasons, not the least of which are the untried sophomores Frank Keefe, Bruce MacCriddes, and Bill Lyons. Geisz believes that Feefe will become the districts outstanding backstroker while MacGriddes will team with Schoener in the 220 and 440 races. Lyons will be used chiefly on relays. Another reason Geisz gives for his belief is the fact that never before has the team been so deep in 400 sprinters.

With transfer students Joe Mason and Wynn Wilson eligible this year, Geisz can count on at least two places in each of the eprints. Besides these two he has Bob Pinto, Bob MacMillen, Ken MacGillivray and John Rumbarger to draw on for the relays.

When Geisz, a breaststroker in college, talks about his three breaststrokers, Lou Pinto, Larry Palacio, and Jim Gregory, a contentd smile crosses his face for he feels that no other coach in the area can match the power of this trio. He considers Palacio capable of becoming an All-American in the Butterfly and the same of "Bull" Gregory in the orthodox breaststroke. John Flynn is another very good orthodox man.

To team with Keefe in the backstroke Geisz has either mammouth 242 pound Gerry Cechony or sophomore Gene Hewitt. Cechony is another capable of greatness while Hewitt is a good man for a relay.

Only when diving is mentioned does coach Geisz wince in pain. Perennally weak in this event, Geisz is basing his hopes on no less than four men, only one of whom has varsity experience. Steve Carton and Mike Rafferty seem to have the edge on Bill Gilhool and Mike O'Boyle. Gilhool never dove before last year, but has rapidly improved since then and could gain a berth if either of the former slip. O'Boyle is not without experience. He was one of the area's top scolastic divers while attending St. Jospeh's Prep, but two years of inactivity are showing and could hol dhim back.

Pistol Team Defeats U.W. In First Start

Villanova's newest varsity sport, the pistol team began its season auspiciously on Oct. 19 with a 1301 to 1296 win over the University of Wisconsin. The previous week, team captain Bill Scott swept 12 events in individual.

Upcoming Matches

The team's regular season begins on Feb. 4 when the MIT team travels to Villanova. Following MIT here will be the Naval Academy. Then the team goes away on Feb. 22 for a match with the West Pointers. Other teams to be fired against are Penn State, New York State Maritime College, Pennsylvania Military academy, the Merchant Marine Academy and the Coast Guard Academy.

Pistol matches will be fired against Miami University, the University of Oklahoma and the Air Force Acadey.

The team also fires in the Delaware Valley Pistol League which is a professional organization.

Team Members

On the team are J. D'Arcy, E. Byrne, W. Wescott, P. Lang, N. Huddy, A. Martinez, J. Whalley and R. Gillespie.

The team last year compiled a seven-two record and came in second in the Secretary of Navy Match.

The team draws its members from the National Rifle Association basic pistol course given in the beginning of the school year.

Captain J. J. Grace, USMC, is the team moderator.

NEW OLD JOKES

Comrade Rudolph was walking down the streets Moscow when it suddenly began precipitating.

"Wife," said Rudolph to his spose, "It's raining."

"No, Rudolph," she corrected, "it's snowing."

"Raining."

"Snowing."

"Silence, woman," roared Rudy. "You know Rudolph the Red knows rain, dear."

Shooters Win First Match

On Saturday, Nov. 2, Villanova's NROTC rifle team took first place in a triangular match with Penn NROTC and St. Joseph's with a score of 1341, an ample margin over Penn's 1290.

Frosh Charlie Russell, this year's find, was high man with a 279. Lou Spevetz was second with a 274. Jon Rietske had a 268, Bill Hearn a 263 and Joe Pollizatto a 257.

Last Wednesday the team eked out a win over Pennsylvani Military Academy 1357 to 1356. Penn's NROTC was left behind with a 1304.

The match with PMC was undecided until the last man came off the firing line.

Each man on the team outdid himself for the occasion and Charles Russel again led the pack with a 280. Hearn had a 276, Rietske a 269, Spevetz a 268 and Pollizatto a264.

HOW TO STUDY

The makers of Marlboro Cigarettes have bought this space so I can bring a message of importance to American undergraduates each week. There is no more important message I can bring you than this: College can be beautiful. Don't louse it up with studying.

That was my mistake. At first, cowed by college, I studied so much that I turned into a dreary, blinking creature, subject to dry mouth and night sweats. This dismal condition prevailed until I learned the real meaning of college. And what is that? I'll tell you what: to prepare you to face the realities of the world. And what do you need to face the realities of the world? I'll tell you what: poise. And how do you get poise? I'll tell you how: not by sticking your nose in a book, you may be sure!

Relax! Live! Enjoy! . . . That's how you get poise. Of course you have to study, but be poised about it. Don't be like some drones who spend every single night buried in a book. They are not learning poise; what's more, they are playing hob with their posture.

The truly poised student knows better than to make the whole semester hideous with studying. He knows that the night before an exam is plenty of time to study.

Yes, I've heard people condemn cramming. But who are these people? They are the electric light and power interests, that's who! They want you to sit up late and study every night so you will use more electricity and enrich their bulging coffers.

Don't be taken in by their insidious propaganda! Cramming is clearly the only sensible way to study. But beware! Even cramming can be overdone. When you cram, be sure you are good and relaxed. Before you start, eat a hearty dinner. Then get a date and go out and eat another hearty dinner. Then go park some place and light up a Marlboro. Enjoy the peaceful pleasure it affords. Don't go home till you're properly relaxed.

Once at home, stay relaxed. Do not, however, fall asleep. This is too relaxed. To insure wakefulness, choose a chair that is not too comfortable. For example, take a chair with nails pointing up through the seat.

Place several packs of Marlboros within easy reach. Good, mild tobacco helps you relax, and that's what Marlboro is—good, mild tobacco. But Marlboro is more than just good, mild tobacco; it is also cigarette paper to keep the good, mild tobacco from spilling all over the place. And a filter. And a flip-top box. And a red tape to lift the cigarettes easily . . . It is, in short, a lot to like.

Now you've got the uncomfortable chair and the Marlboros. Now you need light. Use the lit end of your Marlboro. Do not enrich the light and power interests.

Read your textbook in a slow, relaxed manner. Do not underline; it reduces the resale value of the book. Always keep your books in prime resale condition. You never know when you'll need getaway money.

As you read you will no doubt come across many things you don't understand. But don't panic. Relax. Play some Fats Domino. Remove a callus. Go out and catch some night crawlers.

Relax! Live! Enjoy! Remember—any number of people have bachelor's degrees, but precious few have poise!

It doesn't take any cramming to learn that the finest filter cigarette on the market today is Marlboro, whose makers take pleasure in bringing you this column regularly.

Student Council Views

By PAT NICHOLSON

The process of adopting a new Constitutional form of government especially one that involves a new concept of student government is a long and difficult task. Work began in preparing for this change in the middle of last semester. Now that the Constitution has, for the most part, been approved by the Council and tenitively approved by the Administration, we have turned our attention to the drafting of the By-Laws of this Constitution. We have found this to be a tedious, but very important undertaking. Tonight the Council will begin its discussion of the By-Laws. We will deal primarily with the powers, duties, and membership of the various committies of the Student Council. The proposed By-Laws grant the committies a great deal more responsibility than they have ever possessed in the past.

NICHOLSON

It is hoped that the final draft of the Constitution and By-Laws will be approved "in toto" by the Council at a special meeting of December 5th. If this is the case then the Student Council will hold a special type of meeting on December 11th. At that meeting the new Constitution and By-Laws will be explained in detail to all moderators, student leaders, and all other interested members of the student body. It is planned that the members of the Student Senate will be elected at this meeting. If everything runs according to schedule then the first meetings under the new Constitution will then go into full effect at the beginning of the 2nd semester.

As a result of the new Constitution two very important changes have been made. The National Federation of Catholic College Students has ceased to be an organization as such. Every student at Villanova is a member of NFCCS. Therefore it is now a commission of the Student Council and it will function actively through the Student Council. The NFCCS will operate in a manner similar to the Spirit Committee, however its activities will be greatly different. All students are members of the Spirit Committee, but an especially interested group prepare its undertakings. The programs of NFCCS will be handled by those students who are particularly interested in this field. As work in NFCCS is certainly one of the best ways of developing leadership and responsibility, the number of interested students should be large.

A Student-Faculty Committee is the other greatly desired addition of the new Constitution. This committee will be composed of the Vice-President of Academic Affairs or his representative, selected members of the faculty, and three selected members of the Student Council. This committee will discuss and attempt to act upon all problems or suggestions of an academic or educational nature. This committee was established because it was felt that the academic development of Villanova University as it is with Villanova's development in all other fields.

Radio Station Broadcasting Chiefs Meet

WVIL Staff Heads met Monday night, Nov. 11, in the radio station to discuss change in the broadcasting schedule, plans for the tenth anniversary and a station hook-up to Sheehan Hall.

Mr. Charles Smith, faculty director, attended the meeting which was conducted by Henry Nichols, station manager.

Poll Conducted

A poll, under the direction of Joe Marozzi, was conducted by the Public Relations Department to affirm the necessity of a schedule change.

Robert Rafano, public relations director, proposed that one of the special events for the tenth anniversary of WVIL should be the inspection of the station by Villanova students, faculty and administration and students of other colleges.

Seminar Trip

A report was given by Ronald Cusack, business manager, concerning his trip to the Second Annual Seminar of the Broadcasters' Promotion Association in Chicago. Cusack also announced the addition of two new sponsors.

Chief technical engineer, Sam Pietrofitta, stated that Sheehan Hall would soon be able to receive WVIL and that corrections would be made to improve reception in other dorms.

Another plan discussed was the possible commercial broadcasting of FM to the Mainline area.

Christmas Message

The spirit of the first Christmas is simple in every respect. It is marked by the presence of people who were unaffected and good. The Mother of God and her Manly, just spouse were first to adore the Babe. Then came the poor, earnest, nameless shepherds. Only later were the generous and fervent Magi to bring the tokens of their personal respect and the reverence of the outside world. And all of them, genuine people of good will, were blessed by an abundance of the peace which the angels had proclaimed.

The most sincere message I can offer to all Villanova men and women is the hope that the same beneficial peace will descend upon them on this happiest of all days. Such will be my prayer for all Villanovans in the three Masses I celebrate on Christmas Day.

The angels announced the birth of Our Lord with great rejoicing because they knew well what it signified. They—and the shepherds and the Magi—recognized the Infant as the Man-God promised centuries before. They meant intentsely the words they uttered: "Glory to God in the highest." May all Villanovans echo that prayer and find God's kindest graces in reward.

A thoroughly holy and joyful Christmas to each of you, to your parents, and to all the dear ones of your family circles.

I. M. Levitt, Astronomer, To Address Forum Tonight

The man who one year ago warned the United States of the rapid advances that the Soviet Union was making in the field of space travel will be the speaker tonight at the Villanova Forum.

He is Dr. I. M. Levitt, nationally known astronomer and director of the Fels Planetarium of the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia.

Levitt will adress the forum in the Commerce and Finance auditorium, at 8 p.m. Mr. Charles Bruderle, Forum Chairman, has announced.

Dr. Levitt warned in an address last year that the Soviet Union was taking the lead in the race for the conquest of outer space..

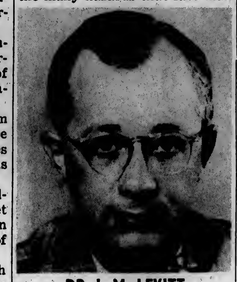
He urged the U. S. to launch a man-made device into space before Russia does so "with its possible tremendous psychological repercussion throughout the entire world."

Renowned Inventor

Levitt is also world renowned as an inventor including among his recent inventions the Hamilton Space Clock, which he developed to aid in charting journeys into space.

The world's first inter-planetary timepiece, it is designed to show the comparative passage of time-by the day, hour, month and year—on earth and on planets in outer space.

"To all space explorers, the clock would be a matter of life or death," explains Dr. Levitt. "For instance, they would need it to time departures from earth in order to reach destined spots on another planet during daylight hours and at a suitable season."



Second Forum Speaker

The second speaker of the current Forum program, Dr. Levitt follows Dr. Yves Simon, of the Department of Philosophy of the University of Chicago.

Mr. Bruderle announced that plans are now being made to invite another Forum speaker, probably in February.

"Dr. Levitt is a distinguished scientist and his talk here should be both enlightening and entertaining," a member of the Forum committee declared.

Tonight, Levitt will explore the many hazards that face man in his efforts to undertake interplanetary travel, as well as the tremendous advances already made by foward looking scientists toward the goal. His announced topic will be "Journey Into Space."

Seniors Seek 1500 Patrons for Prom; Queen Contest On

The Senior Class is in the process of soliciting patrons for its Belle Air Ball on February 14, and also entries for the first annual Belle Air Ball queen.

Patrons are being sold by Leisentritt and Dave Ogle, Ball Chairmen and members of the steering committee as well as the class officers.

Goal Set At 1500

Leisentritt asks that all underclassmen and especially seniors buy patrons as soon as possible. The cost of one dollar pays for one line which can be purchased either individually or by two students. "The success of the Ball depends on the number of patrons sold," said Ogle, "and the goal has been set at 1500."

ROSEMONT CHOIR HERE TOMORROW

Rev. Norbert Whitley, O. S. A., University Chaplin, has announced that tomorrow evening the choir from Rosemont College will be present on campus to sing at the chapel exercise. There will be Solemn Benediction and a selection of Christmas carols.

The Chaplin wishes to announce further that there will be no chapel excercises Dec. 17

Charity Ball Friday Night Initiates Orphans Weekend; Outing Saturday Highlighted by Visit to Santa Claus

By BILL CHRISTY

Santa Claus will be coming to town at Villanova this Friday when the Junior Class will sponsor the first event of the annual Orphan's weekend, the Charity Ball, to be held in the Field House from 9 to 1.

Chairman of the weekend Matt Brennan has placed the dance under the direction of Al Dombrowski who has announced that Lou Denison has been signed to provide the music for the informal affair.

The Christmas theme will be carried over into the decorations which are under the chairmanship of Ed Knepley. Tickets, which have been on sale since Dec. 2, are priced at $1.50 a couple and may be purchased in the Pie Shoppe in Dougherty Hall or at the field house door Friday night.

Proceeds for Orphanage

Co-chairmen of tickets, Jack Frazer and Hary Georges, urge that all Villanova students purchase tickets, even if they do not intend to attend the dance, as the proceeds will go towards the party given for the orphans Monday and for the betterment of the orphanage.

Party on Monday

The dance will be followed Saturday by the annual orphans' outing and the weekend will be topped off Monday with the party at the orphanage. Contributions made this week in religion classes and in Dougherty Hall will govern the success of this affair, so co-chairman of the event, Gene Paja and Gene O'Pella, have asked that all be generous.

The party will feature a meeting of Santa (Gino) by each of the "Johnnies" as well as gifts, dinner and games. A group of juniors and football players will conduct the party.

Saturday will be Dad's Day for many students of Villanova, when the Junior Class sponsors the annual orphans' outing for the boys of St. John's Orphanage at 49th and Wyalusing Sts., in Philadelphia.

Although the event is under the auspices of the Junior Class, all students including co-eds and law students are urged to participate in this undertaking.

Chairman of this affair and the whole weekend, Matt Brennan, has announced the following schedule for the day's proceedings: For those students who do not have cars, buses will depart from Villanova at Dougherty Hall bound for the orphanage at 8:40 A. M.

En Route to Lit's

These will arrive at approximately 9:15. Other Villanovans are asked to be there as close to that time as possible. From here, students and their "Johnny" will proceed to Lit Brothers' Department Store in Philadelphia at 8th and Market Sts. Parking will be provided for those in cars at 7th and Filbert Streets.

At 10 all will assemble in the employees' cafeteria where milk and cookies will be served to the orphans. A trip to see Santa after a tour of the toy department will follow. The upper floor of the Horn and Hardart's Restaurant at 1508 Market Sts. has been reserved for the group, who are asked to arrive in shifts: A-L at 12:15 and M-Z at 12:45.

To See Movie

The travelers will reassemble at the New 69th Street Theater at 69th and Market Sts. where the "Johnnies" and their "Dads" will view a comedy movie and a cartoon festival, courtesy of the management.

The contingent will return to the orphanage between 5 and 6 that evening. The sisters at the orphanage have asked that when buying gifts for the boys, Villanovans remain under a three dollar limit and refrain from providing the prospective Lone Rangers with cap pistols. They further request under no circumctance should gifts be bought for the children's parents.

Tonight's Law Forum Hears Wilson White

W. Wilson White, Assistant United States Attorney General, will address the Villanova University Law School Forum tonight at 8 o'clock in the law school.

A native Philadelphian, White was appointed by President Eisenhower recently to head the newly-formed Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department.

White will discuss the topic, "The Jencks Case and the F. B. I file Security."

Law School Program

The second session of the law school program designed to instruct college students in the requirements and studies of a law school will be held this afternoon.

The program originally scheduled for last week was postponed because of snow. Program plans include a discussion on the qualifications for law school and attendance at a class of torts. Mimeographed copies of the material to be studied in class will also be distributed.

This discussion will be in the form of a panel and will consider the demands of the legal profession and the benefits of legel education.

Discussed By White

The Jencks case, decided by the United States Supreme Court last spring, concerned the right to a new trail of a labor leader who had been convicted of filing a false non-Communist affidavit where his request to examine reports of two government witnesses had been denied in the trial in which he was convicted.

James Jackson Kilpatrick, Editor of The Richmond News Leader, will be speaker at the March forum.

Autumn LYNX Due Tomorrow

Frank Delany, editor-in-chief, has announced that the Lynx, Villanova's literary quarterly will be distributed on campus tomorrow.

This semester's issue will contain many new features and promises to be one of the best in the history of the magazine.

Jack Garrity, Circulation manager, has announced that the quarterly will be sold from various prominent places on campus.

That Holiday Spirit

It is the earnest hope of the staff of the members of the Villanovan that everyone connected with the university will experience a holy, happy and safe holiday.

We believe it is well to remember at this time the words of the Greater Doxology, "Peace on earth to men of good will." As thinking men we should all realize that the welfare of the world situation is such that the necessity of good will with proper action is the only keynote to a lasting peace.

Perhaps it is only during such a holiday season that we fully appreciate the advantage of our being a free peoples. It is not sounding a sour note when we ask you to remember those millions of othrs in a dis-similiar situation. Such a recollection should only serve to make more precious our heritage.

In this, the season of noble thoughts and noble actions, it is in keeping that whispered prayers of thanksgiving for our gifts, accompanied by prayers for those freedom impoverished countries, should be on our lips and in our minds.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND HAPPY NEW YEAR. May we all return safely.

WVIL: Ten Years On The Air

It was "open house" for Radio Station WVIL's tenth anniversary on Monday as students and distinguished guests inspected the studio equipment and facilities on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

During the past decade, the station has seen three "homes", the most elaborate of which is the present location valued at $25,000.

However, not only the facilities of WVIL have shown marked improvement since 1947 but the caliber of broadcasting has proportionately kept pace with the physical development.

From only a couple of hours a day on the air, WVIL's schedule now broadcasts morning and night featuring a variety of programs including the latest news, weather and sports.

Quiz programs, interviews and disk jockey shows are conducted in the same manner as the programs at any local radio station. In addition several football games have been aierd during the past throughout the campus in order that the Villanova students could follow their favorite team "on he road". During he present basketball campaign, WVIL, under the direction of Station Manager Henry Nichols will relay a number of Palestra games back to the Main Line.

The station is still nt stagnant in its progress. Due to the interest shown in the Sunday night hree-hour inerview show and Paul Finan's Wildcat Safari on Thursdays, WVIL will present Conversation, another informal-type program on which Lynx Editor Frank Delany will discuss timely topics with notable students, in the near future.

The VILLANOVAN is proud of the progress of its neighbor on the second floor of Dougherty Hall and wishes the entire radio staff continued success.

Roland Amuses TV Viewers

By MIKE KLESIUS

To my understanding, there is a certain late television show receiving a great deal of attention. Roland (Roe-lun) seems to have worked wonders on the campus residents. His sadistic and crude methods of displaying horror have won the hearts of every possible viewer between the hours of eleven-thirty and one o'clock. Roland at the beginning of his "Shock Theatre" was the butt of every rude remark that the viewing audience could muster together. But since then, this pitiful looking creature has become a rather fashionable laughing point.

Pouring red liquids back and forth, rattling chains, slamming doors, and most of all lingering over odd shapes under clean white sheets have set a new pace for the exclusive individuals owning television sets. It should be also noted that these exclusive individuals harboring TV's are finding it almost impossible to view their own sets due to the sudden throngs of friends now invading their own rooms. We must admit that at times the technicalities of settings are most realistic in the changeover from movie to Roland's chambers.

Vociferous Reaction In Dorms

The rabble-rousing following these horror pictures is of towering magnitude. The different verbal utterences seem to amuse the students and disturb the higher echelons of the dormitories. I presume each and every Monday and Tuesday night will be the scene of this wholesale exuberance.

Shock Theatre has set a new trend and standard in the dorms. I'm so happy that there is some thing to look forward to as campus residents. In Sheehan Hall there are two of the most wonderful people who have invested in a machine which they call a Philco console. The tall black haired fellow seems to believe he has been the recipient of a bargain. I certainly don't mean to discourage this individual but it is to my understanding the whole thing was purchased simply in order to view "Roe-lun" and the exorbitant price of one hundred and sixty dollars is going a bit too far. However, if obtained — God speed to them and the second floor.

Is The End In Sight

Shock theatre brings so many viewers before the magic eye that certain rooms are voided of all furniture and martial law is enforced due to the mob rule which has to be suppressed. How long can the producers and directors of this new TV innovation, keep the different horror movies going? There must be a bottom to their shock movie barrel. If they should run out maybe coach Reagan could furnish some of his horror films.

I am most impressed with the manifestation of interest in Roland and do hope it continues. And may he become the idol of all the little tots between four and eight years of age. "Goodnight whatever you are"

Sore Losers 'Scalp' Opponent; You Can't Win; 'Little Susie' Wakes Up Down South

By MIKE MANCUSO
Exchange Editor

Recently, THE LAFAYETTE covered the official opening of the scalping season at Lafayette College when an innocent Lehigh frosh became the first victim at hands of the revenge seekers from Easton.

At the close of the freshman football game, which found Lehigh Victorious by 24-7, some of the Lafayette undergraduates took the loss much harder than most of the students.

These "men," sporting an unescorted Engineer, quickly conceived a capture plan that was almost impossible for the bewildered Lehigh freshman to escape.

Panting and breathless, he was dragged into the "cutting room" and shortly afterward the shiny headed youth was then released to the greener pastures of the Lehigh campus. Though minus a few hairs, he had made many new "friends" and left with a promise of future visits.

(P.S. Villanova extends its heartiest congratulations to those spirited Weavers from Philadelphia Textile who honored our campus the night before our victory last week.

PAPER PANIC!

In the last issue of the VILLANOVAN, Associate Editor Joe Kinney attempted to expose to our readers the trials and tribulations of putting our college paper out on time almost every Wednesday of the school year.

Publishing a paper is no picnic. If we print jokes, people say we are silly; if we don't, they say we are too serious.

If we stick close to the office all day we ought to be out hunting interesting things to print; if we go out and try to hustle, we ought to be on the job in the office.

If we don't accept contributions we don't appreciate genius; and if we do print them, the paper is filled with junk.

If we edit the other fellow's story we are too critical; if we don't we are asleep. If we clip things from other papers, we're too lazy to write them; if we don't we're stuck with our own stuff. Some will say we swiped this article, and we did . . . from THE MISSISSIPPI COLLEGIAN.

WE WANT TO DANCE

This Friday night, the Junior Class ushers in the Charity Ball in the field house on OUR campus. Much to the dismay of Wake Forrest students, holding a dance on campus is a privilege offered to college students.

The latest issue of Wake Forest College's student publication, OLD GOLD AND BLACK, blanketed its front page with several stories and photos explaining the student demonstrations against the Baptist State Convention's dancing ban.

A group of some 300 students from Wake Forest and nearby Salem College gathered at a shopping center parking lot dressed in various kinds of garb with one purpose in mind "to engage in the 'un-Baptist' practice of dancing."

When it appeared that there would be a lack of music, collegiate ingenuity came to the rescue. Someone connected a battery-powered loudspeaker system to a car radio and saved the party.

"That Old-Time Religion" replaced "Wake Up Little Susie" as the theme song of Wake Forest's snack bar choir.

Happy Birthday, WVIL!

By JOHN KENNEDY
Feature Editor

This week marks the tenth birthday of WVIL, the radio voice of Villanova University. From its humble beginnings—the campus equivalent of the log cabin—to its present prominence, WVIL has grown and expanded with the university.

Villanova's venture into the field of college broadcasting began in the opening weeks of Nov., 1947; the original idea extended back to 1945.

Students from the engineering division with the assistance of the electrical engineering, chemical engineering and physics departments—with some parts furnished by these departments—completed the radio transmitter. The cost of the embryonic station was $150; this may be contrasted with the present evaluation of WVIL at approximately $25,000.

From O'Dwyer To Austin

On Nov. 12 experimental broadcasts began to emanate from the confines of the third floor of O'Dwyer Hall. Two major problems confronted the pioneers in O'Dwyer at this point: final approval of the Federal Communications Commission for broadcasting, and some place from which to broadcast.

FCC approval secured, WVIL set up its facilities in an unventilated linen closet in the recesses of Austin Hall. The first moderator was the Rev. Ralph Handran, O.S.A., under whose benevolent guidance the station was formally opened on Tuesday, Dec. 9. The opening words on this historic occasion were spoken by the Rev. Edward Grimes, O.S.A.: "This is the Radio Voice of Villanova College.'

The Early Plans

The "Radio Voice of Villanova College" at this time hoped to broadcast away basketball games and contented itself for the time being with a three-hour programming, 8-11 p.m., later extended an hour. Two hours of this were taken by one show called "Music to Study By." WVIL also covered late world and campus news.

Tom Sullivan was the first station manager; Brian McLernon, chief announcer. Others connected with the initial efforts include John Kane, Matt Kearny, Bob Resnick and Joe O'Brian. Thirty students staffed the young station.

On March 2, morning broadcasts were initiated, 7:30-9. "Morning Mix Up" consisted of music, news and time checks.

WVIL'S Next Home

By 1949 student support and enthusiasm had led to WVIL's removal from Austin Hall to quarters in a small temporary building next to the Classroom Annex—the Old Pie Shoppe—which has since been demolished. Sharing WVIL's new home was the campus barber shop. A marked improvement, the station now occupied two small broadcast studios and a control room. Programming now assumed more of a variety: quiz shows, student talent, dramas.

1950 was marked chiefly by an increasing number of 'live' shows; in 1951, the Rev. Louis Ronglone, who was succeeded last year by Mr. Charles Smith of the English department, assumed the duties of moderator. A complete redesign and reconstruction of the transmitter was accomplished in 1952 under the direction of Henry Wu and other electrical engineers.

WVIL Turns Pro

The following year, 1955, marked important changes in the administration of the radio station. The entire staff was re-organized into departments comparable to those of a professional station; commercial advertising was instituted for the first time. Broadcasts were increased from sixteen to thirty-five hours a week. Also, WVIL successfully negotiated for promotion records from the larger distributors.

The New Dougherty Hall Location

WVIL 'came home' last year to its specially-constructed studios on the second floor of the new student union building, Dougherty Hall. There were several other changes of the American Tobacco Co; and the Villanova nurse made her appearance on the scene. The girl's became indispensable as record librarians.

Ten Years Later

The 10 anniversary of WVIL was marked by completion of the radio hook-up to the new dorm, Sheehan Hall; overall campus reception was improved. An extra hour of evening broadcasting has been added; also, Sunday nights now find the station in operation. Under consideration at present is the possibility of Saturday morning programming.

WVIL, as the radio voice of Villanova University, has come a long and deserved way in ten years from a staff of thirty and $150-worth of equipment situated in a linen closet.

Now with a membership exceeding one hundred and facilities estimated at $25,000, WVIL seems a complete realization of that ten-year-old dream of its early pioneers.

The Villanova led by senior Jack Emerick lead a group of enthusiastic students through the camp. at one of this fall's football rallies. The popular Dixieland dance band are a welcomed sight at Main Line affairs.

Like Dixieland Jazz? Our Villanovans Will Give You A Real Treat

By TOM MARTINEZ

New Orleans. Basin Street. The strains of the blues, the beat of "dixie". This can be heard through the instruments of a group of students known to the campus as the Villanovans.

These boys are the heirs, headed by senior Jack Emerick, of last year's popular jazz band that came into the musical limelight under the leadership and trumpeting of Bob Schiller.

Remembered along with Bobby are the inimitable trombonist Pat Briody, Mike Guida on clarinet, Jim McCarthy fingering the keys, Jack Gilfillan on drums, and of course Jack Emerick strumming both guitar and banjo.

Dixieland Continued

This year's complement was instituted by Jack so as to continue jazz on the campus in the tradition of good old time New Orleans "dixieland."

The "new" Villanovans have kept the same instruments and have added a tuba in the person of Dick Morrison. All the banjoing will be done by Jack who hails from Boonton, New Jersey and being a pre-law major he intends going to law school as well as continuing his music, something he just cannot seem to get away from.

Experienced Yantis

Taking the place of Schiller on trumpet this year is Jerry Yantis, a senior electrical engineer from McSherrystown, Pennsylvania. Although this is the first time Jerry has played with a "dixie" outfit there is no question of his ability as he is a member of the University Concert and Marching Band as well as having played for an American Legion band in high school and the first years here at Villanova.

Carlo Lo Vecchio is another versatile musician who plays both clarinet and saxaphone. Carlo, only a sophomore, comes from Sayre, Pennsylvania and is an education major who has played for various bands in his hometown area and like most of the other boys in the combo plays for the university band.

Two More Sophs

The loss of Jim McCarthy brought on the talents of another sophomore Lou Martucci. He has played the piano for quite a while and this Floral Park, Long Island product was the pianist for last year's Turf and Tinsel production.

A sophomore from Summit, New Jersey, and a biology major, Jay McAndrews is the drummer of the outfit and his experience is excellent as he has played in two bands while in high school. One of these has cut a record on the Savoy label and added to this he has been playing the drums for nine years.

Frosh In Group

Two freshmen from Pennsylvania make up the rest of the group. Dick Morrison of Wayne and a math major in the arts school plays the tuba and when called for he strums the string bass with equal zeal. Al Massey is the new trombone artist who had his experience with bands in his high school area.

One of the big things to come in the future will be the NFCCS variety show which will have its first presentation at Immaculata on March 9.

Not Much Brass

Since Jack has a great regard for the Firehouse Five Plus Two and Turk Murphy's band his boys do some of their "dixie" numbers such as "When You Wore a Tulip" and "I Love My Baby". In some degrees they have broken with the style of last year's Villanovans in that they do not use music and go more for improvision and not so much brass. All the boys take a solo break and it keeps them in the spirit of things as they knock out their notes.

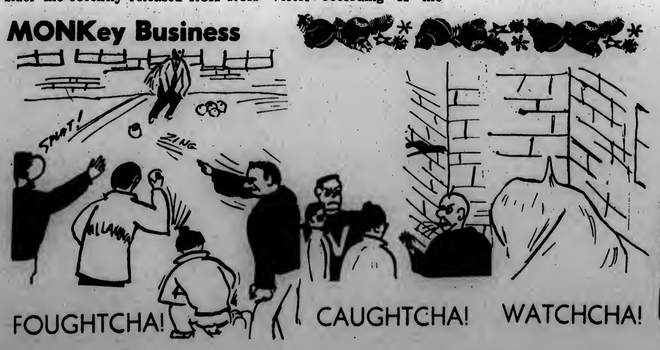
MAKING MUSIC:

Records Make Good Christmas Gifts

Christmas-and the time to give gifts. I thought we might look at a few recordings that would be appropriate as presents for loved—ones and friends.

One of the favorites for Christmas giving is Tchaikowsky's "Nut Cracker Suite" highlighted with the "Dance of Sugar Plum Fairies" appealing particularly to the children. Numerous artists have recorded this suite in captivating style but one of the best to my mind is Eugene Ormandy conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra on the Columbia label.

For the big buy you might consider the recently released RCA Victor recording of the five Beethoven Concertos. Here are perhaps the best and perhaps most talked about piano works of all time in one wonderful album; five records in all. Furthermore, they offer the one and only Rubenstein, the greatest interpretor of Beethoven's piano mastery alive today. His educated and masterful expression is a flawless tribute to both his own musicianship and the composer's artistry. A good buy.



Presented "Verdi"

I remember how my uncle's eyes lit up last Christmas when his son presented him with the RCA Victor recording of the Verdi masterpiece "Aida" done in its entirety. If a person is an Opera lover this is highly recommended as an appropriate gift.

I should like to put a plug in here for my favorite recording artists. They are nine Frenchmen who call themselves "Les Compagnions de la Chanson". They have three records on the market one on Columbia and two on Angel Records. On a fourth a Capital recording they combine their talents with Annie Condy, the typical cafe-type singer. Here to me is the apex in group singing.

The Nature And Results Of Income Tax Differentials

By ANTHONY L. P. ANGELINE
Ass't. Professor—Monetary and Fiscal Economics

The typical college freshman who is studying the subject of public finance in his principles of economics course has a preconceived notion that the Federal tax system is so steeply progressive that the burden of the tax rests on the upper income groups. He probably feels that this is justified in that one should pay taxes according to his ability to pay. If our inquiring freshman wants further proof, he may consult Section 1 of the U.S. Internal Revenue Code which prescribes a rate schedule starting at 20% with low exemptions moving to 50% at $16,000, and 75% at $50,000, and finally to 91% at $200,000.

In fact, gross income in Section 61a is defined as "all income from whatever source derived." At this point the freshman may be a bit puzzled for the wealthy are still able to live in mansions, send their children to private schools, enjoy many luxuries, accumulate capital investment as well as sizable bank accounts. Business firms are still able to expand capital and equipment. Our highly paid executives still continue to work at their jobs. Apparently, therefore, there are ways of "getting around" the apparent steep rates.

Aid To Novices

At the Tax Institute Symposium, many thought-provoking papers were presented by reputable economists and tax lawyers. The theme "Income Tax Differentials" will assist the novice in fiscal economics to understand the various methods used by the upper income groups to minimize their tax burden. No attempt is made to give an exhaustive treatment to such a complex subject. Here it is possible to point out only a few of the major avenues open for tax avoidance.

1. A popular method is the conversion of ordinary income into a capital gain. A capital gain or loss is a change in the value of certain types of property. Since gains are currently more dominant than losses, attention is focused on the former. Under the present tax laws, one-half of the long term (assets held over 6 months) gain is tax free and the other half is subject to a maximum tax of 25%. With a top marginal rate of 91%, this amounts to a preferential treatment to the high-income recipient who has every incentive to convert ordinary income into capital gains.

Not Limited

It has been argued that Congress should increase the capital gain rate and reduce the top rates on ordinary income in order to eliminate this preference and insure tax equity. A few economists would also tax "unrealized" capital gains on the grounds that wealth does not always have to take the form but may be represented by an increase in economic power.

Capital gains are supposedly looked upon as a form of "unexpected" or "surprise" income and this is one of the reasons they are singled out for special tax treatment. It is hard to imagine the tax collector asking the taxpayer, "I say Ludwig, were you surprised that your General Motor stocks went up $55 per share?" Certain studies have been made indicating that investors buy capital assets for capital appreciation rather than a steady flow of income in the form of interest or dividends.

Congressmen Usually Benefit

It is doubted that Congress will take any strong action to close the door to tax avoidance via capital gains. Congress represents essentially investor interests. It should be added that the vast majority of Congressmen own shares of stocks in leading corporations and interests in other capital assets and are themselves benefitting from the preferential capital gains tax rate.

2. Interest on state and municipal obligations is exempt from the federal tax. This favors the middle and upper income groups who own the major portion of these securities. It is suggested that the interest be subject to taxation and that the federal subsidies of states and localities be increased. But this would raise the issue of extending federal control over the states and localities. "He who accepts money also accepts control!"

Interest Accumulations

3. Interest accumulations allocated to life insurance policies are not taxed. It has been suggested that the interest be taxed and some sort of witholding plan be adopted.

4 Increase of the use of deferred compensation plans for highly compensated executives and those in the "entertainment" field and non-taxable fringe benefits are two more ways of avoiding the high income tax rates. Here we come to that hard-working executive who must be compensated very highly or he simply will refuse to work hard. Now if you pay our "vital" executive a high salary, you'll subject the poor devil to a high marginal tax rate. The unfortunate creature will complain that his incentive is going to be dulled. The employer (also a highly paid executive) comes to his rescue. They enter into various agreements such as spreading the large, yearly income over a decade or more in order to keep him in a lower income bracket.

Lump-Sum Payment

Some plans involve payment even after retirement! This is the familiar lump-sum pension payments which is taxed as a capital gain as are stock option compensations. In the field of television, where the "rage" may last only five years until a "double rage" replaces him, $200,000 yearly salary may be spread over two or more decades thus placing the income recipient in the lower income tax bracket.

Then there are those ever increasing fringe benefits which go untaxed such as travel and entertainment expenses, the use of a company Rolls-Royce or cabin cruiser. More and more employers are using fringe benefits as added compensation for their "indispensible" executives. It is high time that fringe benefits came within the scope of income tax. Income need not take the form of money in all instances.

Between 50 and 91%

In my opinion, executive incentive and the ability to work is not very much curtailed by the existence of high tax rates. The prestige is sufficient enough to keep him at his job. And Hollywood stars enjoy signing autographs and being kept constantly before the public's attention.

You have some idea now that an individual's income theoretically could be subject to a 91% marginal rate, but that by using the various tax avoidance tools mentioned above, the effective rate may be only 50%.

Our freshman has also been well indoctrinated with the idea that investment plays an important part in a dynamic economy. Investment as used in economics donates the acquisition of capital goods (buildings, equipment, inventories) rather than the purchase of stocks and bonds. He has been told that high taxes have discouraged investment in that they "eat away" profits. Consequently, lower tax rates would insure adequate venture capital.

Stockholders

On the contrary, the existence of high income tax rates with tax differentials can be a factor causing an increase in the rate of capital formation. Corporations will not necessarily pay out all of their profits to their stockholders. If they did the bulk of the dividend income recipients would have to pay high marginal rates (even after exempt and credit allowances).

This is especially true of family held corporations. Instead the corporation will retain as large a portion of its income undistributed and plow them back into the business. This has been a factor causing the rise in the value of securities (thus giving rise to capital gains which are taxed at a low rate).

In addition, the vast amount of retained earnings has made it unnecessary for many firms to float stocks for capital expansion. The high tax rates have encouraged our enterpreneurs to place more of their funds into capital assets where the prospect of capital gains is most attractive.

Conclusions

It should be evident to the reader by now that the differentials prevalent in the Federal income tax system favor investors and discriminate against consumers. Where the Federal government is in need of a greater amount of revenue to meet rising expenditures, it seems that all that is necessary is a broadening of the tax base.

In other words, we should include many items which are now excluded as taxable income and also eliminate preferential treatment for certain types of incomes. It is unecessary to increase present tax rates. If anything, we can reduce them and come out with larger revenue provided that the tax base is broadened.

Furthermore, Congress is wrong in expanding its preferential treatment to various pressure groups who have suddenly realized that other pressure groups have been receiving favorable tax treatment. The differentials thus existing today provide a vast amount of employment to tax accountants and tax lawyers who are engaged in the happy past time of tax minimization.

Too Much Liberal Arts Education? Opinions Vary

Minneapolis—ACP—Initial results of a national poll of student opinion indicate that college students are quite evenly split on the question of weather or not enough emphasis is put on a liberal arts education in today's universities.

Associated Collegiate Press obtained that information from answers to the following question, which was asked of a representative group of students in United States colleges and universities:

"NOT LONG AGO A MIDWEST EDUCATOR SAID HE FEELS THAT NOT ENOUGH EMPHASIS IS BEING PLACED ON A LIBERAL ARTS EDUCATION TODAY. DO YOU AGREE WITH THIS STATEMENT, OR DO YOU DISAGREE WITH IT? WHY?"

The tabulated results of the answers:

	Men	Women	Total
Agree	47%	41%	45%
Disagree ...	41%	49%	44%
Undecided ..	12%	10%	11%

A larger number of college men feel that liberal arts is not receiving enough emphasis in today's schools, but the majority of college women disagree. The basicpoint on which the issue revolves seems to be that of specialization. Persons supporting the view that not enough emphasis is placed on a liberal arts education tend to believe that there is too much specialization, while those who disagreed with the statementtended to feel more emphasis should be placed on specialization.

'Too Specialized'

"Over - specialization has robbed the United States of a thinking public" was the view of a Colorado State College (Greeley, Colo.) sophomore and a University of Kentucky (Lexington, Ky.) sophomore coed agreed by saying "We are becoming too specialized in this country. We need to have more emphasis on general education in order that we mak develope a number of lines."

n

'Is Arts The Answer?'

In answer to the poll question, a Biola College (Los Angeles, Calif.) senior who disagreed with the statement asked a question of his own: "Is liberal arts necessarily the answer to our educational problem? In our culture today there is veryl ittle need for a 'jack of all trades, master of none.' "

"Liberal arts education is good, but if people did not excel and specialize, there would be a few adfancements" is the opinion of a sophomore coed at Tyler Junior College (Tyler, Texas) and a Wayne Statee University (Detroit, Mich.) freshman coed supported her disagreement with the statement by commenting, "There should be more emphasis on science as such, because more scientists are needed."

Mein Kempf: Take An Orphan Out!

By DON KEMPF

It's cold out and jingle-bells are jingling; it's almost time to lock the door on the schoolhouse and with one last heave of a well-packed snow ball move home for the holidays.

Along with the happiness that Christmas cheer means and the change that occurs as all people become once again "good guys", unselfish and real, Christmas brings with it a few tears. Christmas, while meaningful to all men, has always been (and I should hope, always will be) a time for children. And for the college student who has just progressed from that stage where he "can't wait to grow up" to the point where he now looks with a more sober eye towards that world with which he will soon have to contend, Christmas serves as a reminder of those carefree pressureless, and always happy days into which he may not retreat.

What, No Cap Gun, Mom!

As the college student rides home for the holidays with the knowledge that his present this year will be clothes, or books or some other, oh, so practical gift, he cannot help feel that he would be willing to trade it all for a Range Rider cap gun, or maybe a Captain Video space helmet.

The next best thing to being a little kid at Christmas time is watching one and sharing with him those experiences which cannot be relived.

That 'Good' Feeling

Any sophomore, junior or senior who has gone on the St. John's Orphan's Outing in the past will agree on this matter. On Saturday evening when you crawl back into the dorm, somehow manage to push the door open and fall into the sack, YOU'RE TIRED . . . tired, with fallen arches and a sore throat and a few bruises—but you're happy; and as you doze off to sleep your eyes become clouded as you realize that it will be a year before you can go through it all again.

The Junior Class at Immaculata College will hold its annual Christmas play on Thursday and Sunday evenings at 8 p.m. Admission will be free to the play, "The King's Jongleur," which features the traditional yuletide theme.

Two-Part Program Featured By Villanova Spanish Club

Villanova's Spanish Club celebrated its annual Spanish Night last Friday evening in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium with a literary-musical program staged before a large audience which included a number of distinguished guests.

Among those present were the Spanish Consul in Philadelphia, Dr. Teodomiro de Aguilar as well as several consuls representing such Latin American countries as Ecuador, Mexico, Panama, Venezuela and Columbia.

The annual "Noche Espanola" was inaugurated by the late Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A.

The moderator of the Spanish Club, Professor Vito J. DiVincenzo, presiding over the activities of the Spanish Night program, acknowledged the cooperation of Father Policarpo Oroz, O.S.A. and Father Pedro Lerga, O.S.A., both from Spain, currently studying at Villanova.

He also thanked the co-chairmen, William Lyons and Michael Dougherty, and their committee members for their assistance.

Two-Part Program

The Spanish Night Program was divided into two parts. The first, the musical part, included popular Spanish songs of past and present sung by members of the Spanish Club, followed by a tenor solo entitled "Maria, Mater Gratiae," sung by Father Oroz. He was accompanied on the piano by Father Lerga.

Two piano solos followed. The first was entitled "Danza Quinta," by Granados, played by student Narciso Gandara. The second was entitled "La Malaguena" by Lecuona, played by the president of the Villanova Singers, Kenneth MacGillivray. Then, a poem entitled "Salve Oh Tierra Americana" was recited by Alfredo Sobalvarro, of Guatemala, and "Granada" was interpreted on the accordion by John J. Cerrone, Freshman Arts student.

After some final words by Dr. Aguilar, there was a brief intermission at which time refresments were served to all the guests.

One-Act Comedy

The second part of this literary-musical program consisted of a one-act comedy entitled "The Mother-in-Law's Gift." The cast included seven students, representing Spain or Latin America: three young ladies from neighboring Rosemont College, Diana Rivera, Maricarmen Matanzo, and Beatriz Quelquejeu and four men from Villanova, Arturo Martinez, Domingo Diaz, Sobalvarro and Jorge Valls.

C & F Group Hears 2 Insurance Men

Harry M. League and Emory Morrison, of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Beane, last night addressed students majoring in Marketing, Finance, Industrial Administration and Economics in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium in connection with a meeting sponsored by the Villanova Marketing Department.

The talk was accompanied by a motion picture which dealt with hedging and commodity marketing and showed how grain markets operate and how business men protect their interests by hedging.

Faculty members also attended the meeting.

Pre-Law Curricula Discussed, Schools View Total Picture

By JOHN FIXL

Mr. Malcolm D. Talbott, a member of the Committee on Pre-Legal Education of the Association of American Law Schools, talked to Villanovans interested in law, last Monday in the Vilinova Library.

He discussed the areas and objectives to be considered in choosing your pre-legal education. These are listed under three general topics: comprehension and expression in words; critical understanding of the human institutions and values with which the law deals; and creative power in thinking.

Select with Discretion

After explaining the above, he announced that these objectives have no identification with any specilized cources offered to university undergraduates. He stated that before deciding upon our curriculum, we should discuss the problem with upperclassmen and graduates who have taken the cources previously and may have valuable opinions to offer; secondly, consult teachers and advisors about the best curriculum for pre-legal study; and third, choose a field that is most interesting to you.

Mr. Talbott also made mention of the things to consider in selecting a law school. To be considered are your financial status, ratio of teachers to number of students at given university, a well or poorly equipped library (since this is basically the most important need of a student preparing for law); and flexible programs, e. g. seminars, which may provide an opportunity for specialization in the selection of cources.

Basis for Entrance

In the selection of their prospective student body, Mr. Talbott claims that most law school consider first of all the scholastic achievement of the applicant. Secondly, the Law Entrance 8xamination given by the Educational Testing Service in Princeton is acknowledged highly; thirdly, interviews and participation in a variety of extracurricular activities.

In concluding, Mr. Talbott stated that lawyers must be equipped not only to recognize problems but also to solve the same.

Math Department Sponsors Lectures by R. D. Schafer

Tonight and tomorrow night, Villanova University's Department of Mathematics will sponsor a series of lectures by Richard D. Schafer who will speak on "Linear Algebra" and "What Is Lie Algebra?"

These topics will be of interest to those on both the graduate and undergraduate levels. Members of the area colleges and universities will attend at the personal invitation of the Mathematics Department of Villanova. In addition to these guests, men from various local industrial firms and research laboratories will be present.

Professor Schafer

In 1954 Professor Schafer was elected Associate Secretary (Eastern Section) of the American Mathematical Society. He is a member of the Mathematical Association of America, for which he is currently a visiting lecturer and the chairman of its Committee on Slaught Memorial Papers. He is a member of the Committee on Regional Development of the Division of Mathematics of the National Research Council. He is also a a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi and the American Association of University Professors.

Dr. Schafer received his Ph.D. in mathematics from the University of Chicago where he concentrated in the field of algebra. He has spent two years in study and research as a member of the Institute for Advanced Study. Since 1953, Dr. Schafer has been professor of mathematics and head of the department at the University of Connecticut.

All Invited

The lectures are to be held Dec. 11 and 12 at 8 p.m. in the faculty lounge, Dougherty Hall. Through the courtesy of the mathematics department, the Mathematics Club wishes to extend a cordial invitation to all Villanovans.

Those seeking further information may contact Mr. Emil Amelotti, chairman of the mathematics department in his office at the Annex building.

Father Boyle Speaker At Convocation

By KEN MILLER

Recently, Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., Vice-President of Academic Affairs for Villanova University and a member of the Advisory Board of Holy Family College, Torresdale, Philadelphia, delivered the main address at the First Annual Honors Convocation at the latter institution.

In his speech Father said: "There is in higher education a twofold situation: on the one hand colleges are presented with the possibility of educating man liberally and broadly to live happily and profitably in the world as it is. While on the other hand, they can train him to earn a living in a career with special knowledge which carries high responsibility."

Liberal, Technical Explained

Father Boyle went on to say that "Liberal education is called cultural and scholarly while porfessional education is called vocational and practical. In the first instance the learning process is accomplished by developing and maturing the student i. e. in the second by the acquisition of technical competence."

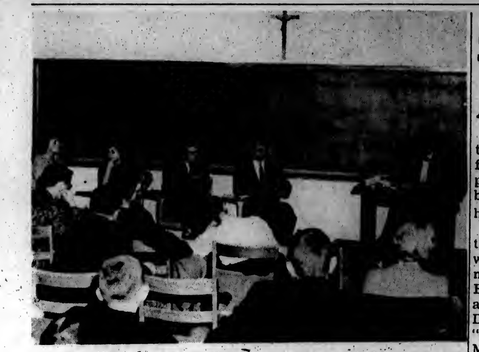
In summation Father Boyle said that "Reports and demands coming into colleges today indicate that a search is being made for people who, beyond the minimum professional requirements, can be counted upon also to bring to their tasks, imagination, human understanding, a sense of adventure, integrity and devotion.

Join the Two

Thus it is that one of our primary neds, a need which educators must keep in mind, is to join liberal and professional education or at least to see to it that the latter is deeply penetrated by the former."

1952 Graduate Receives Award

Duke University medical student and Villanova graduate Karl Agre of Great Neck, N. Y., has been named one of three $1,000 first place winners in the 1957 Schering Award competition, it was announced recently.



A third-year student in the Duke School of Medicine, Agre won the top award for his essay on "Recent Advances in the Biochemical Aspects and Treatment of Mental Disease."

Similar awards for essays on two other subjects were made in the annual contest, open to medical students throughout the nation. The competition is sponsored by the Schering Corporation, pharmaceutical firm in Bloomfield, N. J., to encourage development of interest and skill in the use of medical literature resources.

Agre, a graduate of Great Neck High School, received the B.S. degree in Biology in 1952. Before enrolling at Duke, he studied at Hahnemann Medical College in Philadelphia, where he received both the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in pharmacology.

Members of the Villanova Spanish Club held their annual "Noche Espanola" last Friday evening with the presentation of a literary-musical program on the VU campus. Above, club moderator, Professor Vito J. DiVincenzo, looks on as two yuest performers from Rosemont Collebe receive bouquets from Villanova club members after the performance.

Pictured facing the audience are members of the panel participating in the Literary Club's Symposium on "Art and Morality." The panel is representative of four of the area colleges, Holy Family, St. Joseph's, Villanova and LaSalle with Paul Yurchak, VU Senior acting as moderator.

Graduate School to Offer Rubber Technology Course

Recognizing the need of industrial concerns for rapid technological development, Villanova University, in conjunction with the Philadelphia Rubber Group, will again offer a course that provides a means for bringing scientific developments in chemistry to bear upon the technology of the rubber industry.

In the Spring semester a course in Basic Rubber Technology will again be included in the expanding graduate program of courses taught in the late afternoon and evening on the Main Line campus.

The offering is designed to present to those students who show an aptitude for successful advanced work a program of study that will acquaint them with the fundamentals essential for advance in the rubber industry.

Part of the graduate program in Chemical Engineering — a vital, burgeoning field of study in every phase — the new course in rubber technology will be conducted under conditions especially favorable for the student who seeks to enlarge his professional capacity.

Class Limited

The class will be limited to 20 students, and not more than five auditors will be permitted to attend; thus a maximum of student participation will be possible.

The course will be conducted by Mr. Aaron L. Back, formerly the chief chemist with American Foam and Rubber Corporation. Mr. Back, who has served various industries in the Philadelphia area and elsewhere as a rubber chemist, holds a B. S. in Chemical Engineering from the University of Pennsylvania, and has done graduate work in Chemical Engineering at the University of Louisville and at Villanova.

A specialist in the field of Rubber Technology, he has published several works and abstracts in this field and is a member of the American Chemican Society's Rubber Division.

Course Outline

The course will be concerned with the following briefly outlined facets of the subject:

A thorough treatment of the compounding, processing and testing in natural rubbers, synthetic rubbers, reclaimed rubber and latex; the underlying physico-chemical principles as well as the practical technology of such subjects as vulcanization, reinforcement, plasticizing and extending, processing and testing equipment, and a brief review of the chemistry, structure and properties of elastomers.

This course in Basic Rubber Technology will be given on Monday evening from 7:40 to 9:30. The first session will be held on Feb. 10, 1958 in room 201 of the Chemical Engineering Building; registration for the course must be completed on Feb. 3, 4, or 5.

Two graduate credits will be attained by those who successfully complete the course. A tuition charge of $46 will be made for both those who seek graduate credit and those who audit the classes.

Students Join With Faculty LibraryGroup

A student library committee to work in conjunction with the faculty library committee for promotion of the Villanova library on campus has recently been initiated, according to the Rev. Daniel Falvey, O. S. A., University Librarian.

Roger Leemhuis, Junior Arts major, has been named chairman while Bernice Sugint, Junior Nursing student, has been named secretary.

Other members include: Ronald Anderson, Joseph Bawduniak, Attilio DiMartino, James Fox, Edward Kelly, William Lawrence, Howell McConnell, John O'Leary and Edward Ward.

Faculty Members

Members of the faculty committee include Father Falvey, the Reverends John A. Klekotka, O. S. A. and Henry Weeks, O. S. A., Messrs. Charles P. Bruderle, Frederick M. Burgess, George H. Chorba, William G. Driscoll, Jerome J. Fischer, George A. Harris, Roland J. Houde, Joseph T. Jonas, Bohdan P. Procko and Miss Margaret Dougherty.

Committee meetings are held on the second Thursday of each month. The first meeting was held in October.

5,000 Books Per Year

Present plans call for an addition of some 5,000 books to the library each year. The library now holds approximately 120,000 books.

The committee reported that 7,000 books were lent out by the library during October.

Singers Perform Tuesday Evening At Faculty Dinner

This coming Tuesday, Dec. 17, the Villanova Singers will be featured on the entertainment program of the annual faculty banquet to be held in the field house.

Mr. Herbert Fiss will direct the singers in their repertoire which will include such Christmas carols as: "Lo! How a Rose Ere Blooming," "Silent Night" and "Willie, Take Your Fife and Drum"; some secular songs: "Aura Lee," "Stout-Hearted Men" and "The Winter Song"; and some religious music such as "My Chosen King" and "Break Forth, O Beauteous Heavenly Light."

One unusual presentation will be the singing of the "Gloria" from Jan Mul's " Missa Impromptu" which will be the first time the organization has used music from a Mass for a formal concert.

Octet Debuts

Another attraction will be the debut of the newly formed Octet for the family. The Octet will sing "Kentucky Babe" and "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear."

This group consists of two tenors: Tom McCahn and Jim O'Leary; two second tenors: Bill Henry and Paul Muller; two baritones: Jim Corey and Tom Martinez; and two basses: Frank Connelly and Charlie Carroll.

Deans To Sing

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., will sing the traditional "O Holy Night" and Dr. Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the Law School, will solo on the first verse of the "Alma Mater."

Last night the Singers delivered their first formal concert by appearing at Immaculata College.

After the banquet the group will carol at Rosemont College and after the holidays they will begin working for their coming concert season, which will see them performing at Chestnut Hill, Holy Family, Rosemont and other schools, as well as at the Choral Festival March 1 at St. Joseph's College.

Class of '59 Receive Rings Improved Designs Featured

The members of the Class of '59 received their class rings prior to the Thanksgiving holidays. Although basically the same design as in previous years, the rings do have some minor although distinctive changes.

Chief among these is that all letters and numerals in the ring are more clear and deep.

Seal Enlarged

Two changes involve the university seal and the school's name. The seal was enlarged and made more prominent and the school name was placed in a better position to conform to the curvature of the ring.

Another added feature, not so visible but highly important, is that the rim of the ring is reinforced.

The chairman of the ring committee, Don McNelis, announced that those juniors who have adjustments or corrections to be made should contact any member of the committee after the Christmas holidays.

Ring Committee

The committee consists of McNelis, Frank Cavalier, Bill Christman, Chuck Fritz, Jim Klein, T. Walker Lloyd and Vic Ludmerer.

After several preliminary meetings subsequent to the formation of the committee last May, the group interviewed representatives from firms who were interested in obtaining the school's contract. Dieges and Clust, represented by George A. Packer, was eventually chosen.

Semper Fidelis Steps Up Campus Activities Program

The Semper Fidelis Society has launched a program designed to make Villanova students more aware of the Marine Corps at Villanova, society President Jack Goodyear has announced.

"We have recently held a most successful dinner dance and party and now want to fulfill the stated purpose of the club, that of "fostering better understanding of the Corps," Goodyear continued.

The program is designed to bring to the students a little of the feeling and color of the Marine Corps, its history, traditions and its missions.

Newspaper articles, movies, bulletin announcements and informative lectures will all be used to accomplish the goal. All members of the university are invited to attend any of the affairs, Goodyear announced.

Library Display Set

A library display, prepared by society member, Bill Ganz, will soon be revealed.

The society will hold its monthly meeting tomorrow in Commodore John Barry Hall at 10:30 a. m. Goodyear has invited all members of the university to attend the meeting.

Discussed will be representation of Villanova's chapter at the scheduled meeting of PLC's from the Philadelphia area after the Christmas holidays.

Mugs, Pins Considered

Social Chairman George Rhiele has announced that plans concerning the ordering of beer mugs and pins will be considered. Treasurer Jim Crawley has announced that dues will also be collected.

AIEE Hears 'Saucer' Talk By Dr. Winn

Dr. Hugh Winn, of the General Electric Company, spoke to the Villanova student branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Dec. 3, on the theme of "Flying Saucers—Fact or Fancy."

Dr. Winn is a native of St. Louis, Mo. and obtained his Bachelor of Science degree in Chemical Engineering from Michigan College of Mining and Technology in 1940, his Master of Science, 1940, and his Ph. D. in 1948 from Case Institute of Technology.

The speaker's professional positions include Research Engineer for Dow Chemical Company, Assistant Professor in Chemical Engineering at Case Institute of Technology, and group leader for Firestone Tire and Rubber Company and is now manager of Structures Design Engineering in the Missile and Ordnance Systems Department.

Dr. Winn is presently serving as a consultant to Frankford Arsenal and held consultantships in the Glenn L. Martin Company and Ohio Chemical Company. His speech was arranged through Community Relations, Missile and Ordnance Systems Department of the General Electric Co.

Opera-Classica To Hear La Traviata Tomorrow

By IGOR Z. STRAVINSKI

At its final offering of the year, the Opera Classica Music Society will hear the LONDON recording of Giuseppe Verdi's "La Traviata" (The Lost One) tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

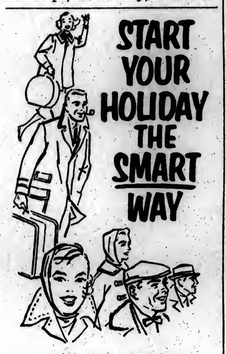
This is in preparation for the Metropolitan Opera production of that work in Tuesday, Dec. 17 at the Academy in Philadelphia.

The LONDON cast includes Renata Tebaldi as Violetta Valery, Gianni Poggi as Alfredo and Aldo Protti as Germont. Francesco Molinari-Pradelli conducts the Orchestra and Chorus of the Academy of St. Cecilia, Rome.

Free Libretto

Again, as in the past, a free libretto will be supplied for all new-comers free-of-charge.

The second student concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra will be given on Monday, Dec. 16, at 8 p.m. at the Academy. The Orchestra under the baton of Eugene Ormandy will play Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite;" Puccini's "Sola, Perduata, Abandinata" from "Manon Lescaut;" and Gounod's "Jewel Song" from "Faust." Anna Marie Cisale will sing the latter two numbers. The audience will be asked to join in the singing of Christmas carols. Tickets may be secured from William E. Lesko.



At the Met's "La Traviata" the next evening, there will be a change in the announced cast. Renata Tebaldi, originally scheduled, lost her mother just recently and the leading Met soprano will be on her way to Italy at the time of the performance. Opera Classica communicated its deep sympathy to Miss Tebaldi.

Sub For Miss Tebaldi

Victoria De Los Angeles or Maria Callas will substitute for Miss Tebaldi. However, as announced, Daniele Barioni will sing Alfredo and Robert Merrill will sing Germont.

On Dec. 19 at 8:15 p.m. the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company will present Verdi's "Rigoletto." Eva Likova sings Gilda, Eugene Conley portrays the Duke and Cornell MacNeill sings the title role. Giuseppe Bamboschek will conduct. Tickets for students at $1 apiece are available from Anthony L. P. Angeline, Society moderator.

Many of the senior members of the Society have voiced desire that membership be limited to 50.

Schoener Wins Two, Sets Mark, Swimmers Win, 54-32

Co-captain Lou Schoener swept the 220 and 440-yard freestyle races and then came back to star in a record breaking 440-yard relay race last Saturday to pace the Villanova swimming team to a 54-32 victory over V.M.I. in the opening meet of the season in the Field House pool.

Schoener's performance was highlighted by his 5:22.5 clocking in the 440 distance, which broke a 17-year old Villanova record by 2.2 seconds.

With the two individual efforts behind him, Schoener supplied the spark that allowed the Wildcats to close out the afternoon with a win, bringing the Villanovans from behind in the third lap of the freestyle relay and giving anchorman Joe Mason a lead he never relinquished.

A Pair of Pintos

Bob Pinto and brother Lou (Villanova's other co-captain) swam the first legs of the race, and the 3:48.7 timing wiped out another school record that had stood for 17 years.

The Main Liners took seven of the ten events, being beaten in the 50 and 100-yard free style events and the 200-yard butterfly.

V.M.I. co-captain John Cunningham took the free style races, with Mason and Bob Pinto finishing second and third in each. The Virginia school, which has been the Southern Conference champion for the past four years, got its other first in the person of Ken Erdle. Larry Palacio took second for Villanova when fellow Wildcat Jim Gregory was disqualified.

Palacio Wins

Palacio returned three events later to capture the 220-orthodox breast stroke in 2:41.8, with Gregory finishing second.

Sophomore Frank Keefe easily took the 200-yard backstroke for the Villanovans, and Gerry Cechony contributed a third place finish. Keefe's winning time was 2:29.5.

Keefe also contributed to another Wildcat win, teaming with Gregory, Palacio and Lou Pinto to capture the 400-yard medley relay in 4:23.8.

Frosh Are Beaten

Another soph, Steve Carton, was impressive in taking the diving competition with 62.85 points.

Newcomer Bill Brennan goes up for a shot in last week's opening game with Philadelphia Textile, while top scorer Ken Harrison (background) and John Scott (52) charge in for the rebound.

Michaels Most Valuable, Others Feted at Banquet

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Ed Michaels, Jr. received the national Alumni Association award as Villanova's "most valuable player" at the 36th annual football banquet of the Villanova Club of Philadelphia, held last Monday night at the Penn-Sherwood Hotel.

Michaels, stellar guard for Frank Reagan's Wildcats for the past three years and son of Villanova's first All American player, was given the award by Joseph F. O'Donnell, '43.

There were four other presentations made at the affair, as over 500 people gathered in the Sherwood's Ballroom to put the finishing touches on the 1957 football season.

Keynote Speech

Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O. S. A., president of the university, sounded the key-note for the evening when he stated that the Wildcats "even in defeat, gained the admiration of all their opponents."

Both Father Donnellon and Athletic Director and Coach Frank Reagan reiterated a statement which Reagan had previously made to the Philadelphia press, to the effect that Villanova's football future must be marked by schedules in which the number of home games comes near matching the number of away games.

Reagan, citing the effects that travel has on the conditioning of ball players, said that the fact that the three wins the Wildcats copped were all played on the home grounds served to point this up.

Tony Named Consistant

Tony Varrechione, a regular like Michaels for three years, received the Cyril J. Burke Award from backfield coach Joe Rogers as the team's "most consistant performer."

Co-captains Don Luzzi, tackle, and Bill Magee, quarterback, were presented the Martin J. Mc Laughlin Memorial Award, annually given to the team's captain or co-captains. Line coach John Sandusky presented the award.

Track Coach Jim (Jumbo) Elliott was the recipient of the Alumni's "Loyalty Award." Three of his athletes represented Villanova at the Olympic Games in Australia in 1956.

Father McKee Honored

Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., athletic moderator for 12 years, was given an engraved cigarette lighter in recognition of the high regard in which he is held by alumni, faculty, athletes and coaches alike. Father McKee is now prior of St. Augustine's Church, mother church of the Augustinian order in the United States.

Sixteen graduating seniors received trophies from Reagan. They were Dave Parr, Jack Devereaux, Paul Laughlin, Varrechione, Art De Stephano, Rick Sapienza, Michaels, Dick Byrne, Tim Etter, Bill Halligan, Ray Lyons, Vince Chaverini, Alex Szablowski, Pete Blackwood, Magee and Luzzi.

At the bang of the starter's gun, swimmers John Rumbarger (L) and Lou Schoener will dive into the water and sprint to another victory for Villanova. Last week Schoener established a new record as the 'Cats defeated VMI in the field house pool.

Cats Trounce Gettysburg, 75-61, As Harrison, Scott Combine For 38 Markers

By JACK CURTIN

Kenny Harrison scored 21 points to lead the Villanova basketball team to a 75-61 victory over Gettysburg in the second game of the season on the field house court Monday night.

Harrison hit in 9 out of 19 shots from the floor and added three more from the foul line to record his pace setting total.

Sophomore John Scott 6-8 recruit from Frankfort High by way of North Carolina State tabbed 17 points and pulled down 14 rebounds to aid Villanova's effort.

A pair of Brennans were next in the scoring column with 15 and 11 points respectively. Tom also grabbed 10 rebounds to take second in that department.

A strong height advantage gave Villanova an early lead with which they withstood a strong Gettysburg drive in the middle of the second half.

The Wildcats defensive play was still weak and will need improvement for the tough upcoming opponents.

Little John Huggard scored 28 points and amazed a packed field house crowd with almost unbelievable passes as he spurred the Villanova freshman court team to a 106-55 victory over Gettysburg frosh Monday night.

In the season's opener six days earlier, hot-shooting Ken Harrison poured 23 points through the nets to pace the Wildcats to an 84-63 trouncing of Philadelphia Textile that ran Villanova's Field House streak to 76 in a row.

Harrison, who gave an indication of his scoring potential in the waning games last year, hit from all over the court, electrifying the overflow crowd twice with long set shots off the standard Severance weave.

The New York junior also pulled down 11 rebounds, to tie co-captain Jack Kelly for second in that department.

Top man off the boards for the Wildcats was 6-8 soph John Scott, who gathered in .9 rebounds. Scott, tagged as an important cog in the 1957 Villanova court picture, made his debut even more impressive by scoring 15 points before he left the game with six minutes to play.

Kelly Scores 15

Kelly also tabbed 15 counters,

Playboys Capture Football Title In Intramurals

In a series of hard fought games, the upstart Playboys emerged as the intramural football champions.

The road to the championship was long and hard for the Playboys. In their first encounter with the highly-touted East Wingers the Playboys were beaten in first downs by 3 to 1.

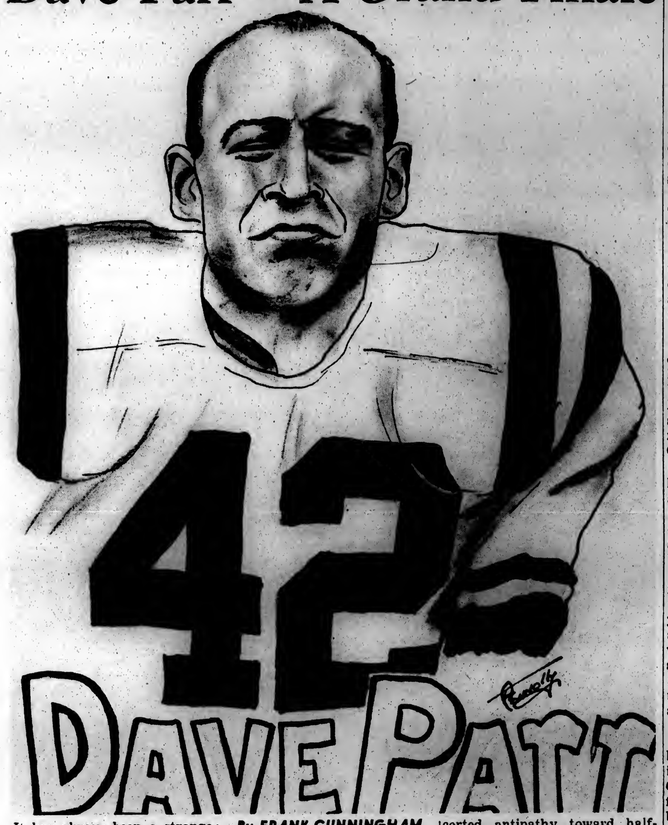
Back From Defeat

It looked as if the championship would have to wait for another year. But the Playboys were allowed a rematch with the Wingers as the result of a protest lodged against the formations used by the Wingers. This time the Playboys won by a 6-2 score.

With this victory under their belts, the Playboys knocked off D. P. M. 7 to 0, while the favorite, the Delurey Devils, beat Joe's Jets by 6 to 0. In the big game, it was the Playboys versus the Devils.

In a game played on a muddy field, on an intercepted pass and a 40-yd. run by Joe Herzog for the only score of the game, the Playboys became the champions. Solid line play by John Lamprecht, a vital interception by Butch Lemole on the two yard line and a lot of hustle on the part of the whole team highlighted the game.

Many Heroes



The Delurey passing attack was stifled by the constant pressure applied by the ends Arnie Hess and Bob Hewson. Guard Roger O'Dwyer and also Bob Epifano, Chuck Roellig, Ed Batta and of course Joe Murphy who quarterbacked the Playboys to the title shared the limelight.

A word of praise should be given to the Delurey Devils who fought well in defeat. Men like Greg Lignelli, Dick Montgomery, Buzzy Barron, Mo Mo Mc Laughlin and Frenchie Stark did a bang up job for the Devils who were last year's champs.

Davey Parr is off and running for the goal line in the second period of the Wildcats' 24-6 victory over Wichita to close the 1957 gridiron season. Rick Sapienza (14) gets set to block one of Parr's pursuers.

Dave Parr—A Grand Finale

By FRANK CUNNINGHAM

It has always been a strange paradox of sport that some of its most talented participants never seem to reach the pinnacle of achievement attained by athletes of far less potential; that some of them have even their fine exhibitions tarnished by one misplay at a critical moment which ultimately loses the game.

Yet it is as much a paradox that these same men will sometimes wait until their final hour, the last game of their careers, before they are able to fulfill their expectations, to thoroughly vindicate themselves by one great performance which makes the mediocrity of too many of the others have no meaning.

Parr Comes Back

Davey Parr vindicated himself with the best game of his collegiate career two Saturdays ago against Wichita. In his last effort for Villanova, the fleet halfback almost singlehandedly lead the Wildcats to victory, and in doing so, came of age athletically. Three times he raced around and through hordes of opposing Kansans to score.

Just as Parr had been, by his fumbles at crucial points, responsible for some of the frustrating losses on the road, against Wichita he sparked his team by his rapier thrusts through the line.

All season long the Baltimore speedster had caused the coaches many sleepless nights because of the costly fumbles. The pattern began in Waco, Texas in the first tilt of the season. Pitted against a rugged Baylor eleven, Villanova controlled the ball for almost the whole first period, and finally battered down to the three yard line.

Fumgle Proves Costly

Billy Magee handed off to Parr,who swept around his right end and over the goal—but not before he lost control of the ball. It cost the 'Cats a score and at least a possible tie. But even worse, it foreshadowed things to come.

Cats Win

Over 6,000 fans braved the cold, snowy weather, keeping warm by cherring and other means, to watch the football team finish its schedule on Nov. 23 by bouncing Wichita, 24-6. The victory, the third of the year for the Wildcats as against six defeats, also came in the third on-campus game.

Dave Parr, Leon Horin, Gene O'Pella and Don Luzzi sparkled in the triumph. Parr sped for three teedees, two on bursts off right tackle for 28 and 53 yards and the third on an 81-yard punt return.

O'Pella was named to the weekly All-East team for his sturdy blocking, particularly on Parr's 53-yard jaunt as he made two key blocks, and his powerful defensive play.

Four more times during the season, Parr was involved in fumbles when it hurt the team most, and three of those times the opposition scored as a result of gaining the ball. It got so serious that Parr began spending more and more time on the bench, for football coaches have, over the years, developed a concerted antipathy toward halfbacks with "fumblitis".

The coaches realized that they had a fast, elusive, and extremely talented ballcarrier riding the bench, but they couldn't afford to use Parr extensively lest another fumble cost the team a victory.

Returns To Line-Up

But after five straight loses, Dave was inserted in the starting line-up against Wichita. Near the end of the quarter, Villanova started a long march downfield. With the ball on the Wichita 28, Parr slashed through right tackle and went all the way to paydirt.

In the second period, Wichita tried a quick-kicking strategy to force the Wildcats deep into their own territory. A booming punt nestled snugly in Parr's arms on his 19 yd. line, and then 6,200 fans witnessed a piece of broken field running that they won't see again for quite a while. Parr ran through the entire Kansas team, following his interference beautifully, and going 81 yards for the score.

Early in the second half, Magee handed off to Parr again and Dave duplicated his first long run of the day, scampering 53 yards for his third TD. When it was all over Parr had gained 133 yards on 11 carries for an average of 12 yards per rush.

Davey Parr's last game was a great one, but not merely because of his brilliant running. He had picked up a losing team and made it run the way it should have run all season. He had realized the great potential that everyone knew he possessed.

Paul Laughlin: Top Student, Athlete

By BILL VINCENT

Did you ever hear of a football player holding a 3.9 average during the season? Well Villanova's team can boast of such a case in the person of Paul Laughlin. This year Laughlin played in all nine varsity games, including six away contests, and when marks came out at midterm Paul's average was 3.9.

However, this wasn't anything new for Paul. He was an outstanding athlete and student at Dormont High School in Dormont, Pa.

High School All-Star

Outside of being an honor student, he played football and basketball. He was selected on the Western Pennsylvania All-Star Football team and also was a starting end for Allegheny County in the Junior Chamber of Congress All-Star Game.

As a result of his great athletic and scholastic achievements at Dormont, Paul received scholarship offers to 20 colleges, but chose Villanova ahead of such schools as Yale, Penn State, Pitt, West Virginia and V. M. I.

Paul entered Villanova in the fall of 1954 with a full football scholarship. In his freshman year he played yearling football and at the end of the year he was elected president of the sophomore class. With these activities and others, he still managed to get an accumulative average of 3.9 for his first year.

Debut on T. V.

His job as president gave him the double duty of being Co-Chairman of Freshman Orientation and playing varsity football. He made his varsity debut in the nationally televised Villanova—Boston College game of 1955.

At the end of his sophomore year, Paul was elected to a two year term on the Student Council. He has been an active member of the Council and has served on various committees. This year he was appointed chairmen of the Election Committtee.

Last year he and star tackle Don Luzzi were co-chairman of the Annual Orphans' Outing and was an important part in making a number of kids happy.

English Major

Paul, an English major, has been in Delta Pi Mu, the arts' fraternity, for four years, and also has had time to serve on his class's steering committee for two years, and be an active member of the Villanova Singers, of which he is vice president.

PAUL LAUGHLIN
Student and Athlete

During the past two summers he has done investigation work for the law firm of James P. Mc Ardle, a top Western Pennsylvania firm.

A couple of months ago Laughlin placed in the top 4% of those who took the Princeton Law School Entrance Exam. At the present time Laughlin's future plans include law school at Villanova.

Recently Paul was one of the 32 Villanova Seniors chosen to represent Villanova in the annual "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

Paul Laughlin is the type of guy universities dream about student, athlete and gentleman.

Dom Falini, Sophomore DPM Contestant, Wins Hexathon; Named Top 'Mural Athlete

By PAUL BUCKLEY

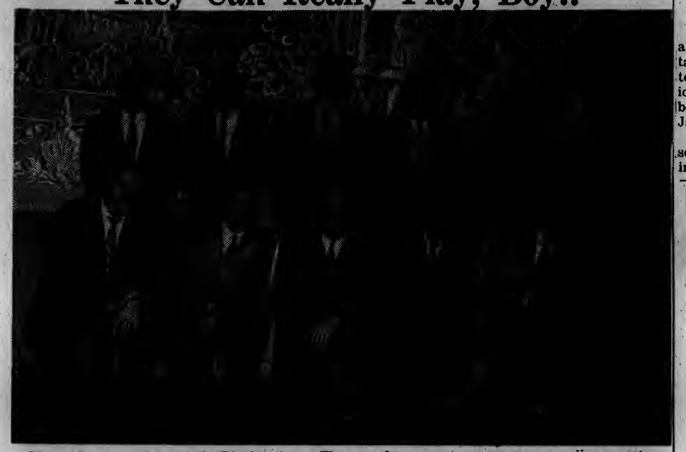
With the completion of the first annual Hexathon, the sophomore D. P. M. candidate Dom Falini proved himself to be the best all-round athlete at Villanova.

By totaling 405 points in the six events, Falini won over Link Hallowell who had 372 points and Pat Nicholson with 367.

Valuable Points

Falini picked up valuable points in the 300-yard run, riflery and gymnastics. Nicholson and Hallowell managed to stay close to Falini by rolling up large scores in the football pass and punt for distance.

The Hexathon was conceived by the intramural department to provide for the students an opportunity to show their athletic prowess. As a guide for the point system, Mr. Geisz turned to the table of efficiency as found in the Marine Corps Manual.



Point System

The point system for the track, gymnastics and riflery were taken from the manual, while the scoring for the other events, basketball, football, and swimming were derived from the basic system of the manual.

Frosh Sparkle In Opener, Kenny, Huggard Lead Team To Impressive 89-46 Win

The freshman basketball team parleyed a fast break and some hot shooting into an 89-46 lacing of the Cape May (N. J.) Coast Guard last Tuesday, in the team's first game of the season.

The Frosh, operating under the leadership of varsity coach Al Severance this year, were to face St. Joseph's yesterday in the field house.

LaSalle In '58

After that, the Frosh were not to hit the boards until after the turn of the year, when they play LaSalle away on Jan. 9. A year ago LaSalle was the best freshman club in this area.

The win over Coast Guard marked the opening of an 11-game schedule which includes clashes with all the colleges comprising the Philadelphia "Big Five."

Jim Kenny, from North Catholic, teamed up with Jim Huggard, formerly of West Catholic but more recently of independent league fame, to lead the running game which wore down the visitors before the game was five minutes gone. The Little Cats led by 13-0 before Coast Guard scored.

Huggard, Kenny Star

Huggard and Kenny had the Gobs thoroughly confused with their close defensive play and steals. A large part of the 89 points came as a result of quick two-and three-on-one situations set up by interceptions. Huggard, in particular, was a ball-of-fire. He handed out more than a dozen assists.

Kenny was top scorer, with 14-2-3 for 30 points. Huggard took second honors on 6-5-12 for 17. Tom Samuelwicz, another North grad, chipped in with 13 counters, as did Bob Liberatore, one of the greatest scorers in the history of Bristol (Pa.) High School.

While last year's frosh team featured height, the 1957 squad is on the small side. Samuelwicz and Dave Severance, son of the coach, are the biggest men at slightly more than 6-3.

Wildcats Defeat Textile In Court Opener, 84-63

and supplied the spark early in the second half when the Main Liners pulled away from the outclassed Philadelphia unit. Kelly took almost every rebound in the opening minutes of the game to keep the ball in Wildcat possession.

Backcourt ace Joe Ryan scored 11 points and did most of the work in bringing the ball upcourt against Textile's full-court press. Co-captain Tom Brennan tallied six times and took several rebounds, although hampered early by fouls.

Bill Brennan, 6-3 senior engineer, also made his debut in a Villanova uniform as a backcourt aide to Ryan, and scored five points. All but two of the 11 men Coach Severance used in clearing the bench broke into the scoring column.

Defense Ragged

However, all was not bright in the Wildcat picture. Several times the Main Line five seemed ragged on defense, and throughout the whole first half the team showed signs of nervousness with high-class opposition coming up in the next few weeks, improvements must be made.

The Wildcats met Loyola of Baltimore in the field house last night, and will face Duke in North Carolina on Saturday. They will return to meet North Carolina State in the Palestra Dec. 19.

A trip to Buffalo, N.Y., early in January for contests with Canisus and Niagra will precede an important battle with mighty West Virginia in the Palestra on January 8.

Luzzi In Senior Bowl

Don Luzzi, Villanova's Honorable Mention All-American tackle, has accepted an invitation to participate in the annual Senior Bowl post season classic, to be held in Mobile, Alabama, on January 11.

The bowl game, featuring some of the top graduating gridiron stars in the nation, pits north against south in a collegiate all-star battle.

Luzzi was one of the outstanding members of the Main Line grid team the past season, and was heralded for his fine play by opposing coaches and the press. He was co-captain of the Villanova team, along with quarterback Billy Magee.

DECK THE HALLS

The days grow short, the nights grow long, the north wind doth blow, and a light frost appears on the knees of coeds. Christmas is icumen in, and once more our keen young minds turn to the vexing problem of Christmas gifts.

Let us examine first the most vexing of all gift problems: What do you buy for the person who has everything? Well sir, when you encounter this dilemma, the best thing to do is seize it by the horns. Ask yourself this question: Does he truly have everything? Does he, for example, have a birthmark? A Mach number? A lacrosse net? An I-beam? An S-hook? A U-bolt? A T-square? A Primus stove?

(There is, incidentally, quite an interesting little story about how Primus came to invent the stove. Before Primus's invention, cooking was rather a hazardous occupation. People just built fires any old place—the floor, the closet, the escritoire—and often as not the whole house would go up in flames along with the dinner. Primus, a goose plucker of Frankfurt-am-Main, kept thinking there must be a more efficient way to cook. Finally, in a flash of inspiration, it came to him: Why not build a device to contain the fire and keep it from spreading?

...his mistake was in building it out of paper...

(Well sir, he built precisely such a device and named it after his beloved wife Stove. Primus's first Stove, it must be confessed, was less than a triumph; his mistake was in building it out of paper. The next Stove, built of wood, fared hardly better. Not until he made one out of metal could the Stove really be called a success.

(But even then the Stove was not entirely satisfactory. The trouble was that the Stove filled up with ashes and became useless after a few weeks. It remained for Primus's son Frederick to conquer that problem. He invented a mechanism to remove ashes from the bottom of the Stove and was thenceforth known to posterity as Frederick the Grate.)

But I digress. We were discussing Christmas gifts. This year, as every year, a popular gift is the smoking jacket. And what do the smoking jackets smoke? Why, Marlboro, of course—every man jacket of them. And why wouldn't they smoke Marlboros? Why wouldn't anybody with a taste bud in his head? You get such a lot to like in a Marlboro—filter . . . flavor . . . flip-top box.

Here is no filter to hollow the cheeks and bug the eyeballs; here is a filter that draws nice and easy. Here is no flavor to pale and pall; here is a flavor ever fresh, ever zestful. Here is no flimsy pack to crumble and shred its precious cargo; here is a sturdy box that keeps each cigarette plump and pristine.

Speaking of smoking, the year's most unusual gift item is a brand-new cigarette lighter that never needs refilling. You are scoffing. You are saying you have heard such claims before. But it's true, I promise you. This new lighter never, never needs refilling! The fuel supply lasts forever.

Of course, there are certain disadvantages. For one thing, the lighter is rather bulky—170 feet long and three stories high.

But look on the bright side: As the fuel runs out, you can rent rooms in it.

Good to give, good to receive, at Christmas or any other time is a carton of filter-tip Marlboros, whose makers take pleasure in bringing you this column throughout the school year.

Student Council Views

Key To The Future

By FAT NICHOLSON

November 23, 1957 is a day which will live forever in my memory. On this cold, windy day a football game was scheduled in Goodreau Stadium. Pregame interest certainly didn't appear to be very high. Villanova had just returned home after losing five straight games by heartbreakingly close scores. Wichita, certainly not a traditional opponent, had done no better. At one o'clock the stadium was practically empty. However, at kickoff time, 1:30 the stadium was far from empty. Students, alumni and friends of Villanova poured into the stands. The Wildcats were back home and the Spirit of Villanova was there to greet them. The student body of Villanova was proving once and for all that the Spirit of Villanova was certainly something that would never be surpressed by defeat or by anything else.

NICHOLSON

It would have been very difficult to blame the students if they had let down. The team had played only two previous games at home, had played and lost five straight games on the road, had played only a few opponents where real rivalry exists, and had lost its games by the most exasperating ways and margins. Yet the student body knew that each and every member of the team was playing the game of football in the very best way that he knew how. Our victory that day was an exciting one — thanks to a greatly over-critisized Davey Parr. However, my greatest memory of that game will always be of the more than 2500 Villanovans who braved the wind and the cold to show the Cats that, more than ever, they were solidly behind them. This demonstration of loyalty gave me the greatest feeling of pride that I have ever felt for Villanova.

Moreover, the turnout of loyal alumni along with the students, is a clear indication that Villanova is now on the right road to athletic success. The Spirit of the Villanova student body has been called the "Best in the East" and rightly so. A combination of this spirit both within the student body and within the alumni is the key to our future athletic success. Maybe now we have found that key.

Tonight the Student Council will formally adopt its new Constitution and By-Laws and will elect the members of the newly created Student Senate. It is hoped that final administration approval will take place immediately after Christmas. The meeting of the Student Congress on Jan. 15 will be held for the purpose of explaining the new system to all moderators, student leaders, and other interested students. The new system will go into effect at the begining of the second Semester.

LC to Present English Film 'Richard II'

The next important function the Literary Club will present to the students and faculty of Villanova will be the English motion picture version of Shakespeare's "Richard II" which stars Maurice Evans and Sarah Churchill.

This two-hour film will not be open to the public outside the campus but the organization invites and welcomes all interested parties of the university to attend the production on Monday January 13 in the Commerce and Finance auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

Joe Kinney, president of the club, stated that no admission or donation would be charged.

Popular Film Presented

The last time the club attempted this type of program they presented "Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde" which drew an audience of 70 in 215 Mendel.

Recorded folk music and ballads will be played and discussed at the next bi-weekly meeting, Monday, Dec. 16 in Seminar 3 of the Library.

This program is designed to acquaint the members with the literature and style as well as the audible appreciation of the ballad in its musical form.

Attendance Poor

At present participation in the activities of the club has been small and the officers strongly urge that all members attend the functions since the organization was founded for all and not for a select few.

All those interested in the proposed project should contact Tom Martinez in room 157 Sheehan not later than Dec. 18

Prom + Dinner Dance = '58ers' Social Fling

Villanovan

VOL. 33—No. 11 Villanova University, Villanova, Pa. January 16, 1958

One Month Until Awaited Senior Affair

Senior Weekend, just a month away, will provide the members of the Class of 1958 with the biggest social spree of their college years.

On Friday night, February 14, the mid-winter social week end will begin with the annual Belle Air Ball in the Field House from 9 'til 1.

On Saturday, at 6:30 P. M., the dinner-dance will be held at the Ben Franklin Hotel, 9th and Chestnut Sts., in Philadelphia.

Co-chairmen of the ball, Fred Leisentritt, and Dave Ogle, and chairman of the dinner-dance, Joe D'Aquila, have said that with the support and backing the class has shown in its four years, there will be no doubt of a tremendous turnout for both functions.

Tickets on Sale

Tickets for the prom are now on sale daily in the dayhop cafeteria in Dougherty Hall. They cost six dollars.

Reservations for the dinner-dance may be made from 9:30 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. in the VILLANOVAN office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall. To make reservations, five names are required for one table. The cost will be $55 per table or $11 a couple.

"The setting of this year's Belle Air Ball will undoubtedly be the most brilliant and glittering extravaganza ever produced for a prom," states Jed Dioguardi, chairman of decorations.

Elaborate Decorations

Reproducing an elaborate Parisian ballroom, the decorations and theme will transform the field House as never before.

The musical rhythyms of Richard Maltby and his orchestra will be echoed throughout the Field House "ballroom" from their unique bandstand atop the west balcony, while the stage will be converted into a garden cafe.

Highlighting the Belle Air Ball, which is open to all Villanovans, will be the crowning of the prom queen and her court. This year the Senior Prom queen is being chosen by

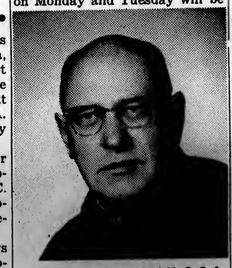
Soph Blazers Delivered Today

Blazers for the Class of 1960 were distributed today from 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. in the athletic training table room in Dougherty Hall, according to Tom Hoffman, chairman of the Blazer Committee.

Hoffman said that the blazers must be paid for upon receipt and that the cost is $30.95.

Some 530 students—an increase of 150%—have ordered the coats this year. The blazers are being made by Robert Rollins Inc. of New York.



Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O.S.A., Vice-President in charge of Student Affairs(left), and Pat Nicholson, President of the Student Council, watch with smiles as Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, President, signs the new Student Council Constitution. It will go into effect at the beginning of next semester and will remain in effect until May, 1959. After review with an eye toward possible revisions at that time, the Constitution will become the official basic law of the Council.

Dr. T. C. Yen To Head New Geology Dept.

A Department of Geology has been established at Villanova, and is scheduled to become part of the University's full-time undergraduate prog-am next Fall, the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President has announced.

At the same time Father Donnellon announced the appointment of Dr. John T. C. Yen, prominent research geologist as head of the new department.

Associated for many years with the United States Geological Survey, Dr. Yen is the author of many publications on geology.

Juniors Hold First Annual Ring Dance

The Junior Class will hold the first Ring Dance in the history of Villanova on February 7 in the Field House, it was announced this week by dance chairman Gerry Hepburn.

Paul Judge and his Orchestra, well-known for their performances at Sunset Beach Ballroom in Almonesson (N.J.), will provide music for the informal affair, which replaces the traditional Blazer Ball. The switch in names was made because the blazers are now usually purchased during sophomore year.

Help Needed

Matt Mazza, chairman of the decoration committee, has not released the details surrounding the central theme which will naturally feature the ring itself. Matt has made a special plea to dayhops to assist him on his committee during Retreat and mid-year vacation time. This is the dayhop's opportunity to cooperate in making the first Ring Dance an overwhelming success.

Tickets At $2.

Tickets have been on sale since Monday. They can be obtained at a price of $2.00 per couple from chairmen of publicity and ticket sales Bob Krallinger (127 Sullivan) and Bob Wagner and from the members of their committees.

The photograph of the ring that appears on the posters and tickets was taken on the ever-present camera of Al Stoughton. The impressive ticket can be used as a souvenir of the dance.

Yearbook Needs Informal Pictures

The Belle Air Yearbook is in need of informal shots of Villanova social events such as picnics, parties etc. for publication in the yearbook, according to activities editor Dave Franklin.

Shots of last year's Turf and Tinsel show are also needed, as none were taken by the yearbook staff at the time of the production.

Anyone who has pictures of these types is asked to drop them off in the yearbook office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall at his earliest convenience, Franklin said.

Field House To Be Site Of Jazz Fest

"Satchmo" is coming to Villanova!

Sunday, February 9, the Villanova field house will rock to the Dixieland and jazz of Louis Armstrong and his All-Stars, when the Augustinian Seminary Guild will sponsor a jazz concert from 2 to 5.

The band will feature the same men that have spread the fame of jazz throughout the world while on tour and who appeared in the motion picture, "High Society."

Satch will head the cast on the trumpet, with support on the clarinet by Edmond Hall—Trummy Young on the trombone. The rhythm will be supplied by

Field House Performer

Barrett Deems on drums, Billy Kyle at the piano, and Squire Gersh on bass. The last of the "red hot mammas," Velma Middleton will add to the afternoon's program with a few vocal selections.

Due to the spontaneous nature of the music that will be played, no program of tunes can be published, but it is pretty certain that everyone's Dixieland favorites will be included.

Tickets On Sale

Tickets for the event are on sale now in two varieties, reserved and general admission. The former are priced at $2.50 and are available at the Augustinian Seminary Guild Office only.

General admission tickets will also be available at the office and in the University Shop in Dougherty Hall.

The Guild's Office is located in the basement of St. Rita's Hall, the building between Austin Hall and the University Chapel.

No Squares Here

The concert will be held in the center of the Field House. Reserved seats will be at floor level on all four sides; general admission in the balcony above.

The Rev. John Coffey O.S.A., head of the Augustinian Seminary Guild is in charge of the affair, the proceeds of which will go to the education of men studying for the Augustinian seminary. The cost of sending one seminarian through school is estimated at $1,000.

'Cats Find Solace In Narrow Defeats

"To the victor goes the spoils," is an adage proved false by Villanova's basketball team. Deprived of victories in the last seconds in the North Carolina State, West Virginia, and LaSalle contests, Villanova certainly reaped more than the share of the spoils of an ordinary loser. True they did not win, but it is also true they proved themselves champions in other respects.

They were underdogs in all three games, they lost to State in the last 17 seconds after having taken the lead only 14 seconds earlier. Fifteen point underdogs in the West Virginia game, the 'Cats fought from the opening whistle only to see the game slip out of their hands in the confusion of the final minutes.

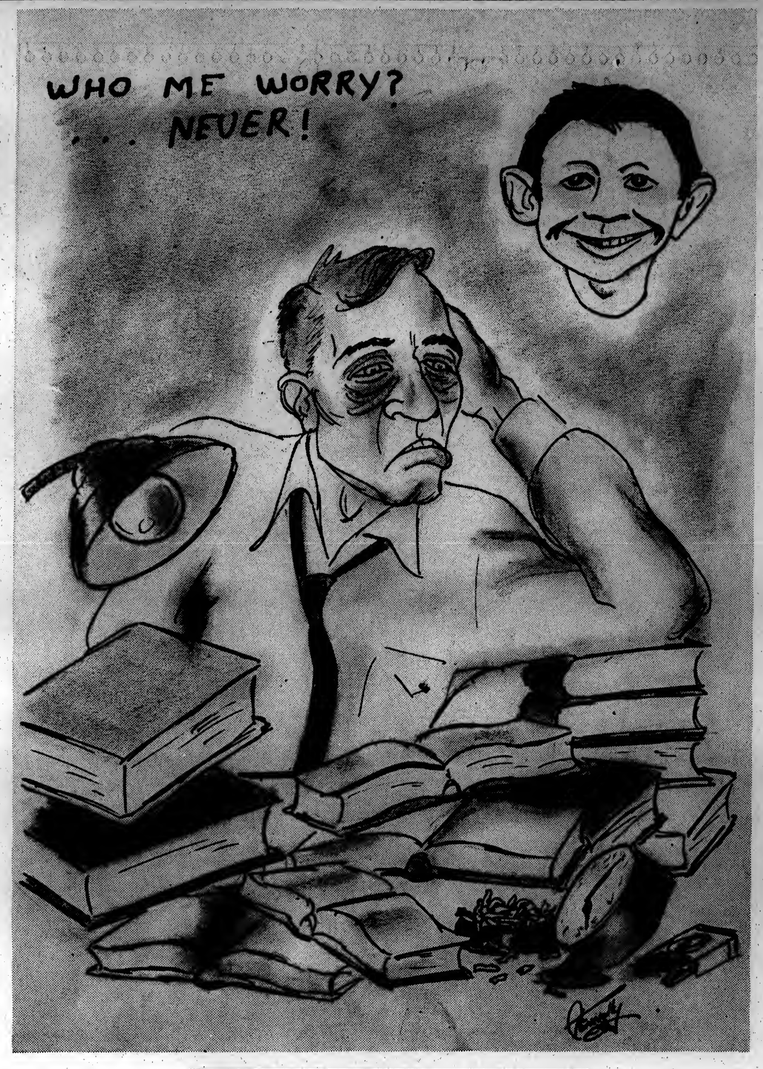
Against LaSalle it took an 18-point deficit with only twelve and a half minutes to go to get them rolling.

This is of course all history, but it is written here as sufficient proof for us that the entire squad led by three seniors, Captain Tom Brennan, Jack Kelly and Bill Brennan, together with Coach Al Severance, indeed deserved and should receive the plaudits of the student body. The men showed they are not quitters; in fact, they rate no team out of their class.

For the past two years we have been plagued by a dearth of basketball success in the really big games.

Now that is not the case.

No longer do we beat the patsies and flounder against the nationally-ranked teams. Like the teams of the Paul Arizin era, the 'Cats now win and lose with honors. If they continue to play as they have, it is the Villanovan's feeling that victories are sure to come more often than defeats.



Time For Serious Spiritual Thought

No, there is no mistake on the first semester schedule, men! January 26-29 are actually the four days of this year's retreat for all male juniors and seniors of the university.

Reversing last year's schedule when the lowerclassmen attended the retreat in the winter and the upperclassmen utilized the first half of Holy Week for its retreat sessions, the January dates will provide those making the religious highlight of the scolastic season with a wonderful opportunity to thank Almighty God for the blessings received during the past year as well as asking his Divine protection for the new year.

By that time, final examinations with all its accompanying headaches and "cramming" will have been concluded so that every Catholic junior and senior will be able to enter into the spirit of the retreat free of academic worry. Half of the retreatants will never partake of the spiritual benefits derived from making a Villanova retreat again.

With these thoughts in mind, juniors and seniors, we should endeavor to make the 1958 Retreat the best one we ever made at Villanova.

Help! It's That Time of Year Again . . . . Exams Plague Lethargic Student Body

Holidays gone and exams are making the student somewhat uneasy—these two elements give rise to a state of utter depression. At this point there seems to be nothing to look forward to except maybe the termination of another semester of school. Everybody is a little grouchy (especially the profs), a little scared and just plain grouchy over grouchiness.

The prof, he can make it a bit rough these next two days along with his high-handedness of the past week and a half. All this talk of working before the fina'—can it be true? It usually is, much to our chagrin. Needless to say, however,—don't give in—don't study! Why change after a complete semester of lethargy? Stand firm, hold in a true Wildcat fashion. Remember, he who studies can only pass courses. And, forbid, you wouldn't want anything like that to disgrace your now unblemished record of ultimate failure.

There is a story of a boy who came to this institution of higher learning and actually studied for four years and graduated on schedule—didn't drop one course. It was even believed that this student could have passed any course the university might have prescribed for him. The sky was the limit. All knowledge was attainable for the bright prospect. Nothing was insurmountable. Upon graduation he acquired a job as a zoo keeper—was happy until the new mammal addition came. Ester and Lester, the brown bears, would not eat their spinach—our child prodigy died of ulcers. The moral of the story is the motto of the mediocre—it's great to be normal.

There is tremendous security in numbers. Don't be an individual around here—your life's span may be and can be abruptly interrupted. Most breakdowns occur around here as the result of a financial problem—such as my roommate and I experience at the end of every month. So there it is—be an everyday run-of-the-mill guy; be a vegetable, or maybe even an animal. Whatever you do, don't think for yourself. The word that should take the place of the "think" sign in your room should be COMPLY. At any rate, a new semester will soon be here and brand new courses to fool around with for another semester. No need to worry—you'll forget everything you might have learned by April. Like the person whose brain psychological surgeons removed every six months and washed with "Lestoil." It was proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that "Lestoil" washed away more gray matter than any other washday soap.

Pet Peeve . . . Still road games.

America's Jazz Ambassador-That's Louis

An earnest, deadly serious college student pulled out his pencil and looked Louis Daniel Satchmo Armstrong straight in his saucer-like eyes.

"Mr. Armstrong," said the young man who was gathering material for a ponderous treatise on new art forms, "what do you think of folk music?

Satchmo's enormous, rubbery mouth stretched into a big smile.

"Folk music," said Armstrong with characteristic gentleness, "Why, Daddy, I don't know no other kind of music but folk music—I ain't never heard a hoss sing a song."

The reply was typical of the 55-year-old American Negro whose lyrical trumpet has carried him from a reform school in New Orleans to a familiar friendship with European royalty.

New Orleans Native

Born in a back alley in New Orleans on a sultry Fourth of July night in 1900, Louis Armstrong has become a legend in his lifetime and in Europe and other parts of the world, a happy ambassador of the United States.

What does the State Dept.—which has spent millions of dollars in an effort to sell the American way of life to foreigners—think of Armstrong as an unofficial envoy?

"He's very, very useful," said a spokesman of the U. S. Embassy in London, "and he's most helpful."

For a diplomat that's tantamount to saying in jazz language—"the cat's terrific."

Everybody Like 'Satch'

Why do people of various colors, creeds and nationalities pay to listen to the relatively simple music as played by Satchmo?

"Well," said Louis, "it's happy music and as long as you hit the note right on the nose they understand you."

Louis Armstrong with Bing Crosby in the recent MGM motion picture High Society. In the background are Leonard Hall and Trummy Young.

Satchmo is an enormous character, part clown and part musician, who sincerely believes in the saying:

"When you play jazz, you don't lie. You play from your heart."

Satchmo plays the genuine thing; no be-bop for him. He may make the melody hit the ceiling with a searing variation in high C, but he always blows the tune, you can recognize it. He's that very rare thing among musicians—a conservative who is also fashionable.

Says Ain't on Purpose

Like another Louisian, the late Huey Long, Armstrong often used bad grammar when he knows better. He feels it's more quotable and picturesque than English as the Queen is supposed to speak it.

Satchmo had only four years of formal education, but as he says: "I been readin', and I listen to my Mama."

He is called on several times daily to explain the nickname Satchmo which he insists is now part of his name.

"And please don't put it in quotes," he adds.

But how did he get the name?

"They used to call me Dippermouth when I was a boy, and then that got changed to Satchelmouth and then shortened up to Satch."

To Friends, He's Louis

Old friends call him "Pops." New Orleans musicians of his vintage, such as his clarinet player, Edmund Hall, address him as "Louis"—never "Louie."

Satchmo's name for them and nearly everyone else ranges from "Man," "Daddy" to "Gate" (short for alligator.)

He has a fantastic memory for people's names, but he's terrible at memorizing words of many songs he sings.

Smack in the middle of his recording of "Ding Dong Daddy from Dumas" Louis' memory went blank, but instead of halting the band and starting over, he simply sang, "Now I done forgot the words" and then picked up where he remembered them.

The record became a jazz collector's item.

Carries Mixed Band

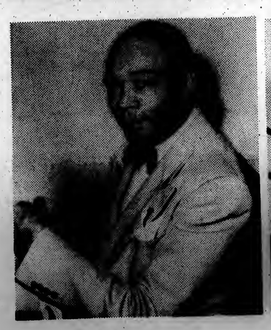
He refused to say which country he likes best, or which country likes him best.

On his international tours Armstrong insists on carrying a mixed band—one that's made up of negro and white musicians.

"Ain't nobody gonna call me intolerant," he says.

During Armstrong's invasion of Scotland he discovered the name Armstrong is of Scottish origin, but let him tell it:

Dixieland Here To Stay



"Yes, suh, back in one of them border battles a long time ago one of them Scottish kings got knocked off his hoss. One of my clan picked him up with one hand and sat that cat right back in his saddle. So, that how us Armstrongs got our name.

Satchmo thinks Dixeland music is here to stay.

When a interviewer from the British Broadcasting Corporation asked him to what did he attribute the "returning popularity of this form of jazz, "Louis replied:

"Daddy, it ain't never been away."

25th Anniversary Edition Of Villanova Engineer Due

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the VILLANOVA ENGINEER will be celebrated with its next issue, which will be the largest in its history. Published in honor of the anniversary, the magazine will be distributed during the week of examinations.

In this issue are unusual articles pertaining to the history of the Engineer. Separate articles by James Clark and James Maher explain the predecessor of the Engineer, which was entitled "The Owl" and was published by Phi Kappa Pi, the Engineering fraternity.

In 1933, it became independent of PKP and the name was changed to the VILLANOVA ENGINEER.

First Edition Honored

An article from the first Engineer will be reprinted in the coming issue and its readers will see that its policy remains much the same. In the article "Meet the Profs," Father Vrana will be one of the teachers featured. He has been the moderator of the Engineer since its beginning in 1933.

Along with these features, technical articles will be included in this issue.

Articles Outlined

One of these articles is entitled "Cromby Generating Station" by John Pilicicki. The operation of this modern power plant is explained, along with the construction of the plant. Important facts such as the centralized control room and the type of fuel are noted. This plant supplies electricity to Philadelphia area homes making the article of topical interest.

Peter Thornton supplied an article entitled "Saturable Co-Reactors." The purpose of this article is to acquaint the reader with the basic types of saturable co-reactors, their construction and employment as magnetic amplifiers in modern military and industrial electronic equipment. Diagrams accompany to aid the reader in understanding the article.

Another report is "Jato" by Paul M. Terruso. "Jato" is concerned with the launching of rockets, missles and manned aircraft carriers, taking the place of the catapult. "Jato" is actually an external boost for take-off. Again diagrams are supplied.

Other Articles

The other articles and their authors are as follows: "Fundamentals of Digital Computers" by Dino Curti, "Semi-Conductor Theory" by Robert Merkert, "Quantitative Measurement of Rainfall by Radar" by Vincent Pongia, "Where's Your Place in Industry" by George Bednor and "Low Pressure Heat Exchange" by Jim Hyer.

Among the course likely to be offered in the new curriculum are Introductory and Physical Geology, Paleontology, and General Stratigraphy.

Laboratory Material

Specimens and publications are now being gathered from all over the world for laboratory work and general study in the new field by Dr. Yen.

Villanova's new geology head studied at the University of Berlin, the University of Louvain, Belgium, and the University of Glasgow. He has been associated with research projects in Philadelphia, Albany, Chicago, San Francisco and New Haven, Conn.

Kinney Announces Project Extension

Joe Kinney, President of the Literary Club, has announced that the deadline for material for the project, "American Drama Since World War II," has been extended from Jan. 15 to Feb. 15.

Kinney said that the extension was alloted to provide time over the inter-semester vacation for finishing the individual projects and also to encourage more students to participate.

Music Man Seen Right Prescription For Scarcity Of Young Theater - Goers

By BILL GALLAGHER

Walter Kerr, the trenchant drama critic of the New York Herald Tribune, in his often witty and always perceptive book, Pieces At Eight, says: " . . . no new generation is coming into the theater.

"Passionate playgoing always begins high up under the roof. The kid who is on allowance, the student who has had to skip two lunches to scrape up the cash, and what Variety calls "the hand-holding young couples on lean budgets," all see their first shows from these dizzy, dusty and usually overheated heights.

Youth is A.W.O.L.

" . . . We have young actors, actresses, directors, and writers. What we don't seem to have along Broadway is young playgoers, and at any minute now we'd better busy ourselves trying to find out what the A.W.O.L. crowd might cotton to."

Obviously Mr. Kerr is quite alarmed at the scarcity of young theater-goers, those still in their "teens," but his book been written a year or so later than the spring of 1957, he undoubtedly would have alotted some space to a recent musical comedy, not musical drama, that has stimulated ticket buying in this, and, in fact, every other age group.

The production is "The Music Man."

"Music Man" seen as Cure-all

Meredith Wilson is responsible for it; he has performed the herculean task of composing not only the book but also the music and lyrics.

He, and many, others, will be greatly surprised if "The Music Man" does not administer the necessary medicine to the theater ailment M. Kerr diagnosed. If the show does not offer the cure, I am afraid that the American theater is more ill than supposed and might be headed for permanent disability.

'Hick' Story

The story, briefly, concerns a travelling salesman who hops off a train at River City, Iowa, in the 1900's, and hoodwinks a sleepy town into buying its youngsters brass musical instruments and costumes for a proposed band.

He sets the quaint town on its ear and sweeps the town librarian, who is wise to him, off her feet. Caught in the end, he is brought to trial and freed, repents, stays, and marries the girl.

The story sounds merely ordinary for a musical comedy, but it is the way in which it is presented that brought unanimous praise from New York's seven critics from the daily newspapers. Such as this was heaped upon the show: "solid hit, "thump and razzle-dazzle," "genial cartoon of Americana. . . rooted in wholesome and comic tradition."

'. . . Splendid Time'

Our friend Mr. Kerr had this to report: "The beat is catching: the audience was applauding in rhythm as last night's curtain came down. I think you'll have a splendid time." That it will keep youngsters flocking to its matinees, is undeniable.

I saw the show in its Philadelphia engagement. It seemed to weave a web of enjoyment around the audience directly with the opening scene, hold it taut through both acts, and have it broken at the final curtain by a brisk wind of audience reaction: more whooping and stomping of approval I have never heard.

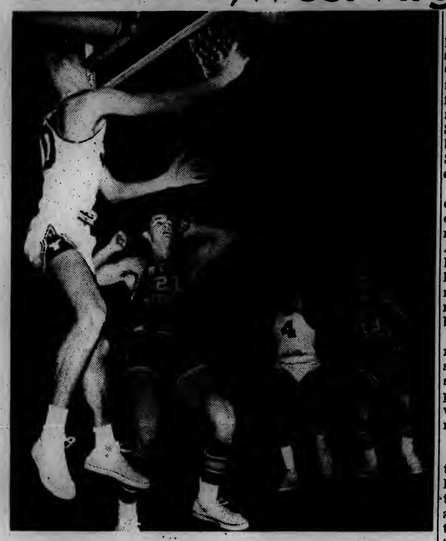
There's A Bright Future In The Electric Power Industry for YOU!

THE electric power industry is unique because the product it manufactures is indispensable to the growth and prosperity of our nation and its people. Everywhere you look, lights are burning, machinery and equipment is running, all because of electricity. And this great need for electricity is constantly growing—in fact, will be doubled in the next ten years.



The Pennsylvania electric power companies are preparing to supply the additional power which will be needed in the coming years, but they need qualified young men to help them NOW. Young engineers schooled in thermodynamics, electronics and fundamental engineering, are needed to advance the art of power generation, distribution utilization, system planning and area development. This wide range of interests plus a solid, promising future is waiting for the men who can qualify.

Plan now to talk to your placement counselor or to the personnel director of one of Pennsylvania's electric power companies. Or, write to Pennsylvania Electric Association, State Street Building, Harrisburg, Pa., stating where you would like to live and work.

LaSalle Tops 'Cats In Triple Overtime; West Virginia Wins

West Virginia's Bob Smith seems amazed that stellar cener Tom Brennan was able to get off this behind-the-backboard shot. Ken Harrison and Mountaineer Joedy Gardner wait for the rebound that never came—the goal was good.

Almost unbelievable extra period heroics on the part of substitutes Ken Harrison and George Emma, plus a scorching regulation time 29 point performance by captain Tom Brennan, were not enough last Saturday night as Villanova bowed to LaSalle in its City Series opener, 111-105, in an exciting triple overtime contest.

The heartbreaking defeat came on the heels of another one three days earlier, when a much-disputed technicality gave Al Severance's Main Liners a last second 76-75 loss at the hands of West Virginia, and robbed the Wildcats of their near upset of the nation's number one team.

Both games—probably the most exciting the Palestra will see for quite a while—were stupendous team efforts on the part of the Villanovans, and with only a little luck, they might have won both.

'Cats Roar Back

To take last things first, the LaSalle battle was a brilliant exhibition in courage, as the Wildcats came back from an 18 point deficit midway through the second half to tie the regulation game on Harrison's long set shot with 55 seconds left.

Tom Brennan—who received one of the longest standing ovations ever heard in the Palestra when he left on fouls with 3:05 to go in the game—led the drive from 63-45, setting the stage for Harrison's clutch basket.

Ken kept hitting in the first overtime, but it took a driving lay-up by Emma in the last second to net Villanova an 89-89 tie. The sniping of this junior duo gave the Main Liners a five point lead in the next five minute segment, but LaSalle came back in the last 38 seconds to knot the score.

Harrison went out on fouls in that period, however, and when Jack Kelly and John Scott departed the same way in the third, the LaSalle bench strength proved too much for the Wildcats.

Kelly outstanding

Kelly, who, along with Brennan, has become one of the city's top performers in his last year, was second in scoring with 19, while leading the rebounding parade with 15 to

Confusion In The Palestra

By JACK CURTIN

Yes, West Virginia, there is a Santa Claus.

In fact, there are two of them, but in the off-season they make a little extra money on the side, refereeing basketball games. They operate under the names of Johnny Stevens and Dan Smeddy, and in case anyone hasn't caught on yet, these are the two gentlemen who were responsible for the Villanova-West Virginia fiasco in the Palestra last week.

Now this isn't sour grapes. There is a chance that West Virginia might still have won the January eighth thriller without the aid of the pair in striped shirts. The point is—so might have Villanova. As a matter of fact, it's highly improbable that they wouldn't have. However, thanks to Messrs. Stevens and Smeddy, the Wildcats didn't stand a chance.

Disputed Ruling

The situation under discussion, of course, is the much disputed five-second out-of-bounds rule invoked by Smeddy with 18 seconds to play in the game and the Main Liners leading, 75-74. The tiny gray-haired official ruled that Wildcat captain Tom Brennan had taken too long to throw the ball into play under the visitor's basket, and gave possession of the ball to the Mountaineers who went on to score a 76-75 win with two seconds to go and retain their undefeated record.

However, fellow-ref Stevens had just called for a stopping of the clock because the ball had been rolling on the floor out-of-bounds. In other words, the ball wasn't in Brennan's possession for the full five seconds. From the press table, it looked as though he had it for two seconds at the most. Still, the officials did nothing, West Virginia took the ball, scored and remained the top team in the nation.

Following the game, the pair rationalized their blunder on a technicality, quoting the rule of the National Basketball Committee (no. 7 section 6) that "the throw in starts when the ball is at the disposal of a player entitled to the throw-in" and claiming that the ball was at Brennan's disposal. The funny thing, though, is that Stevens must not have thought so at the time. He was quoted in three Philadelphia newspapers as saying that he "wasn't going to let the game end with a loose ball on the floor", because that was "an old trick" used by "a lot of clubs, especially in the East, to run out the time."

More Than A Bad Call

Had Villanova lost the game because of a bad call or a foul, there would be no reason for a complaint. Bad calls are to be expected in any ball game—Stevens and Smeddy proved that with several outlandish decisions on both sides earlier—but this was a case of officials depriving a team of possession at a crucial moment in a crucial ball game. It was—to use an expression Stevens should be familiar with in his role of American League baseball umpire—a classic example of "Chocking up" under pressure.

Swimmers Return To Action Against Penn, Seeking 4th

By BILL VINCENT

Villanova's undefeated swimming team sought its fourth victory of the season when it met the University of Pennsylvania yesterday in the Field House pool.

Just before the Christmas vacation the Wildcat tankmen conquered top-notch West Chester 52-34 and tied tough Princeton 43-43 in a meet at Princeton.

Villanova ran its Field House basketball victory streak to 79 Tuesday night with an 84-61 win over Millersville State T. C. George Emma and Jack Kelly led the Wildcat attack with 18 and 17 points, respectively. Tom Brennan pulled down 16 rebounds as he continued the tremendous play which has marked his recent performances.

In the preliminary, Jim Huggard's 26 points led the Frosh to a 94-63 triumph over the Millersville Jr. Varsity. Tom Samuelewicz scored 17 points.

On Saturday the Cats journeyed to Easton, Pa., to defeat easily Lafayette 53-33.

Before the trip the Cats had no trouble defeating West Chester as Joe Mason and Larry Palacio led the Mainliners with double victories. Mason took the 50 and 100 yard freestyle, while Palacio won the 200 yard butterfly and the 200 yard breaststroke.

Schoener Thrills Crowd

Lou Schoener also provided the crowd with some thrills when he won the 220 yard freestyle and just missed taking the 440 yard freestyle. Other Wildcat tankmen placing in the meet included Frank Keefe, second in the backstroke; Bob Pinto, second in the 50 yard freestyle; Jim Gregory, second in the 200 yard butterfly and third in the 200 yard breaststroke; and Steve Carin, third in the diving.

However, the big difference in the meet were the Villanova victories in the relays. Frank Keefe, Jim Gregory, Larry Palacio and Lou Pinto teamed up to win the 400 yard medley relay, while Pinto teamed up with brother Bob, Joe Mason and Lou Schoener to easily defeat their West Chester foe.

Princeton Meet

In the Princeton meet the Cats just missed beating a very deep Tiger squad. Joe Mason again led the Mainliners with victories in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle. Steve Cartin won the diving and Lou Schoener topped his Princeton rivals in the 220 yard freestyle. Other point scorers for Ed Geisz's tankmen were Frank Keefe, Larry Palacio, Jim Gregory and Lou Pinto.

Against Lafayette, Joe Mason took the 50 and 100 yard freestyle events to help his team capture their third victory of the season. Others instrumental in the win were Larry Palacio, who copped a first in the 200 yard breaststroke and a second in the 200 butterfly; Frank Keefe, victor in the 200 yard backstroke; Steve Cartin, winner of the 3-meter diving event; and team co-captain Lou Pinto, who swam on both victorious Wildcat relay teams.

Joe Ryan lays one up in a losing cause against Niagara, as John Scott (left) and Jack Kelly fight for rebounding position.

Boston Meet Opens Track Season; 'Cats Hope to Repeat '57 Record

The sport season that saw Villanova win the greatest athletic acclaim in its history last year officially opens for the Main Liners on Saturday night.

The sport is, of course, track, and the Wildcats kick off the 1958 session in Boston at the Knights of Columbus meet this weekend.

Last year, coach Jim "Jumbo" Elliott's speedsters won international recognition with a talent-packed display that earned them four national titles—the indoor and outdoor IC4A championships, the indoor AAU honors and the NCAA top position.

Olympic Participants

Adding frosting to the Wildcats' victory cake were the appearance of Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins and Phil Reavis in the 1956 Olympic Games, held in Melbourne, Australia. Jenkins won two gold medals for the United States, while Delany took one for his native Ireland.

Jenkins, along with pole-vaulter Don Bragg, distance men John Kopil and Alex Breckenridge and relayers Al Peterson and Gene Maliff, has been lost to the '58 version of the Wildcats via graduation.

Elliott and assistant coach Jim Tuppeny still have the nucleus of another outstanding unit this year, however, and will probably be one of the top participants in the collegiate ranks, although it will be difficult to duplicate last year's rating as "the greatest collegiate track team of all time."

Delany Top List

Heading the list of returnees will be Delany, one of history's top milers and Olympic 1,500 meter champion. The Dublin youth who sparked the indoor IC4A win last season with an unprecedented double victory in the 1,000 meter and two-mile runs, will be attempting to complete his third undefeated season in the indoor mile.

Reavis, the tiny (5' 9") high jumper who consistently out classes taller opposition, is also looked to for another banner year. He and teammate Chalrey Stead were steady winners last year, generally finishing one-two in collegiate competition. Stead, who doubles as a relayer, will also be back with the Main Liners.

Surprise Performer

Another veteran of whom big things are expected is junior sprinter Ed Collymore. A middle-distance man until the outdoor IC4A's last spring, Collymore turned out to be the surprise of the track world, taking both the 100 and 220 in that meet, and going on to several other victories.

George Sydnor, the "hard luck" man of the squad, will return for his third year in the sprint division. The Bryn Mawr youth was also a sensation in his sophomore year, beating Duke's fabulous Dave Sime in three out of four meetings, but was hampered last season by a leg injury sustained the previous spring.

Hurdler Bob Holup and middle-distance man Vic DiMaio will also be back from the fabled '57 unit, while sophomores John Buckley, Bob Godesky and Ron Brady.

John Scott, soph surprise of Al Severance's 'Cats, hooks in a field goal over the out-stretched arms of Niagara's All-American center, Alex "Boo" Ellis.

Intramural Hoop Leagues Back In Action; Corey Asks Co-operation From Teams

By PAUL BUCKLEY

A long layoff during the holidays, a snowfall and the advent of final examinations—but intramural basketball goes on. The second half of the league began with the return of school.

As it stands now, six teams have established themselves as strong contenders for league honors, with the 6:30 and 7:30 leagues supplying most of the really strong teams.

Charlie Company, a good Navy team, the Alumni Animals, and the East Wingers are unbeaten in the 6:30 league play while the playboys, who are currently the intramural football champions, the Duffers and the Gazelles have spotless records in the 7:30 division.

Play-Off the Same

It is probable that the intramural championship will be held in the same manner as the football championship, with the best teams from each league meeting in a round-robin series. This type of playoff was quite successful in the football league.

To date, there have been many problems confronting the intramural council such as the lack of referees at games and the conflicts with other school activities held in the field house. As it stands now, all the games will be played on the field house floor. Pete O' Brien, who has worked so diligently on the schedule problem, has obtained a fairly accurate schedule of the other activities so as to avoid any further conflicts.

Jim Corey, president of the Intramural Council, asked that all teams provide a referee. It should be noted that the roster has allowed for ten men on a team. "Surely the team can provide at least one man to referee its game," said Corey.

Should Provide Scorekeeper

It should be noted that each team should try to provide a scorekeeper for the games. If this is impossible, the captain of that team has the responsibility to post the score of the game as quickly as possible. Scores should be posted on the schedule in the pool. Failure to do this within a reasonable amount of time will result in a forfeit for the teams involved.

In case of inclement weather, the teams should check at the pool to see if games will be played. It is probable that the morning and early afternoon leagues will continue as scheduled regardless of the weather unless the school closes down.

Besides the resumption of basketball, the chess, checker, and bridge tournments are again open with about fifty participants in each tournment. Dr. James F. O'Brien, of the University Philosophy Dept. has volunteered his help in directing the chess tournament. Ed Geisz also has announced a foul shooting contest open to all students and to be held on January 16. Students may enter the contest by signing up on the 16th. It will run all day.

Liberatore, Huggard Lead Frosh To 81-60 Victory

Ref's Blunder Hands 'Cats Narrow Loss

Tom's 13. Others in double figures were Emma (17), Harrison (15), Scott (13) and Bill Brennan (10). Joe Ryan had ten assists.

Missed foul shots told the story of the game, as Villanova outshot the Explorers from the floor, but missed 21 chances at the free throw line.

The West Virginia contest also festured an astounding comeback, but this one was on the part of the undefeated Mountaineers, who roared back from 14 points down in the last eight minutes behind their great sophomore star, Jerry West, who netted 37 points.

Still, it was only a referee's decision that enabled the southern unit to deprive the Wildcats of national headlines, when one official took the ball from Villanova in the last 17 seconds for not putting it into play fast enough, desipte time out calls by the other ref and Tom Brennan. The decision, which allowed West Virginia to score the winning basket in the last two seconds, initiated a city-wide dispute. (See Sports Chatter.)

Brennan Paces Defense

Villanova took a ten point lead at halftime over the nationally ranked Mountaineers when Scott scored a long jump at the buzzer. The Wildcats defense, paced by Tom Brennan's amazing abilities around the basket, baffled the supposedly unstoppable Virginians, Ryan topped the offensive ranks with 18 points, while Scott added 14. Kelly was again tremendous off the boards with 16 rebounds, while scoring 11 points. Harrison and Bill Brennan had ten counters, and Tom Brennan backed up his defensive work with 13 rebounds and six tallies.

The Main Liners played five other contests since the last issue of the Villanovan, winning two and losing three, mostly because of an injury to 6' 8" soph Scott. The Wildcats took the measure of Loyola and Canisius, while losing to Duke, North Carolina State (by one point, 57-56) and Niagara.

The freshman basketball squad, led by the sniping of Bob Liberatore and Jimmy Huggard, rolled to an 81-60 romp over the Junior Explorers of LaSalle College at the losers' court last Thursday evening.

LaSalle Frosh, last season's hottest fledgling outfit in these parts, could do nothing to stem the tide as the 6' 2" Liberatore, former Bristol High flash, split the cords for 23 points, and his back-court aide, Huggard, pitched in 15, besides playing his usual sparkling floor game.

Villanova experienced some early troubles, as LaSalle held them nearly even throughout the first quarter, due largely to the antics of a 6' 4" bruiser, Mel Herdelein, who stormed the nets often and early en route to his team's high total of 23 points.

Cats Gain Boards

Herdelein, ferocious off each backboard, encountered more opposition than he expected from the Mainliner's Tom Samuelewicz and Dave Severance after the first 10 minutes. Once these two, both 6' 3" and the Frosh's tallest participants, began to hold their own against Herdelein, coach Al Severance's quintet was off to the races.

By the end of the half, Villanova led by a hefty 10-point margin, as Jim Kenney joined Liberatore and Huggard in their scoring antics.

Wildcats Fast Break

The game became a picnic early in the second half as the locals displayed their fast-breaking potential at its best, with little Kenney and Huggard being fed off the boards by Samuelewicz and Dick Kaminski.

Villanova bench lends on-floor five vocal aid in West Virginia Thriller.

. . . from the notebook

by Tom Goldschmidt

Here we were, beating the team the experts call the nation's best. Somehow, though, it seemed a fantasy. Number one, number one, kept flashing through our mind. We're not this good, I know we're not. But one can't argue with a 14-point lead this late in the game. Then we fluttered down to earth.

The statement, made by Sandy Grady, that we certainly are not a great team, came to mind. What was happening now showed that all too plainly. With Bill Brennan banished, Joe Ryan was the only man who could handle the ball well under pressure. Even Joe found the relentless guarding of the Mountaineers too much to overcome at times.

But, defeat or no, the team provided us with one of the most thrilling evenings in recent years. No one on campus should dismiss them just because their edges show a little rough at times. Let's forget "class" and concentrate on results alone.

Last Wednesday's heart-stopper reminded press row observers of the Mountaineer-Wildcat battle of two years ago. What happened in that one might point the difference between Fred Schaus' team then and now. They came into Philly with a very good record, a top-ten ranking and the fabulous "Hot Rod" Hundley.

Aided by a spectacular performance on the part of Bob Powers, the 'Cats outplayed the visitors throughout the evening, only to become sloppy in the final few minutes. With Villanova holding a one-point lead in the closing seconds, Hundley was fouled.

He stepped to the line for a pair of tosses. Turning to the stands and then to his own bench, he assured everyone that he had the situation well in hand. After he blew the first shot, he repeated his performance. After he duplicated the miss, he covered his face with his hands. West Virginia was beaten.

The New York Times, which prides itself on the accuracy of its reporting, bobbled one a couple of weeks ago. In previewing the impending indoor track season, one of the Times staffers said that Don Bragg and Charlie Jenkins would return to lead Jim Elliot's championship team.

If he only knew how Jumbo wishes that the stellar pair really were still competing for Villanova!

Contrary to what News Editor Ed Karrer has long maintained, there must be no communication between the state of West Virginia and the outside world.

Temple was toying with Penn State in the opening minutes of their game. As usual, Guy Rodgers was astounding the multitude with his fast-break antics. At each new stunner, the man next to us, a cohort of the W. Va. broadcaster, raised his eyebrows an inch higher.

Finally, he turned to his associate and queried, "Who is that son-of-a-gun?"

Jack Devereaux, we hear, is in great demand as an after-dinner speaker as a result of a recent appearance at the football banquet held by his high school. Coach Reagan gave the chief speech, but it is reported that Dev stole the show from "X" hands down. Jack's business manager, Don McComb of the Class of '56, advises us that any organization which would like to acquire his services should contact him at once. The schedule is quite full for the near future, but there are still a few choice dates remaining in May.

'Cats Meet Mt. St. Mary's On Saturday

Following Tuesday's contest with Millersville State Teachers College, early season conqueror of LaSalle, Villanova's Wildcats can look forward to a three day rest before meeting Mt. St. Mary's Saturday night in the Field House.

The Mount,which defeated the Main Liners in a Palestra battle last year, is rebuilding this season, following the graduation of star performer Jackie Sullivan, the school's all-time high scorer. With Sullivan pacing the way, the Maryland unit won its conference title last year.

It is a tall squad, featuring a rough, aggressive brand of ball, making up its lack of experience in hustle.

Duquesne Next

The Saturday following exam week, it's back to the Palestra for Al Severance's quintet, where they face the ever dangerous Duquesne.

Dudey Moore's aggregation also has lost an important cog in its court machine with the graduation of Dave Ricketts last spring. The Iron Dukes are not the strong contenders of previous years, but still pose a substantial threat.

Pirates in February

Seton Hall invades the Palestra on February 5 to battle the Wildcats. An on-and-off unit this year, the Pirates have been getting their best performances from 6' 9" center Tom Cross, and little men Jack Rowley and Don Roberts.

Five days later, Villanova takes its last road trip of the year, journeying to upstate Pennsylvania to meet the University of Scranton.

Confusion In The Palestra

Of the two, Stevens was more to blame. Smeddy just proved what many observers had suspected all along—he didn't know what was going on. His companion, however, knew the call was wrong and didn't have the courage to stop the game and reverse the decision. There is, of course, such a thing as backing up a fellow official. By his silence, Stevens robbed the Villanova players of their greatest moment of glory, and basketball of some of its integrity.

He alone, by the way, was left to face the protestations of an irate Al Severance, his stunned players and one highly incensed Philadelphia sportswriter. Smeddy was hustled out of the Palestra by three policemen immediately following the game.

One wonders how he ever got in in the first place.

Constitution Considered

By PAT NICHOLSON

Now that the much talked about Constitution of the Student Council of Villanova has been passed and approved, it would appear time to say a word or two about those men who made this system possible. We certainly owe a vote of thanks to the University Administration. Their help in the framing of the Constitution and By-Laws was certainly very beneficial. We know that their assistance and cooperation will greatly aid in the effective and efficient carrying out of the functions of the Student Council according to the new system of student government.

I sincerely thank the voting members of the Student Council who by their long and patient efforts have played the major roll in the establishment of the new form of student government.

Advantages of New Constitution

During the past semester three big questions have frequently been asked concerning the Student Council and its efforts concerning the adoption of a new system. Here is our answer to these questions.

The new form of student government offers three major contributions.

(1). It establishes the Student Council as the actual student governing body of all undergraduate students.

(2) It grants a great deal of responsibility to the members of the Council and its various committees.

(3). It establishes a method of student government which should facilitate the efficient and effective handling of all student problems, suggestions, programs, and activities by a productive well-organized Student Council.

Why has the Student Council taken so long in adopting this constitution, and why has so little else been accomplished during this period?

The adopting of a new and almost entirely different form of student government is always a long and tedious process. We wanted to set up a system that would definitely work. Because of the large amount of investigation, discussion, and debating necessary in order to have the constitution ready for next semester, the members of the Student Council were asked to withhold proposals which could wait until February.

What will the Student Council accomplish in the future? I seriously believe that the Student Council of Villanova can and will become an extremely effective organization. It depends almost entirely on the initiative and work of its members, and on cooperation that it receives from each and every member of the student body. At the beginning of next semester the officers of the Council are submitting a 24-point program to the Student Council for consideration and action.

Student Senate Initiated; Sr. Car Decision Thursday

The official administrational stand on the proposed senior car program is expected to be given the student body tomorrow evening.

That was the word from Pat Nicholson, student council president, at the first meeting of Villanova's student senate last Monday evening.

The history-making session opened at 7:41 P.M. with a prayer by Nicholson. It marked the culmination of a full semester's work on the part of the council to establish a new and more workable system of government for the university student body.

Decision Yesterday

The president announced to the student senators that he would get the final decision on the plan to allow automobiles to resident seniors from the Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., dean of student activities, yesterday, and reveal it to the student body at the opening meeting of the student congress Thursday.

Among other things, the senate also approved Belle Masque's appearing in a drama festival sponsored by the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia and a football parents' day, while tabling motions dealing with awards to cheerleaders and spirit committee chairmen and a student leader program.

Congress Swayed

All senate motions are dependent upon approval of the congress, however. But, as Nicholson pointed out, most of the decisions will be made by the senate as "the congress will be swayed by the senate."

There are 15 members of the senate: the four council officers; three class presidents; seniors Paul Laughlin, Joe Murphy, Dick Hamburger, Tom Whalen; juniors Gerry Hepburn, Bill Murray, and sophs Tom Moakley and Tom Hoffman.

14 Freshmen Vie For Two Council Seats

Fourteen Freshmen have been nominated for two seats on the Student Council at stake in the class elections on Feb. 19th.

Names and qualifications of the 14, eight residenes and six day-hops. have been submitted to the Dean of Men for final approval. The final list of candidates is expected to be announced soon.

Paul Laughlin, chairman of the elections committee for the Student Council, has announced that according to the recently approved Constitution one resident and one day-hop representative will be elected.

Trends Indicated

Freshmen are awaiting the campaign and outcome of the election because results usually indicate certain trends and strengths influential in the general Student Council election in May.

Serving with Laughlin on the elections commiteee are Jack Fisher, Clem Birch, Joe Kinney and John Lyons.

The committee recently announced the procedure rules governing the election and campaign.

Details instructions have been given concerning the size, location and distribution of posters and handbills. The use of

New C&F Building Ready For Use This Semester

The new $1,500,000 Commerce and Finance Building will be ready for full occupancy on March 1, it was announced at the opening of second semester by Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean of the C. & F. School.

At present the building is only in limited use.

Located at the extreme East end of the campus on Ithan Avenue, the new structure contains 32 classrooms, varying in size from 30 to 90 seats, and two huge lecture halls.

Constructed of field stone and limestone, the Commerce and Finance Building will also house extensive dining facilieies, a large financial library and a unique laboratory for the study and use of the latest business machines.

Arts Gets Old Building

The "old" Commerce and Finance Building has been turned over to the Arts and Science Division for use by the latter. It has been renamed Vasey Hall in memory of a former Augustinian Provincial, the Rev. Nicholas J. Vasey.

While the C. & F. School prepared to move all its offices and classrooms to the new building, and while the Arts and Science Division prepared to take over the vacated building, the campus catch-all, Catholic Education But Pagan Minds - Why?

We stopped at a local luncheonette the other day in search of a copy of Commonweal magazine. There wasn't any on the rack. There weren't any magazines at all on the rack. Instead it was covered with gift wrapping paper.

When questioned, the owner explained. For the past few years he had been unable to place his order with the distributor just as he wanted it. In order to get certain magazines, whether popular or literary, he had to agree to take large numbers of other magazines.

The other magazines were mostly pornographic in nature. Even the best of them were not fit to go into anyone's home. "Pure slop," the store-owner called them.

He took the filthy magazines and put them away as soon as they arrived. He knew that he would not want his children reading them, and he knew most other parents felt the same.

What surprised him was that he got dozens of requests for the trash he had kept off the rack—almost all of them from college students and adults. But still he did not sell them.

There still was a problem, however. He had to make a living. It wasn't that he minded losing business by not selling the smutty literature. That, he was willing to overlook.

But every magazine that he was sent he was charged for immediately. Since he bought them on concession, he could get his money back by sending the magazines back. This was not as easy as it sounds. The money he had due him was often as much as three months late.

By this means the distributor tried to apply pressure so that the store-owner would sell the magazines. After a while things got worse. Decent magazines which he ordered were never delivered. Customers became disgusted and bought elsewhere.

So the store-owner stopped getting magazines altogether.

Most business men are not like the store-owner. Whether or not they approve of the contents, they are welling to handle anything which the public will buy.

That is why it is so important that we, the educated reading public, do everything in our power to support the efforts of the Catholic Church to stamp out indecent literature.

This is Catholic Press Month. It is a good time to wake up to the vital function served by Catholic newspapers and periodicals — to present to readers, Catholic or not, the Catholic viewpoint on vital questions.

If more Catholic students supplemented their classroom reading with Catholic literature instead of junk, there would be fewer men with Catholic educations but pagan minds.

SCHEDULE CONSIDERED

Dear Sir:

I hope you will print this letter.

It concerns the football schedule recently released by the Athletic Director, Frank Reagan. I consider the football schedule for the coming year a sound one, with one exception. On that exception, I ask—Why did we have to schedule Quantico Marines as the final game of the season?

Quantico, as a team, is composed of former college and independent ball players. They have far more experience in the ways of football than do the college teams.

Most of Quantico's games during the season are with other service teams. hey thus play a different brand of football.

Starting with West Chester STC, and continuing through Army and Boston College, the schedule is a credit to the Athletic Department. May I ask Mr. Reagan to tell us, through the Villanovan, why this Quantico team was scheduled. The reason is probably a valid one. I feel, though, that the students have the right to know.

This Week's Question is: Why would you like to be the first person to go to the moon??

Arnie Vandervalk, Senior pre-law—First I would like to say that it would be exciting to be the first one ever to land on the moon. Secondly, I have always heard of moonmen in those science fiction thrillers, but what about the moon WOMEN?? If there are any, I would like to be the first to say, 'Take me to your chief.'

John Sullivan, Sophomore Engineer— "I would jump at the chance to go to the moon, because I could live a hermit's life there without being plagued by women. I would no longer be in fear of being kissed by some girl."

Roger Zidowsky, Senior Engineer— "Just recently I read in the news that Jane Mansfield will be one of the first scheduled passengers, and since I have a rather extensive knowledge of the geography of the moon, I thought it to be considerate if I were there to show her around."

Varsity Academics Are Dramatized By Scholastic Bench Warmer In Pep Rally

SCENE—College dormitory type room with campus type objects in obvious view.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE — Two burly youths. OSCAR, lying on a campus type bed, is clothed in a sweatshirt and khakis. RED, his companion, stands in the center of the floor, clad in a bathrobe.

RED—C'mon, Osc, let's go. We got only a few minutes to get ready for the big rally tonight.

OSCAR—Aw, I ain't goin'. Those guys don't need me.

RED—Sure they do. You heard what the Dean said at last week's rally. It's our spirit which drives them guys on to new and greater accomplishments. That, and the fact that their strength is as the strength of ten because their hearts is pure. We owe it to those guys to support them, because they're fighting their hearts out for us.

OSCAR—Maybe, but I'm tired after practice all day. I mean a buy has to get some rest.

RED—Look, football only lasts a few months. You can get your rest after the season. Those poor guys have to sweat it all year long, and they deserve our support. Now, let's go.

OSCAR (rising)—Oh, all right.

THE CURTAIN FALLS

SCENE II—College quadrangle type scene, with multi-college type people milling about. Crowd cheers "RAH, RAH, GIVE 'EM AN A! GIVE 'EM AN A!" OSCAR and RED can be seen at the edge of the crowd, straining to see inside the great circle. A CHEERLEADER suddenly appears on a soapbox in the center. He is waving a megaphone and screaming at the top of his lungs.

CHEERLEADER—Athletes! You are gathered here tonight to pay tribute to these students (points to group of bespectacled youths gathered in the background. They all clutch an armfull of books to their respective breasts rather desperately) who are in the classroom day in and day out fighting their hearts out to gain knowledge and further the name of our university by their scholastic accomplishments. They are all fighting for us, and we owe them all our support.

CROWD—Rah! Rah!

CHEERLEADER—Furthermore, they now need our backing more than ever. We haven't been doing so good lately—the last couple of tests the school slipped below a B average—so now we gotta show these guys we're behind them so they can go out there and really roll up an impressive score. We're goin' all the way, guys—4.0 or bust!

CROWD—(Wildly enthusiastic- — Rah! Rah! Point six to go for four point 0! Give 'em an A—Give 'em an A!

RED (off to the side, happily waving a diploma)—Yippee! This is great. Go, guys, go. Hey, Osc, aren't you glad we came?

OSCAR—Yeah, boy. Look at those guys, they're really impressed. You know something, though?

RED—What,

OSCAR—Sometimes I wish they would have something like this for us athletes too.

RED—Don't be silly. After all, academics are the important part of college.

CROWD—Get those grades! Get those grades! Go, guys, go!

Former Wildcat Catcher Joins Better Ball Club

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Terry Hayes stands ready to apply the lumber to a pitch during one of Villanova's games last spring. Terry batted .402 a year ago as a junior.

Terry is shown in the Augustinian's white Novitiate habit. That's Mike, his brother, a freshman at Villanova, next to him.

Terry Hayes, star catcher for Art Mahan's baseball team last year, is the latest in a long line of former Villanova athletes who decided to join the Order of St. Augustine.

He joins dozens who attended Villanova as lay students and an even greater number who played for the Wildcats in varsity competition while they were in the seminary.

Until 1916, boys studying for the priesthood could play on the same teams as the other students. As a result, quite a large number of the best players in every sport were seminarians

Like so many who proceeded him, Hayes was far from just ordinary baseball material.

Power Slugger

Last year Terry led the team with a .402 batting average. A left-handed power swinger with tremendous wrists, he beat a steady tattoo on the back of the football stands with his hard-hit liners.

But good as he was for Villanova, he probably was better in summer sandlot ball. His play drew the scouts in droves to see him compete for the Collier Construction Company team in the Lakewood (Ohio) A League.

One of the pitchers whom Hayes caught, the best one on the team, and himself a major league prospect of note, was Jack Kelly, one of Villanova's best all-around athletes.

Terry led Collier's in hitting with a .442 mark during the past summer, his second on the team. He also came in second in runs-batted-in.

420—foot Homer

The Collier club plays its games in Madison Park, in Lakewood, a suburb of Cleveland. During the season, Hayes twice negotiated a fence which stands 420 feet from home plate. No one had been able to do that during the previous ten years.

But such performances were nothing new for Hayes. He comes from a family of athletes, and has excelled all the way from grade school through college.

His father, George, played minor league baseball for a number of years —never, however, reaching the majors, his goal all along. Dad wanted to be sure that his sons, if he had any, would make it in the big time.

He had five chances to see his hopes come true. Four still remain. One of Terry's brothers is a freshman at Villanova. That would be Mike. Then there's Brian, Tim and Dennis.

All are Catchers

All of them are catchers, a rare commodity, as any baseball fan knows. Mike intends to go out for The Villanova team next year. Brian plays for Ohio University after transferring from Hiram (Ohio) College, where he hit .385 last year.

Tim is 15 and a sophomore at St. Ignatius High in Cleveland, where Terry, Brian and Mike went. He is, according to Mike, the best ball player in the lot. Tim plays for his eighth-grade team.

While at St. Ignatius, Terry was named All-Scholastic and All-Catholic for the Cleveland district in his last two years. In his senior year, he was chosen All-Ohio, quite a feat considering the high caliber of competition that exists in the Buckeye state.

He also found time to participate in football and basketball—in fact, he was All-Catholic in the latter senior year.

He and Kelly Foes

One of Terry's opponents in both baseball and basketball was Kelly, who played for St. Edward's. The rivalry between St. Edward's and St. Ignatius was, and still is, quite intense.

Mike swears that neither Terry nor Kelly knew the other was coming to Villanova until school opened freshman year, At first, Mike admits, Terry was sort of disappointed at seeing his old rival going to the same school. But that soon ended, and the two became close friends and teammates.

Terry was only a part-time quarterback for the high school team —but he still drew offers from many schools, including Miami (Fla.). The other quarterback was a fella by the name of Tom Forrestal. Seems he played a little ball for Navy recently.

Terry didn't listen too seriously to the football offers, not to the pro-baseball ones either (from the Phillies, Detroit, and Cleveland.) He had his mind set on going to college. Oh the seminary too? Brother Mike says, "No, not yet."

Father Burke Was Friend

Here at Villanova, Terry's best friend on the faculty, and his advisor as well, was Rev. Thomas A. Burke, O.S.A., then Registrar of the University.

Hays is now at Good Counsel Novitiate in New Hamburg, New York, where he will spend approximately one year learning about the Augustinians, being tested to see if he has what it takes to be an Order priest, learning of his duties and privileges as an Augustinian, and preparing himself to take his temporary vows.

After Good Counsel, he will return to Villanova for a period of time during which he will complete his study of Philosophy, begun here as a lay student. After that, it's on to Washington and eventually his Solemn vows.

By then, Terry will be hitting the ball on the nose for a pretty darn good ball club—one which plays the game according to the rules of St. Augustine.

First of A Series:

Armed Forces Here to Stay -Learn to Live With Them

By FRANK DELANY
Feature Editor

Editor's note: This is a first, of a series on our military service obligations and related programs presented by the VILLANOVAN as a public service through the cooperation of Captain John Q. Grace, USMC, marine instructor with the Villanova NROTC unit. Any questions raised by the articles may be referred to Captain Grace in Barry Hall.

The first fact of life to be faced by college students of today is the obligation for military sentence. The armed forces are here to stay and it behooves each of us to learn best how to live with them. That is the purpose of this series of articles. We will first go into the nature of the draft and each individual's military obligations under law. In subsequent articles we will delve into the programs offered by the several armed forces by which a young man may meet his obligations by means other than the draft.

An overall picture of the armed forces might be helpful to see the situation in its proper perspective. The total number of men in service is expected to level off as of June 30 at roughly two and one-half million men with nine hundred thousand in the army, eight hundred thousand in the air force, six hundred and forty five thousand in the navy, one hundred and eighty thousand in the marine corps and eighty thousand in the coast guard.

The Present Situation

At present those within the age bracket of 22-23 are being drafted. In August of 1957, the draft quota was 11,000 men. In Sept. it dropped off to eight thousand and for the rest of 1957 levelled off at seven thousand men per month. But the 1958 outlook is not so bright for those who would hope to escape the draft. The quota for Jan. and Feb. has risen to ten thonsand men and it is expected to continue to rise hitting a possible maximum of fifteen thousand men per month.

This rise in the draft quota despite an overall reduction in the total number of men in the armed forces is explained by the fact that many now in service will be released and the emphasis will be placed on securing a high quality of drafted personnel, mental and physical. This obviously means that single young college graduates will be prime candidates for the local draft boards around the country, which are, of course, final authority in selective service matters in their respective localities. A wife and child, dependent parent or some such might lower either your proirity or your category.

Another consideration for the college graduate is the deterent value to an employer of imminent military service for the prospective employee.

The Universal Military Training and Service Act of 1951, the Armed Forces Reserve Act of of 1952 and the Reserve Force Act of 1955 have set up and define our present military set up.

Military Obligation and Military Service

Military obligation under the law falls into two categories: a six year obligation and an eight year obligation. Most people fall into the six year Category. An exception are those in the National Guard or any program of six months or less active duty. Those with a six year obligation spend two, three, or more years in active duty.

Military service under the law falls into three categories: active, ready reserve and stand by reserve. The ready reserve are those who may or may not have had some training time but, most important, are those who may be immediately called to active duty in time of emergency by a command of the president without an act of Congress. One million men may thus be called up. Any number above one million requires an act of Congress. Those in the stand by reserve are subject to their local draft boards in the matter of being transferred to active duty following an act of Congress.

In The Ready Reserve Program

Under the ready reserve, one may be in active or inactive reserve. In the active reserve one may be a member of an organized reserve unit which might be called up to active duty as a unit or might be unaffiliated with any particular unit but possess some special ability and be called to active duty individually for periods of time ranging from thirty days on.

Inactive reservists are those who do not train due to the physical absence of a training unit or some such reason or have no special ability or value for which to be called individually.

Military Obligation and Reserve Duty

Those with a six year obligation are eligible for transfer to the stand by reserve when active duty and deary reserve time equals five years. Those with an eight year obligation are eligible for transfer to six years.

Among the attractions of the ready reserve are pay and promotions the stand by reserve when active duty and ready reserve time equals for time spent in training.

With this knowledge as an incentive toward taking a hand in guiding one's own future with the armed forces, we will next week delve into the various programs offered by the army for completion of the obligation for military service.

Proud recipients of Villanova beer mugs are Louis Armstrong, Thelma Middleton, and Billy Kyle. Louis and his All-Stars each received the above gifts as a remembrance of their visit to Villanova. Peering on the celebrities are Don Kempf, chairman of the Jazz concert, and Rev. John J. Coffey, head of the Augustinian Seminary Guild.

Dr. McGurk Contributes To Geophysical Year Study

A program concerning man in his physical environment will be the subject of the research project slated for Philadelphia in connection with the International Geophysical Year, it was recently announced.

Dr. Frank C. J. McGurk of the Villanova Psychology Department, in connection with the study, will furnish figures from schools and industries on factors such as absenteeism, tardiness, alertness and behavior, and also will serve as staff psychologist and statistician.

The 18-month project is a study of the effects of climatic factors on human health and behavior.

Designated as the International Blometeorological Study in recognition of its far-reaching aspects, the study will utilize identical medical and meteorological data collected in Holland and West Germany concurrently with the local project.

Comparison of the collected evidence should reveal some of the bearing climate has on such things as types of illness, accidents, suicides, homicides and other crimes.

In addition to Villanova's participation, contributing units are composed of members from the University of Pennsylvania Graduate School of Medicine and Graduate Hospital, the Philco Corporation, the Drexel Institute of Technology and the Office of the Medical Examiner.

Memorial Mass For Fr. Lozano Thursday Morn.

There will be a Memorial Mass for Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A., former moderator of the Spanish Club, tomorrow (Thursday) morning at 10:30 in the Chapel, it was announced yesterday by club president Paul Tagliaferri.

Father Lozano was one of the most beloved men on the faculty before his death in December, 1956.

Tagliaferri said that the Mass would take the place of the regular meeting of the Spanish Club.

3rd Annual Choral Festival March 1

The Villanova Singers, directed by Herbert Fiss, are now in practice for the forthcoming Choral Festival on March 1 at St. Joseph's College.

At present eight colleges, including St. Joseph's, Temple, LaSalle, St. Peter's of Jersey City, Rosemont, Immaculata, Chestnut Hill and Villanova, will participate in the festival.

The festival was begun through the efforts of Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the Law School, during the years that he was director or the choral group.

The songs to be presented by the Villanova Singers are "O Shenandoah," "On the Road to Mandalay" and "Going' Home.."

Expenses Limited

Campaign expenses are limited to $50 per candidate and $100 per party. Election expenses must be itemized and submitted to the Student Council prior to elecelon.

A section of the committee report states that any infraction of the rules will be punished by the elections committee. Last year, signs and posters of candidates were torn down by the committee when violations occured.

Returns of last year's election indicated that more than three-fourths if the eligible freshmen voted.

Student Council President Pat Nicholson recently called on the Class of 1961 "to demonstrate it's acceptance of Villanova life by actively and conscienciously electing qualified candidates."

Faculty Chooses Queen

Queen contest Co-Chairmen Archie Whyte and Bob Dowling have revealed that the queen and her court will be chosen from the five finalists, pictured on page seven, by a committee of five faculty members at a small closed party for the finalists, their escorts, and members of the ball committee, prior to the dance in the central lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Jack Cranley, in charge of favors for the ball, has stated that this year's favor will be a special "roly-poly" high ball glass, but added that they will be distributed on a first-come, first serve basis.

Free refreshments will be served from two main positions of the dance floor, and it was also revealed that an enlarged coat room will be made available for the affair.

Mike Mancuso chairman of the patron drive, said that he would like to congratulate the freshman class for its excellent response in the purchasing of patron tickets for the ball.

Turkey On Saturday

Dinner-dance Chairman Joe D'Aquila and his committee have made final arrangements for the full-course turkey dinner and evening dancing Saturday. Tickets for the affair can be purchased by seniors in the VILLANOVAN office on the second floor Dougherty Hall through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Tickets for Friday night's dance can be obtained in the Pie Shoppe through Friday at the same hours and also at the door Friday night.

IRS Presents Khouri Talk

Associate Professor Fred J. Khouri, of the History Department, addressed the International Relations Society at its meeting last night. Khouri is moderator of the organization.

Society president Pete O'Kane and three other members also gave the group a report on their experiences at the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Association of International Relations Clubs, held last Friday and Saturday at the University of Pennsylvania

Those who accompanied O'Kane as representatives from Villanova's I.R.S. were Bill Lesko and Clint Shin.

The chief topic of discussion at the convention was the problems which the United States faces in formulating its foreign policy.

O'Kane announced that the society would take its annual field trip again this year. On March 5, the members will travel to Washington, D.C., primarily to visit the State Department.

The trip is open to members and non-members alike. Those who are not in the society but who want to go along are advised to contact O'Kane as soon as possible.

'What Do You Mean $7.50?' —SC Aids Thrifty Buyers

When the prices of new books were posted by the University book store last week, there were assorted reactions. Most, however, were not favorable.

Some Villanovans banded together to force holding companies to invest in the purchase of one book.

Some made mad dashes to the nearest library to see if the prescribed books were to be had.

Others made inquiries as to the importance the teacher put on the text.

Many of the latter looked forward to an especially busy notetaking semester.

SC Steps In

But for a large pare of the student body, the Student Council came up with a program which fit the bill quite nicely.

The Council instituted a used book service to facilitate easier transfer of books from one owner to another. Whereas the sale of used books had flourished on campus in the past, never before had such a notes with some kind of system before..

Classified List

Whelan and Ogle put a classified list of every course being taught this semester on the bulletin board opposite the temporary book store in Dougherty Hall's larger lounge.

Anyone who had a book which he no longer needed or which financial problems forced him to dispose of, could write his name, address and phone number under the course for which the book was used.

Those in search of books simply looked through the list. If he found a seller, he was abel to contact him.

It was not readily ascertainable when the projected abandonment of Belle Air would come about.

The building has seen meritorious service during the past few years as Villanova has expanded. It alone can claim to have served the University in two different locations on campus.

Statue Given To School Library

A statue of "Our Lady of Lourdes" has been given to the Library in honor of the Centennial of the apparition at Lourdes on February 11.

Miss Emily Maloney of Waterbury, Connecticut, donated the statue, which was hand-carved at Lourdes, in memory of her brother Benjamin, who graduated from Villanova in 1939. Benjamin was the first Villanovan killed in the Second World War in which he served as an Air Force pilot.

The Literary Club will meet Monday night in Seminar 3 of the Villanova University Library.

All Freshman candidates for Student Council will meet at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow in the Student Council office.

Engineering-Science Day Sponsored By Villanova Students On February 22

By BILL McNEILL

The Villanova engineering students and the Chemistry Club will sponsor an Engineering-Science Day on Saturday, Feb. 22, as a fitting climax to National Engineering Week. The purpose of this event is to interest high school students in engineering and science as careers.

One hundred and twenty high schools within a 50 mile radius have been invited, and 1000 students are expected to attend. The students will be taken on a guided tour through the engineering and chemistry labs where demonstrations of projects will be shown. Demonstrations include concrete testing, test of an automobile engine, telemetering and stress on solids due to fluid flow. Each demonstration will be explained thoroughly.

There will also be exhibits of equipment and examples of the opportunities available in engineering and science. Among these are an explanation of the difference between chemical engineering and chemistry, and a billboard displaying the various fields of endeavors in the engineering and chemistry.

GEORGE AUTH
Head Science Day

Panel Discussion Follows

Immediately following the guided tour, the groups will be taken to a large classroom for a question and answer session. A panel of five members, one from each branch of the Engineering School and one chemistry major, will have questions directed to them from the high school students.

Mr. George H. Auth, head of the Mechanical Engineering Department, is chairman of the event running from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Villanova's technical societies are the student groups sponsoring the event and include the AIEE-IRE; ASME; ASCE; AIChE; American Chemistry Society and the Radio Club.

Students Plan Program

Each of the technical societies has a representative on the Engineering-Science Day Committee which plans the program and determines the work to be accomplished. The students are: Neil McAllister, AIEE-IRE, Radio Club, Joe Petony, ASME; C. Gallagher, ASCE; Vince Sullivan and Dick McEntee, AIChE, and Tony Silvestri, ACS.

Any student interested in volunteering for work on the Engineering-Science Day Committee should see one of the students mentioned above or any student listed on the Engineering-Science Day posters.

SEA Will Hold Elections; O'Donnell One of Nominees

The Villanova Chapter of the Student Education Association will hold its second annual election of officers tomorrow. Voting will be limited to members of S.E.A. and will take place during the entire day in the Education Office, Room 140, Mendel Hall. Ballots will be distributed to all holding membership in the S.E.A.

The nominees for election are: John O'Donnell, junior, who has been nominated for president; Peter Longworth, sophomore, and Bob Piccone, freshman, for vice-president; John Cronin, junior, and Peter Longworth for secretary; and Dennis Dougherty, junior and Bob Piccone for treasurer.

Dick Dressler, outgoing president, is now student teaching physics at Malvern Preparatory School in Malvern. Other outgoing officers are Joe Sappone, vice-president; James Fox, secretary; and John Hughes, treasurer.

New Summer Jobs Listing Available

To answer the needs of teachers, college students and professors, The Advancement and Placement Institute announces publication of their completely new and expanded 1958 World-Wide SUMMER PLACEMENT DIRECTORY.

The new Directory gives descriptions of the type of work available, salary ranges, names and addresses of employers requesting summer employees which include government positions, steamship needs, dude ranches, travel tour agencies and many others.

Copies may be examined at any Placement or Deans' Offices, Libraries, School Superintendents' Offices or may be ordered from the Institute at Box 99G, Greenpoint Station, Brooklyn 22, N. Y. for $2.00 a copy.

Belle Masque Starts Work On 'Taming Of The Shrew'

Belle Masque, Villanova's dramatic society, began rehearsals last week for its next production, "The Taming of the Shrew," a comedy by William Shakespeare.

Director Richard A. Duprey, of the English Department, after scoring a more than moderate success with his staging of Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" last November, anticipates even greater things from the new production.

The show will be presented in the field House from March 20 through 23.

Ted Glinka and Paul Floyd, members of Belle Masque's stage crew, will personally supervise the construction of an Elizabethan stage for the play.

Birch Will Star

Those who saw "Saint Joan" will recall that the stage crew built a circular stage for it, so that for the first time in the history of Belle Masque a play was staged "in the round."

Clem Birch, President of the Senior Class, will essay the role of Petruchio, in "Taming of the Shrew." Birch gets the leading male part after his superb performance as the Inquisitor in "Saint Joan."

Just as was the case with "Saint Joan," when Claire Sigerson played Joan, Villanova will again turn to Rosemont College for the female lead. This time it goes to Linda Lynch, a sophomore. Miss Lynch will portray Katherine the shrew.

Others in the cast are junior Owen Klein, as Hortensio, Elaine Cake, a secretary at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, as Bianca, senior John Welsh, as Lucentio, and freshman Tom Flynn, as Tranio.

Philatelist Paul Terruso Holds Display

Paul Terruso, senior Mechanical Engineer and philatelist, has placed his valuable collection of Papal stamps on display in the main foyer of the Villanova Library.

The stamps, dating back to 1929 when they were first released, depict various Popes, Saints, Basillicas and dogmas of the Church. Of the total 309 stamps issued by Vatican City thus far, Paul has accumulated approximately 240. The first 55 are considered rare and are valued at about 350 dollars.

Terruso started the collection while still in high school, but was unable to obtain many of the stamps pre-dating 1933. The present status of near-completion was achieved last year.

In addition to his work as a philatelist, Paul has been a member of the VILLANOVAN staff for the past four years, serving this year as the Business Manager, and also has been a consistent contributor to the engineering publication.

George H. Noake Directs 'Bus Stop

George Heger Noake, current director of the Turfand Tinsel Club at Villanova, is also directing the Philadelphia Civic Theatre's production "Bus Stop" staged at the organization's playhouse, 4441 Main St., Manayunk.

It will be played this weekend and next on Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings beginning at 8:30

Mr. Noake is a summer stock veteran, having worked with the Gateway Playhouse at Somers Point, N. J.

Leoncavallo's 'I Pagliacci' is Presented by O-C

Opera Classica will open the second semester with Ruggiero Leoncavallo's opera "I Pagliacci" tomorrow evening at 7:30 in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall. The chorus and orchestra of L'Accademia di Santa Cecilia is conducted by Alberte Erede.

The opera is in two acts and lasts approximately one and a half hours. A free Italian-English libretto will be available to all participants.

Opera Classica is making its first trip to New York City on March 8 to see Verdi's "Othello" at the Metropolitan Opera House. The prices of the tickets range from $2 to $5.

Brothers Denis Luke, left, and David John, former Villanova Commerce and Finance School students, pronounced first vows as Christian Brothers on Feb. 2 at the Brothers' Ammendale Novitiate, Beltsville, Md. They will study at LaSalle College. Brother D. Luke (David B. Maher, of Havertown and Elizabeth, N. J.) and Brother John (John J. McGarvey, Jr., of Havertown) both graduated from West Philadelphia Catholic High School in June, 1955 and entered Villanova the following September.

One Will Reign As Belle Of The Ball — Friday Night

ROSEMARIE BURKE

These are the five finalists that have been selected by television personality Roland and his eerie little friend, Igor, to complete in the final round for this year's title of Senior Weekend Queen.

The local television twosome judged the ladies by the pictures and statistics submitted to the co-chairmen of the contest by their escorts.

The finalists will in turn be chosen in the order of queen and her four ladies-in-waiting at a private party to be held in their honor in the central lounge of Dougherty Hall prior to the Belle Air Ball.

Faculty Members Choose Queen

A committee of five faculty members will have the difficult task of making the final selections at this time.

The five lucky ladies who were fortunate to withstand the preliminary judging of the two witty inhabitants of television's horror chamber are: Rosemarie Burke, Marianne Fitzgerald, Jane Jewett, Wendy Vanderwerff and Pat Yablonski.

Rosemarie Burke, an 18-year-old sophomore from Immaculata College, will be escorted by Lou Raichle, a social science major who hails from Staten Island. Rosemarie is a blond, blue-eyed, Philadelphian, 5' 4" tall and weighs a slight 110 pounds.

Another finalist representing Immaculata College is pretty 18-year old freshman Marianne Fitzgerald. The blond, hazel-eyed Marianne will be the date of John Klein, a commerce and finance marketing major.

Frank Kelly, an electrical engineer, will escort the lovely Jane Jowett, from Philadelphia. Miss Jowett is a 17-year old beauty with blue eyes, and is currently president of her senior class at Girls' High in Philadelphia.

Rosemont Entry

Rosemont's entry in this year's contest is blond-haired, blue-eyed Wendy Vanderwerff, who was submitted by Arnie Vandervalk, pre-law major from the commerce and finance school. Wendy, a pert junior, is a 20-year-old Southerner coming from Danville, Virginia.

Don Poremsky, electrical engineering, is the lucky escort of Pat Yablonski, a chic secretary for a plumbing company. She is blonde-haired with green eyes and resides in Wilmington, Delaware.

Villanova Meets Hawks Tonight

LaSalle Drops VU Swimmers From Ranks Of Undefeated

Villanova's swimming team caught LaSalle in a vengeful mood on Saturday afternoon, and the visiting Exporers promtply dumped the Wildcats from the ranks of the undefeated with a 49-37 victory at the Field House pool before a near-capacity crowd.

West Chester had broken LaSalle's 39-meet victory skein a week before Saturday's meet.

The win for LaSalle came after Villanova had won four and tied two. For a little while it looked like the 'Cats might maintain their unbeaten status.

In fact, entering the final event, the 400 freestyle relay, they still had a chance to win. LaSalle led by a 42-37 margin at the time, and a triumph would have meant seven points and the meet.

Lose Final Relay

But Lou Schoener was unable to build up any kind of lead on the Explorer's weakman in the relay, John Brolly, in the lead-off position, and after that Joe Lavin, Frank Kohler and Jim Sheehan successively widened the gap against Lou Pinto, Bob Pinto and Joe Mason.

The failure of Schoener to match his earlier performances hurt very much. He appeared to be giving Villanova one-two in the 100 freestyle by taking second behind Mason, but he tired and Kohler overtook him by an arm's length.

Mason looked very good in winning the 100 easily in 55.3 and taking a second behind Sheehan in the 50 freestyle.

Another good performance was turned in by Steve Cartin, lithe sophomore, who scored a minor upset by winning the diving. He edged LaSalle's Mitch Sukalski, 67.4 to 66.22.

Sheehan Breaks Mark

The only other individual winner for the Wildcats was Larry Palacio, who took the 200 orthodox breakstroke in 2:42.0. Palacio also came in second to LaSalle's Sheehan in the 200 butterfly. Sheehan broke the Villanova pool record, knocking a full five seconds off the 2:29.6 set by another LaSalle swimmer, George Haggerty, in 1954.

The only other Villanova win came in the day's opening event, the 400 yard medley relay. Frank Keefe opened up a 15-foot lead to start things off. Then Jim Gregory, Palacio and Bob Pinto stretched it to more than the length of the pool.

Besides Sheehan, LaSalle had another double winner in Lavin, who took both the 220 and 440 freestyle. But the man who was probably the biggest thorn in Villanova's side was Pete Walheim.

Walheim took second in the 220 freestyle, overcoming Wynn Wilso, who led him a good part of the way, then won the 200 backstroke and returned immediately to take second in the 440 freestyle, again catching a Villanova man, Bruce McCreedy, near the end.

'Cat Frosh Five Triumph Over LaSalle

The freshman basketball team increased its winning streak to eight victories over two City-Series rivals last week as the squad returned to action after the semester break.

A highly-rated St. Joseph's club fell at its own court, 88-55, and LaSalle became the Wild-Kittens' eight victim, 74-61, before a large audience at the Field House.

Coach Al Severance's hustlers continued to play fashly, fast-break basketball while beating teams which had great height advantages.

15 Point Streak

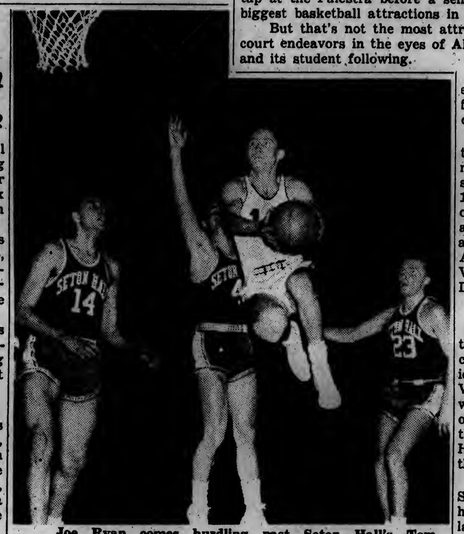
The St. Joseph's game was close for most of the first half, but as the period closed Tom Samuelewicz and Bob Liberatore began to control the backboards, and the Main Liners ran off a string of 15 points to leave the Hawklets in their wake.

Jimmy Huggard, continuing his sparkling play, led the scoring with 23 points. The 5-8 playmaker, and independent league standout for the past few years before enrolling at Villanova, teamed with Jim Kenny, former star at North Cathiolic, in working the fire-house type offense which has been the hit of the campus.

Liberatore, a great scorer in his high school days at Bristol (Pa.), finished second in scoring with 17 points. Kenny and Dick Kaminski (St. Aloysius, Jersey City, N.J.) each hit for 13.

Kaminski Leads Way

It was Kaminski who lead the way in the LaSalle game. The stockily-built 6-2 forward, showed good driving ability in posting 19 points.



Kaminski, whose high school team won the New Jersey Class B Parochial championship in 1956 when he was a junior, played his best ball of the year. He had a litte trouble in the early games keeping pace with the fast-break antics of Huggard and Kenny, but he has gradually caught the tempo.

Ten of Kaminski's points came in succession halfway through the second half, as he personally thwarted a slight LaSalle bid to overcome a Villanova lead which at one point reached 22 points.

Four In Double Figures

As has been the case in most of the freshman games, four players hit double figures. Aside from Kaminski, the others were Huggard (18), Liberatore (16), and Kenny (12).

Mel Herdelein, who scored 23 points for the LaSalle Frosh in a losing effort against the Wild-kittens earlier in the year, increased his scoring production to 33. He gave the winners quite a bit of trouble off the boards, making good use of his 6-4 height.

Joe Ryan comes hurdling past Seton Hall's Tom Cross, left, Paul Sczech and Phil Samuels, with a drag lay-up to score two of his 23 points against the Pirates.

Wildcats Top Seton Hall As Brennan, Ryan Star; Raveling Surprise Ace

Tom Brennan and Joe Ryan have been the outstanding members of Villanova's basketball unit thus far this year, and when both get hot on the same night, it's something to watch.

That was the story last Wednesday night, as the Wildcats downed a sub-par Seton Hall quintet, 72-64, with a ten-point rally late in the second half of a dull contest.

Al Severance's Main Liners looked like they would completely humiliate the visiting Pirates in the first half, holding them to nine points in the first ten minutes, while building up a 16-point edge. However, early in the second frame, the New Jerseyites found their shooting eye.

Scott Comes In

Coach Honey Russell's unit hit nine of its first 11 shots in that segment to jump to a five point lead, but at that point, Severance inserted 6' 8" soph John Scott into the fray, and the tide changed.

Scott played seven minutes and averaged a point and rebound a minute, to leave Villanova with a ten point bulge when he returned to his seat.

Brennan and Ryan were the mainstays of the Main Line attack, however. Team captain Brennan, one of the steadiest players in Philadelphia, bucketed 17 points and pulled down 16 rebounds. Ryan was top scorer for the victors, with 22 tallies, and handed off six assists.

Unheralded soph George Raveling also came in for his share of the limelight. Playing the longest period of his varsity career (he was the first Wildcat substitution), Raveling scored ten points, pulled down nine rebounds and had two assists.

Ten days earlier, the Wildcats breezed by a scrappy Duquesne unit in the Palestra, 69-58, as their senior members starred.

Tom Brennan, scoring 11 times from the free-throw line, paced the attack with 17 points. Kelly, continuing a hot streak that has made him one of Severance's stalwarts, was right on Tom's heels with 16.

Bill Brennan, putting on a spurt in the closing moments, tallied 14 points, and was the Main Liners' defensive ace, playing a sparkling floor game.

Despite stellars performances by Seniors Jack Kelly and Tom Brennan, the Villanova courtmen dropped their sixth game of the season at the hands of Scranton University, 79-73, Monday night.

Kelly scored 19 points while Brennan put in 15 and pulled down 20 rebounds in the losing effort.

Villanova led from the floor by seven field goals but they were outstripped of the free throw line as Scranton sank 29 of 39 free tosses. The 'Cats play again tonight when they meet St. Joseph's College in their second City Series encounter in the Palestra.

City Series Double Bill at Palestra A Sell-out; Temple Faces Explorers In Second Game of City Spectacular

Tonight's the night—an all City Series doubleheader—is on tap at the Palestra before a sell-out crowd, making one of the biggest basketball attractions in these parts in quite a while.

But that's not the most attractive feature of this evening's court endeavors in the eyes of Al Severance's Main Line quintet and its student following.

Tonight—at 7:30 p.m., eastern standard time—Villanova faces its arch-emeny, the Hawks of St. Joseph's

If things go as they should, this could be the night Villanovans have been waiting for since the fourth game of the 1955-56 court season. Because, on the basis of past performances and the individual talent available to opposing coaches Al Severance and Jack Ramsay, Villanova should take the City Line unit tonight.

Eliminate St. Joe's

A Wildcat victory would virtually eliminate St. Joe's slim chances in this third City Series competition, while evening Villanova's record at 1-1. It would also offer some measure of revenge for two defeats at the hands of the hustling Hawks since the initiation of the all-Philadelphia series.

Back in those days, however, St. Joe's was one of the powerhouses in the East, while Villanova was in the process of rebuilding. Now, things are a little more even, and the Main Liners have the upper hand.

Loses Regulars

The city five lost its entire starting five via graduation last Spring, and it will be a young bunch of Hawks which face Tom Brennan et al. tonight.

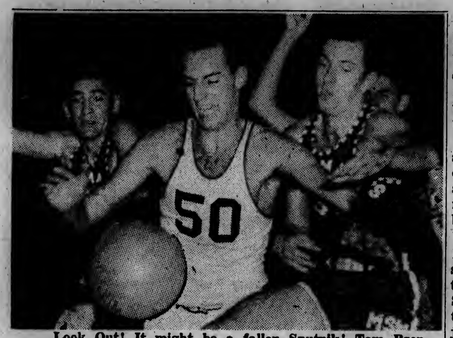
And one of those youngsters will be the man Villanova's crack defense will have to stop if the Wildcats are to have an easy time with their foes.

Sharp-shooting Bob McNeill has been a soph sensation for Ramsay's off-and-on quintet, and possesses the second highest point-per-game average among the Philadelphia courtsters.

McNeill uses a long jump shot for his scoring efforts, and is one of the leading contenders for "soph of the year" in a contest filled with aspirants, among them Villanova's John Scott.

Depend On Soph

Ramsay will be depending on another soph to battle Brennan and Jack Kelly for rebounds. He's 6' 9" Bob Clarke, who so far has not come up to expectations.



Joe Spratt, Jim Gallo. Al Cooke and John Hoffacker will also see action for the Hawks.

Temple will meet LaSalle in the second game of the doubleheader. The Explorers will have to win to keep alive their hopes of taking city honors.

Oppose Bonnies

On Saturday night, the Wildcats face the Bonnies of St. Bonaventure in the second game at the Palestra. The upstate New Yorkers have the same team back that finished third in the National Invitation Tournament last March with the exception of Brendan McCann now with the New York Nickerbockers. —JACK CURTIN

Grid Card Lists 5 At Home; West Chester, Army Return

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Villanova's football schedule, vacillating between the big-time and the not-so-big in recent years, seems to combine the two in its 1958 version, belatedly announced by Athletic Director Frank Reagan last week.

But in general the schedule reflects two policies of the Athletic Department—one voiced publicly and the other implicit in the nine-game card.

As Reagan had predicted when he took over the reins from Ambrose (Bud) Dudley last year, the schedule shows that Villanova is out to return football to the campus.

Five games are listed for Goodreau Stadium for 1958, and the same number will be played in 1959 and 1960.

Top Teams Gone

But what Reagan and other high officials have never said, is that the days of competing against the top powers in the country are finished. That is precisely what has happened.

Names such as Baylor, Texas A. & M., Mississippi, and Georgia, all of which have appeared on Wildcat schedules in recent years, are no longer on the card.

By the same token, there does not appear to be a movement toward de-emphasization. What has occurred could more accurately be called a re-evaluation.

For the past several years, Villanova has had indifferent success against schools which give out many more scholarships than Villanova does. Apparently the Athletic Department has decided to play only those schools which have a like-attitude toward football.

West Chester On Card

Probably the biggest surprise on the schedule is the game with West Chester State Teachers College. At first glance, it would appear that the Teachers are a miss-match. But they have consistently been near the top of the small-college competition in the Eastern area.

Under their astute coach, Glenn Killinger, the Teachers were unbeaten a year ago. Their followers have long maintained that they can play the bigger schools on an equal basis.

Strange as it may seem, the Wildcats will be attempting to even up the series with West Chester when the teams meet in September. Three games have been played between the schools in the past, the last coming in 1933. West Chester has won two of them.

It is expected that the West Chester-Villanova rivalry will blossom into a wonderful gate attraction. The Teachers have a very large group of fans, particularly in the Chester and Delaware County areas.

Hudson River Excursion

Army, a fixture on the Villanova cards during the post-war era, makes a welcome return. The Wildcats travel to West Point on Nov. 15. The Cadets have a whopping 14-2 margin in the series, but most of the victories came during war-time conditions—hordes of athletes at West Point, and a bunch of 4-Fers at Villanova.

There is already talk on campus of making a huge student trip—similar to the Boston treks of recent years—to West Point next year. The proximity of the Hudson River campus to Villanova would enable more students to attend the game.

Aside from West Chester and Army, two traditional rivals are on the schedule. Detroit, which has not traveled East since the days when the Wildcats played in the then Shibe Park, will come to the Main Line on Oct. 11. The series stands at 14-8-2, with Villanova on top.

Boston College, which holds an 11-9 edge over the Wildcats, will play host again on Oct. 4, as it has for the past few years.

The complete schedule:

Sept. 20, West Chester, at Villanova; 27 OPEN; Oct. 4, Boston College, away, 11 Detroit, at Villanova; 18, Wake Forest, at Villanova; 25 Richmond, at Villanova; Nov. 1, Wichita, away; 8, Dayton, away, 15, Army, away; 22, Quantico Marines, at Villanova.

Jumbo Jim Elliott's track and field whizzes head for Madison Square Garden and the New York Athletic Club's indoor meet on Saturday night with outstanding performances to show for the year's first four board extravaganzas.

Elliott's tiara of superstars and steady dependables does not contain quite so many sparklers as a year ago, but those that remain are glistening more brightly than ever.

Leading the way is Ron Delany, who won his 19th consecutive indoor mile by taking the Wanamaker Mile in last Saturday's Millrose Games in the season's best time, 4:04.6, just one second off the indoor record held by Gunnar Nielson.

New Mark Soon?

Observers are looking for Delany to break Nielson's mark any time now. It might come in the N.Y.A.C. meet on Saturday. The competition necessary for Ronnie to do the trick is steadily improving.

Delany's times for the year's first three meets were: Boston K of C—4:05.7; Inquirer—4:08.1 (New meet, Convention Hall and MAAAU indoor record. Old one held by former Wildcat Fred Dwyer, 4:09.7, in 1953); Boston A.A.—4:05.3

Phil Returns

Phil Reavis, pint-sized high jumper, stayed out of the first two meets because of a pulled groin muscle. When he returned he started slowly, tying at six feet, seven and three-quarters inches in Boston, and tying again at six eight in the Millrose Games.

Phil can be expected to jump higher as he gradually rounds into better shape after the injury. His jumping buddy, Charlie Stead, has concentrated on running with the mile relay team thus far.

The relay team, George Sydnor, Stead, Vic DiMaio and Ed Collymore, have won only once, in the Inquirer meet (retiring a trophy). At Millrose, Manhatten won out in the very good time of3:18.6. Collymore is the only man returning from last year's first-string squad.

Collymore, looking in tremendous shape, has not won in the short indoor sprints series, but he did tie the world's record for the 60, 6.1, in one of the semi-finals at Millrose. He shares the record with 23 others.

The long-gaited junior is more at home in the longer dashes—100, 220—and even the quarter mile. He seems ready to take on anyone at those distances. When outdoor season comes around, he'll be tough to beat.

Godesky Victory

Bob Godesky, only a sophomore, won the 1000 handicap at Millrose in 2:14.4. He ran with a 15-yard handicap.

The freshman group has looked quite good. Tim MacNamara won the Inquirer 1000 Novice run. The Frosh mile relay team won in Philadelphia in 3:33.1. Running were Joe Mannion, Jim McGrath, George Rogers and Nick DiAngelis.

Phila. Alumni Honors Track Team Thurs.

Tomorrow night (Thursday) the Villanova Club of Philadelphia will honor the school's track team with a dinner at the Penn Sherwood Hotel. The affair will start at 7:30 p.m.

This is the third consecutive year that the local Alumni organization has seen fit to pay homage to the Wildcat thinclads.

The dinner will honor, not only the 1958 track team, but also the members of last year's team, which won the championship of the NCAA outdoor, IC4A indoor and outdoor, and AAU indoor meets.

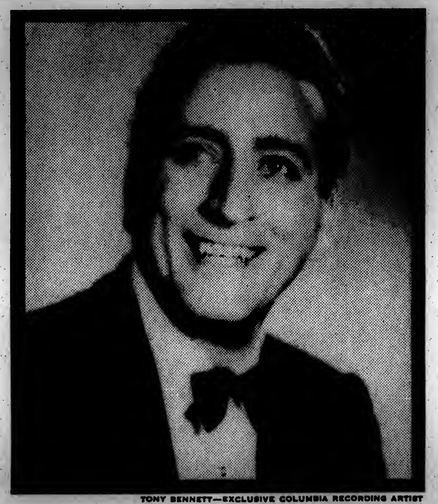
Jumbo Jim Elliott, track coach, 1957 Alumni Loyalty Award winner, and United States Track Coach of the Year, is also due for his share of the honors.

The principal speaker will be the Honorable James C. Healey, member of the House of Representatives from New York. Congressman Healey is a University of Pennsylvania graduate and a former world record holder as a runner,

Besides the members of the Philadelphia Alumni Club, many persons prominent in track or at least interested in it will attend the dinner.

Ron Delany was named "Sportsman of the Year" for the Philadelphia area by the Motorboat and Sportsmen's Club. He received a plaque from the organization at a ceremony in Philadelphia's City Hall on Monday.

IC4A TICKETS NOW ON SALE



Tickets for the IC4A Indoor Track Championships at Madison Square Garden in New York on Saturday night, March 1, are now on sale in the ticket office in Field House.

Villanova's track team won the title a year ago en route to an unprecedented sweep of most of the United States track laurels. More than 800 students took part in a trip sponsored by the Spirit Committee to the Garden to view the victory.

It is expected that at least that number will accompany the 1958 version of the Wildcats to New York to root them on in their defense of the crown.

New Proposals Presented

By PAT NICHOLSON

It is my sincre belief that the first semester of the 1957-1958 session of the Student Council has been a fruitful one. We have established a system which with the cooperation of each and every member of the Council should prove successful. Now we must make every effort to bear some of the fruits of the new system and our earlier efforts.

Therefore I am making the following recommendations to the Student Council. I sincerely believe that each recommendation is in the best interests of Villanova University and its student body. Whether or not such programs and recommendations are successfully undertaken or whether they are undertaken at all will depend on the work and cooperation of the Student Council, the student body which it represents, the Faculty, and the Administration of Villanova University.

I recommed that:

1. An Area Club program be established for the undergraduate students at Villanova.
2. The Student Council and/or the Administration publish a Student Register listing the campus and home address of every member of the student body.
3. The Student Council sponsor a one day leadership school for the purpose of better familiarizing potential and present student leaders with the goals, advantages, and problems of student government.
4. The Student Council recommend to the Administration that an active Honorary Fraternity open to students exceling in both marks and extra-curricular activities be established at Villanova.
5. Villanova University become an active member of the United States National Student Association.
6. A new financial program permitting greater student responsibility be set up within the Student Council.
7. The Student Council review past laws, enactments, or recommendations in order to see to it that all those that were approved are in effect or are put in effect as soon as possible.
8. The Student Council recommend to the Administration that every year a home football game be designated "Parents' Day."
9. Class Steering Committees be granted a greater measure of control over the use of class treasuries.
10. The Villanova Letterman's Club be organized on both the student and the alumni level.
11. The Student Activities Committee of the Student Council be given permission to publish a Student Activities Handbook and to establish a Freshman Interview Program.
12. The Student Council submit a workable program to the Administration which will provide for an increase in the availability of the athletic facilities of the field house to the student body.
13. The Student Council in cooperation with the Administraton initiate an intense "clean up" drive in Dougherty Hall.
14. The Student Council recommend to the Administration that Villanova increase the number of minor sports in which we complete on an intercollegiate level.
15. The Student Council encourage and assist student organizations in presenting lectures and programs of an educational nature which will be of benefit to the general student body.
16. The Student Council recommend to the Administration and to the Director of Athletics that a Student-Alumni Ticket Committee be established to assist in the sale of season football tickets and to encourage the increased support of alumni, parents, and friends of Villanova.
17. The Student Council recommend to the Administration that definite requirements for cheerleading awards be established and that the outstanding members of the Spirit Committee also receive similar awards.
18. The Student Council recommend to the Administration that the Student body be represented on the Atnhletic Advisory Board.
19. The Student Council recommend to the Administration that every possible effort be made by both the Administration and the Student Council to bring about the establishment of a council of the Knights of Columbus at Villanova.
20. The Student Council make every effort to assist the National Federation of Catholic College Student Commission in bringing about a large increase in its activities at Villanova.
21. The Student Council recommend to the Administration that due recognition for outstanding scholastic achievement be given at graduation.
22. The Outstanding Senior Athlete Award presented each spring to Villanova's most outstanding senior athlete as decided by the vote of the student body be named by the Student Council as the "Father Edward McKee Award" in tribute to the many years of untiring effort and devoting that Father McKee has given to Villanova University.
23. The Student Council recommed to the Administration that every effort be made to allow Juniors and Seniors to register in the sections of their required courses that would best enable them to register for their most desired electives.
24. The Student Council recommend to the Administration that Classroom Annex be converted into a Recreation Hall at the end of this semester if the completion of the new Commerce and Finance building will provide sufficient classroom space.

For the most part the above recommendations are simply outlines of the proposals which will be presented to the Student Council and then, if passed, to the Administration. The Student Council needs the help and cooperation of each and every member of the student body. If this is received, I am certain that a great deal will be accomplished.

Seniors Apply For Cars Today

Villanovan

Vol. 33—No. 13 Villanova University, Villanova, Pa. February 19, 1958

Pat Nicholson, chairman of the student council, and Jerry DeGroft, a member of the student congress, smile happily upon receiving the news that the Senior car program which they proposed and worked upon last semester was accepted by the University administration.

Ludmerer, Junior President, Gives Up Powers To Veep

Vic Ludmerer, president of the Class of '59, announced at a recent Steering Committee meeting that, after appointing chairmen for coming events, he had delegated presidential authority to Vice President Matt Brennan.

Brennan is to assume all responsibilities for arrangements pertaining to these events until such time as Ludmerer feels able to resume his duties as class president.

This is the first time that a class president has delegated complete authority to his vice president.

Academic Pressure

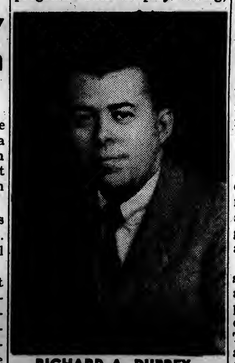
Ludmerer stated that academic pressure was the reason for this unusual move. "The pressure of my presidency during the previous semester has resulted in severe academic reprimands.

"I feel that this move at the present time is a healthy one for the class because now more time can be devoted to Junior Week preparation by those who are better able to devote the necessary time," Ludmerer continued.

Brennan Assumes Power

Brennan now assumes the power to make all necessary decisions for the successful pursual of class interests as well as the power to call Steering Committee meetings when he deems necessary.

University Offers Drama Program In Grad School



Villanova University will initiate a full-time graduate program in theater, leading to a Master of Arts degree, this summer, under the direction of Richard A. Duprey, of the English Department.

The program, which will run throughout the entire year, will make Villanova one of approximately six Catholic colleges and universities offering a Master's degree in drama.

Temple is the only other school in the area which offers such a program.

Fifteen Courses

The graduate plan offers 15 courses, specializing in direction, stage design and special programs such as play-writing, acting and theater history.

RICHARD A. DUPREY
Drama Arts Head

Duprey revealed that the program would begin this June, and be available to both lay and religious students.

He said that the division would eventually utilize two full time faculty members and part-time instructors warranted by the enrollment. At this moment, Duprey is the only faculty member connected with the program.

Unique Feature

Duprey also pointed out that the school would have one uni-

Job Interview Season Open For Seniors

Interview season for the seniors, which opened with a two-hour Career Conference in the auditorium of Vasey Hall last Thursday, will continue through April 30.

Between 400 and 500 seniors attended the Career Conference. They heard speeches and a panel discussion on "The Interview."

George J. Chorba, Assistant Professor of Accounting at Villanova, was chairman of the discussion. The panelists were Gleńdon L. Andrews, Division Superintendent of Proctor and Gamble Co.; Michael A. Mooney, sales representative of Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co.; and William J. Diamond, tax manager, Arthur Andersen & Company.

Interviews In Dougherty

Placement Director John A. Moritz has announced that all interviews will take place in the athlete's training-table room on the second floor of Dougherty Hall, across from the radio station.

Seniors must sign time schedules at the Placement Office, 114 Mendel Hall, one week before each firm has scheduled its inter-

Bloodmobile Visits Campus On March 4, 5

The Bloodmobile is coming to the Villanova campus on March 4 and 5.

This year the drive is under the direction of the Spirit Committee Chairman Leo Rogers.

Students may make arrangements to donate a pint of blood tomorrow and Friday, the 20th and 21st of February in Dougherty Hall. The director of the Wayne Red Cross, Mrs. E. Smith, has promised that a number of pretty young girls will be on hand to sign up donors.

Students under 21 years of age must have written permission from their parents. The Red Cross will send permission slips home to parents, and students are requested to remind their parents to return this slip signed immediately.

V.U. Is Top Donor

Villanova, until last year, was one of the top donors to the Wayne Cross Bloodmobile. In past years Villanova has given from 350 to 400 pints of blood. Last year, however, Villanovans donated a disappointing 107 pints.

Rogers announced that this year the quota is 500 pints of blood. He explained that this is an entirely reasonable quota, since it is only 17% of the total undergraduate enrollment.

If Villanova has a good showing, all Villanova students and their families are guaranteed free blood whenever they shall need it in the future, wherever they shall need it.

Headquarters at Aumni Gym

The Bloodmobile will set up quarters in Alumni Gym on Wednesday and Thursday, March 4th and 5th. Blood donors will be given doughnuts, juice, milk, etc. after donating.

Rogers stressed that all persons connected with Villanova and who are in good health, priests, lay teachers and students, are urged to sign up on Thursday and Friday. Rogers added that "although you may think the Red Cross dosen't need your blood, the sick and injured do, so let's all sign up and make one concerted Villanova effort to go over the top this year."

More information concerning the Bloodmobile drive will be published on the bulletin boards and in next week's issue of the VILLANOVAN.

ASHES DISTRIBUTED

Ashes will be distributed today at 4 p.m. in the chapel and this evening after chapel exercises, Rev. Norbert Whitley, O. S. A., University Chaplain has announced.

Administration OK's Car Plan; Register Next Week

By ED KARRER
News Editor

Application for registration of automobiles by senior resident students will be held today, tomorrow and Friday in the Student Council office from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., it has been announced by the Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., Vice-President of Student Affairs, and the Student-Administration Committee.

Today's application date was disclosed at a meeting of the Student-Administration Committee last Thursday following the administration's approval of a program submitted through the Student Council whereby senior resident students in good standing with the university in academic average, disciplinary status and chapel attendance will be permitted the ownership and operation of automobiles.

Those seniors applying for auto permits, if they are approved by the administration, will then return for registration tentatively at the same hours next Wednesday, Thursday or Friday at which time they will register for an ownership permit and an operator's permit.

Program Is Experimental

Acceptance of the car program by the university administration on an EXPERIMENTAL basis was revealed last Thursday night at a meeting of the Student Congress by Pat Nicholson, chairman of the Student Council.

The plan will be operated on this experimental basis for the remainder of the 1957-58 school year. It will then be re-evaluated in May by the administration at which time its future will be decided.

Rules of Program

Rules governing elegibility and regulation of senior cars are as follows:

1. Only resident seniors in good standing will be eligible for this privilege.
   A. A 2.00 cumulative average with no failures the previous semester including attendance.
   B. Satisfactory chapel record.
   C. Maintainance of a good diciplinary record.
2. Written permission from parent or guardian.
3. Written permission from property owner giving permission to park the car on his property, as parking on

Frosh Elect Two Members To SC Today

More than one thousand freshmen are expected to go to the polls today in their first college election to decide two seats in the Student Congress.

The polls opened at 10:30 a.m. and will close at 3:30 p.m.

Thirteen freshmen—seven residents and six day hops,—are listed on the ballot. They received final approval last Wednesday from the Rev. Dante L. Girolami, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities.

Nominees Listed

Those nominated are:

Residents: Frank Dunn, John Fitzgerald, Ralph Ascoli, Lewis Paperd, David Doyle, Nicholas Cassetta and Josephe Ciccone.

Day-hops: Thomas Chambers, Louis Retacco, Joseph Shaw, James Lynch, Charles Borcky and Edward McCarthy.

Dunn, Casella, Ciccone, Chambers, Retacco, and McCarthy are members of the Arts school. Fitzgerald, Paperd, Doyle, Shaw, Lynch, and Borcky, are C and F students. Ascoli is the lone engineer.

The 13 were approved by the administration last week after their names had been submitted by Paul Laughlin, chairman of the elections committee of the Student Council.

Spirited Campaign

The election campaign has been brief, but highly spirited. Various charges and claims have been circulating among the freshmen the last three days.

On the results of the election, many students are expected to make plans for the general elections in May.

A Matter Of Pride

We suppose that every college newspaper editor, when stuck for an editorial, pulls out that old bromide, college spirit, and pounds out a few hundred words of deathless — but repetitive — prose. Maybe that's the case this week, but we think we have something to say.

There's' been a lot of discussion about Villanova's' spirit lately, and the major question seems to be—what exactly is the story regarding student enthusiasm at the university? How can the same student body that almost tears the roof off the Palestra during a basketball game show up only 75-men strong for a Field House rally?

Well, we think we might have the answer — or at least part of it.

It all lies in the conception of spirit. To us, spirit is more than cheering the university's athletic teams. It is something much deeper than that, involving all facets of collegiate life. It takes in not only athletics, but also academics, extra-curriculars, spiritual life and all the other varied parts that go to make up the Villanova whole.

So, we're a little afraid—afraid that we at Villanova have missed the boat somewhat; that our spirit is a false one.

It's easy enough to cheer and applaud during an athletic contest, to try to outdo a rival group across the floor, or to impress those around you. The trouble is, we suspect that Villanova's spirit is just that, a competitive thing, rather than a manifestation of a much deeper, inner feeling.

We're not going to try and fix the blame anyplace, because we feel that everyone is a little at fault, from the Administration and faculty right down to the students, coaches and athletes. All five groups must necessarily be concerned if university spirit is ever to extend beneath the surface level.

Because that's what Villanova spirit is — a surface thing. And that's not enough.

Spirit is dependent on many things: tradition, co-operation, mutual respect and admiration, to name a few. But, most of , we think that it is a matter of pride.

Until such time as everyone connected with the university can feel justifiably proud to belong to the Villanova family, can firmly believe that everything possible is being done to solve the problems of the university in the manner most satisfactory to all concerned, there can be no real spirit.

If the day is to come when this real spirit will prevail on the campus, everyone of us must assume part of the responsibility. It's going to mean a lot of work and sacrifice, but that doesn't really matter.

It's something worth working for.

LENT: Your Decision

We're not going to say too much about Lent beginning today, because, as Catholic students, all of us should have a clear idea of the responsibilities and advantages of this holy season by this time.

The thing we'd like to point out, though, is that, attending a Catholic university, we have every opportunity to make the six week period between Ash Wednesday and Easter the time of spiritual and mental "house-cleaniny" that it should be. Mass and Holy Communion are at the access of every student, and the chapel is always close at hand for daily visits. There is nothing to hinder any consciencious effort to live a devout Lenten season.

Which places the responsibility squarely on the individual.

Each one of us must decide for ourselves whether or not we are going to fulfill our religious obligation. Certainly any sacrifices we have to make are nothing in comparison to the much greater One which we are honoring. And the spiritual benefits to be gained far outweigh personal inconveniences to the individual.

There's a lot to be gained during Lent. It's up to us to get the most we can out of it.

Senior Cars: A Challenge

The recently passed senior car program is a feather in the cap of the student council, a blessing to the resident student body and a step forward in relations between the University Administration and the student body.

The new privilege, aside from giving the senior class a much deserved superiority over the underclasses, also creates an incentive for every student to remain in good disciplinary and academic standing, in order to hold the right to o perate a car during his senior year.

The only thing that remains now is to make the system work. It goes into effect this semester on an experimental basis, being operated by the council. There is no doubt here that it will fulfill its obligations. The rest is up to the students. Only they can prove that the privilege is rightfully theirs.

Probably the largest responsibility lies with the senior class. They are serving as "guinea pigs" for classes yet to come. If they choose to abuse the system, they can deprive future classes of this hard-earned privilege for years to come.

The underclassmen could destroy the new program too, by borrowing senior cars or by trying to sneak one of their own into the program.

On the other hand, the student body could cooperate with the administration and council to initiate a workable and constructive program that will be a credit to all concerned.

We have enough faith in the Villanova student body to believe that the latter will be the case. There is nothing to be gained by opposition to this, the greatest student benefit in several years.

Blizzard Of '58' Was A Corker On Campus, It Stopped Everybody But The Maids!

Snow and icy weather may not be able to stop the United States Post Office, but they sure can raise havoc with Villanova University.

The "Blizzard of '58" brought all classes in both the undergraduate and part-time divisions of the university to a complete halt Monday and Tuesday.

Actually, everything came to a stop on Monday as Philadelphia proved once again that any snowfall above three inches is too much to cope with. The university didn't even put up a real fight until Monday afternoon when they pulled out the snowplows and attempted to clear off some of the school grounds.

The plows promptly got stuck. School was cancelled for Tuesday.

Those Hardy Seniors

The real heroes—or victims—of the saga of wind and snow were the seniors. About 850 hardy souls out of the 900 who paid braved the height of the storm to attend the Senior Dinner Dance, according to President Clem Birch.

One senior at least didn't make it, however. He arrived to pick up his date at Chesnut Hill around seven, but never reached the door. Just as he was helping his collegiate lovely on with her coat, one of the CHC nuns announced that all permissions were cancelled for the evening. They ended up being the best-dressed couple at the Hill's dance.

An Engineer's Desire

Perhaps he wasn't as bad off as a couple of underclassmen we heard about, though. One particular fellow had a date down in Washington this weekend. An engineer, he couldn't bear the thought of missing any classes, so he set out for campus Sunday. Our hero pulled in at 8 o'clock the next morning, after 18 hours travel, and ran to his room. Fortunately, someone caught him in the hall, books under his arm, and sent him happily to bed with the good news.

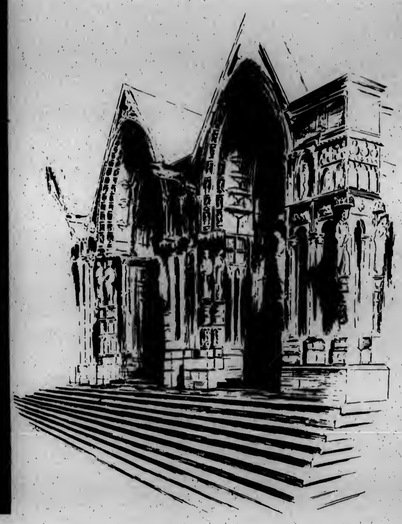
Another fellow — day-hop variety—didn't know a thing about classes being cancelled, just figured that he wasn't coming in on those roads, and slept until noon Monday. He was, of course, relieved to find that he wasn't missing anything upon awakening, but claimed that it took some of the fun out of lolling around the house.

Tom Brennan and Jack Kelly, leaving the Palestra with their dates after the lacing by St. Bonaventure's, found that they couldn't get any transportation back to the Dinner Dance. Finally, they had to prevail on their opponents for help, getting a ride on the Bonnies' team bus to 30th st. station, along with several fans who couldn't get their cars out of the parking lot.

Money—What Money?

In a more serious vein, one junior luckily escaped critical injury when he fell on the ice while skating at Immaculata Saturday afternoon. He did, however, lose his memory of the last three days and had to be taken to the infirmary. When he awoke Sunday, he remembered everything—except Saturday! A couple of his friends are trying to tell him that they lent him money that afternoon, but he's kind of doubtful.

There were all sorts of stories floating about the campus green, some of them too unbelieveable to be anything but true. One youth in Sullivan gave a little credit where credit was due after hearing all the adventures of his comrades.



"Well, the snow messed up all of you guys, and stopped the day-hops and faculty from getting in—but, by gosh, the maids still made it!"

There's nothing like dedication.

Villanova's Rudhart—Amateur Artist and Critic

By FRANK DYNAN

Displays of art in the Villanova Library are not ordinarily reason for surprise. However, the gothic cathedral sketches, and the drawings of the linguistic symbols of several ancient languages on display after the Christmas recess did produce some raised eyebrows for they were done by an Assistant Professor of History at Villanova, Dr. Alexander Rudhart.

Dr. Rudhart, as many of his students know, was born in Vienna, Austria, emigrating to the United States in 1953. He never had formal art training; his artistic talent is the result of his keen observation during his extensive travels in Europe, an inherent skill, and an eye for beauty, proportion and color.

He has been doing drawings and sketches for many years. They are mainly of architecture, which he finds particularly facinating, although he has occasionally sketched portraits. Recently, he has taken an active interest in sculpture.

Thanks Committee

The display in the library was relatively small, it is true, but Dr. Rudhart is sincerely appreciative to Rev. Daniel Falvey O.S.A. and Jerome Fisher, head of the exhibition committee for the opportunity of exhibiting his art work.

The display consisted of pen and brush sketches of European cathedrals, which, Dr. Rudhart believes, reflect the true aesthetic beauty of Gothic architecture. In addition there were excerpts from Sanscrit and Arabic texts, the Mede and Assyrian alphabets, and the two hundred and fourteen Chinese radicals.

Surprisingly, he is not concerned with these ancient languages linguistically but artistically. It is his opinion that these symbols have a unique decorative and ornamental beauty.

With the library showing as a modest beginning, Dr. Rudhart hopes eventually to display his work more extensively.

Partial to Architecture

Dr. Rudhart's artistic tastes are varied, but the facet of art which he considers most interesting is architecture, particularly the Gothic, which to him is the most aesthetic.

He saw much Gothic architecture in his European travels, and he was fascinated by it's unique combination of proportion, functional design and aesthetic beauty, which often makes the Gothic cathedral the architectural jewel of a European city.

Every one of its basic architectural elements, for example the pointed arch and the flying buttress, serves a technical purpose without sacrificing, its aesthetic appeal.

Rudhart hastens to add, however, that modern architecture is in no way deficient.

Wright Leads Trend

Frank Lloyd Wright and Saarinen of the United States, Oscar Niemeyer of Brazil, and LeCorbusier of France are the artistic geniuses Rudhart considers most responsible for the trend toward modern architecture.

Their creations, though often radical, are nevertheless functional. Niemeyer and LeCorbusier are best known for their radical abandonment of symmetry and rectangular patterns.

Just as he considers modern architecture worthwhile, so too Dr. Rudhart praises modern art. He warns, however, that modern art must not be confused with what is mistakenly called abstract "art."

Rudhart insists that abstract "art" does not seem to be art at all, for it does not meet the requirements which he has established. (1.) It must show above average technical skill, and (2.) it must appeal to the aesthetic senses.

No Technical Skill

It is his belief that most so-called abstract "art" requires little or no technical skill.

He theorizes that the development of abstraction in art in the late nineteenth century was influenced by the impact of photography.

Some artists broke away from an analytical reproduction of reality, which the camera could equal, to inject feeling and emotion into their creations. They wished to put on canvas something with no relation to the shapes and forms of reality and to try to portray the emotional experience of the artist.

"As long as that is the artist's true purpose and ambition," Rudhart said, "such abstract works can be labeled genuine, but unfortunately a great number of amateurs, not able to accomplish even simple reproduction, will pass as abstract artists and will sell their product to a gullible public which takes the judgment of the critic without question.

Real or Fake?

"Therefore it is difficult to draw the line between those who genuinely strive for new art forms, and those who are a hoax."

Using the work of the German abstractionist, Klee, as an example of sincere abstraction, Dr. Rudhart adds that "if these abstract creations are an accurate reflection of the artist's emotional and mental condition, then certainly he was emotionally and mentally a very sick man."

Not only does genuine abstract art mirror the soul of the artist but on a more general plane, culture reflects the age in which it is created.

Thus Rudhart thinks that abstract art "in general reflects the insecurity of our time; the confused, the torn, and the nervous features of abstract art are a true portrayal of our century."

Unlike some Europeans who display a certain cultural conceit, Dr. Rudhart is reassuring about the state of American culture. In upholding it, he says:

No Cultural Deficiency

"Although present day culture developments are usually the outgrowth of the cultural achievement of former centuries, many Europeans, as well as many Americans, often make the mistake of confusing cultural tradition with present day actual cultural accomplishments.

"Although there is evidently a great deal of cultural heritage in Europe, this in itself does not indicate a cultural superiority of Europe over America. In fact, in the present day, the opposite may be true in some respects."

He insists that America holds its own in all art forms, which will come as a surprise to many Americans who have developed a cultural inferiority complex.

Jazz, he emphasizes, is a wonderful art form which more than adequately expresses the nation's active, innovating character.

Beginning only with observation and undeveloped native skill, Dr. Rudhart has spent a great deal of time in successfully achieving a measure of perfection. Both in his ideas and in his creations, he displays an above average knowledge and understanding of art.

'Shook' By Attendance? Well, So Is Everybody

By BILL CHRISTY

Relax, men; that mysterious missive that you receive with your report card does not mean that Villanova has initiated unlimited cuts.

Also, for those few students who attend classes regularly, it does not mean that you will lose those extra quality points the new system has afforded you.

Since report cards came out two weeks ago, there have een a numbber of campus rumors concerning "that letter" and just what it was trying to say. As usual, all the rumors are wrong. The clear, concise letter included with every student's report can be easily interpreted after three hours contemplation, so the necessity of this article is questionable. But for those of you who do not have time for this method and do not want to fight the throngs that have accepted the invitation for a private explanation included with the letter, here is the inside story:

"Ibby" Was Confused

It seems that "Ibby," Villanova's favorite electronic brain was just as confused as everyone else when the new attendance system was introduced at the beginning of the Fall semester last year. He mistakenly interpreted the plan to mean that attendance grades included the earning of two credits toward graduation. (The author of the current university catalogue is suffering under the same misconception, so don't look there for an explanation.)

Ibby's mistake led him to incorrectly add two academic credits per semester to each student's "credits earned" total. His misconception was only strengthened by the complete confusion of the student body and most of the faculty as to just what attendance was worth and it was not until this semester that the mistake was recognized and corrected.

Because of the delay in correction etch student had, up to this semester, four extra credits. Attendance does not earn credits toward graduation, but it is given a value of two. This value is used in the compilation of the quality point average, but it is not added to the credits needed for graduation. The change made this semester consisted only in the correction of this mistake, not a change in the system.

So it becomes eminently clear, (whatever that means) that attendance affects only the student's quality point average. It can be aided if he achieves a high grade, (a rather rare phenomenon prevalant in the engineering school) or lowered if his mark is lower than his scholastic average. (This writer's particular problem.)

What'd He Say

The effect of this announcement on the student body has not yet been recorded, it has consisted thus far in puzzled questions among themselves or a dazed look of apathy. There are a few, however, who have been to the recorder for the promised private interview (average length—two hours). These can be seen roaming the campus wearing a look of self-satisfied superiority and carrying slide rules for use in their explanttions to less fortunate students. The seniors among these are not quite self satisfied, though and it is rumored that a demand is rising for an eight credit course in anything to be given for those depending on attendance credits to be graduated.

For those who have found this explanation insufficient or more confusing than the original letter, there are a number of courses open—the invitation for an explanation tt the recorder's office is still open. (Rumor has been aired and the lines are going down fast.) Or one can attend all his classes and hope for the best (considered by some a fate worse than death.)

The most popular route still remains—one can ignore attendance completely and try to convince his parents that the quality point average dosen't mean anything.

Military Obligation: Ways of Fulfillment

By FRANK DELANY
Feature Editor

This week we will explore the various ways of meeting the military service obligation as regards the United States Army.

All draftees of course will wind up in the army for two years active duty, two years in the ready reserve and a final two years in the standby reserve to fill out the six-year obligation. The tour of duty will be served normally as a private and the draftee will merely take his chances as regards the type of duty, which will depend on the needs of the service. The chances of a draftee for obtaining a commission will be taken up later.

One might choose to enlist in the army before being drafted. Enlistments are for three, four, five or six years of active duty. The great advantage in enistiling in the army is that the enlistee has his choice of field and area of duty and the various army schools. Of course a six-year enlistee has the best chance of getting exactly what he wants.

Duty In The National Guard

Another choice might be to enlist in the National Guard or an army reserve unit. The army reserve enlistment has three advantages. Unlike a regular enlistment the active duty period is only two years through a reserve organization. In addition, active duty may be deferred for one hundred and twenty days after enlistment and the recruit has his choice of duty from three broad categories.

The National Guard, being a state institution, varies from state to state. In Pennsylvania, it means an initial six months of active duty training and an entire obligation of eight years.

Many college seniors look forward fuzzily to getting a commission without too much trouble due to their college education. But the situation in the army as regards the availability of commissions is not reassuring. The vast majority of the army officers come from the service academies or the army ROTC program. The army is currently finding even this source capable of providing more than it needs.

The Hazards Of OCS

The small remainder of army officers come from the army Officers' Candidate Svhool. Entry into OCS is highly selective. All army inductees, from whatever source, are given tests. Those who pass these tests with a sufficiently high score are eligible to take the test for OCS. And those who pass this test with a sufficiently high score are then eligible for OCS. Whether and when they are called depends on the needs of the army. In the meantime, the inductee is a private.

Further information or an elaboration of any of the programs sketched here can be obtained by calling the army recruiting headquarters at HO-2-8785 or at LO-7-3556. Those interested in army nursing should contact Captain Winnifred Craig, Army Nurse Corps, at the latter number.

The parent National Guard, twenty-eighth infantry division, unit in the area is at Broad and Wharton streets in Philadelphia and the number is HO-7-1807.

What — ME Cheat?

By FRANK McCORMICK

Smacking his lips in anticipation, John Honest anxiously turns to the first page of his exam. Careful attention for the whole semester, reams of diligently taken notes, plus long hours of concentrated study are about to pay off in a near ace. He glances quickly down the page and then a look of panic sweeps across his face. "What's this stuff? I must be in the wrong class or something." A moment later he comes to the realization that the questions deal with a section that for one one reason or another just didn't happen to be covered by his instructor. "Oh well, that's the breaks."

On the next sheet he finds a number of intricately detailed queries. Faintly the words of Professor Snowjob echo in his brain. "Don't worry about this chapter, boys, it's not important."

On the final page comes the clincher, an essay question. "Using his exact words, state what so-and-so had to say about such-and such." Vaguely he wonders why, out of the two hundred odd so-and-sos that said such-and-such about something or another, he should be expected to remember this one.

Abandon Ship!

Gradually John begins to feel the impact. Ten hours of slavery and sweat immediately preceeding the exam have gone for nought. His ship is sinking fast.

Puzzling over his perplexity John's eyes wander around the room. His gaze happens to fall upon Bob Alwayscheat, whose gaze is falling upon Rich Sneakanswer, whose gaze is falling upon Jim Greatpony, whose gaze is falling upon the thin slip of paper neatly concealed under his arm. Weakly he begins to rationalize. "Isn't your mark supposed to be a fair evaluation of your knowledge of the subject as taught by your instructor? Clearly this test is a poor, if not a completely unjust attempt to discover this. Why this isn't an exam; it's a conspiracy against the soul of a Christian gentleman." Surely there must be some way to neutralize at least partly this vagrant assault upon the student's rights. The simplicity of the solution suddenly becomes overpoweringly obvious. CHEAT.

Viewing this situation in such a light, the student might even consider himself a crusader for fair play, an idealist endeavoring in some small way to right the scales of justice that have been stacked against him. Two wrongs don't make a right, of course, but sometimes they sure seem to help.

Needless to say the school takes a dim view of such self-styled heroics. You might even say they emphatically discourage it. Six months on the outside looking in is the penalty for apprehension and conviction.

Everybody's Problem

Seriously, this is a problem which faces all of us almost every day. The evils inherent in cheating are obvious to everyone. It is just another form of stealing and lying, and, if a large grant or honor is affected, it could become mortally sinful. An uncomfortable fact revealed by a cursory survey here at Villanova is that nearly all students regard cheating as sinful, many students do it, and nearly all students think that everyone else does it to some extent. This is a pretty sad reflection upon the moral tone of a university dedicated to deals of truth and honor.

A saving factor to their credit, however, was that all professed an intense dislike for cheating and said they did it "only to survive." Furthermore, most of them expressed a definite preference for the "honor system" providing the teachers would make a distinct effort to be scrupulously fair in their tests. Could this be the answer?

Re-adjustment of Values

The honor system, however, can be a rather complex affair with many facets as to just what does and does not constitute cheating. Also, its adoption by a school is especially difficult because the students must adjust themselves to a complete reversal of many of their notions about honesty. Not until a vast majority of them are prepared to co-operate fully could such a program work effectively.

The question is, could Villanova—students, faculty, and administration—accomplish the change to the honor system. The only alternative is continued existence under the present policy with its obvious injustices to everyone.

Initiation of Grad School Marks Villanova's Advance

By JOHN KENNEDY
Feature Editor

Villanova's academic growth has recently been proved more than equal to its physical expansion. The initiation of a new, part-time Graduate School — the first Catholic graduate school in this area —marks another advance in Villanova's attempts to meet the increasing and specialized demands on its facilities.

Enrollment Figures Cited

According to the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., dean of the Graduate Division, there are currently 255 students enrolled in the program. During the summer this number will rise to approximately 450. June, 1957 saw the awarding of the master's degree to twenty-four candidates.

The areas in which graduate work is offered bears ready witness to this latter fact. Applied Statistics and Statistical Quality Control are offered under the direction of Mr. Emil Amelotti; Biology, by Dr. John A. McClain. Among the other areas in which the graduate student may labor, together with various department chairmen are: Chemical Engineering, Dr. Robert E. White; Classical Languages, Dr. John I. McEnerny; Education, Mr. George Harris; English, Dr. Charles W. Bernardin.

Also: History, Dr. Harold F. Hartman; Library Science, the Rev. Daniel P. Falvey; Mathematics, Mr. Emil Amelotti; Philosophy, the Rev. Robert P. Russell, O.S.A.; Religion, the Rev. Robert E. Regan; Romance Languages, Mr. Wilson L. Frescoln.

Enter Theatre Arts

The scope of the Graduate School has widened still more with the recent announcement of a graduate program in theatre leading to the degree of the Master of Arts. Under the direction of Mr. Richard Duprey, this newest field on the graduate level has not yet been organized into a full fledged department.

'Blue Denim' — Like Oil and Water

By BILL GALLAGHER

When a person sees a tryout play in Philadelphia (Boston, New Haven, or Washington) he can expect to see only a rough representation of the one that will open on Broadway. There are occasional productions (this season's "West Side Story") that require little revision. "Blue Denim" a new play being staged and supervised by Joshua Logan, and which is running at the Locust in Philadelphia through this week, could not be categorized as such, for there are many flaws to be corrected both in theme and writing.

The plot deals with the lack of father-son communication and the complications that arise when the son attempts to find his own way out of serious difficult. This difficulty stems from the son's rash romance with his pretty fifteen year old neighbor who is the only one that tries to understand him. "I want to be something special," he tells her. Something special he almost becomes—a father —but an illegal operation is performed; and, if that isn't enough, it is paid for a check that the son has his pal forge in his father's name.

Drama, Comedy Don't Mix

The play falls under the category of drama but judging from the number of gusty laughs that greeted it on its Monday night, February 10, debut at the Locust, one could justly say the authors have presented it in a comic manner that is not in good taste. In their attempt to present this theme in a lighter vein, the authors appear, at times, to have displayed an inappropriate approach. Much of the second act writing needs to be drawn into focus; as it stands, like oil and water, the drama and comedy do not mix. This leads to a feeling of incongruity, which is quite discernible.

In seeking to update a familiar problem play, authors James Herlihy and William Noble exaggerate incidents in an attempt to make them appear fresh. In the first act they have made a cartoon of two sixteen year old boys who sneak a bottle of beer and smoke cigarettes they have concealed in their socks. While the boys have some hilariously funny lines, the scene is blown out of porportion. Later, the adolescent's older sister comes home from a date with a black eye, and the incidents and dialogue that follow are likewise exaggerated.

Baseball and Forgery

Also, the authors in their attempt to portray the Bartleys as an average American family, do not sufficiently prepare the audience for the shocking events that follow. One moment the father is talking of the Detroit Tigers, the next he is violent about the forged check.

As the father, Chester Morris is perfect. Burt Berckerhoff as the son and Wayne Berlinger as his sidekick, show enough ability to rate them as promising new talents. However, Carol Lynley as the young girl is not completely convincing, especially when she has to show sudden emotional changes (lamenting for a lost dog or describing her father who cries when he sees her wearing lipstick).

The setting by Peter Larkin is extraordinary and Mr. Logan's direction appears to be all it should. If the authors can make necessary script revisions, "Blue Denim" could become an interesting drama. As it stands it doesn't know where to stop laughing and begin crying.

The Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee O.S.A. (left), Provincial of the Eastern Province congratulates Rev. Joseph I. Boyle O.S.A., on his appointment as Executive Director of the Augustinian Educational Association.

Father J. Boyle Appointed Education Assn. Director

The Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., University Vice President for Academic Affairs, has been appointed Executive Director of the newly formed Augustinian Educational Association.

Father Boyle is a past president of the Catholic Education Association of Pennsylvania.

All secondary schools, colleges, seminaries and universities conducted by the religious order of St. Augustine in the United States and Cuba assumed membership this week in the association. It was established to increase efficiency in the educational activities of the Augustinian teaching program and to encourage the promotion of scholarship and research.

The new association includes institutions from ten states and Cuba.

National Headquarters

Villanova, one of the largest institutions conducted by the Augustinians will serve as national headquarters.

One of the oldest religious teaching orders in the Catholic Church, Augustinians have been active in the field of education in this country for nearly one hundred fifty years.

They trace their lineage to St. Augustine's Academy, opened in Philadelphia in 1811

Increased Interest

Noting the increased interest in education, Father Boyle said that, "The association hopes to study ways to join more closely the education work on the high school and college levels, to integrate courses of study at both levels and to insure the best possible liberal and scientific development of the gifted as well as the average student."

Monsignor Bonner High School, Upper Darby, Pa.; Augustinian Academy, Staten Island, N.Y.; Carroll High School, Washington, D.C.; Mendel High School, Chicago; Austin High School, Detroit; Cascia Hall Preparatory School, Tulsa, Okla.; St. Patrick's High School, San Diego, Cal.; and Merrimac College, Andover, Mass. are among the twenty institutions enrolled as members.

To Decide Policy

A board of Governors headed by the Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., Provincial of the Easteren Province of the Augustinian Order and Rev. John Seary, O.S.A., Provincial of the Midwest Province, will decide policy for the new organization.

The association will be divided into four sections with a director for Higher Education and a Director of Secondary Educatios in each division.

The Group's first meeting will be held during the month of April.

O'Kane Slates IRS Yearly Trip

Peter J. O'Kane, president of the International Relations Society, has announced that plans are nearly completed for the organization's annual trip to Washington.

Society Moderator, Dr. Fritz Nova, Associate Professor of History, said that a tour of the State Department and a lecture by a Foreign Service Department officer will be the main features of the tour.

O'Kane also announced that Clint Chin, a sophomore member of the IRS, has recently been elected vice president of the Pa. Association of International Relations Club.

Nine Named to Honorary Arts and Science Society

This year's selections for Beta Chi, Villanova's chapter of Delta Epsilon Sigma, National Catholic Honorary Arts and Sciences Society, were announced Monday by Reverand Robert M. Sullivan O.S.A., Dean of the Arts and Science Department.

Nine seniors out of an original group of twenty were included by the Faculty Selections Committee.

The students were:

John Capelli
(Pre-Medicine)
John Goodyear
(General Arts)
Richard Hamburger
(Pre-Medicine)
Joseph Keegan
(Philosophy)
Joseph Kinney
(English)
Gregory Lignelli
(Pre-Medicine)
Martin Rosche
(General Arts)
Anthony Silvestri
(Chemistry)
John Solarski
(Physics)

Last October the original twenty names were proposed. The requirements for consideration were that the senior have an accumulative average of 3.00 and no flunks during his six previous semesters at Villanova.

Written Criticism

Each student was required to submit a criticism of "Frontiers in American Catholicism" by the Rev. Walter J. Ong, S.J. for review by the Faculty Selection Committee.

The purpose of the society is to honor, by national recognition, those Arts students who have distinguished themselves by their academic achievements.

The chosen students are reminded that a fee of $15 must be into Father Sullivan's office by February 28th in order that they be enrolled in the Society and receive Gold Keys signifying the honor.

Faculty Committee

The Selection Committe was composed of the following faculty members: Father Sullivan, Rev. Joseph E. Boyle, O.S.A., Vice President of Academic Affairs; Rev. Edward Jenkins, O.S.A., Professor of Chemistry; Rev. John McShea, O.S.A., Associate Professor of English: also Dr. John McClain, Chairman of the Biology Department; Dr. John McEnerny, Assistant to the Vice President of Academic Affairs; and Eugene Ruane, Director of Public Information.

Accounting Society Sets Next Meeting

Fran Grey, vice president of the Accounting society, has announced that the organization's next monthly meeting will be held next Thursday.

Grey, elected vice president of the society in elections held last Spring, is the presiding officer in the absence of president Al Jacobs. Jacobs, a senior accounting major, has failed to attend the majority of the meetings.

Accountant Due

A representative from a public accounting firm will discuss various problems connected with the field, at the next meeting, Grey announced.

Nominations for new officers will be made during the second meeting in April, and results are to be announced at the society's annual dinner-dance, planned for April 12.

Social Affair

Lou Minotti, dinner-dance chairman, has disclosed that the social affair will be at the Falcon House in Delaware County. The tickets are priced at $10.

Minotti emphasized that reservations should be made soon because of various difficulties connected with the planning of such a large affair.

Beta Gamma Records 52 Victories In Past Season

Beta Gamma Debating Society has completed the most successful semester of its history. Under the direction of Mr. Richard McDonough, member of the Speech Department, the society compiled a record of 52 wins and 19 losses.

Included among the various activities and tournaments were the registering of a second place at the Brown University Invitational Tournament, and a first place at the Swarthmore Invitational. The Brown Tournament saw the Villanova team compile an 8-2 record. Debaters for this tournament included Bob O' Conner, Frank Cunningham, Oz Scogna, and Burt Gratz. At Swathmore, Beta Gamma's team was undefeated in six debates.

Toronto Hosted

An international touch was added to the program of the society when in the early part of December, Villanova played host to the University of Toronto. Approximately 100 spectators were in attendance at this debate which saw Jack Serafin and Jim Corey very adequately represent the Villanova squad.

Novice members of the society engaged in the bulk of activity during the semester. The main activity of the novices, under Vice President Jack Serafin, was the Temple circuit.

Novice Post 11-5 Mark

In this competition, novice members debated eight local schools and finished second in the overall standings of the circuit. Three other novice tournaments were also held. Three including the N.F.C.C.S. tournament where an 11-5 mark was posted.

President Bob O'Conner announced that the coming semester would include tournaments at City College of New York, Hofstra College, Kings College, and the West Point Elemination Tournament which is a national event.

New Debaters invited

O'Conner emphasized that any persons who are interested in joining the society would be assured of gaining debating experience on the intercolligate level. Meetings of the society are held each Thurs. morning at 10:30 in room 104 Vasey Hall.

All Villanova students have received an invitation to hear a Holy Name Field Mass Sunday, May 18, at Scott High School Football Field in Coatesville Pa.

Scott Field is located on Route 30, Lancaster Pike approximately 40 minutes drive west of Villanova.

Villanova students keep time to the dreamy music of Richard Maltby and his band at the Belle Air Ball which was held last Friday evening in the Field House. The dance featured an innovation at Villanova in that Maltby and his band were placed in the balcony and on a stage extending from it. The function was the initial activity in the traditional Senior week-end.

T'n'T Pushes Drive For New Members

Turf 'n' Tinsel is pushing a drive to acquire new members among the underclassmen, as the society prepares for its annual all-male cast musical to be presented April 23 through 27.

Publicity chairman Frank Bonner also announced that the sale of patrons and ads for the program will start this week.

President Gerry Golbright has appointed Tom Collins chairman of the business committee; John Lyons ticket chairman; Joe Timko, advertising chairman.

Unlike a regular enlistment the active duty period is only two years through a reserve organization. In addition, active duty may be deferred for one hundred and twenty days after enlistment and the recruit has his choice of duty from three broad categories.

The National Guard, being a state institution, varies from state to state. In Pennsylvania, it means an initial six months of active duty training and an entire obligation of eight years.

Many college seniors look forward fuzzily to getting a commission without too much trouble due to their college education. But the situation in the army as regards the availability of commissions is not reassuring. The vast majority of the army officers come from the service academies or the army ROTC program. The army is currently finding even this source capable of providing more than it needs.

The Hazards Of OCS

The small remainder of army officers come from the army Officers' Candidate Svhool. Entry into OCS is highly selective. All army inductees, from whatever source, are given tests. Those who pass these tests with a sufficiently high score are eligible to take the test for OCS. And those who pass this test with a sufficiently high score are then eligible for OCS. Whether and when they are called depends on the needs of the army. In the meantime, the inductee is a private.

Further information or an elaboration of any of the programs sketched here can be obtained by calling the army recruiting headquarters at HO-2-8785 or at LO-7-3556. Those interested in army nursing should contact Captain Winnifred Craig, Army Nurse Corps, at the latter number.

The parent National Guard, twenty-eighth infantry division, unit in the area is at Broad and Wharton streets in Philadelphia and the number is HO-7-1807.

Initiation of Grad School Marks Villanova's Advance

By JOHN KENNEDY
Feature Editor

Villanova's academic growth has recently been proved more than equal to its physical expansion. The initiation of a new, part-time Graduate School — the first Catholic graduate school in this area —marks another advance in Villanova's attempts to meet the increasing and specialized demands on its facilities.

Enrollment Figures Cited

According to the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., dean of the Graduate Division, there are currently 255 students enrolled in the program. During the summer this number will rise to approximately 450. June, 1957 saw the awarding of the master's degree to twenty-four candidates.

The areas in which graduate work is offered bears ready witness to this latter fact. Applied Statistics and Statistical Quality Control are offered under the direction of Mr. Emil Amelotti; Biology, by Dr. John A. McClain. Among the other areas in which the graduate student may labor, together with various department chairmen are: Chemical Engineering, Dr. Robert E. White; Classical Languages, Dr. John I. McEnerny; Education, Mr. George Harris; English, Dr. Charles W. Bernardin.

Also: History, Dr. Harold F. Hartman; Library Science, the Rev. Daniel P. Falvey; Mathematics, Mr. Emil Amelotti; Philosophy, the Rev. Robert P. Russell, O.S.A.; Religion, the Rev. Robert E. Regan; Romance Languages, Mr. Wilson L. Frescoln.

Enter Theatre Arts

The scope of the Graduate School has widened still more with the recent announcement of a graduate program in theatre leading to the degree of the Master of Arts. Under the direction of Mr. Richard Duprey, this newest field on the graduate level has not yet been organized into a full fledged department.

What — ME Cheat?

By FRANK McCORMICK

Smacking his lips in anticipation, John Honest anxiously turns to the first page of his exam. Careful attention for the whole semester, reams of diligently taken notes, plus long hours of concentrated study are about to pay off in a near ace. He glances quickly down the page and then a look of panic sweeps across his face. "What's this stuff? I must be in the wrong class or something." A moment later he comes to the realization that the questions deal with a section that for one one reason or another just didn't happen to be covered by his instructor. "Oh well, that's the breaks."

On the next sheet he finds a number of intricately detailed queries. Faintly the words of Professor Snowjob echo in his brain. "Don't worry about this chapter, boys, it's not important."

On the final page comes the clincher, an essay question. "Using his exact words, state what so-and-so had to say about such-and such." Vaguely he wonders why, out of the two hundred odd so-and-sos that said such-and-such about something or another, he should be expected to remember this one.

Abandon Ship!

Gradually John begins to feel the impact. Ten hours of slavery and sweat immediately preceeding the exam have gone for nought. His ship is sinking fast.

Puzzling over his perplexity John's eyes wander around the room. His gaze happens to fall upon Bob Alwayscheat, whose gaze is falling upon Rich Sneakanswer, whose gaze is falling upon Jim Greatpony, whose gaze is falling upon the thin slip of paper neatly concealed under his arm. Weakly he begins to rationalize. "Isn't your mark supposed to be a fair evaluation of your knowledge of the subject as taught by your instructor? Clearly this test is a poor, if not a completely unjust attempt to discover this. Why this isn't an exam; it's a conspiracy against the soul of a Christian gentleman." Surely there must be some way to neutralize at least partly this vagrant assault upon the student's rights. The simplicity of the solution suddenly becomes overpoweringly obvious. CHEAT.

Viewing this situation in such a light, the student might even consider himself a crusader for fair play, an idealist endeavoring in some small way to right the scales of justice that have been stacked against him. Two wrongs don't make a right, of course, but sometimes they sure seem to help.

Needless to say the school takes a dim view of such self-styled heroics. You might even say they emphatically discourage it. Six months on the outside looking in is the penalty for apprehension and conviction.

Everybody's Problem

Seriously, this is a problem which faces all of us almost every day. The evils inherent in cheating are obvious to everyone. It is just another form of stealing and lying, and, if a large grant or honor is affected, it could become mortally sinful. An uncomfortable fact revealed by a cursory survey here at Villanova is that nearly all students regard cheating as sinful, many students do it, and nearly all students think that everyone else does it to some extent. This is a pretty sad reflection upon the moral tone of a university dedicated to deals of truth and honor.

A saving factor to their credit, however, was that all professed an intense dislike for cheating and said they did it "only to survive." Furthermore, most of them expressed a definite preference for the "honor system" providing the teachers would make a distinct effort to be scrupulously fair in their tests. Could this be the answer?

Re-adjustment of Values

The honor system, however, can be a rather complex affair with many facets as to just what does and does not constitute cheating. Also, its adoption by a school is especially difficult because the students must adjust themselves to a complete reversal of many of their notions about honesty. Not until a vast majority of them are prepared to co-operate fully could such a program work effectively.

The question is, could Villanova—students, faculty, and administration—accomplish the change to the honor system. The only alternative is continued existence under the present policy with its obvious injustices to everyone.

'Blue Denim' — Like Oil and Water

By BILL GALLAGHER

When a person sees a tryout play in Philadelphia (Boston, New Haven, or Washington) he can expect to see only a rough representation of the one that will open on Broadway. There are occasional productions (this season's "West Side Story") that require little revision. "Blue Denim" a new play being staged and supervised by Joshua Logan, and which is running at the Locust in Philadelphia through this week, could not be categorized as such, for there are many flaws to be corrected both in theme and writing.

The plot deals with the lack of father-son communication and the complications that arise when the son attempts to find his own way out of serious difficult. This difficulty stems from the son's rash romance with his pretty fifteen year old neighbor who is the only one that tries to understand him. "I want to be something special," he tells her. Something special he almost becomes—a father —but an illegal operation is performed; and, if that isn't enough, it is paid for a check that the son has his pal forge in his father's name.

Drama, Comedy Don't Mix

The play falls under the category of drama but judging from the number of gusty laughs that greeted it on its Monday night, February 10, debut at the Locust, one could justly say the authors have presented it in a comic manner that is not in good taste. In their attempt to present this theme in a lighter vein, the authors appear, at times, to have displayed an inappropriate approach. Much of the second act writing needs to be drawn into focus; as it stands, like oil and water, the drama and comedy do not mix. This leads to a feeling of incongruity, which is quite discernible.

In seeking to update a familiar problem play, authors James Herlihy and William Noble exaggerate incidents in an attempt to make them appear fresh. In the first act they have made a cartoon of two sixteen year old boys who sneak a bottle of beer and smoke cigarettes they have concealed in their socks. While the boys have some hilariously funny lines, the scene is blown out of porportion. Later, the adolescent's older sister comes home from a date with a black eye, and the incidents and dialogue that follow are likewise exaggerated.

Baseball and Forgery

Also, the authors in their attempt to portray the Bartleys as an average American family, do not sufficiently prepare the audience for the shocking events that follow. One moment the father is talking of the Detroit Tigers, the next he is violent about the forged check.

As the father, Chester Morris is perfect. Burt Berckerhoff as the son and Wayne Berlinger as his sidekick, show enough ability to rate them as promising new talents. However, Carol Lynley as the young girl is not completely convincing, especially when she has to show sudden emotional changes (lamenting for a lost dog or describing her father who cries when he sees her wearing lipstick).

The setting by Peter Larkin is extraordinary and Mr. Logan's direction appears to be all it should. If the authors can make necessary script revisions, "Blue Denim" could become an interesting drama. As it stands it doesn't know where to stop laughing and begin crying.

The Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee O.S.A. (left), Provincial of the Eastern Province congratulates Rev. Joseph I. Boyle O.S.A., on his appointment as Executive Director of the Augustinian Educational Association.

Father J. Boyle Appointed Education Assn. Director

The Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., University Vice President for Academic Affairs, has been appointed Executive Director of the newly formed Augustinian Educational Association.

Father Boyle is a past president of the Catholic Education Association of Pennsylvania.

All secondary schools, colleges, seminaries and universities conducted by the religious order of St. Augustine in the United States and Cuba assumed membership this week in the association. It was established to increase efficiency in the educational activities of the Augustinian teaching program and to encourage the promotion of scholarship and research.

The new association includes institutions from ten states and Cuba.

National Headquarters

Villanova, one of the largest institutions conducted by the Augustinians will serve as national headquarters.

One of the oldest religious teaching orders in the Catholic Church, Augustinians have been active in the field of education in this country for nearly one hundred fifty years.

They trace their lineage to St. Augustine's Academy, opened in Philadelphia in 1811

Increased Interest

Noting the increased interest in education, Father Boyle said that, "The association hopes to study ways to join more closely the education work on the high school and college levels, to integrate courses of study at both levels and to insure the best possible liberal and scientific development of the gifted as well as the average student."

Monsignor Bonner High School, Upper Darby, Pa.; Augustinian Academy, Staten Island, N.Y.; Carroll High School, Washington, D.C.; Mendel High School, Chicago; Austin High School, Detroit; Cascia Hall Preparatory School, Tulsa, Okla.; St. Patrick's High School, San Diego, Cal.; and Merrimac College, Andover, Mass. are among the twenty institutions enrolled as members.

To Decide Policy

A board of Governors headed by the Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., Provincial of the Easteren Province of the Augustinian Order and Rev. John Seary, O.S.A., Provincial of the Midwest Province, will decide policy for the new organization.

The association will be divided into four sections with a director for Higher Education and a Director of Secondary Educatios in each division.

The Group's first meeting will be held during the month of April.

O'Kane Slates IRS Yearly Trip

Peter J. O'Kane, president of the International Relations Society, has announced that plans are nearly completed for the organization's annual trip to Washington.

Society Moderator, Dr. Fritz Nova, Associate Professor of History, said that a tour of the State Department and a lecture by a Foreign Service Department officer will be the main features of the tour.

O'Kane also announced that Clint Chin, a sophomore member of the IRS, has recently been elected vice president of the Pa. Association of International Relations Club.

Nine Named to Honorary Arts and Science Society

This year's selections for Beta Chi, Villanova's chapter of Delta Epsilon Sigma, National Catholic Honorary Arts and Sciences Society, were announced Monday by Reverand Robert M. Sullivan O.S.A., Dean of the Arts and Science Department.

Nine seniors out of an original group of twenty were included by the Faculty Selections Committee.

The students were:

John Capelli
(Pre-Medicine)
John Goodyear
(General Arts)
Richard Hamburger
(Pre-Medicine)
Joseph Keegan
(Philosophy)
Joseph Kinney
(English)
Gregory Lignelli
(Pre-Medicine)
Martin Roache
(General Arts)
Anthony Silvestri
(Chemistry)
John Solarski
(Physics)

Last October the original twenty names were proposed. The requirements for consideration were that the senior have an accumulative average of 3.00 and no flunks during his six previous semesters at Villanova.

Written Criticism

Each student was required to submit a criticism of "Frontiers in American Catholicism" by the Rev. Walter J. Ong, S.J. for review by the Faculty Selection Committee.

The purpose of the society is to honor, by national recognition, those Arts students who have distinguished themselves by their academic achievements.

The chosen students are reminded that a fee of $15 must be into Father Sullivan's office by February 28th in order that they be enrolled in the Society and receive Gold Keys signifying the honor.

Faculty Committee

The Selection Committe was composed of the following faculty members: Father Sullivan, Rev. Joseph E. Boyle, O.S.A., Vice President of Academic Affairs; Rev. Edward Jenkins, O.S.A., Professor of Chemistry; Rev. John McShea, O.S.A., Associate Professor of English; also Dr. John McClain, Chairman of the Biology Department; Dr. John McEnerny, Assistant to the Vice President of Academic Affairs; and Eugene Ruane, Director of Public Information.

All Villanova students have received an invitation to hear a Holy Name Field Mass Sunday, May 18, at Scott High School Football Field in Coatesville Pa.

Scott Field is located on Route 30, Lancaster Pike approximately 40 minutes drive west of Villanova.

Accounting Society Sets Next Meeting

Fran Grey, vice president of the Accounting society, has announced that the organization's next monthly meeting will be held next Thursday.

Grey, elected vice president of the society in elections held last Spring, is the presiding officer in the absence of president Al Jacobs. Jacobs, a senior accounting major, has failed to attend the majority of the meetings.

Accountant Due

A representative from a public accounting firm will discuss various problems connected with the field, at the next meeting, Grey announced.

Nominations for new officers will be made during the second meeting in April, and results are to be announced at the society's annual dinner-dance, planned for April 12.

Social Affair

Lou Minotti, dinner-dance chairman, has disclosed that the social affair will be at the Falcon House in Delaware County. The tickets are priced at $10.

Minotti emphasized that reservations should be made soon because of various difficulties connected with the planning of such a large affair.

Beta Gamma Records 52 Victories In Past Season

Beta Gamma Debating Society has completed the most successful semester of its history. Under the direction of Mr. Richard McDonough, member of the Speech Department, the society compiled a record of 52 wins and 19 losses.

Included among the various activities and tournaments were the registering of a second place at the Brown University Invitational Tournament, and a first place at the Swarthmore Invitational. The Brown Tournament saw the Villanova team compile an 8-2 record. Debaters for this tournament included Bob O' Conner, Frank Cunningham, Oz Scogna, and Burt Gratz. At Swathmore, Beta Gamma's team was undefeated in six debates.

Toronto Hosted

An international touch was added to the program of the society when in the early part of December, Villanova played host to the University of Toronto. Approximately 100 spectators were in attendance at this debate which saw Jack Serafin and Jim Corey very adequately represent the Villanova squad.

Novice members of the society engaged in the bulk of activity during the semester. The main activity of the novices, under Vice President Jack Serafin, was the Temple circuit.

Novice Post 11-5 Mark

In this competition, novice members debated eight local schools and finished second in the overall standings of the circuit. Three other novice tournaments were also held. Three including the N.F.C.C.S. tournament where an 11-5 mark was posted.

President Bob O'Conner announced that the coming semester would include tournaments at City College of New York, Hofstra College, Kings College, and the West Point Elemination Tournament which is a national event.

New Debaters Invited

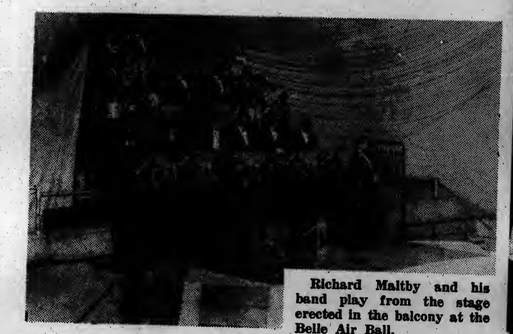
O'Conner emphasized that any persons who are interested in joining the society would be assured of gaining debating experience on the intercolligate level. Meetings of the society are held each Thurs. morning at 10:30 in room 104 Vasey Hall.

Villanova students keep time to the dreamy music of Richard Maltby and his band at the Belle Air Ball which was held last Friday evening in the Field House. The dance featured an innovation at Villanova in that Maltby and his band were placed in the balcony and on a stage extending from it. The function was the initial activity in the traditional Senior week-end.

T'n'T Pushes Drive For New Members

Turf 'n' Tinsel is pushing a drive to acquire new members among the underclassmen, as the society prepares for its annual all-male cast musical to be presented April 23 through 27.

Publicity chairman Frank Bonner also announced that the sale of patrons and ads for the program will start this week.



President Gerry Golbright has appointed Tom Collins chairman of the business committee; John Lyons ticket chairman; Joe Timko, advertising chairman.

Jane Jowett, queen of the Belle Air Ball, pose with her date, electrical engineer Frank Kelly.

The lovely queen and her court accept flowers at intermission time during the prom.

Richard Maltby and his band play from the stage erected in the balcony at the Belle Air Ball.

KINNEY'S KAPERS

Srs. Descend from Clouds, Realize Honeymoon's Over

By JOE KINNEY

The honeymoon is over! At least, for a large majority of the Senior Class. After descending from the "clouds" early last Sunday morning with the completion of that "big weekend," Villanova's oldest sons realized that they were now standing at the crossroads of their college career.

The fun was over and now their work was cut out for them. Monday on the second floor of Dougherty Hall was the final blow. Interviews, conducted by the Placement Office, were already underway and, with graduation less than four months hence, a group of well-dressed seniors were taking advantage of the urgency of the situation.

With the disastrous stream of unemployment mounting throughout the country, these "leaders of the future" were well aware of their obligation to get a job, any kind of a job, just as long as it paid a miminum of $8,000 per and included all the usual "extras" such as 30 days annual leave, retirement at 45and other enticing fringe benefits.

One senior, who was more interested in mentally preparing himself for his interview than observing the presence of yours truly, nervously jerked his tie, straightened his shirt collar and swallowed hardly several times within the few minutes that I remained in the hallway.

Although I don't pretend to be a mindreader, it didn't take me long to estimate the nature of his thoughts . . . . . "I really need this job . . . pays good dough . . . close to home . . . new office . . . great chance for advancement . . . and even more dough . . . might even be a manager or, who knows, maybe even a vice-president some day . . . and then I'd make all kinds of dough . . . I wonder what that guy in there's like . . . . I got good enough grades so why should I worry? . . . haven't been in too many extra-curricular activities, though . . . but maybe he won't care . . . what good will they do anyway at his company . . . hope he's not the kind of guy who likes a BMOC . . . I got a lotta good references . . . couldn't get a much better reference than the Head of the Department himself . . . although some guys probably asked the Dean . . . gee, if I could see what kind of a guy he was . . . . uh, uh, ... here he comes, I think."

Just about this time, a middle-aged, fair complected man wearing an ordinary blue suit, matching tie, and starched white shirt opened the door upon which our anxious friend had been peering for the past ten minutes.

After shaking the hand of a senior who has his anxiety relieved by conversing with the interviewer and exchanging goodbyes, the "mysterious" gentleman turned to the hopeful tie-jerker and told him he would be glad to talk with him . . . after lunch!

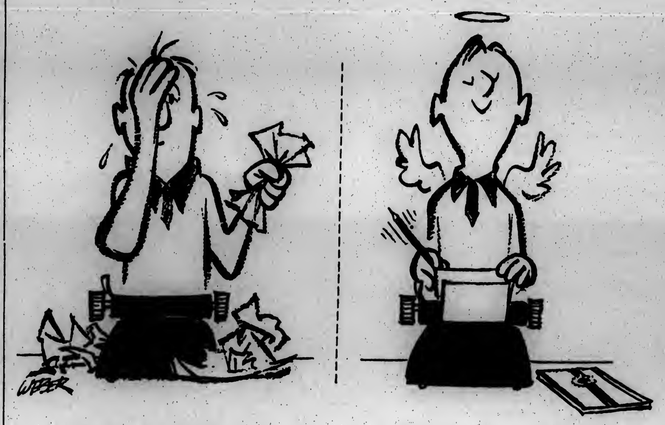
que feature, that dealing with play direction. Any graduate students specializing in this field will be expected to direct at least one full length play, in some high school, junior college or community theater group in the area.

Normal class work for a degree under the Villanova system will run for two semesters and a summer. However, students can work for a degree under the standard four or five summer semester plan.

Directs Belle Masque

Duprey has headed the Belle Masque Dramatic Society at Villanova since becoming a member of the faculty in the fall semester of 1956. He has directed three of the society's plays to date, and is presently working on a fourth, "The Taming of the Shrew," to be presented this spring.

His last production, George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," given last fall, was a marked innovation in theater presetations by the university, being acted "in the round."



Further information on the new graduate division can be gotten by contacting the Rev. Louis A. Rongione O.S.A., Dean of the graduate school, Villanova.

Lucky Strike Sponsors WVIL News Broadcasts

WVIL's news programs have in recent years been supplied with information through facilities of the United Press.

The popular campus radio station used a United Press teletype supplied by the College Radio Corporation through the sponsorship of the American Tobacco Company, the manufacturers of Lucky Strike cigarettes.

Lucky Strike Sponsor

In return for the use of this machine WVIL broadcasts news and sports with Lucky Strikes as sponsor. The Lucky Strike news is heard from 8 to 8:15 p. m. and the Lucky Strike sports from 10 to 10:15 p. m. Sunday through Fridays.

The Eastern Circuit of the United Press supplies all information to the teletype machine. The teletype is in use six hours a day for six days a week presenting the latest in national, foreign, and local news. Up to the minute sports results, weather forecasts, stock exchange reports and even various almanac features are also supplied.

This teletype was first acquired by WVIL in November of 1955. Lucky Strike has sponsored the news and sports since then. The written and recorded commercials that are aired during the news and sports presentations are composed by the American Tobacco Company and sent to WVIL quaterly.

Reconditioned Each Summer

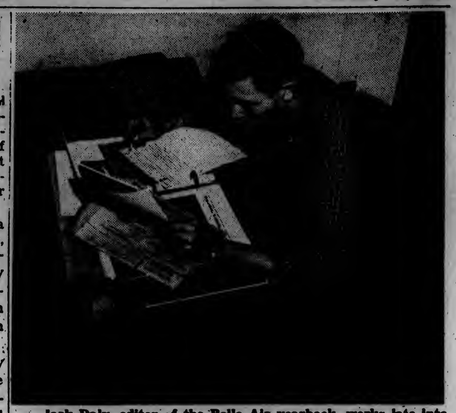
Each summer the teletype is reconditioned and overhauled so that at all times there will be complete coverage of the news.

Through the College Radio Corporation and Lucky Strike cigarettes WVIL is able to bring to the campus the latest and most complete in current and human events.

French Club Lists Social Activities

Agnes Clinton, Skip Tunnell, and John Tedeschi have been named to the new social affairs committee of the French Club.

The committee has already lined up several speakers for the rest of the semester, and has made arrangements with various colleges in the local area to hold special French projects and social get-togethers.



One of the last activities held by last semester's social affairs committee was a trip to Rosemont College for the showing of the motion picture, "Diary of a Country Priest."

A DU PONT JOB-FINDER CHART FOR BS-MS ENGINEERS AND SCIENTISTS

Here is a sampling of the kinds of engineers and scientists which Du Pont will employ this year with BS-MS training—and their fields of work. The chart is an easy way to match your own interests against job openings at Du Pont.

For example: If you are a mechanical engineer, run your finger across the "Mechanical Engineers" column. The code letters refer to the type of work (Research, Development, etc.). The departments of the Company are listed across the top. The column across the bottom indicates some of the locations where these departments have openings. Du Pont also has opportunities for other engineering and scientific specialties, but space does not permit a complete listing.

Chem Professors Markham, Doyne Present Papers

The second Delaware Valley regional chemistry association meeting was held in the Sheraton Hotel on Feb. 5, 1958.

Two members of the Villanova Chemistry Department presented papers: Dr. James J. Markham presented a paper to the Chemistry Education division on his experiences in teaching analytical chemistry in a unified manner employing modern techniques.

Paper Presented

Dr. Thomas H. Doyne presented a paper to the Physical Inorganic Chemistry Division. The topic was: "What causes certain protein to act as catalysts and others not." He presented the reaults of his research at Villanova University.

The purpose of the meeting was to acquaint people in industries and in universities with the work each was doing.

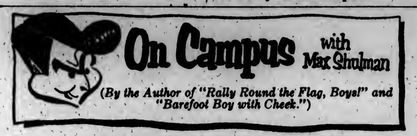
Faculty Attending

Faculty members attending were Dr. Markham, Dr. Doyne, Dr. George N. Quam, Mr. William J. Barnhurst, and Dr. Clarence G. Heininger. Students were Joe Clark, Shibe Park Ryanowski, Jim Purcell and Tony Silvestri.

The Chemical Society proposed field trips to Burrough's Research Center in Bryn Mawr, Brookhaven on Long Island, and Dupont in Wilmington. They have already visited the American Viscose in Marcus Hook, Pa.

Redesigned LKD Frat Pins Arrive

After a considerable delay, the new fraternity pins for Lamba Kappa Delta arrived last week.



The pins have been re-designed for this year. They are in the form of a triangle, black with gold border. On then are the Greek letters and Caducus.

Sorority Accepts Pledges

Sixteen new members were initiated into Pi Theta Chi sorority at activities held on February 13.

The pledges, all sponsored by big sisters, included: Mary Chapman, Joan Flood, Joan Connelly, Joyce Collins, Marty Davies, Betty Giamarino, Aggie Lietz, Ginny Dassori, Mary Collura, Marypat O'Neil, Betsy White, Kathy Schultze, Eileen Greyson, Pat Scanio, Mary Ann Valenza, and Alice Burlington.

The committee in charge of initiation was comprised of Gerrie Hollinger, Connie Bracken, Gale Weathers, Mimi Crosson and Mary Beth Halphen.

THE PLEDGE YOU SAVE MAY BE YOUR OWN

Today's column is directed at those young female undergraduates who have recently pledged sororities and are worried, poor lambs, that they won't make good. Following is a list of simple instructions which, if faithfully observed, will positively guarantee that you will be a mad success as a sorority girl.

First, let us take up the matter of housemothers. The housemother is your friend, your guide, your mentor. You must treat her with respect. When you wish to speak to her, address her as "Mother Sigafoos" or "Ma'am." In no circumstances must you say, "Hey, fat lady."

Second, let us discuss laundry. Never hang your wash on the front porch of the sorority house. This is unsightly and shows a want of breeding. Use the Chapter Room.

Third, meals. Always remember that planning and preparing meals for a houseful of healthy girls is no simple task. Your cook goes to a great deal of trouble to make your menu varied and nourishing. The least you can do is show your appreciation. Don't just devour your food; praise it. Exclaim with delight, "What delicious pork jowls!" or "What a yummy soupbone!" or "What scrumptious fish heads!" or "What clear water!"

Fourth, clothing. Never forget that your appearance reflects not just on yourself but on the whole house. It was well enough before you joined a sorority to lounge around campus in your old middy blouse and gym bloomers, but now you must take great pains to dress in a manner which excites admiring comments from all who observe you. A few years ago, for example, there was a Chi Omega named Camille Ataturk at the University of Iowa who brought gobs of glory to all her sorors.

Camille hit on the ingenious notion...

Camille hit on the ingenious notion of suiting her garb to the class she was attending. For instance, to English Lit she wore a buskin and jerkin. To German she wore lederhosen and carried a stein of pilsener. To Econ she wore 120 yards of ticker tape. Her shiningest hour came one day when she dressed as a white mouse for Psych Lab. Not only her Chi Omega sisters, but the entire student body went into deep mourning when she was killed by the janitor's cat.

Finally, let us take up the most important topic of all. I refer, of course, to dating.

As we have seen, the way you dress reflects on your sorority, but the men you date reflect even more. Be absolutely certain that your date is an acceptable fellow. Don't beat about the bush; ask him point-blank, "Are you an acceptable fellow?" Unless he replies, "Yeah, hey," send him packing.

But don't just take his word that he is acceptable. Inspect him closely. Are his fingernails clean? Is his black leather jacket freshly oiled? Is his ukulele in tune? Does he carry public liability insurance? And, most significant of all, does he smoke Marlboros?

If he's a Marlboro man, you know he's a lot of man. You know he has taste and discernment, wit and wisdom, character and sapience, decency and warmth, presence and poise, talent and grit, filter and flavor. You will be proud of him, your sorority will be proud of him, the makers of Marlboro will be proud of him, and I will be paid for this column. © 1958, Max Shulman campus would be allowed on weekends only. Exceptions may be made by the Vice-President of Student Affairs.

The makers of Marlboro wish to announce that Mr. Shulman has been paid for this column and will continue to be paid for bringing you his homely philosophy throughout the school year.

4. Registration of cars with the Student Council;
   - A. A $5 registration fee will be charged to offset administrative costs and to obtain a sticker and permit which would evidence a senior's qualifications for this privilege.
   - B. Car registration must be presented to the Student Council to prove ownership.
   - C. Seniors who are eligible for this privilege, but do not own their own cars, may obtain a permit to operate a duly registered car. No registration fee will be charged for such a permit. They must apply and register at the same time as those who own cars.
   - D. Any underclassman or senior not having a permit and caught operating a duly registered car will be subject to disciplinary action by the Dean of Men, and the registrant of the car will lose his senior privilege.
5. All additional rules adopted by the Student Council and the Administration must be adhered to for the maintainance of this privilege.

SC Handles Program

The program will be handled by a permanent Student Council committee in the following manner:

1. The Student Council will submit a list of senior applicants to the Vice President of Academics Affairs, Dean of Men, and Chaplin. Any student, to be accepted, must be in good standing with all those officers.
2. The $5 registration fee will be collected from by the committee in return for the permit and sticker. Part of the registration fee will be used to pay for the stickers, which must be shown at all times. and other administrative costs. The rest of the fee will be turned over to the Vice President of Financial Affairs to pay for student use of the parking lot for weekends.
3. The Student Council will check license numbers on registration cards gainst the license number on the car, and will issue the permit and sticker with the license number printed on them.
4. All files will be in the possession of the Dean of Student Activities and will be opened only to the Special Student Council Committee.
5. Registration will be open four times a year (at the beginning of each quarter).
6. A list of seniors having permission and the license number of their cars will be submitted to the Vice President of Student Affars, Dean of Men, The Dean of Student Activities, and the Captain of the Villanova Security Force.
7. On weekends all senior cars will be parked in a specifically designated area—from the west side of the parking area for faculty to the east end of the new blacktop area, and from Lancaster pike as far back as they desire.
8. Any student found parking permanently in an unauthorized location or on campus parking lots on week days will lose his privilege.

DeGroft, Nicholson Make Plans

The plans for the car program were worked out by Nicholson and Walt DeGroft, who submitted it to the Student Council early last semester where it was passed and presented to the administration early in November for investigation.

During the investigation into the program, some 15 of the top Catholic colleges n the country were contacted by the Student Council and the administration to find out how these schools had met the car problem.

Nicholson strongly emphasized that the car privilege must not be abused if it is to succeed in the future. He said that the Student Council is administering the program for the most part in order to relieve any burden that might have fallen on the administration. He added that the administration feels that if the students are willing to obey the rules of the program, it should be a successful move.

Nicholson stated that the acceptance of the car program "shows that the administration is more than willing to work with the student body through the Student Council if the Student Council does an effective job in presenting proposals to the administration and if the Student Council is willing to work to ese that these proposals are carried out ecectively."

He added that the move "should act as a stimulus to members of the student body—particularly Student Council members—to initiate new programs and to work every possible way with the administration for programs which will add to the name of Villanova."

Semper Fidelis Announces Spring Semester Schedule

Spring semester activities of the Semper Fidelis have been announced by Jack Goodyear, club president. Scheduled for the members of the PLC program from this region; the continuation of the society's orientation program; and the celebrating of a Communion-Mass and Breakfast.

The meeting of the Philadelphia area Marines will take place on Wednesday, March 5, at the Officers Club of the Philadelphia Navy Yard. The students attending will enjoy a buffet dinner after a general discussion of common interests and problems. Within the month all PLC's will receive cards supplying pertinent information and asking if they will attend.

Plans Display

To "foster a better understanding of the Marine Corps Villanova," the Society plans to continue its informative displays on campus. Bill Ganz, junior Marketing major, has completed an exhibit which is now on display in the University Library.

The Communion breakfast is tentatively scheduled for early May and it is hoped that all members will plan on attending this most important function.

Monthly Meeting

The monthly meeting of the society will be held next Thursday, February 20 at 10:30 a.m. in the Commodore John Barry Hall Library.

All members, both new and old, are reminded that the annual dues are now payable. Society membership cards will be available for all members who pay their $1.00 dues at the meeting or who have paid them in the past.

Out of town students who register with the Bryn Mawr board will not be assigned to that board.

Instead the Bryn Mawr board will notify the student's local board at home that the student has registered. The latter board will then handle the rest of the details.

MY CLOSEST SHAVE by Pat Flaherty
1956 Indianapolis Speedway Winner

"My closest shave was at Indianapolis in 1953," says Pat Flaherty, 1956 Indianapolis winner. "The track temperature that day hit 125° and the exhaust fumes hung right down on the speedway. I was going into the north turn at 130 mph when the fumes got me. I blacked out, hit the outside concrete fence, and skidded along for 120 feet. The car was demolished, my helmet was torn off, my safety belt broke—but I didn't break a single bone!"

Delta Pi Mu Commences Five-Week Pledge Period

Delta Pi Mu, the Liberal Arts fraternity, will begin a five-week pledging period today, it was announced earlier this week by fraternity President John Moynihan.

Moynihan said that the fraternity Executive Council had named juniors Al Dombrowski and Joe Sayers co-pledge-masters. Sophomore Harry Rowe will act as underclass assistant pledge-master.

Dombrowski, secretary of the fraternity, held Rowe's post last year.

Pledging Today

The pledging period will last from today until March 28, and will consist of indoctrination of the new members into the fraternity and a trial period before they become active members.

In regard to the regulations of the university, there will be no physical hazing of the pledges. Rather, the training period will consist of several meetings where the new members will get to know one another, and be integrated into D.P.M. and one week when they will be, according to Moynihan, delegated to their 'Big Brothers,' who will " serve as personal advisors and assign them various duties."

AD ANSWERED

More than 20 students answered the VILLANOVAN ad for new members which appeared in last week's paper, Editor-in-Chief Bob Mulcahy has announced.

Mulcahy added, however, that some positions are still open so that any students interested in writing are invited to visit the VILLANOVAN office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall, any time after 4 P.M. today.

These Electrical Engineers Are Solving Problems That Won't Happen Until 1960!

Yes, that's right. Thanks to this amazing A-C Network Calculator, Pennsylvania Electric Association Engineers can actually plan power networks, complete with generating stations, power lines, homes, and factories, for future development and know in advance what problems will be created and how to solve them.

And, this almost "human" electronic marvel is only one of a number of modern electronic devices that frequent the every day life of engineers engaged in today's fascinating electric power industry.

As an engineer about to begin your career, you simply won't find a better field than the electric power industry . . . particularly with a Pennsylvania electric company. Nowhere else will you find newer advances in equipment or methods—nowhere else will you find a greater opportunity to help build America's future—and nowhere else will you find a wider range of interests, one of which is sure to be the one you're looking for.

If you feel you can qualify to join an organization that's rapidly expanding; that offers a young man opportunities for advancement; that is extremely well known and respected, then talk to your placement counselor. Villanova Defends AAU Diadem

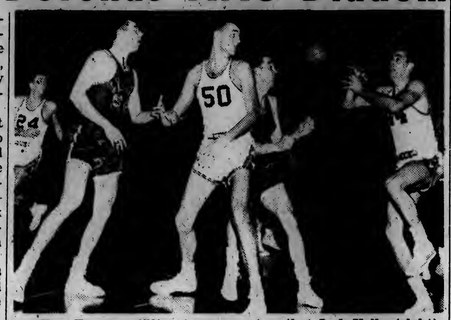
Villanova's chances of defending its National AAU indoor track and field title are rated no more than an even bet, as the Wildcats return to New York for the first two championship meets in the Garden.

Some experts believe that coach Jumbo Jim Elliott no longer has enough individual stars who can score first-place points to make up for the greater depth of the other favorites—Manhatten and the New York Athletic Club. Others are willing to go along with the Main Liners.

Looking at the major races and field events, the anticipated three-way battle shapes up like this:

Sprints—George Sydnor, back in shape for the short bursts again, and Ed Collymore, rough if he gets a good start, give the 'Cats more strength here than any other team has. Manhatten has only dark-horse Brian Brent. NYAC's entry, Jim Warner, is not considered top-flight. Biggest challenge to the 'Cats will come from Dave Sime, Ira Murchison, Bob Brown and Ken Kave, all of whose teams stand little chance of winning.



High Hurdles—Only Villanova, among top three teams, has a really good hurdler—Bob Holup. But Bob will have his hands full against a Winston-Salem trio led by record-holder Elias Gilbert, and Georgetown's Al Hoddinott, second to Gilbert in the NYAC meet.

600-yard—Charley Jenkins, still in school although his eligibility is up, is favored here. He's won four straight races this year. But Manhatten's Tom Murphy is good enough to take second. He has run the 600 in 1:07 indors.

1000-Yard The 'Cats and NYAC have no one outstanding here, unless miler George King of the latter decides to run it. He won the race in Philadelphia. Manhatten's Joe Soprano could take second behind Dave Scurlock, of North Carolina, the favorite. 'Cats Vic DiMaio and Bob Godesky could earn points if they rise above previous performances.

Mile—The big one. Ronnie

Hawks, Bonnies Stun 'Cats

By BILL VINCENT

Blown leads and extra-period or last-second losses tell the hard luck story of Villanova basketball too often this season. Hardly a week has passed by without Coach Al Severance's squad being victimized by these plagues.

Last week it came in the form of Bobby McNeill and his St. Joe Hawks from down on City Line. McNeill and his cohorts battled back from a 17 point deficit to nip the Cats, 86-82 in an overtime thriller which kept 9200 fans on the edge of their seats throughout.

The game looked pretty much all Villanova through the first half and the early part of second. With Jack Kelly, high man for the evening with 28, hitting quite frequently and with 19-and 15-point performers Joe Ryan and Tom Brennan scoring consistently, the Mainliners held a comfortable 45-33 halftime advantage and 64-54 lead with only 8:32 remaining in the contest.

However, 27-point performer McNeill and sub Joe Reilly led a St. Joe rally which placed them two points ahead with less than a minute to play. But Joe Ryan connected with a stab at the half minute mark to tie the contest at 72, and cause the game to go into an extra period. In the overtime the Hawks, again led by McNeill, added 14 to the Cats' 10 to win their second city series contest.

To add to the Wednesday night misery the Brown Indians of St. Bonaventure journeyed to the Palestra in a snow storm Saturday night to trim the Cats, 80-66.

The Bonnies profited by an off night for the Main Liners to cop their eleventh straight victory of the season.

The game went back and forth in the beginning with the Wildcats holding a slight edge. But, with 8 minutes remaining in the first half, the Bonnies' pressing defense and fast break tactics began to work and they pulled from ties at 19-19 and 23-23 to a 35-27 halftime advantage.

The Bonnies, led by Mike Cavaliere and John Connors, resumed their first half doings and boosted their lead to 40-27. At this point the Cats put on a rally to pull up to a 43-37 deficit. However, from this point on, it was all Bonnies.

High men for Villanova were Jack Kelly with 18, Joe Ryan with 17, and Tom Brennan with 15.

'Cats Face Penn, Owls In City Play

VMI Added To Grid Card —Six at Home

Villanova's athletic director and football coach, Frank Reagan, has added one more game to the 1958 grid schedule—making a total of ten—it was learned by the VILLANOVAN yesterday.

Virginia Military Institute is the team signed as an addition to the nine-game schedule announced by Reagan only last week.

The game fills the open date in the original card—September 27.

Another At Home

What is most significant about the game is that it will be played right on campus at Goodreau Stadium—the sixth to be so listed for '58.

The Wildcats now have a really attractive card by which a local following can be attracted to the recently enlarged stadium.

The home games are with West Chester State Teachers College (Sept. 20); VMI (Sept. 27); Detroit (Oct. 11); Wake Forest (Oct. 18); Richmond (Oct. 25); and Quantico Marines (Nov. 22).

Unbeaten Last Year

Virginia Military Institute had an undefeated team last year. For the past several seasons, the school has been in the upper bracket of the Southern Conference.

Head coach at the Institute is a former Villanova great, John McKenna, the recipient of a Villanova Alumni award just last year.

McKenna played center for the Wildcats in 1937 and 1938. He was coach at Malvern Prep after graduation. Then he returned to his alma mater for an assistant's position, staying here for a few years.

By FRANK CUNNINGHAM

With two losses to show for a pair of overtime battles in City Series play, Villanova's basketball team tackles aggressive Penn tonight and the peerless Temple Owls on Saturday at the Palestra.

Al Severance's quintet now stands mired in last place in the intra-city league, as a result of two overtime defeats by LaSalle and St. Joseph's.

To escape sole occupancy of the cellar the locals must win at least one of the Palestra tilts.

As an added incentive, the 'Cats will be aiming to post the 500th victory in the school's history. From the 1920-21 season until now, Villanova has won 498 games.

The Quakers have declined from their halcyon days of early season, when they won their first five games.

But they've perked up recently with the emergence of soph Jack Saxenmeyer as a dependable clutch performer, and the inspired play of George Schmidt, who is shooting with far greater effect than a year ago.

Owls Ranked

At the biginning of the season, many exptrts rated Villanova as the only team in the East with a chance to beat Harry Litwack's perrenially superb Temple team. But the Owls have been better than expected; enjoying national ranking in both the UP and AP top ten listings.

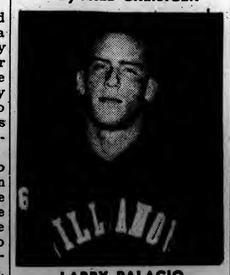
Paced by the incomparable Guy Rodgers, Temple has compiled the nation's longest winning streak with victories over all the other City Series rivals.

By beating LaSalle last week, the Owls assured themselves of at least a tie for the championship, an honor which they shared last campaign with the Hawks and the Explorers.

If the Wildcats have any hopes of making a game out of the Temple clash, then they would do well to play as the Owls play, in a cohesive and sensible manner, emphasizing team play at all times.

Swimmers Nip PMC, 43-40

By FRED GREISIGER



Villanova's swimmers eked out a 43-40 decision over a strong Pennsylvania Military College squad at the Chester Y.M.C.A. pool last Friday. The win, coupled with a forfeit by Seton Hall on Saturday (due to the lack of manpower) hikes the Cats' record to an impressive 6-2-2 mark.

Wildcat depth proved too much for P.M.C. as the Main Liners collected four first place winners and also two out of the first three placements in five of the events. Villanova also took top honors in the 400-Medley Relay with Bob Pinto, Gene Hewitt, Bill Lyons and Frank Keefe swimming their respective events.

Mason Wins

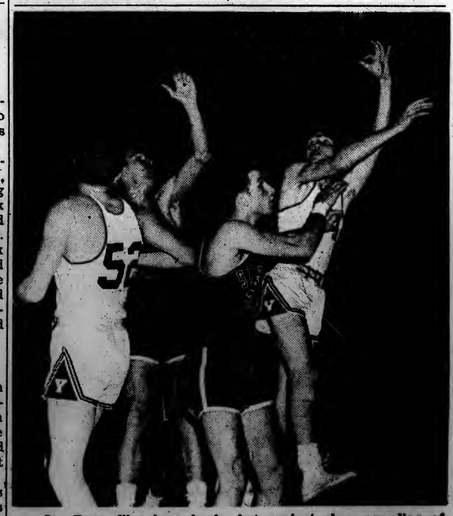
Joe Mason and Lou Schoener finished first and second, respectively, in the 50-yard freestyle. In the diving event, Wildcats' Steve Carton and Bill Gilhool also provided a one-two finish.

The 100-yard freestyle saw

LARRY PALACIO

Jim Gregory defeat P.M.C.'s Jack Duckloe. Villanova's John Rumbarger was third in this event.

Villanova's Gene Hewitt and Lou Pinto finished behind powerful Larry Barbour of P.M.C. in the 440 yard freestyle. Barbour, along with Jerry Bijur, who won the 200 yard butterfly, were the Cadets' mainstays.



The victory over P.M.C. pulled the Cats out from their two meet losing skein at the hands of LaSalle and Army.

Last Wednesday the Wildcats traveled to West Point, only to succumb to a strong Army squad as the Black Knights of the Hudson downed the Cats in a 55-31 decision. Wildcat Larry Palacio took top honors in the 220 yard butterfly event in 2:32.2. The 400-Medley Relay was copped by Villanova's quartet of Palacio, Keefe, Jim Gregory, and Lou Pinto in 4:19.

Army Deep

The win was the fourth straight for the Cadet aggregation. Army's tremendous depth proved to be too much for the Main Liners as substantiated by the fact that seven different Cadets won seven events.

Yet, although the score does not indicate it, the meet was very close. Many of the events were decided by quite close margins.

Joe Ryan flips in a hook shot against close guarding of two St. Bonaventure players. John Scott (52) attempts to screen for Ryan.

Steady Tom Gives Wildcats Strong Defensive Service

Tom Brennan leaped into the air, twisted and slammed one of his opponent's shots away from the basket to stop a scoring threat.

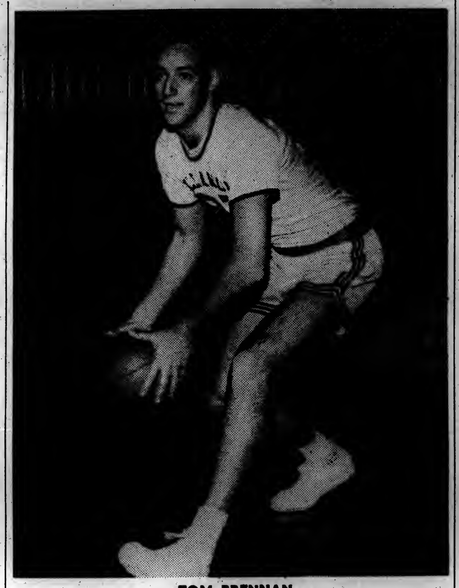
Then he raced down the court, stationed himself in the pivot position, took a pass from a teammate, spun to his left and snapped a hook shot into the basket.

A minute later, back on the opponents' end of the court, Brennan went high to pull down a rebound and whip a pass to backcourt ace, Joe Ryan.

Which game was this? Any game—because that's the story of Tom Brennan, the 'steady" ball player on what may be the nation's most erratic basketball unit.

A Forgotten Art

This has been the big (6' 7") team captain's year, the year he blossomed into stardom. And he has achieved that stardom in an almost forgotten facet of the game. It is not for his excellent point production or rebounding (he's in double figures in both departments on any given night) that Brennan is noted; it is for his defensive work.



There had always been a trace of greatness in the tall boy from Long Island, back when he was a reserve ball player in his sophomore and junior years, but it is probable that few expected the heights he would reach in his final year.

At the beginning of the season, it looked as if Brennan's talents were going to go unnoticed. Ken Harrison and John Scott started off on a scoring rampage, Joe Ryan began to look like a renovated edition of his old self and Jack Kelly combined hustle and desire to start drawing headlines.

Nobody Noticed

Meanwhile, Tom Brennan went quietly about his job, and since he wasn't scoring with any great proficiency, nobody really noticed all the other things—the rebounding, passing, guarding.

Then came the Niagara game, and Tommy performed such a masterful defensive job on All-American candidate "Boo" Ellis, that even the wire services made mention of it. Fans began to think back to the spectacular Wildcat victory over Indiana a year earlier, and remember how Brennan held the great Archie Dees to only eight points. And they began to watch the Villanova center a little more closely.

TOM BRENNAN

Tom gave them something to watch. That last little requirement to complete his picture as a masterful court star, the scoring punch, finally came through.

LaSalle Game Tops

After pulling down 13 rebounds and outplaying Lloyd Sharrer in the now classic West Virginia debacle, Brennan came into his own during the LaSalle game. He had 29 points when he fouled out with a few minutes left to play.

He received a standing Palestra ovation when he left the court, and, two days later, was named "Player-of-the-Week" in the Philadelphia area by the sportswriters, a distinction not usually given to a player whose team has just lost two games.

Now Brennan is considered the best defensive player in the area and the steadying influence on Villanova's baffling court squad.

Teams Prime for Cats' - Penn Intra - M Game

The standings in the basketball intramural leagues have gradually been stabilized, as for the most part one or two teams in each league have begun dominating the others.

Most of these teams are looking forward to the play offs next month. The team which succeeds in winning the round-robin will face the intramural champion of the University of Pennsylvania in the annual Penn-Villanova intramural game at the Palestra.

Lead League

The Northerners, whom many consider the outstanding team in the entire intramural set-up, lead in the 7:30 league. They are the best bet to go all the way and face Penn.

The J.B.'s are up on top in the 3:30 loop, while a freshman group, the Half-Year Men, are number one in the 10:30 league.

The Alumni Animals are the kingpins of the 6:30 cricuit, but they only have a small lead over the Eastwingers.

First Place Tie

In the 4:30 league, the Gyros and Delta Pi Mu are deadlocked for first place. The same situation exists in the 7:30 league's Division B, with the Gazelles and the Ranch Hands.

Every one of the league leaders, whether it shares the lead or holds it alone, is undefeated. This won't be the case for long where ties exist, because the co-leaders meet during the next two weeks.

Unbeaten Frosh Face Penn

Unbeaten in eight straight games this season, the Villanova freshman basketball squad hopes to lengthen its streak with three more victories this week.

Tonight the Wildkittens will take on the University of Pennsylvania's frosh team on the latter's court. Villanovans will get a chance to see the same two teams in action when they meet in a return engagement here next Tuesday.

In between, on Saturday, the frosh travel to Drexel Institute in Philly in expectations of another win.

The top man for Penn so far this season has been six foot, four inch, Bob Mikvy, brother of the all-time Temple great Bill Mikvy. Mikvy was an all state selection from Palmertown High last season, and recently led the Red and Blue to a win over Temple with 26 points.

Pacing the Villanova team as usual will be Jim Huggard, Bob Liberatore, Dick Kaminski, and Jim Kenny. With this sparkling array of talent to work with, varsity coach Al Severance has developed one of the best yearling teams that this area has seen for some time.

Lacking pre-eminence only in height, the frosh have pushed themselves to the limit and gained a reputation for being a spirited, hustling ball club.

A perfect slate for the season, which now appears altogether possible, would be a just reward for their efforts.

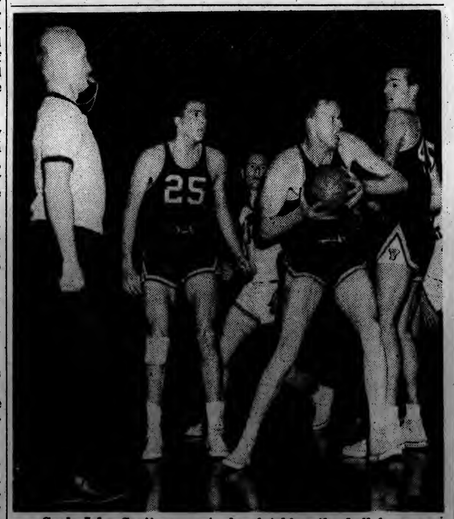
IC4A Tickets On Sale

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT



TRACK SHORTS... The Spirit Committee has already begun selling tickets to the IC4A Indoor Championships at the Garden, March 1... Members will be in Dougherty Hall with the ducats... Last year over 800 went up to New York to see the Wildcats cop the national collegiate crown... New York track fans, most of whom know nothing at all about the sport, gave Ron Delany the usual razzberries when the time of his winning mile in the NYAC meet was announced. ... Someone suggested that New York fans stay home each Saturday night—then a radio announcer could read the times of the various races to them... If a record was approached or broken, they could cheer... If not, they could sit on their fannies and boo...

A gentleman sitting behind us at the NYAC meet cheered for Delany in a back-handed sort of way... When Ron took the baton from Vic DiMaio in the mile relay, with Villanova far to the rear in fourth place, he yelled, "C'mon, ya bum, catch those creeps."... Apparently those who know track best appreciate Delany more than the casual fan.... He was the only winner whom every other performer and judge took time to personally congratulate... Elias Gilbert, the Winston-Salem hurdler, was so blase about winning, he left his Gold Medal lying on the floor... Someone found it later... Soph John Scott seems to be clutching the ball in amazement while Bill (25) and Tom (45) Brennan entreat him to shoot. Even the official is abashed.

Well Organized Former Prep Stars, "The Northerners," Setting Early Pace, Choice To Capture Intramural Crown

By PAUL BUCKLEY

How often in an intramural sports program does one find a well-organized team. Usually a team comes to a game with barely enough men to play. Most clubs have no plays, just five individuals who want to shoot.

The Northerners, here at Villanova in the 7.30 league, are organized, however—and they do have plays. They are organized to such an extent that in addition to ten men who come to every game, they have a coach and a manager.

The Northerners are dominated by residents from the first floor of Sullivan Hall.

They have passed the century mark in scoring quite often. In doing so, the team has put its speed and height to good advantage.

Connolly Coaches

Directing the fortunes of this powerhouse is their coach, Frank Connolly, a veteran in intra-mural play.

George Mitchell, Jim Tobin, Rocco Barbieri, Hal Bauser and Joe Scancarella comprise the starting lineup.

In Mitchell, the Northerners have a six-four rebounder who hails from Chaminade High in Long Island. Mitch is captain of the team.

Jim Tobin is the big man on the team. At six-five, Tobin works from the pivot. Jim was an All-Catholic football end from Philadelphia's Southeast Catholic and the center on the school's championship basketball team.

Barbieri All-County

From Passiac Valley High and Carteret Prep comes six-three Rocco Barbieri. At Passaic Valley, Barbieri was to the All-County basketball team.

Hal Bauser, a six-foot bash from St. Francis in Brooklyn is probably the best shot on the team. His jump shot from around the foul circle has ruined most of the Northerners' opposition.

The fifth and smallest man on the team is Joe Scancarella. Joe, known in New Jersey circles as a former Clifton High great, is only five-nine. From his guard spot, he acts as playmaker for the team. He is a hard driver and has a good setshot.

All-Passaic

He was named to the all-Passaic Valley Conference team while attending Clifton.

Front-court reserves are Vince Carelli and hustling Andy Johnson. Carelli is a product of Southeast Catholic, while Johnson went to Great Neck High in Long Island, N. Y. Bernie Dean, AllCity center from John Carrol High in Washington, and Duke Goodwyn help out along with Jack Dillon, a track and cross-country man from La Salle in New York.

Finally, there is the manager and sometimes water-boy, Kev in Johnson, from New York.

Any Freshman or Sophomore interested in becoming a Baseball manager can contact Mr. Charles Farnan in the basement of the Field House.

Pistol Team Goes To Army

The University pistol team journeys to the United States Military Academy at West Point on Saturday for its third intercollegiate shoulder match of the year.

Both of the earlier matches were lost, to MIT and to the United States Naval Academy.

Although the pistol team has competed on the intercollegiate level for several years, this is the first year that the University has recognized pistol as a varsity sport whose members are eligible for minor varsity letters.

The trip to West Point came about as a result of the Army's challenging Villanova to a match. There is a chance that Princeton will also take part in the match.

Army, Navy Tops

Army and Navy are considered the top college pistol teams in the country. They naturally have more time and facilities with which to develop their shooters than does the normal school.

Despite the two losses, the pistol team is still rated high, only a notch or two below the service academies.

Most of the members of the team are civilian students, contrary to the accepted opinion. All the facilities used belong to the NROTC.

The outstanding shooters during the early matches have been senior Bill Scott (captain of the team) and junior Jim D'Arcy. D'Arcy also serves as the team manager.

Scott posted a 279 score in the MIT match, the highest for a Villanovan in the school's history. The score can be judged by comparing it with those normally turned in by the Army and Navy shooters—270 or there-abouts.

D'Arcy had a 269 score in the MIT match, one of his best totals in three years of shooting here at Villanova.

Scott came in second last year in the Secretary of Navy Match, open to all NROTC unit members. It is a postal meet in which the players shoot on their home ranges and mail the results in.

In March there will be a National Rifle Assoc. course on campus. Part of the course will be in pistol shooting. It will serve as a "try-out" camp for those who intend to get on the team next year.

AAU Diadem

Delany should take first, winning his 21st straight indoor mile. Here's where NYAC can grab a pile of points, however, with Jim Beatty and King possibly two and three. Oregon's Jim Grelle, Hungary's Istvan Rozsavolgyi, and Yugoslavia's Velisa Mugosa will push. Delany beat Rozsavolgi in 4:10 last week. Mugosa looked sharp in winning the two-mile.

Three-mile—Only NYAC has anything in this race. Its Peter McArdle, from Ireland, won't beat John Macy, from Houston, but he can score.

High jump—Only Villanova, among Big Three, will place here. Phil Reavis, slowly rounding into top form, has not been beaten this year, also has not won—all ties thus far. If Charley Stead, who missed at 6-5 in his first jumping of the year last week, can get up the 6-7 height, the 'Cats will be in great shape.

Pole Vault — Ex-Villanovan Don Bragg and Occidental's Bob Gutowski will be one-two, but all three teams seen in contention for the title are weak in the vault. If 'Cat soph Ron Brady just might hit 14-feet—and help Villanova to a couple of points.

Shot Put—Parry O'Brien, of course, should have no trouble. But Manhatten could pick up a second or a third. The Jaspers' Joe Marchiony was third last week.

Broad Jump—Greg Bell, the 26-footer from Indiana, stands above the rest of the pack. It is not known if NYAC or Manhatten has any strength here or not. John Buckley, only a soph, could endear himself to Jim Elliott by pushing Bell. He has the ability.

Relays (mile, two-mile, and sprint madley)—Manahtten has awesome depth for these races. On paper, its mile team should win. NYAC is also strong in the mile, with ex-Villanovans John Furlinger and Al Peterson on the squad. If George King anchors NYAC's two-mile team, it won't be beaten. The Jaspers are a good bet to cop second. Villanova probably won't enter the two-mile. The sprint medley is anyone's race. It could decide the AAU champion.

Villanova's chances, in general—Loaded with ifs. Should Sydnor come back strong, and Collymore break from blocks fast, the sprints could help the 'Cats. Stead, Buckley, Brady, and Holup probably hold the key to victory. Elliott will have to do a juggling act for the relays. Collymore, Sydnor, Stead and Delany will most likely do double-duty.

Sydnor Sprinting Again

George Sydnor made no headlines for his work in Saturday's New York Athletic Club Indoor Games, but off wnat he showed, the Wildcats' chances of repeating as AAU and IC4A champs received a much-needed boost.

Sydnor was fourth in the 60-yard sprint, losing to Duke's Dave Sime—not particularly sensational according to the standards Jumbo Jim Elliott's men have led us to expect.

But the fourth was like a first on any other occassion. For George had been a huge question-mark in the short-distance races for almost a year, with a long series of charley-horses keeping him from operating at his old efficiency.

Sydnor said before the race that he did not expect to win the first time out.

"Just so long as the legs hold up, I'll be happy," said the former Haverford (Pa.) all-around athlete.

"It will be a week or so before I get used to the shorter races, "Sydnor went on to say. He has been running the lead-position on the mile relay team. Chief reason for this is that there is less danger of muscle pulls in the longer distance.

"There's much less strain and pressure, for one thing," said Sydnor. "Also, the stretched-out stride is a lot smoother."

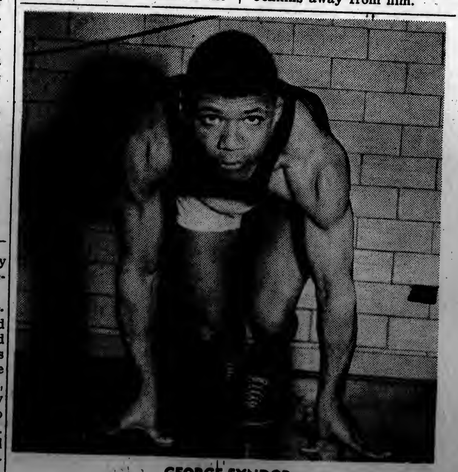
But it is the stride whch Sydnor will have trouble with for a few more days, at least.

"After having it opened way up, it's kinda tough to shorten it all at once," he said. "But if everything goes okay, I should be ready to give them all a battle in the team title meets."

That is good news to Villanova fans who remember the great sprinting Sydnor did in his sophomore year and then again last year before he began having muscle miseries. Twice a year ago he stepped into the Sime-(Ira) Murchison duels to upset the experts and win.

For a while Saturday night, it looked like Sydnor's bad luck had come back to haunt him. After taking second in his heat, tying Sime for second in one of the semi-finals, and grabbing a fourth in the final, George returned in the evening's last event to run lead-off in the mile relay again.

He took the lead and lost it three different times, but tired in the last 50 yards of his 440. Just as he handed the stick to Vic DiMaio, he keeled over on his stomach.



Charley Stead ran over from the high-jump area and lifted Sydnor up in his arms, carrying him away from the boards. In a few minutes, George was up and around, apparently in good shape.

The collapse seemed to be more from exhaustion than from a recurrence of the old injury. All things being equal, Sydnor will be in the sprints come this Saturday and the week after.

Asked in which meet he had first pulled a muscle, Sydnor said it didn't happen in a meet, but in practice.

"I usually run a lap fast and then jog one. But (Charley) Jenkins asked me to go along with him that day. He was really pushing—ran off ten straight fast ones. That did it—she ripped."

Now Sydnor hopes that the ripping days are over. So does Elliott. But he'd better keep Jenkins away from him.

Belle Air Meets Deadline; Delivery Expected In May

The final printer's deadline for the BELLE AIR, Villanova's yearbook, was met last Thursday, it was revealed today by Editor Jack Daly. Delivery of the annual to the student body is expected to be around May 14.

Material Delivered

The material delivered to the printer's last week made up approximately two-thirds of the yearbook and included the activities feature and sports sections. One-third of the material was delivered just prior to the Christmas vacation.

Daly said that the only incomplete sections are those dealing with the senior weekend, track and basketball, and that these were held out to assure complete coverage.

Summer Planning

Daly stated that he believed the main factor responsible for the successful meeting of the deadline was the summer planning which went into the book.

The annual was outlined during a number of editorial staff meetings held at the Daly home in Perth Amboy, N. J.

'Revolutions' Topic Planned By Hartman

A series of lectures by faculty members considering three major revolutions has been announced by the Department of History and Political Science.

The lectures will be given on the 12th, 19th and 26th of March, according to Dr. Harold Hartman , chairman of the department.

Charles P. Bruderle, Associate Professor, will speak on "The Revolt of Nobility and the Beginning of the French Revolution" on March 12th.

Russian Revolution

The next week, Assistant Professor Bohdan P. Procko will consider "The Russian Revolution of 1917 and the National Problem."

On March 26th, Associate Professor Alexander Rudhart will lecture on "German Socialism and the Revolution of November, 1918."

According to Dr. Hartman the lectures are intended to "encourage and stimulate an historical interest on the parts of students and faculty.

Historical Importance

"The 1958 series stresses the historical importance of the impact of revolutionary activity upon the progressive development of contemporary civiliza-

Juniors Announce Jr. Week Heads; Murphy, Schneider In Charge Of Activities

By RAYMOND J. QUAGLIA and FRANK J. DYNAN
of the Villanovan Staff

Veiled secrecy which has covered Junior Week was partially lifted by Junior class president Vic Ludmerer this week.

Ludmerer said that most of the events of the week have been definitely decided upon, although some plans are still tentative.

He emphasized, however, that after appointing the chairmen of the various Junior Week events, he delegated his presidential duties to Matt Brennan, vice president. However, both Ludmerer and Brennan retain their elected offices.

Co-Chairmen Named

Junior week as a whole was placed under the immediate guidance of co-chairmen Bob Murphy and Joe Schneider. They are planning a week of traditional activities with several innovations.

Although a Turf 'N' Tinsel presentation of "Who's Foo" on Sunday, April 27th, fits in with present plans, Junior Week does not formally begin until the traditional "Mother's Day" on Monday, April 28.

Under co-chairmen Ken MacGillivray and Don Kempf, Mothers Day will begin with an outdoor Mass at the Shrine of Our Mother of Good Counsel, weather permitting.

After the Mass, there will be the planting of the class tree followed by a luncheon in the residents' dining hall. Entertainment for the mothers will fill out the afternoon. In the evening a catered dinner will be held in the Field House.

Plans Secret

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday have tentative plans, Ludmerer said, but he was unwilling to disclose the plans as yet.

He did hint, however, that there will be a jazz concert and possibly a movie.

The Field House will be the site of the Junior Prom, Friday May 2nd. The band and theme for the prom will not be announced until later, but Ludmerer said that "some of the ideas considered for Prom decorations are extremely promising."

Prom tickets will be on sale in the pie-shop on Wednesday, May 10.

Long Working Committee

Oz Scogna, who has been designated chairman for the dinner dance, has been working his committee on various ideas since May of 1957. He has secured the new Sheraton Hotel as the Dinner Dance site.

Scogna will soon announce the orchestra which will play for the event. Tickets for this function will go on sale under the direction of John Fischetti in April.

The week of festivities will end on Sunday, May 4th, with a Mass in the Field House.

Appointments Questioned

Ludmerer also answered many questions concerning the appointment of Committees. Appointments were made with special consideration to past achievements.

He also said, "Everybody has had the opportunity to work." He added that he has been in a

James A. Lynch and Frank J. Dunn were installed as Freshmen class Representatives on the Student Congress last night following their election Tuesday after one of the quietest campaigns in recent years.

The terms of Lynch, a day-hop C and F major, and Dunn, a resident social studies major, will continue until the general Student Congress election in May of 1959.

Only 532 of the more than 1,200 Freshmen voted in the election. All voting cast ballots for the resident seat while 7 failed to mark for a day-hop representative.

Majority Candidate

Lynch's total of 277 votes indicated he was selected on more than half the total ballots. He defeated Thomas A. Chambers, a political science student and graduate of St. Agnes High School, West Chester, who polled 177.

Dunn's total vote of 168 topped the 147 recorded by John E. Fitzgerald, a marketing major and graduate of Plainfield High School in New Jersey.

Other day-hop votes were Louis F. Retacco, Liberal Arts student and graduate of St. Thomas More High School, Phila., 37; and Edward J. McCarthy, an engineering major and graduate of Northeast Catholic High School, Phila., 24.

Resident Votes

Following Dunn and Fitzgerald in the resident voting were David D. Doyle, a C and F student from Elmira, N. Y., 75; Nicholas M. Cassetta, social studies major from Amsterdam, N. Y., 53.

Also Lewis V. Papera, a C and F student from Nutley, N. J., 42; Joseph A. Ciccone, education major from West Orange, N. J., 34; and Ralph C. Ascoli, engineering major from Baldwin, N. Y., 13.

The candidates were notofied of the results of the election Tuesday afternoon. Paul Laughlin, chairman of the elections committee of the Student Congress, informed each candidate of his position in the outcome of the contest.

Keep Results Secret

Laughlin, cooperating with the VILLANOVAN, asked the candidates to keep secret the results until today.

Election activity was in full swing Tuesday morning when the first candidates arrived. One member of the committee reported that candidate Fitzgerald was the first to cast a

Reuschlein Lectures At Area Colleges

Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the Villanova Law School, is engaged in a program visiting some twenty-four colleges throughout this area, lecturing to various pre-law clubs and counselling with pre-law students.

In recent weeks he has delivered the inaugural lecture in the Francis J. Myers Memorial Lecture series at Saint Joseph's College, and has also lectured to the Social Science Forum at Siena College, to the Saint Thomas More Pre-Law Society at Holy Cross College, and to the Pre-Law Club at Loyola College, Baltimore.

Other Colleges

In addition to these lecture appearances, he has met informally with pre-law students at Franklin & Marshall College, Ursinus College, Gettysburg College, Fairfield University, Merrimack College, Manhattan College, Muhlenberg College, Gannon College, Saint Bonaventure and Lehigh University.

During the next month Dean Reuschlein will speak at King's College, Penn State, Wilkes-Barre College, Mount Saint Mary's College, Saint Peter's College, Jersey City, Saint Francis College (Brooklyn), Saint Francis College (Loretto), Saint Vincent's College, University of Scranton, and the University of Delaware.

Famed Case

Some implications of Pennsylvania's famed Girard College case were discussed in a talk given by Professor John G. Stephenson, of the School of Law, before the Gloucester (N.J.) County Medical Association on February 20.

Professor Stephenson, a specialist in the law of property, has been particularly interested in the law of charitable and nonprofit organizations.

His talk, entitled "Who Will Educate Our Doctors To Run Our Hospitals?", concerned the fact that the Girard College case "calls into question many hitherto accepted principles of law upon which the existence of our charitable foundations depend."

Through a long line of pagan Japanese children walk Cardinal Frings, of Cologne, Germany; Bishop Paul Yamaguchi, of Nagasaki, and Fathers Robinson and Purcell of the mission. Proceeds from the Shamokinaki dance on March 7th will go to the education of the poor Japanese pagan children.

Chestnut Hill To Present Show

This Friday night the amateur thesbians of Chestnut Hill College will present an original musical comedy, the proceeds of which will go to the college in the form of a bond.

An open invitation has been extended to all Villanovans to attend "Bond Night," as the event is called. The production is entitled "Old Poison and New Ivy" and is based on the troubles and entertainments of the average college student.

The presentation will be for one night only and a donation of seventy-five cents per person will be collected at the door. Proceeds from this annual event are presented to the college through their student council for use in the school's proposed building and development fund.

Curtain time will be 8:30.

The Literary Club will meet Monday night at 7 o'clock in Seminar 3 in the basement of the library.

Because of lack of interest in the contemplated project, President Joe Kinney has decided to drop the project in favor of next week's discussion.

O'Donnell Elected President Of Student Education Assn.

The Student Education Association of Villanova held elections of officers for the academic year 1958-1959 on February 13.

Elections chairman Charles Marzen has just announced the results of the voting, after tabulating the votes of both the regular students and of those who have already begun practice teaching.

The new officers are: President: John O'Donnell, Vice-President: Thomas Devine, Secretary: John J. Cronin and Treasurer: Dennis Dougherty.

All are members of the Education Department, although the Student Education Association is open to every Villanova student.

At the time of the elections, the then President, Richard Dressler, issued an invitation to all the Education majors and any others who are interested in teaching, to join SEA.

Dressler emphasized the point that the association has far fewer sophomores and freshmen than it would like.

He said that all interested students are requested to make inquiries at the Education Department's office in Mendel Hall.

2 Six-Week Reading Plans Being Held

By JERRY McGRATH

A Reading Improvement Program, under the direction of Dr. Stanley P. Weissman, is now being offered in the library to all undergraduate students interested in improving their reading ability.

The course runs for six weeks and is given twice a semester. Specially designed machines are used to measure the students reading speed and comprehension.

The whole program is under the direction of Mr. Edward Murray, Guidance Director, who pointed out that the program is open to all students of the University, regardless of year or division.

He also said, "There is a fee of $25 charged for participation in the program. All those desiring further information should contact me in room 132 Mendal Hall."

Session Underway

Although the first session is already underway, registrations are now being accepted for the second session, which will commence immediately following the Easter recess.

There are four groups in each session, with two groups meeting on Monday and Wednesday, the other two every Tuesday and Thursday.

Two phases of the program are particularly stressed by Dr. Weissman: reading speed and reading comprehension. Individual student problems, however, can be catered to because of the smallness of each class.

Twice Tested

Each student is tested at the beginning and the end of the six weeks period in order to measure his starting ability and hs subsequent development.

Mr. Murray pointed out that all students upon matriculating at Villanova are given speed and comprehension tests in reading. Any student, whether he be interested in the Reading Improvement Program or not, may procure his score from the guidance office.

AIEE-IRE Given Student Council Seat

The joint student branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the Institute of Radio Engineers has been granted a seat on the Student Council.

Admission to the Council was finally approved after the branch presented a copy of its new constitution for examination.

One of the main features of the new constitution is the formation of an executive committee to aid the branch's officers in their administrative duties.

Chief credit for drafting the new constitution goes to junior Bob Merkert.

Nominations Monday

President Jerry Yantis has announced that nominations for next year's officers will take place at the branch's meeting on Monday at 11:30 a.m.

The editors of the branch's magazine, "The Circuit," seniors Dave Dubbels, Dick Horn, Bill Maginnis, and Bob Wilkinson, have invited anyone interested in publication to contact them at once. They stressed that underclassmen are needed in particular.

Last week the branch took a field trip to the Franklin Institute. Included in the itinerary were visits to the Univac computer and a network analyzer. James McGinn, formerly of Villanova's mathematics department, served as guide.

There are trips slated for the future to a local transistor plant and to the Philco laboratories at Spring City, Pa. The site of the regular senior field trip has not yet been decided.

Summer Work

Yantis told the VILLANOVAN that the juniors in the branch have been actively engaged in a project designed to aid them in finding summer positions in the engineering field.

Over 150 companies throughout the country were contacted earlier in the year. Each was asked to supply information regarding the types of work available for the junior electrical engineers, possible salaries, and the dates for filing applications.

All the information which the firms sent back to the

Clean-Up Campaign Starts; Target Today: Pie Shoppe

The student council's Dougherty Hall "clean-up" campaign will get under way today.

The purpose of the drive, which is co-sponsored by the Spirit Committee, will be to clean-up the day-hop cafeteria and soda fountain.

The Student Union and Special Problems Committee of the student council will head the campaign.

Sore Spot

Bob Murphy, treasurer of the council and head of the committee, pointed out that the condition of the upstairs cafeteria has long been a sore spot with students and administration alike.

"If any outsiders—either prospective students or employees—should walk into Dougherty during the noon rush hour, they would be shocked by its condition," said Murphy.

"Certainly any student who has any pride in his school should be willing to cooperate in this drive. After all, it's for his benefit."

Poster Campaign

Posters will be placed throughout the trouble spot, according to Murphy, to try to appeal to the students to put their rubbish into the provided trash receptacles.

Besides the posters, the committee will also make use of the public address system to bring the importance of this drive to the attention of the students.

The campaign will run for one week.

'Ham' Radio Club Begin Meetings

Villanova's Radio Club, having completed a successful first semester, resumed activities last night in its club room in the basement of Mendel Hall.

Code classes, begun last semester, will be continued and it is expected that new members will have no trouble in following the procedure.

V.U. Debaters Place Third In Invitational Tournament

The debating society initiated its second semester with a very successful showing at the King's College Invitational Tournament in Wilkes Barre.

From the nineteen teams which participated, the Villanova contingent placed third with seven victories and one defeat.

Both Jim Corey and Jack Serafin debated the affirmative side of this year's topic and succeeded in defeating Syracuse, Lehigh, St. John's and Johns Hopkins, thus remaining undefeated in competition.

Debating the negative were Leo Burke and Oz Scogna who defeated teams representing Rosemont, Temple and City College of New York.

Penn State Victors

Loss of the tournament came at the hands of Penn State, the eventual winners, when the negative team proved unsuccessful against the arguments of state.

The first trophy of the year was awarded to the debaters by the President of King's College at the ceremony which followed the event.

For recognition as the fourth best speaker in the tournament Jim Corey was honored at the ceremony.

Room For New Members

President Bob O'Connor emphasized that the society is inviting all students who may be interested in debating to come to the weekly meetings which are held every Thursday morning at 10:30 in 104 Vasey Hall.

New members are assured of gaining debating experience on the intercollegiate level in the coming semester when definite plans concerning future novice events have been completed, O'Connor said.

Richard M. McDonough of the Speech Department and coach of the Beta Gamma Society announced the names of the men newly appointed to the varsity who had been qualified because of their activity and skill in the various debating events.

Included in the new varsity were: John Cummings, Joseph Remy, Joseph McCullough, Leo Burke, Dominick Costa, James Murray, Greg Dean, Thomas Pfeiffer, Francis Murtha, Ronald Tenaro and Hugh Logan.

Annual Choral Festival At St. Joseph's Saturday

The third annual Philadelphia area college Choral Festival will be held March 1 at St. Joseph's College in Alumni Memorial Hall, 54th st. and City Line Ave.

Tickets are now on sale and will be throughout this week; they can be obtained from any member of the Villanova Singers or at the door Saturday night.

The musical festivities will begin at 8 o'clock with a dance to follow at 10:30. In addition to Villanova five other schools will be represented including St. Joseph's, Immaculata, St. Peter's of Jersey City, Rosemont and Temple.

Three Solo Numbers

Each school will perform for 15 minutes, singing three songs from its repertoire. The climax of the evening will be the two joint numbers, "This is my Country" and "Glory" which will be sung by a representative number from each school.

The three songs to be rendered by the Villanova Singers will be "Going' Home," "Cindy" and "O Shenandoah."

This function was started three years ago by Robert Ford of the Class of 1956, who was then the president of the Singers, and by Dr. Harold Gill Reuschlein who was their director.

"Big Ten" Also Has Festival

choral gathering is the "Big Ten," which holds it during the springtime.

In the past two years the festival in this area has grown with grand success, as last year an estimated 1400 attended the choralers recital at the Villanova field house.

The prime motive for holding the festival at St. Joseph's this year is to rotate the yearly presentations to the various schools that participate and to give people in the different areas a chance to attend this singular event.

Fiss To Direct

Herbert Fiss is the present director of the Villanova Singers and he will have the peculiar honor of appearing at three different times during the concert, since he is also the director of the St. Joseph and Rosemont choral organizations.

Masque Show Plans in Danger

Plans for the Belle Masque presentation of "Taming of the Shrew," appeared in serious jeopardy last week when only four students showed up at the field house to assist in the construction of a needed special stage.

The play is scheduled to run from March 20 to 23, Director Richard A. Duprey, of the English Department, has announced.

Paul Floyd, Bill Kohl, Mike Cercio and John White were the only students that attended last week's special planning session.

"We need interested students very badly," Floyd said. "If we don't get them soon, the show will be in danger."

I Call On Mr. Sinatra

By TOM McKENNA

We were sitting around the VILLANOVAN office contemplating our next big assignment, thinking it would be nice if we could interview some personaltiy, like all the prominent publications. Something a la Pete Martin's series in the Saturday Evening Post.

One of our editors must have been reading our collective minds for he announced we were to do a column on Frank Sinatra.

"Frank Sinatra." we almost yelled. "You mean the skinny, baldheaded character that sings and acts." We couldn't believe it, the same one who won an Academy Award . . . dates glamorous women . . . makes pictures with Der Bingle and Satchmo . . . wears a trenchcoat and tries to sell cigarettes on T.V. . . . the man who was at the top in the '40's and at the bottom in the early '50's . . . the one whose unbelievable photo was in a local newspaper two weeks ago . . . the one whose vocalizing keeps people up "In the Wee Small Hours," this writer among them. We were dubious, but we could dream.

Boy! An Exclusive

This exclusive interview could become a reality, all one of us had to do was a call a certain number and ask for Sinatra. I grabbed the number and dashed for the phone.

"Hello, I'd like to speak to Frank Sinatra."

"My name's Sinatra, go ahead."

This didn't sound like Sinatra, but I continued, "How did you come to choose Frank Sinatra for a name?

"It was my father's."

"I see. I suppose quite a bit has happened to you since you left home."

"I never left home."

"But you must have left your hometown of Hoboken."

"I can't even spell the word."

"What is your impression of all the glamorous women you've known?"

"You mean my sister?" Sinatra asked.

. . "No, Princess Grace, Sophia Loren, and, of course, Ava."

"Just say I don't know them, but Grace and Ava don't impress me. but as for Sophia . . ."

"How does it feel to have so many hits?" (I started whistling "All the Way,")

"I haven't had any hits since last summer."

"But you've made some records since last summer—they were hits."

"Records?" Sinatra asked. "What'-you talking about? I meant baseball hits."

"I didn't know you also played baseball."

"Occasionally."

"You know you sound different over the phone, at least not like you do on records or T.V."

"This is the way I always sound, besides only my father has been on T.V.," on the "Name's the Same."

"Look, are you sure you're name's Frank Sinatra?" I asked.

"Of course I'm sure. People are always bugging me about it."

"Do you get many requests for autographs?"

"Just on checks."

"What are your plans for the immediate future?"

"Not much, just do some homework."

"Homework?" I asked. (I could only think of one kind of homework Frank Sinatra might do.)

"Sure those professors at Villanova are murder."

"You mean you go to college?" I asked, stunned.

"Sure, what did you think I did?"

"I thought you were a singer."

"No, no, I'm a Freshman Engineer out there."

"Sorry, this must be a wrong number."

When last seen, the editors were retreating out the door with Bell's invention trailing after them.

Radio Sportscasters Go 'Big Time' With Top Palestra Court Broadcasts

By FRANK DYNAN

Ordinarily it would be presumptuous to compare Villanova's small campus radio station, WVIL, with a major commercial station, but in broadcasting basketball from the Palestra, WVIL encounters the same problems, and uses essentially the same procedure as a large commercial station.

For the WVIL sports staff, work towards the broadcasts must begin before the basketball season itself. The first-and probably easiest-step is securing permission to broadcast from University of Pennsylvania officials. They issue passes to the broadcasting crew, assign the spot in the press box they will use, and the line through which they will beam the program.

Thru Telephone Line

Since the games are to be heard only on campus, they are transmitted over a telephone line to the campus station in Dougherty Hall. In previous years the telephone company had to be asked for a line before each season, but this year a permanent line was installed between the Palestra and Villanova. For the use of this line, WVIL pays a lump pre-season fee, plus an additional small fee per game.

To help pay the costs of the broadcast, a member of the radio staff is given the difficult task of locating appropriate sponsors. Certain companies, of course, are not acceptable to the station, and others exclude themselves because their product or service is of no use to college students.

The real work begins about an hour before each broadcast game. The crew allows that much time to set up the equipment: a portable transmitter, two microphones and a set of earphones. After hooking up the transmitter, someone calls the phone company to test the telephone line. Next the microphones are connected and tested, and finally WVIL is called to check transmission. A few adjustments are generally necessary so that the noise of the crowd will not interfere with the program; the expressions of nearby spectators are not always fit for broadcast.

Color Man

The campus station goes on the air 15 minutes before game time with a two minute general introduction. At 13 minutes the broadcast is switched to Ed Currall at the Palestra. Ed is the broadcasting crew's color and ad man. Besides plugging the sponsor, he describes, with a competent and personal touch, the scene his listeners are unable to see.

As the game gets underway, Hank Nichols, the WVIL station manager, handles the play-by-play. Surprisingly professional, Hank's account of the action is characterized by an all-encompassing eye and an interesting line of chatter.

Ed Currall returns at the half. Leaving time for a commercial, he gives a recap of the action, spiced with personal commentary. If the temper of nearby fans appear favorable, Ed tunes in their comments for what seems a novel —and potential explosive—approach, giving his listeners a more diversified view of the game.

Like Donald Duck?

Although necessarily in the background, Sam Petrofitta should not go unnoticed, for without him the broadcast might reach Villanova sounding like Donald Duck with laryngitis. He sets up the equipment and monitors the broadcast, making any technical adjustments necessary.

If the pre-game publicity is successful, these basketball broadcasts mean time out from studies for many resident students. While they could probably hear the game on a commercial station, they would not share in the excitement and the spirit which comes only from partisan—Villanovan—sportscasters.

SOCIAL INVADER

By JOHN KENNEDY

"Well, he's male," she conceded, "I guess he'll do." She nodded, blew cigarette smoke down into my face. I had met the chief requirement for admission to any dance at St. Trinian's College For Young Ladies.

My freshman friend, breathing heavily through her adenoids, clutched my arm gratefully and propelled me onto the darkened dance floor. As I adjusted to the dimness I saw a seemingly vast number of misshapen female forms. No other men were present.

"It's so nice to see poor little Perdita with a boy. All the other girls feel encouraged by something like this."

The guardian of the gate arrived in a cloud of smoke. "Don't mob him, girls. Give him air; you'll all get a chance at him."

I was born to safety. Perdita was apologetic. "They haven't seen a boy in a long time. You're awfully brave; most boys don't come back a second time'"

We danced for a while; various friends cut in on Perdita and tread rhythmically and heavily on my toes.

A Real Punch

I felt popular but menaced, fearing for my innocence, as the girls pressed closer. The punch tasted of lemon juice and V-8 juice.

"Bill," said my heavy-breathing little date, "I want you to meet my roommate, Florabelle Chervenka. She has a wonderful personality. And she's very intelligent, very intellectual."

My heart dropped to my toes.

"Let me interduce you to some of my friends," said Perdita, proudly. "This is Emmeline and that's Christabel and here's Zsa Zsa."

Just Like a Sister

Emmeline and Christabel both resembled their names: unlovely giggling refugees from some faraway kennel.

I was clearly not destined for Perdita; she was merely trying to bring a ray of sunshine into the gray little life of her friend.

SINATRA?

An extremely trim blonde in red crossed the floor slowly picking her way through the fog.

Freud was Right

"Bill, this is Florabelle." I looked up to see the extremely trim features of the extremely trim blonde

"Hi," she said, softly.

"Now I want you two to get better acquainted," said Perdita. "Gee, there are five boys over at the door. See ya."

"Well, Florabelle," I said cheerfully, "Would you like to dance?"

"Yes," said Florabelle, smiling a little.

Coming Next Week

Another innovation of the VILLANOVAN will appear in next week's issue in the form of an activities column, the purpose of which is to inform students of all meetings, sports events, and social activities for the week to fol low.

The VILLANOVAN staff will do its best to obtain as complete a list of these events as possible but asks that any organization desiring to announce a meeting for the week, make a note of it including organization, day, time and place, and leave it on the bulletin board in the publications office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Cooperation on the part of organization officers and members in this matter will assure all students of proper information concerning campus activities.

BOOK REVIEW

"An American Tragedy"

By JOE GIORDANO

The majority of men—I refrain from the word students—on our campus are in the Commerce and Finance and Engineering divisions. I refer to this only because I am convinced that because of it, this review will be little read. Perhaps, a few straying stragglers, who got mixed up in the shuffle, will glance at it and become inspired to read the book. But, as Author Theodore Dreiser, I'm a pessimist.

"An American Tragedy" is a very great and portentious novel. Not written in powerful word structure, as Thomas Wolfe's "Look Homeward Angel," nor written in overwhelming prosaic poetry, (if such a term exists), nevertheless it remains a continuously powerful story. A story illustrating Dreiser's fundamentally naturalistic interpretation of life, whereby the human being is seen as in permanent conflict with the forces indifferent to his aspirations and independent of his control.

Ill-Directed Efforts

Clyde Griffiths, whose passionate but ill-directed efforts to improve his lot in life lead him to an impasse from which he attempts to escape by the drowning of Roberta Alden, a poor girl with whom he has become involved, is the major protagonist. Clyde's wealthy uncle, Samuel Griffiths, , who befriends him, and Sondra Finchley, the object of his fervid social ambitions, likewise more or less unwittingly contribute to his eventual downfall. A large portion of the narrative is devoted to Griffith's trial, which results in his conviction and execution.

An Age of Depression

The reader, I'm convinced, must do a lot to thoroughly enjoy "An American Tragedy." He must overlook Dreiser's crude method of clicheridden writing and his lack of finesse. He must eliminate his prejudices and convictions against the author's naturalistic determinism, and rather look on him with sympathy, realizing that Dreiser wrote in an age of some depression, when industry seemed to be conquering all and man was being considered only as a materialisic being.

"An American Tragedy" can only be compared with the great achievements in contemporary fiction. It was the greatest novel of the generation.

Air Force Programs Listed

By FRANK DELANY
Feature Editor

This week we will examine the possibilities of fulfilling our military obligations in the United States Air Force. If is's the Air Force you want have to choose it yourself as no draftees are taken by this branch of our armed forces

If you see an enlistment as a stepping stone to a commission throught Officer's Candidate School keep in mind that it will first take one year's active duty and then a sufficient score in a battery of tests to make the grade.

From the Academy

The Air Force plans to get about 500 or 600 officers a year from it's own academy. It currently makes up this complement by canidates from other services academies. The Air Force ROTC program turns out many more officers. Flyers have a committment of five years active duty including flight training. Non-flyers serve a three-year hitch. OCS turns out ground officer's only.

Aviation cadet programs are available for those college people who would like a commission. A minimum of two years college is for all practical purposes mandatory currently. This program encompasses twelve to fourteen months training as pilot or navigator followed by what remains of a five-year active duty period.

The Air Force Reserve and the Air National Guard offer commissions only to professional people, e.g. chaplains, doctors, etc. However the Air Force reserve and the Air National Guard offer alternatives for serving in a non-commissioned status.

Six months active duty and five and one half years ready reserve with a total eight-year obligation comprise the Air Force Reserve program. The first month active duty is spent in basic training while the remaining five months are spent in technical training in a field determined by your choice and the needs of the service. The ready reserve period of duty was explained in our initial article.

Reserve Program

The Air National Guard has eight year obligation program similar to that of the Air Force Reserve. However only four months of active duty are spent concurrently and these all in basic training with the remaider of six years spent in the ready reserve. The equivalent of two months technical training will be given at the home base during the period following the four months basic. It takes eighteen months in the guard before you are eligible for a commission in the Guard in other than a profession capacity.

Registered Nurses may obtain commissions in the Air Force with a committment for two years active duty.

Those interested in regular Air Force programs should call Air Force recruiting headquaters in the Schuykill Arsenal at HO-2-8747. This office handles all recruiting and officer programs for the regular Air Force.

The Air Force Reserve is locally at the Air Force base in Newcastle Delaware and may be reached at East 8-4161.

Those interested in the Air National Guard may obtain information from Guard headquaters in the International airport at Saratoga 7-1400.

S. C. VIEWS:

Responsibility For Sr. Car Program Rests On Students

By PAT NICHOLSON

The approval on an experimental basis of the Student Council's Senior Car Program means a great deal more than allowing deserving Seniors to enjoy the car privilege. The decision whether this program is to be of a permanent nature now rests with the members of the Class of 1958. Whether or not this Senior privilege becomes a Villanova tradition by being permanently approved by the Adminstration depends on how satisfactorily the program turns out to be. This of course is solely dependent on how the Student Council administers the program and on how the Seniors use the program. The ball is now in our hands. It is up to us to carry it. Any abuse will undoubtedly keep future Villanova Seniors from enjoying this privilege.

Willing to Co-operate

Besides placing the responsibility for the success of this program squarely in the hands of the students themselves, the Administration actions certainly should convince every "doubting Thomas" that the Administration is more than willing to cooperate with the Student Council in every possible way.

Every proposal presented to the Administration and every action of student government taken by the Student Council must be for the best interests of Villanova University. Sometimes certain proposals such as a few of the 24 points presented in this column two weeks ago are completely impracticable due to existing circumstances which the author of the proposal and the Student Council are completely unaware of. These circumstances concerning the various proposals are brought to light and discussed at meetings of the Student-Administration Committee. I have been a member of the Student-Administration Committee for two years and never once has the Administration not given a good reason for any action.

Villanova Needs Help

I promise you, the student body, that every effort will continue to be made both by the Administration and by the Student Council to cooperate in initiating and developing activities and programs in the best interest of Villanova University. Bear in mind however, that many proposals require a great deal of time and work before they can be accomplished. Villanova heeds our help and our patience. This is the least that we can give our alma mater for all that it has given us.

The New Look

We're trying something radically different this week.

In fact, this marks the first significant change in the VILLANOVAN in over ten years. It was all brought about in an effort to give you, the Villanova student body, the kind of newspaper you want.

Understand, we don't claim to have reached that level yet, but we do feel we've made a step in the right direction.

We got the idea right after we saw the spirited turnout in answer to our advertisement for new staff members two weeks ago. If a change was to come, we felt that this was the time, while we had the momemtum gained from all this new blood.

The result is what you see today — the VILLANOVAN in an entirely new format.

Taking a little informal poll of the student body, we found that they wanted two things out of their newspaper: more emphasis on news and more opinionated and humorous columns.

So we've moved most of the news up to the front of the paper, and moved our editorial pages back toward the middle where they are located in most standard journals.

On the opposite page, you see the results of our attempt to bring more opinion into the VILLANOVAN. Our ideas aren't complete yet, but we're going to try to initiate regular feature columns, such as were in effect a year ago.

Taking advantage of our tabloid size, we've moved the sports section back a page to liven up our final sheet.

Finally, our advertisements have been centered, for the most part, in the central segment of the paper, creating a miniature classified section.

Of course, the most important question in regard to the "new" VILLANOVAN must be answered by you, the student body. We want to know how you like our ideas. And we want some suggestions on what else we can do to improve the paper in your eyes.

So we're asking you to let us know what you think of the changes, either by personally contacting one of the editors or by dropping us a letter.

We aim to please. It's up to you to set up a target.

Congratulations

Congratulations to the latest members of the student council. You signify the first entrance of the Class of '61 into student government at Villanova.

But now that all the electioneering is over, you'll find that you have a big job ahead of you.

Until the May elections, you will serve as the sole representatives of your class. You will be their voice in the most important organization on campus.

You have been greatly honored by your classmates. Now it's your turn to show that they were justified.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor:

This is just a note to ask: What has happened to the comedy, feature and satire in your paper? I have read several issues from cover to cover only to find . . . no humor. Why? Last year's "Padded Cell" was very funny, but it has ceased and—nothing has taken its place. The American sense of humor hasn't changed. I hope your paper will soon answer the call and thus perform a civic duty: inform—and entertain. Thank you very much. I hope you don't mind receiving letters like this. It is not meant to be detramental (I hope that is spelled rite), but you know what I mean.

Sincerely yours,
Judith Kaplin

P.S. I don't mean to spread gossip, but several people have said the same thing. And as some famous person, said, "a word to the wise is sufficient."

P.P.S. Please excuse the writing but I am left-handed and I broke my leg.

ED. NOTE: I understand about the handwriting. Had a broken leg once myself.

The Unsilent Men

From the hallowed ivy halls of Princeton to the picture catalogue of twentieth century America, Life magazine, come the annoymous essays of seven characters in search of a way of life.

Since millions of Americans will take these precocious Princetonian ramblings as representative of the thoughts of all American college students, all college students have a legitimate interest in the variety and quality of the views and aspirations expressed and the impression they tend to give to the vast and unanalytical reading public.

It is our fervent hope that the ideas expressed by the Princeton seven as regards life, its meaning and its ends, are not typical of all college students, or even a majority of them, and it is our certain knowledge that these views are not representative of Villanova men.

To begin with let us first take sampling of Princetonian erudition before analyzing the essays more carefully.

Writer number one says: "In life the thing I value most is happiness, which to me is roughly material comfort."

Number two comes up with: "I feel frankly that no hurdle is too high for me."

But number three has a snappy answer: "What I have to do is find a girl who is compatible and either doesn't want children or, better still, is unable to have them."

Number four has (or had) a complex: "I was an overly sincere, overly nice kid." One gets the impression he has gotten over it.

On a plane more befitting his education number five says: "I want my contribution to life to be a living testimonial that individual freedom is compatible with the welfare and progress of society." He also says though, "I do not want an ordered life, regularity or their concomitant responsibilities."

The sixth writer is someone Princeton or any institution could be proud of: "I desire a life which will leave behind it some permanent and positive result in surrounding lives."

The last writer is the group philosopher. He writes of his generation and what makes it tick instead of himself. His essay gives us some more insight into the other six. He says: "The characteristic fear of our generation is our horror of finding ourselves ludicrous" and "A Federal Reserve system of the imagination is with us to protect us from our parents' glorious flop."

This is, we hope, a fair sampling of the LIFE article. In these quotes we find idealism, some half-baked philosophy and much that is downright sophomoric.

When one reads the essays closely, though, one carries away an overall impression of crass materialism, idealism removed from reality and some mixed-up free-wheeling philsosophy, especially when it comes to God.

Number one is a prime example on all three points. His life's ambition is make mankind just one iota more comfortable. He wants something out of life which he can consider as evidence that he is better than average, an "Ego booster."

On God he says, "When I look at the world around me I find it difficult to conceive of an omnipotent, all-good, father-like deity. Such a deity wouldn't permit the pain and suffering that exists." This point of view is neither profound or original but the rallying cry of all pseudo-atheists who are satisfied with the premise without the bother of subjecting it to metaphysical speculation. These people can neither be true believers or true non-believers. They have merely chosen sides according to the lines drawn by others.

Number two would seem to belie the contention of number seven that this is the age of self-criticism. It would seem to be the age of self-satisfaction.

Number three reads like a psychiatric case, evidencing a frightening amorality, blatantly proclaiming that the end justifies the means and the end is his own personal welfare.

Number four just needs to grow up. Unfortunately he seems to think he already has.

Five is merely determined to conform society to him rather than vice-versa and number six is refreshingly sensible, refreshingly dedicated, and surprisingly unselfish.

Several characteristics seem to stand out about this thinking. These young men are enamored with the idea of ideas. They no longer search for truth, they grab it out of the air. They think such and such, and that is enough, for they are intelligent men.

For their own personal ambitions, they say mobilize a contradiction peculiar to all strata of American life, a satisfaction with and desire for a system in which some might fail while they might succeed coupled with a gnawing desire for security come what may.

If a man might be divided into parts, physical, mental and spiritual, it might be said that these men have their share of the first two but not the latter.

For they are intelligent, even when being absurd. And such self-confidence must be taken at least as a modicum of good health,—but there is nothing spiritual, no desire to give of themselves, no love, no desire to improve mankind no awareness of the good life for goodness' sake, no conception of truth or goodness themselves, for after all these are God and God seems to have been, if not rejected, ignored.

It would seem that when new and untrod paths of knowledge are opening all around us that these men have all the answers. Their problems arise from trying to relate these answers to themselves. They do not as yet question their answers.

These remarks do not apply to essayist number six who can only be admired and respected for what he says nor do they apply to number seven for he has not revealed himself.

MUSICAL VIEWS:

Noises Under The Guise of Music

By BILL WASHINGTON

As Music Director of WVIL, I find it not only a duty, but also a responsibility to state my views regarding a certain phenomenon called 'rock and roll'.

There are those at the school, who, due either to a mental deficiency or a lack of proper instruction, have failed to free themselves of the adolescent bonds which were prominent during their high school years.

One of the outstanding favorites of every teen passing through his formative years, is a worship of the absurd and the ridiculous. Phychologists tell us that it is an expression which results from the young individual being exposed to a greater degree of freedom.

Leather Jacket Army

We have seen the mass displays of the leather-jacketed army, the motorcycle bandits and the 'cats' with the pegged-pants.

Along with these oddities arose a form of music aptly called 'rock and roll'. No doubt, 'rock and roll' was used as an apology rather than a definition for these noises which travel under the guise of music.

Music is meant to express ideas and emotions through the elements of rhythm, melody, harmony and color. (Anyone who disagrees with this definition is asked to consult the nearest dictionary for his satisfaction.)

One Element Anyway

'Rock and Roll', if we may use that disagreeable title again, after a careful appraisal, has only one element which enters into the definition—and that is rhythm.

To return again to the logical form, we must define rhythm, with the aid of the American College Dictionary, as a "movement or procedure with uniform recurrence of a beat, accent, or the like." This low outgrowth of music has rhythm and a great deal of it. In fact, 'rock and roll' has nothing else but rhythm, and it is this unintricate and boring beat which sells it.

On One Leg

I must admit that with this we find 'rock and roll' standing on its own, but with only one leg. Every form of music demands well-trained artists for its interpretation, and when we approach the 'rock and roll' field, it is apparent that this regulation has been cast aside and totally ignored. It takes very little musicianship to produce a record destined to become a hit with the juvenile set. An unbiased survey of the so-called 'hits' will testify to that.

In short, music fans, 'rock and roll' is a cheap form of rhythm which is discordant to the ear of every person that enjoys music. If after this analysis you still see fit to pursue its mass influence, that is your mistake.

By now all the fans of this detrimental force must have contracted serious cases of high blood pressure, and we shall end our little tete-a-tete to prevent any serious injuries.

I must emphasize that these views are mine and mine alone, and in no way influence the station's policy, which has always been to cater to its listeners.

A Little Guy Pictures A Brave New World

By RAY QUAGLIA

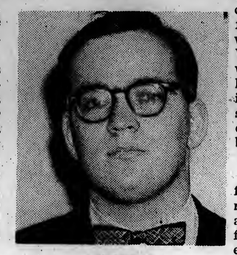
I used to want to be an Indian when I was a kid, but since that Pontiac's raid was put down by that "Mad" Anthony Wayne fellow I've decided there isn't much of a future along that line. Anyway I don't think that scalping and killing would have done me much good socially.

The cowboy business has its advantages but the work isn't steady enough for a guy with ambition. Even the best of them, Cheyenne and Paladin and fellows like that, are always out looking for work. Even if I could take the unemployment, there's always that unwritten law that you can't fall in love with any of the girls you meet on the job. I don't think I could take that, especially if I meet one like Cheyenne met last Tuesday night, her being blonde and all.

Just a Little 'Whoosh'

Of course I could be a jungle guide and have the natives call me "great white leader" or Ramar or some other native word for boss, and have them bring me precious furs and beautiful native girls. In fact at one time, I went so far as to collect a bunch of trinkets and old cigarette lighters to give them as gifts. But even good guys like Tim Kelly and Tubo Smith always have some malcontent native with a blowgun taking shots at them from behind a tree. Those blowguns are murder! A little whooosh that you can't even hear and you're a goner. Besides, I don't think I'd sleep well with all those birds screaming in the trees, and those witch doctors trying to incite the natives against me and all.

Perry and Me



Anyway, I'm not big and rough looking enough to get along at jobs of this sort. I figure I'll study hard while I'm here, and go to Law school and get a flashy office like Perry Mason. I'll hire one of my old buddies who isn't doing so hot, give him three hundred a week to be my runner and get a real sharp secretary like that Della Street. She can have my coffee ready when I get to the office in the afternoon, and come with me on cases that aren't so dangerous. Her and all my women clients will think I'm great stuff, but I'll pretend not to notice when they make a play for me and all.

Who was that guy who said "we are such stuff as dreams are made of?"

THE CLASS OF '58 WOULD LIKE TO EXPRESS ITS THANKS TO REV. DANTE L. GIVOLOMI, CLASS MODERATOR, TO JAKE KRUPA WHOSE HELP IN DECORATIONS FOR THE PROM WAS INDISPENSIBLE; TO FATHER WHITLEY, WHO MADE POSSIBLE THE SPECIAL MASS IN THE FIELD HOUSE; TO ALL THOSE FACULTY MEMBERS WHO WERE KIND ENOUGH TO JUDGE THE QUEEN cONTEST AND TO EVERYONE — ADMINISTRATION, FACULTY AND UNDERCLASSMEN — WHO HELPED IN ANYWAY TO MAKE THE SENIOR WEEKEND THE SOCIAL SUCCESS THAT IT WAS.

POLITICAL ROUND-UP

By FRANK BONNER

Last week I attended a conference of the Nation Wide Committee on Import-Export Policy. This group is made up of representatives of industry and labor. The main problem facing the assembly was the effect of foreign imports on the economy of American industry.

The principle conclusion which was reached at the end of the meeting was that the impact of a various importing of goods from other free nations of the world has hurt our economy. We can attribute part of our wholesale unemployment directly to unfair competition from import goods. Many of these shipments from abroad are produced in factories which were built by American dollars:

We Can't Compete

These American-built foreign factories are equipped with the most modern machinery available. The employees of these foreign industries are well trained because of our technical advice—yet the wages paid are far below those paid in this country. For example, in Japan, wages are one-sixth of those in the United States; Switzerland, one-quarter; France, one-third, and Germany, one-half. Thus how could expect American industry to compete against such odds?

This committee has asked president time and time again to put certain items on a quota system, since a very high tariff would only tend to cut a nation like Germany out of the American market, but it would not affect Japan because of her low wage scale. To these pleas the administration has done nothing except turn a deaf ear.

Hard-Hit Industries

The industries hard-hit because of this situation are the linen industry, coal industry, optical industry, percision instrument industry, mushroom industry and many others. If the President continues to ignore the cries of these industries, unemployment is going to rise.

Secondly, the manufacturers and labor leaders concluded that the president has entirely too much power in making trade agreements without the consent of the Congress.

Floridia Academics Criticized

Gainsville, Fla.-(I.P.)- The grading system of the University of Florida's general education C-courses has been termed "anti-intellectual and educationally blighting" in a final report by outside consultants.

The 61-page report was compiled by a seven man committee composed of outstanding educators in the field of general education.

Findings by the report suggest no radical changes in the present system, but many practices for improvements are made. Typical of the issues hit by the report are the counseling, rigidity in the courses and neglcuted areas of study in addition to the criticism of the grading system.

Professors are afraid to take the initiative in the presentation of their material since the student body is so "exam conscious," the report states. The faculty should determine at least fifty per cent of the individual's grade, reports the committee.

This should be based on class room performance in tests and discussion. Only in this way will a student respect the teacher since he holds at least a part of his grade, the commntee adds.

The report continues, "With all the eloquence we can master for the qualitative art of teaching, we urge that the instructor's rating count as an independent judgment of the student's participation in the contribution to one part of the intellectual life of a university."

The rigidity of subject matter was hit, especially in the case of C-6, Biological Science. The report points out that there is too much emphasis on the facts in the course and not enough on knowledge. It has the reputation of being a mere memorization course.

The area of "human relationships" is apparently neglected for the most part by the general education program at the University. The committee feels that C-41, practical logic, does not incorporate enough of this field into its course. A separate course, C-71, was thought advisable so as to cover this field adequately.

Next Week

In an effort to provide this paper's readers with the type of material that they desire, the editors wish to announce the return, at great expense and through much effort, of two of the VILLANOVAN'S favorite columns.

Starting with the next issue, the "Padded Cell" and "Strictly Opinion" will return as regular features.

The "Cell," which proved to be one of the paper's most popular columns last year will be back under the co-authorship of Juniors Bob Bergin and Gerry Givnish. Bergin, a newcomer to the field of journalism, will fill the vacancy left by former co-author Harry Waters. Givnish will retain his former position—that of typist.

"Strictly Opinion" will be penned by author newcomer, Bob Pinto, recently turned Junior English major.

Evening school students are conducted on a tour of the navy department facilities in Commodore John Barry Hall last week.

Faculty Wives Meet; Discuss Foreign Lands

A panel discussion on the life and customs of foreign nations highlighted the most recent meeting of the Faculty Wives Club of Villanova.

The panel, moderated by Mrs. Tobias Hahn, wife of the Associate Professor of English, consisted of Villanova students who have been residents of countries other than the United States.

They were: Fernando Galatas, Spain; John White, Mexico; Arturo Martinez, Colombia; Putinas Masalatis, Lithuania; Manuel Muchacho, Venezuela; Domingo Diaz, Panama; and Bob Lima, Cuba.

The main topics covered were: home construction and usages, food varieties and habits of eating, social customs such as ideas on dating, marriage, dress and amusements, and the changing conditions in each of these countries.

Snow Causes Rush

By JOE KINNEY

After a brief vacation early last week, thanks to one of the worst blizzards to hit these parts since the twenties, the library has reported that more "V-men" have visited its lonely stacks, in the past three days than any three-day period in recent years, regardless of exam time.

Either the majority of "V-men" have taken a more serious attitude towards its studies or the library is the warmest building on campus.

Speaking of warm sports on campus, have you visited the basement of Mendel lately.

Just before the Christmas holidays WVIL squeezed a new program into its tight schedule with the hope of adding more variety to its broadcasting program. The name of the program was conversation and the campus "Mike Wallace" was to be senior English major Frank Delany. The only difference between the local show and its NBC counterpart was that the former featured two guests on its weekly Monday night spot at 8.

As the weeks rolled by, the show gained in popularity as host Delany discussed several controversial topics with his controversial guests, one of whom was usually enrolled in one of the area's local women's colleges.

Next Monday, the 15-minute "Interview" will hash out "academic freedom" and the verbal combatants will be Villanova's Don Kemp and Doris Tursi of St. Joe's Evening Division. If you've never heard the show, do so; I'm sure you'll enjoy it.

That informative article on attendacce last week by Bill Christy has senior English Major John Williams moaning. He was planning to build up eough credits in Attendance 100 so that he would graduate with two majors. Tough luck, John!

Summer Resort Employment Offered College Students

In the spring when a young man's fancy turns to love, a college student's mind turns to the thought of a job for the summer.

For some students, a summer job is required if he or she is to have adequate finances for the coming year. For others, a summer job serves as something to do for the summer months. Whether you fall into either of these catagories, now is the time to be thinking about a job for next summer.

Stay At Homes Stuck

A small percentage of college students will stay home and take whatever jobs are available there, while a greater margin will go all over the 48 states to America's resorts and summer wonderlands to work during the summer months in hotels, restaurants, at beaches, canneries, and many other summer jobs that are open to college students.

For most of these resorts, little or no experience is required, and students, failing to realize this, do not try to work at summer resorts while they are on vacation from colleges and universities.

At summer resorts, students meet many new and facinating friends and opportunities. At many resorts, students can save as much as $1,000 with little effort. Recreation is always available at these resorts and there is always plenty of free time.

At these resorts a student may work as a waiter, waitress, cashier, busboy, grillman, short order cook, caretakers, supervising children's play groups, lifesaving, secretaries, teaching swimming, and many other jobs that most all students fall into very easily.

Welcome Scholars

Most resorts are glad to get college students for the summer months because they are more adequate, more versatile, neater, better workers, and generally better all around than the average person applying for jobs at these resorts.

The boy-girl ratio at these resorts usually runs about even although it may vary slightly from resort to resort.

At most resorts, students receive a salary and tips and the tips enable the student to make good money, often exceeding $100 weekly. Most people will tip a college student more than they would an ordinary waiter, waitress, or other employee working for tips so a student has a definite advantage here.

N. Y. to N. C.

Some of the resorts that are now hiring college students for next summer are Lake Placid, N. Y., Atlantic City, N. J., Miami Beach, Fla, Nantucket, R. I., Cape Cod, Mass., many summer resorts in the mountains of North Carolina and Virginia, Fontana Village in North Carolina, Myrtle Beach, S. C., Ocean City, Md., Catskill Mountains of New York and many others.

A student information center is located in Chapel Hill, North Carolina and for a $1 service fee to cover cost of materials and application forms, a student may receive complete information and the exact time to apply to the specific resorts offered by the information center.

Anyone desiring this information should send the service fee immediately with information about yourself so the jobs suited to you can be referred in information. The address is Student Jobs, 110 Mangum, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Belle Air

The book this year will include a number of unique innovations in that it will have a decidedly modern touch with no central theme. It will be approximately the same size as in past years, but the format will be most unusual.

More Pictures This Year

Daly said that the amount of written copy has been minimized and that more pictures and larger ones have been added.

He added that, according to officials at the William T. Cook Publishing Co., printer of the BELLE AIR, the Villanova yearbook and the University of Pennsylvania RECORD are among the largest college annuals printed in eastern United States.

JOB FACTS FROM DU PONT

DU PONT
BETTER THINGS FOR BETTER LIVING THROUGH CHEMISTRY

YOUR INTERESTS, SPECIAL ABILITIES ARE IMPORTANT WHEN DU PONT MAKES YOUR FIRST JOB ASSIGNMENT

ROOM TO GROW

by C. M. Forbes
Du Pont Representative

There's plenty of room to grow at Du Pont. One reason is that the very diversity of our products and processes requires specialists in almost every area of science and engineering. Another reason is that Du Pont continues to expand in many new directions.

For example, in 1957 sales reached $2 billion. Four new plants were being built. New research projects were launched, new products marketed.

In 1957, too, new technical men joined Du Pont in chemical, civil, mechanical, metallurgical, electrical, industrial, petroleum and mining engineering; in atomic energy, instrumentation, chemistry, physics, mathematics and many other fields.

All this activity points to as bright a future today as ever before in our long history. There's a place for the good graduate in this picture. If you would like more specific information on opportunities at Du Pont, we invite you to sign up for a Du Pont interview with your placement director.

DU PONT SUMMER JOB GIVES YOU A CHANCE TO EARN AND LEARN

Du Pont offers college juniors and qualified sophomores in technical fields the opportunity to earn college expense money this summer while they learn more about the kind of work that will be open to them when they graduate.

The Company has 75 plants and 98 laboratories located across 26 states—a spread that often gives the student a chance to work in or near his own section of the country. Some of these locations have openings for summer employment in 1958.

Students work side by side with practicing engineers and scientists. In this way they gain valuable experience to supplement classroom theory.

Last year, 407 students from 113 colleges took advantage of this program. Du Pont pays round-trip transportation expenses from home or school to place of employment. Students are not obligated to continue with the Company after graduation.

For complete details on this program, check with your college placement director.

SEND FOR INFORMATION BOOKLET

Booklets on jobs at Du Pont are yours for the asking. Subjects include: mechanical, civil, metallurgical, chemical, electrical, instrumentation and industrial engineers; atomic energy, technical sales, business administration, research and development. Name the subject that interests you in letter to Du Pont, 2494-E Nemours Building, Wilmington 98, Del.

Personalized Training Relates to Policy of Promotion from Within

Where do your interests lie? What courses have you taken? What are your special abilities? Du Pont tries to match these factors with available jobs to determine your first job assignment within the Company.

Once the assignment is made, the Company helps you apply your knowledge to a problem right away. You learn by doing—in consultation with your supervisor and others working on various phases of the same project. Your performance on the job is evaluated periodically, so you always know where you stand in the eyes of your management.

As you might guess, Du Pont's personalized training is closely related to its promotion policy. Almost all advancement is made from within the Company, so if your supervision has indicated that you are ready for promotion, and an opening occurs for which your training has prepared you, you are sure to be considered.

Although Du Pont employs about 90,000 people, management authority is decentralized through many departments into small groups—small enough so that the new man's capabilities can be recognized quickly. This type of organization, plus the Company's steady growth, produces many opportunities for the new man.

Literary Club Prepares Reorganization Program

Joe Kinney, president of the Literary Club, announced that elections for next year would take place the week school resumes after the Easter vacation.

Nominations for the offices of president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and a possible student council representative would be made at the March 10 meeting.

The present office of program chairman has been reconsidered and those duties will be given to the president whose job it will be to organize and set plans for meetings and activities of the organization.

Movies To Be Shown

Future plans of the club include the showing of a movie of literary as well as visual merit in May and before that in April, the tentative plans of sponsoring an art show on campus.

Anyone interested in joining the club should contact any of its present officers so that they may become eligible for election. Sophomore and Junior English majors should join the club for without them the activity will become a nonentity, Kinney said.

Sophomores Express Varied Opinions on Old, New Blazers

After evaluating the Robert Rollins' blazer, the Sophomore Blazer Committee, under Tom Hoffman, SC representative, decided to abandon the Rogers Peet coat of previous years and allow the Class of '60 to be the first to experiment with the Rollins' Company. The committee believed the Rollins' product to possess distinct virtues which the Peet blazer lacked.

The following are the feelings of some of the class:

John Williams—Education: "I feet that the blazer is a fine piece of workmanship. It fits well, looks good, and promises to wear well and long." With the majority of his fellow classmen he feels that the small defects are overshadowed by the merits of the final product.

Several men wished that the buttons were as firmly attached as the lint. Lost buttons is a common complaint, and replacement of lost buttons is another. Ron Mediatore, M.E., claims that buttons "pop off without our notice." He tried to replace his by applying directly to the factory where he learned that such buttons are sold only in wholesale lots. He suggests that the committee make them available in Dougherty Hall.

Jim Bomgan, ChE., who has worn his older brother's Rogers Peet blazer, claims, "Jack's worsted blazer has more body than my flannel one, and it still looks good after two years."

The new blazer came in for a great deal of praise. Chuck Ward, Arts, believes it will wear well over a long period of time. "The chief advantage," he contends, lies in the fact that it will resist creasing and will retain it shape longer than the Peet blazer. It might be an annoyance to keep brushing it off, but it's cheaper than having it re-shaped."

The general consensus was summarized by Tom Hoffman: "Robert Rollins has delivered a good blazer. The tailoring and the little extras make it somewhat superior to others, and, although there are problems, the company has promised complete cooperation in solving them. We have a blazer that will wear well for the next two and a half years."

Varied Openings

Opportunities vary from power and telephone companies, and research firms, to the aircraft industry, chemical firms and electronic laboratories.

Two of the firms are paying exceptionally well for summer employment. E. I. DuPont de Nemours and Company, Wilmington, Dela., will pay $450 per month. Sandia Corporation, New Mexico, will pay $390 per month.

Most of the power companies wages range between $300 and $335 per month. Some of the other firms will pay more, however.

Yantis reminds all juniors that they should send in their applications as soon as possible, since most firms begin actual selection of summer help at the end of March.

Earlier this month, the branch held its second annual Alumni Night. Panel speakers on the topic "Careers in Electrical Engineering" were Donald Best, Herman Driscoll, John Dougherty, and Joseph Kolcashick.

DPM Get 92 Pledges; Paddles Given Tonight

Delta Pi Mu, the liberal arts fraternity, had 92 applicants for membership at the opening of the 1958 pledging period last week, it was announced by co-pledgemaster Al Dombrowski.

Each pledge had to submit a photograph of himself for the fraternity's files and pay three dollars initiation fee to begin the five week orientation period.

For the first four weeks of the pledging period the novices will be under the guidance of Dombrowski and co-pledgemaster Joe Sayers. Sophomore Harry Rowe will assist the two junior fraternity members.

Get 'Big Brothers'

During the fifth week, the pledges will be assigned to their "big brothers," junior and senior members of DPM who will serve in an advisory capacity and also delegate certain "duties" to the newcomers.

For identification purposes, the pledges will have to wear "regs" during this last week. Dombrowski said that the nature of the "regs" could not be revealed as of yet.

Each pledge will be required to make a fraternity paddle for his "big brother.,' The "raw" paddles will be given out at a meeting tonight at 7:30 in 201 Vasey Hall.

Six Guided Tours Now Available To Soviet Union

A series of student and teacher tours have been arranged to Russia in cooperation with Intourist, the USSR government travel agency.

Each of the tours will be conducted by an American college instructor and will cover highlights of Europe, the Brussels' World's Fair as well as the historic cities of the Soviet Union.

Meet Counterparts

Members of the tours will have opportunities to meet their Russian student/teacher counterparts, to see the educational facilities, and to learn from personal observation the every-day life and ambitions of the Soviet student.

The tour programs are economically priced and arranged only for students and teachers.

Students who have been out of college for two years or less are eligible to join as well as students presently enrolled in college or senior high school.

Six Groups

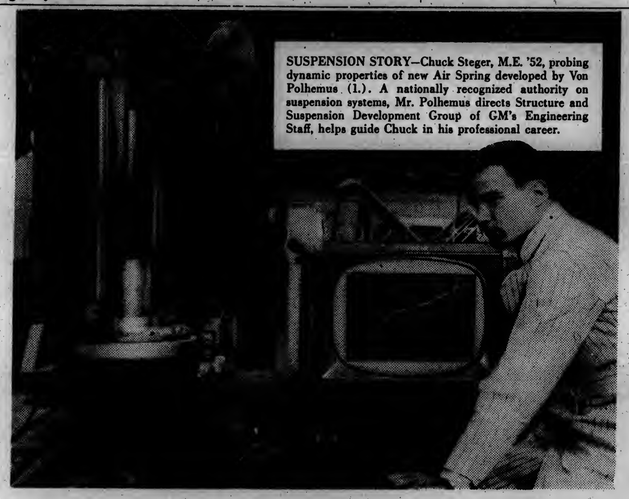
The six scheduled conducted groups are privately organized and information may be obtained from authorized travel agents or from the sponsoring agent, the Maupin Associates of Lawrence, Kansas, one of the few Intourist contractual representatives in the United States.

Swathmore Forum Plans Lectures

The fourth lecture in the 1958 Cooper Foundation Series will be held on Sunday evening at 8:15 p.m. in the Friend's Meeting House on the Swarthmore College campus.

Dr. Gordon W. Allport, Professor of Psychology, Harvard University, will speak on "Adapting the College Program to Meet the Needs of Individual Students."

The lecture is part of a series entitled "Goals and Philosophy of Higher Education."



Star Gazers Hear Fels Inst. Head

Robert W. Neathery, Director of Museum Education and a lecturer in the world famous Fels Planetarium of the Franklin Institute, was guest speaker at the February 11th meeting of the Astronomy Club.

Speaking on "Satellites Up to Date," Neathery's talk considered the history of rockets, their development today, rocket fuels, and the state of scientific intellectual capacity in the U.S. today.

A sound newsreel of the launching of a Jupiter-C rocket was shown. Color projection slides demonstrating the principle of satellite vehicles were also exhibited.

Neathery, who has been associated with the Fels Planeterium since 1942, was introduced by the Rev. Edward Jenkins, O.S.A., the club Moderator.

SUSPENSION STORY—Chuck Steger, M.E. '52, probing dynamic properties of new Air Spring developed by Von Polhemus (l.). A nationally recognized authority on suspension systems, Mr. Polhemus directs Structure and Suspension Development Group of GM's Engineering Staff, helps guide Chuck in his professional career.

Because engineering is a profession at GM
-we offer you a career-not a job

ONE REASON engineering standards at General Motors are so high is that GM recognizes engineering as a profession. And the men who engineer the many different products made by General Motors are respected for the profession they practice.

That is why, when you are invited to join General Motors as an engineer, you don't simply take a job—you start a career.

It is a career that is rewarding both professionally and financially—starting on your first day of association with General Motors at any one of its 35 divisions and 126 plants in 70 cities and 19 states.

During your early days at GM, for example, you work with a senior engineer who guides your career along professional lines.

You are also actively encouraged to pursue your education towards an advanced degree. For we at General Motors recognize that, in doing so, you will become more valuable to us and the engineering profession.

You are given the opportunity to obtain professional recognition through participation in engineering society forums, presentation of technical papers, winning of patents and other recognition of your accomplishments.

And you are also encouraged to take an active role in your community's affairs—because a truly professional man is a good citizen as well as a good engineer.

All this is for a reason—and a good one.

Many of the men who will fill the key positions at GM in the future are the young engineers joining GM today. This is not theory, it is fact. For 14 of our 33 Vice-Presidents are engineers, 23 of our 42 Division General Managers are engineers, too.

Today we are looking for young engineers—such as you—who may fill these positions tomorrow. The rewards—both professional and financial—are substantial. If you feel you have the ability, write us. It could be the most important letter of your life.

June graduates!

A General Motors Representative will be on hand to answer questions about job opportunities with GM.

position to see "certain people's" accomplishments. "Those who have shown their ability are those who were accepted for chairmanship".

Since his election, Ludmerer said he "has chosen men for committee chairmen who are characterized by their ability to work together. The success of the Ring Dance and the the Charity Ball, show specific instances of this combination of experience and teamwork."

Help Still Needed

Much work is still to be done on Junior Week committees. "All students who are interested should contact the various department chairmen," the class president added.

When asked the function of the Steering Committee, Ludmerer said, that they acted as an advisory board and represented the opinions of the entire campus.

He pointed out that Arts, Commerce and Finance, Engineering and Nursing are "fairly represented in the committee, and in this way a true cross section of opinion can be obtained."

Student Council Members To Attend NFCCS Confab

Villanova Student Council members have been invited to the meeting of the Regional Council of the National Federation of Catholic College Students to be held Sunday March 2 at 12:30 at St. Joseph's College.

At this meeting members are invited to discuss the prospects of the coming NFCCS state convention which will be conducted March 21,22 and 23 at Pittsburgh.

The theme of the convention will be "The Function and Responsibility of the Catholic College student." Three aspects of this theme will be discussed: social, personal (which will include spiritual) and intelectual.

Intellectual Villanovans

Villanova has been invited to send one or two men to speak and lead discussion on the intellectual aspect. Delegates from Villanova and elsewhere will also discuss NFCCS aims, the quality of its service to student governments and its possible future development.

SC To Attend

The student council plans at this time to send an official delegation to the conferences on Student government.

This Sunday night, following the regional meeting at St. Joseph's College, many of the Villanova delegates will attend the fourth annual series on "You and Marriage," to be sponsored by the Family Life Committee of the NFCCS.

The series is being conducted at LaSalle College on four Sundays. One was held last Sunday and the concluding three will be sponsored in the next three weeks in the Student Lounge at LaSalle located in the Library.

Pre-Law Society To Hear Students

The Pre-Law Club held business meeting at 10:30 this morning, it was announced by Donald Frank, society president.

In March, two students from the Villanova School of Law will address the club. A field trip to a federal court session in Philadelphia has also been planned.

Frank also announced that the club's yearly functions will close with a picnic in May.

VU Five Meets W. & L. Sat., St. Francis at FH Tuesday

By FRANK CUNNINGHAM

Al Severance's busy basketeers will engage the Generals of Washington & Lee University on Saturday night at the Palestra, and, on Tuesday will host St. Francis College, of Loretto, Pa. in the Field House.

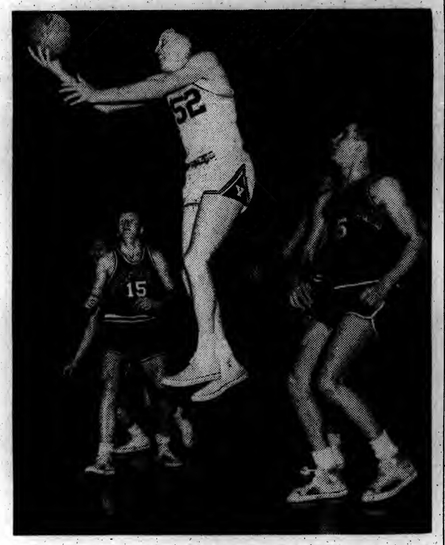
The Wildcats well remember the prowess of the Washington & Lee outfit, which extended the locals into overtime last year before bowing, 70-69, in a Palestra tilt.

The Southerners, coached by Lou Miller, are led by their prolific pointmaker, Dom Flora, who has pumped in 1676 points in his three previous varsity campaigns, and is well on his way to setting an all time W&L career scoring record.

Three Are 6-4

Abetting Flora will be a tall trio, all exceeding 6'4", consisting of Frank Hoss, Gene Girard, and Dave Nichols. All can leap and score well from inside.

The Washingtonians have lost their only two previous contests with the Main Liners, but this year have the shooting touch and rebounding power to give the 'Cats quite a scrap.



Their main weak spot appears to be a leaky defense, which Tom Brennan and Company will do their best to penetrate.

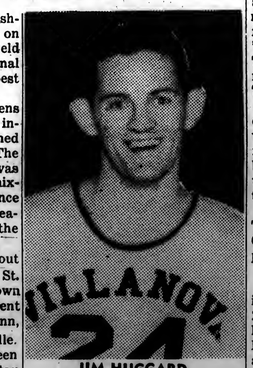
Frankies Are Tall

St. Francis comes to the Field House with one of the tallest teams in the country, its starting lineup averaging over 6-4.

Leading the Frankies is a 6-7 center, Jim McClellan, whom many experts have likened to St. Francis' all time great, Maurice Stokes, who rates second only to Bill Russell in rebounding in the National Basketball Association.

McClellan averaged close to 20 points and 17 rebounds per game last year as a junior.

John Scott lays up a shot against Penn last week. Jackie Follman (15) and Dick Czenszitz (5) don't try to defend.



Villanova Freshman Make Bid For Perfect Season

Villanova's high flying freshman basketball squad takes on the Temple Frosh in the Field House next Tuesday in the final game of what could be the best season in Villanova's history.

Last Wednesday the Kittens kept their unbeaten streak intact by outlasting a determined Pennsylvania team, 65-62. The following game with Drexel was canceled, however, due to a mix-up in scheduling, and hence Villanova's bid for a perfect season rests on the outcome of the coming bout with Temple.

The Temple team started out the season with wins over St. Joe's, Penn State, and Brown Prep, but fell to their current 4-4 record by losing to Penn, St. Joe's and twice to La Salle. Recently their cause has been hampered by the absence of star Norm Ginsburg, who has been suffering from an injured leg. Ginsburg, ex-All-Public choice from Olney High Philly, was top scorer for Temple in the early season, but it is not known if he will be ready for action by next Tuesday's game.

The Owl's other top performers have been Bernie Ivens, Stodie Watts, and George Palmer. Although they lack height, Palmer is their tallest man at 6'-2", co-coaches Barry Goldstein and Skip Wilson have developed a speedy, sharp-shooting team, attributes which are characteristic of basketball at Temple.

'Cats Thump Penn, Lose To Temple

There were more grey hairs for basketball Coach Al Severance both in victory and defeat this week as the Wildcats continued the erratic play that has been typical of them all year.

Wednesday night, against a physically strong Pennsylvania club, the 'Cats played outstanding ball in the first half and ran up a 44-21 lead by intermission.

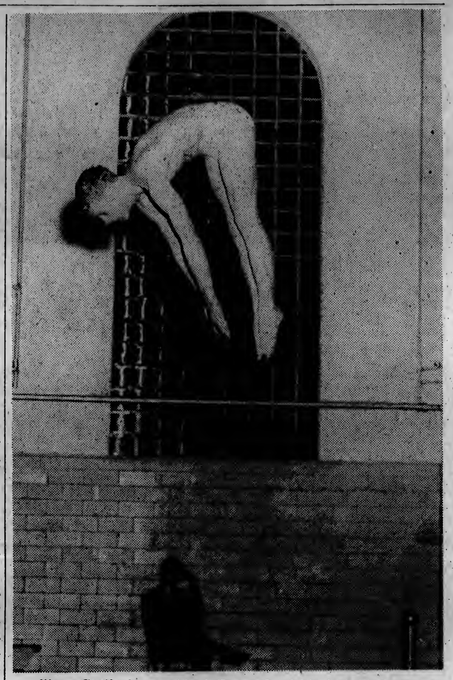
However, they showed a sharp reversal of form in the second half as the Quakers raced to within 11 points of the bewildered Wildcats, prompting thoughts of "Oh no! Not again!"

At this point the Villanovans regained enough poise to take control and post a relatively easy 73-61 victory.

Scott High Scorer

John Scott, playing one of his better games of the season, was high man for the 'Cats with 19, and was closely followed by captain Tom Brennan, with 17. Both men were large contributors to the Wildcats 54-38 domination of the boards which spelled victory.

Saturday, playing without the services of Tom and Matt Brennan due to their father's unfortunate death on Friday, the 'Cats ran into a tourney-bound Temple team that was just too much to handle, and lost by 73-58.



The Owls jumped off to a quick 16-2 lead in the first seven minutes, and played the rest of the game in a fashion befitting a nationally ranked team that had won 19 consecutive games.

Guy Rodgers, the confident Temple All-American, led the Owls with an effortless 27-point performance.

Kelly 'Shining Light

Jack Kelly's consistent hustling efforts were rewarded with 26 points, as he was a shining light amid much darkness. From the floor, the foul line, and off the boards, Kelly was the whole show for Villanova. His 12 for 12 performance from the foul line set a new Palestra record.

The 'Cats did degister 89% in their foul shooting, but could gather only 17 field goals, as they constantly found difficulty getting away a good shot—as is indicated by their 20% average from the floor.

Steve Cartin is caught at the peak of his jack-knife dive in the Temple meet. The official in the background doesn't seem very interested.

Swimmers Host Hoyas In Finale On Saturday

After resoundingly beating an outmanned Temple squad, 55-19, last Wednesday, the swimming team winds up its regular schedule by facing Georgetown in the Field House pool on Saturday afternoon at 2:00 p.m.

Coach Ed Geisz's team will be attempting to chalk up victory number eight against the Hoyas from Washington, D. C. VU's record now stands at 7-2-2.

Beyond the Georgetown meet, the swimmers have a date to go to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis for the Eastern championships, which run March 13 through 15.

Owls No Sweat

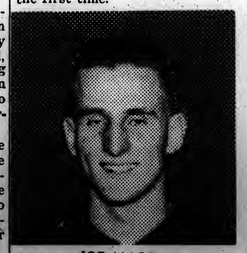
Temple never gave the Wildcats much cause for concern last Wednesday. The Owls only have seven men on their squad, thus forcing them into entering only one man in each event. In fact, they made no attempt to compete in the 200-yard butterfly, so the event was not held.

Aside from the workout the Villanova swimmers got, the meet afforded Geisz the opportunity to experiment with some of his younger men and to allow some swimmers to compete in events other than their normal ones.

In that regard, the meet proved successful. Two of the individual winners were sophomores, while one of these plus another sophomore were part of winning relay teams.

Soph Victors

Steve Cartin, a soph, was top man in the diving competition. Junior Bill Gillhool took second.



Soph Gene Hewitt took first place in the 200-yard backstroke. Junior Jerry Cechony was second.

Another Soph, Joe Harvey won the 200-yard breaststroke. Hewitt swam on the quartet which copped the 400-yard medley relay, while yet another second-year man, Bill Lyons, swam the third leg on the victorious 400-yard freestyle relay team.

By far the most noteworthy performance in the meet was that of Joe Mason, junior transfer from the University of Pittsburgh. Mason was clocked in :54.9 for the 100-yard freestyle, his best time for the event this year.

Rumbarger Triumphs

John Rumbarger won the 50-yard freestyle. He was followed by Cartin, in the sprints for the first time.

JOE MASON

The winning 400-yard medley relay team was composed of Larry Palacio, Win Wilson, Frank Keefe and Hewitt.

Palacio returned to team up with Bruce McCreedy, Jim Gregory, and Lyons in copping the 400-yard freestyle relay.

Bob Pinto took second in the 220-yard freestyle, while his brother, Lou, finished in the same position in the 440-yard freestyle. The same Temple man beat both of them—Ed Hall, the meet's lone double winner.

'Cats Dethroned in AAU; Collymore, Delany Victors

Villanova's track team, obviously not going all-out to defend its National AAU indoor championship, still managed to create quite a stir last Saturday night in Madison Square Garden.

Ed Collymore, more at home in the longer 100 and 220 where his long stride comes in handy, had the best indoor night of his career in beating Ira Murchison in the 60-yard sprint.

Ron Delany ran the second fastest indoor mile of his young career—four minutes, 3.7 seconds—and only missed tying the world's indoor record by one-tenth of a second.

George Sydnor, gradually getting back into the swing of things, ran a strong third to Collymore in the 60 final. Sydnor only returned to the sprints a week previous, after sticking to the mile relay team because of pulled thigh muscles.

Reavis Didn't Win

Phil Reavis, experiencing his first non-winning or non-tying night this year, had to settle for a share of second place behind Herman Wyatt of the Santa Clara Youth Center.

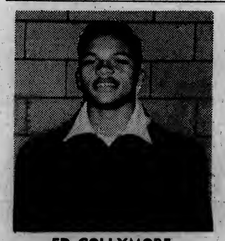
Title Team Depleted

Coach Jumbo Elliott, with his sight set on this week's IC4A meet, felt that the Wildcats didn't have much chance of repeating as National AAU champs, since Jenkins, Bragg, Alex Breckenridge, John Kopil, Al Paterson, Gene Maliff, John Furlinger and George Browne were all missing from the title team of a year ago.

Rather than go all out and have Delany run a double, and have a few of the others double-up for the mile relay and sprint medley, Elliott decided to concentrate on the IC4A.

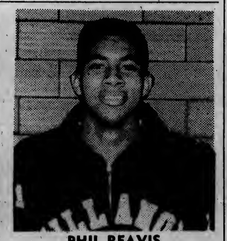
As Assistant Coach Jim Tuppeny said last week, "Since we're not very deep, it's better if we keep our aim rather low. We could shoot the works on the AAU by working the boys very hard for the two reaysl, but we'd still have a rough time beating the clubs.

Pressed by Hungarian



Delany was pushed to his near-record time by Hungarian Istvan Rozsavolgyi, outdoor record-holder in the 1000, 1500, and 2000 meters.

The Hungarian took a lead of 10 yards with only two laps left in the race, but Delany flamed the final two, winning quite easily by 15 yards. Ron's time for the last quarter-mile was a fabulous 56.4.



Delany's best previous indoor time was 4:30.8. He post it at the Chicago Daily News meet last year.

Collymore's performance was a slight surprise for one reason—the week before in the NYAC meet, he had not even made the final. His meet record tying 6.2 probably would have been enough to beat or tie Dave Sime, who was forced to drop out of the final.

Hurdler Bob Holup, broad-jumper John Buckley, and high-jumper Charley Stead were all shut out in their events.

All-Catholic All-American

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

It's all-star team time again... We got a letter from Ed Adams, Sports Editor of the Xavier University News the other day... He wants to know our choices for an All-Catholic All-American team... At first, we figured it would be simple... But somehow, the Catholic colleges got hold of a lot of the better basketball talent in the land... If someone cares to check, he'll find that two or three of the top prospects for All-American honors who play for non-Catholic schools are themselves Catholic... But according to the rules for Adams' "Dream Team," these are not eligible...

Anyway, here's our team: Gene Brown (San Francisco), Elgin Baylor (Seattle), Alex (Boo) Ellis (Niagara), Tom Hawkins (Notre Dame), and Jim Smith (Steubenville)... The latter is our surprise pick... Watch for him to make it big with the pros... We could have picked another club almost as strong ... There's no doubt about it—at least in basketball, the Catholic teams have a greater percentage of top-ranked teams than the non-Catholic ones... As of Sunday, the first six clubs picked for the NIT, plus Manhatten and Notre Dame in the NCAA tourney, are all Catholic...

We're not going to send Adams our own choices... Instead, we're opening the balloting to the student body... Pick five players regardless of the position they play... There will be an envelope on the board in the VILLANOVAN office in Dougherty... Put your ballots in it before 4:30 Friday...

The usual Villanova basketball cries of "wait 'til next year" are once again the buzz... Now they say Jimmy Huggard, Jim Kenny, John Driscoll, Bob Libersatore et al. will save Wildcat basketball... That's what we heard in 1956 about Joe Ryan, Kenny Harrison, George Emma and that the rest of that year's freshman team... Last year it was "we're waiting for Scottie" ... Next year never seems to come... Don't get us wrong... We're hoping just like everyone else... Perhaps with Ryan, Harrison and Emma then mature seniors, Scott and Raveling and maybe even Rieder poised juniors, and the new bunch applying height in the person of Driscoll and spark via Huggard, things will jell... But note the PERHAPS...

Doffs of the cap to: Jack Kelly, for returning in the greatest two weeks of basketball the Palestra has seen in years... Coach Al Severance, for holding up well in the face of repeated Wildcat inanities in the Penn fray... Bill Scott, captain of the pistol team, who continues to rate with the best in the land... George Sydnor, a game, great guy, who continued his climb back in the AAU track meet... Phil Reavis, for his Sports Illustrated cover and story... Swimmer John Rumbarger, who triumphed spectacularly in the Temple meet... So far Jon Konrads has not answered the challenge... Ed Geisz, for turning in another wonderful season without scholarships... Jim Elliott, Jim Tuppeny and Frank Reagan, for getting the outdoor IC4A championships for Goodreau Stadium in May...

Baseball Coach Art Mahan has issued a call for all batterymen to report for action today... That appeal is especially to sophomores, now eligible for varsity competition... Freshmen are to come out too... Seven or eight will be carried with the varsity for experience sake... Tickets for the indoor IC4A's are still on sale at a buck a throw in Dougherty... Best buy of the century... It was good for the morale to see the Inquirer run the story on Don Luzzi's and Tony Varrechione's going to Canada AFTER it ran in the VILLANOVAN....

Fame Follows Athletic Career of Jack Kelly

By TERRY ROCHELLE

Given: an outstanding basketball career in college and a phenomenal high school athletic record in Ohio. The conclusion: any Villanovan must draw is that it is Jack Kelly, currently starring for Wildcat courtmen.

The 26 point, 15-rebound performance of Jack against Temple last week is just another in the scrapbook of this tall 6'3" Ohian. Beginning in his days at St. Edward's High School in Lakewood Ohio, fame has followed his accomplishments.

Developed under the guiding hand of his coach Jim Connors, Jack became the highsest scorer in Northeastern Ohio history as well as leading the team in the rebounding and playmaking department.

'Kel' Hot in Tourney

In three state tournament games in his senior year "Kel" scored 128 and was chosen to play in the North-South Sigh School game at Murray, Kentucky. In his college career he has faced two of the players that participated in that game, All-American canidates Archie Dees of Indiana and Bobby Harris of Duke.

During the Duke game this year, "Kel" stole the ball from Harris and drove down the court for an easy two points. This certainly didn't make him feel at all bad either!

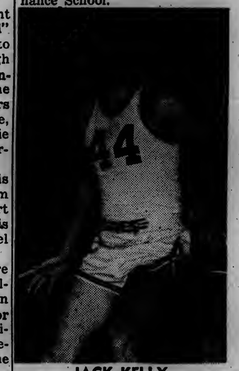
Beseiged by offers from more than 40 colleges, Jack chose Villanova following a trip down here in the spring of his senior year. Instrumental in his decision was William 'Peep' Sheehan, who last year received the Most Loyal Alumnus award.

While at Villanova his accomplishment, while not spectacular, have been outstanding and varied.

Established As Soph

Five times during his freshman year he scored over 30 points. Sophomore year saw him breaking into the starting varsity lineup and establishing himself on the court scene.

This year he is averaging about 14 points per game and has been playing brilliantly. Two weeks ago he was named to the ECAC All East team as he scored 65 points in three games, including 28 against St. Joseph's.



One of his proudest performances was his 16 rebound effort against West Virginia this year.

While his hardwood exploits are best known to Villanova students, there are other sides to the life of Jack.

Diamond Star Also

One is the baseball player good enough to receive scholarship offers to college and to be carefully watched by big league scouts. In fact he expects to sign a contract upon graduation.

In contrast to Jack the athlete is Jack the student. Three semesters of his college life he has made the Dean's list and ranks high in the Marketing section of the Commerce and Finance School.

JACK KELLY

Active in extra-carricular activities, he has served as secretary of his class in his Junior year, Vice President of Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity, on the class steering committee for two years, on the Sactuary Society and was honored this fall by being selected for membership in Who's Who in American colleges and Universities.

The third and most important of Jack's interests is Miss Kathie McKenna, his high school sweetheart, to whom he is engaged. A November wedding is in the offing.

Wildcats Dropped AAU

But There's Still The IC4A's

Villanova's track team, having seen its National Amateur Athletic Union crown snatched from its one-year possession last week, will return to Madison Square Garden Saturday night to defend the IC4A championship.

The Wildcats will attempt to duplicate last year's spectacular effort—winning the national collegiate title with the smallest team in the history of the meet.

Coach Jumbo Jim Elliott quite frankly does not expect to see it happen.

Lost Plenty

He points to the loss of 600-yard victor Charley Jenkins, to that of pole vault winner Don Bragg, and especially to that of five unheralded team members whose valuable points earned through winning the mile relay and taking seconds, thirds and fourths in other events, were so big a part of the Wildcats' 46-point total.

John Furlinger, Gene Maliff, and Al Peterson are gone from the mile relay squad which took first-place.

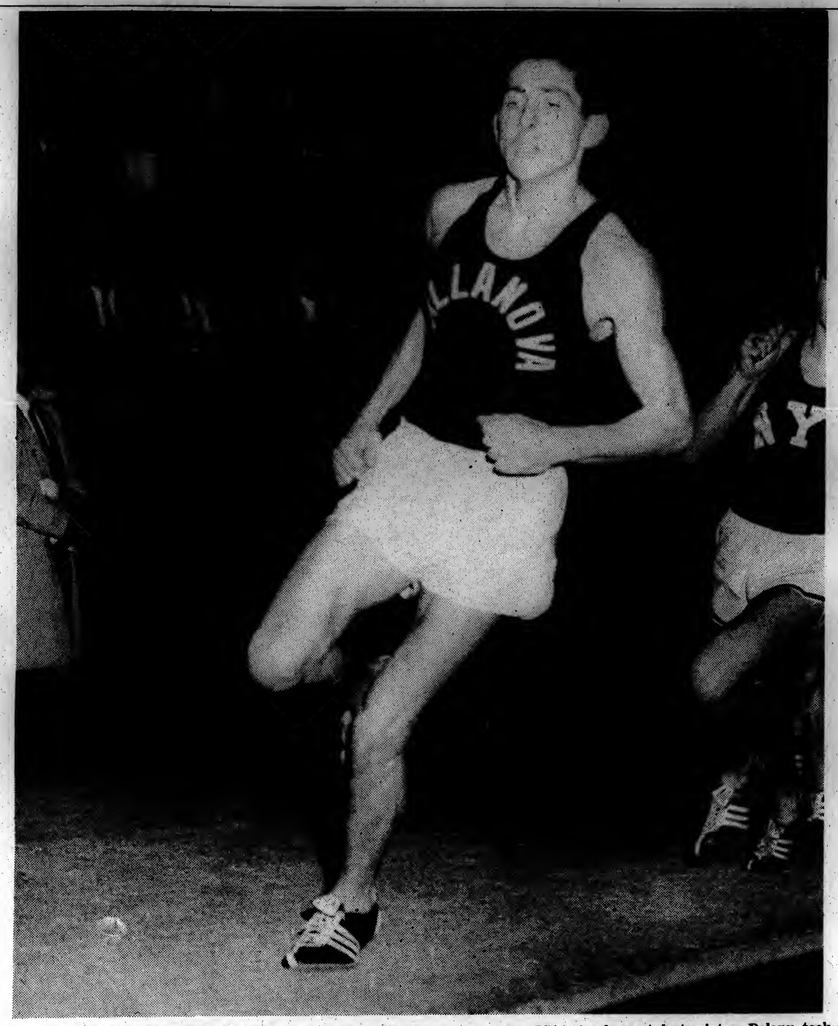
John Kopil, second to Burr Grim in the mile, has departed.

Alex Breckenridge, third to Ron Delany in the two-mile, is back on the Main Line—but strictly as a visitor to local friends. He too has graduated.

Maybe Not Enough

Elliott will attempt to do a juggling act with the good-quality, poor-quantity team he has this year. The Wildcats quite possibly will have a tremendous night. But it still might not be enough to win.

The reasons? Two of them: Manhatten and Notre Dame.



Manhatten won the IC4A title every year from 1951 through 1956, was belted by the Wildcats last year, and now is covetiously eying it anew. The Jaspers have the strength and depth to reign again.

Notre Dame has entered the IC4A meet in full force for the first time. The Irish could beat both Villanova and Manhatten, and take the championship out to the Midwest.

Manhatten Lineup

Here, in brief, is what Manhatten has to offer:

Tom Murphy, almost a sure shot winner in the 600. He ran a solid second to Jenkins last week in the AAU. It appears that no collegian can touch him.

Ron Delany goes into the first turn of the 1,000 yard run at the IC4A track meet last winter. Delany took a first place in the race, then came back to win an unprecented double by taking the two mile race. Close on the heels of Ron is Ike Matza of NYU.

JIM ELLIOTT

Joe Soprano, who has waged a duel with North Caroline's Dave Scurlock for the 1000-yard races all winter. Scurlock, like a number of good runners, will remain at home for the Atlantic Coast Conference indoor championships. Soprano has the best time (thus far this year) of all these who will compete—2:13.3.

Gene Martin, who has the best 1958 time in the two-mile—9:27—now that Pete Close, of St. John's, has decided to move down to the mile.

Henry White, whose 6-4 high-jumping has him tied for third among college athletes.

Joe Marchiony, who is probably on top among Eastern college shot putters (best this winter :54-feet, 10¼ inches).

Mile relay team, conqueror of Villanova twice on the boards so far, loser once (in the Inquirer meet). Best time: 3:18.6.

Two-mile relay team, which has the best time again: 7:36.1.

Irish Strong

Notre Dame's challenge is more modest, but the Irish have possible winners in the 60 (Joe Foreman—best time 6.3), 60 hurdles (Steve Goonbode—7.4), 1000 (Dale Vanderburg—has done 1:51 in the 880).

Also, Lee Cornello (4.14) in the mile, Ed Monnelly (9.28) and Mike Haverty (9.36) in the two mile, Ed Sanforan (6-4) in the high jump, and Jack Coty (23-feet, 6 inches) in the broad jump, all figure to earn points.

What Villanova will have going for it, of course, is the fact that Ron Delany will attempt another tremendous double, running the 1000 and the two-mile, both of which he won last year, in what AAU official Dan Ferris called "the greatest exhibition of running" he had ever seen.

Still Not Certain

Most people think that Delany can repeat his two wins. But that in itself won't ensure a Villanova victory.

Wildcat strength could lie in the sprint, where Eddie Collymore won last week in the AAU, with George Sydnor third.

Phil Reavis can be expected to bounce back for a win in the high jump, but Ed King of Cornell has done 6-8½ this year in a dual meet and pull an upset. Charley Stead, were he to regain his knack of a year ago, could conceivably jump as well as Reavis. He tied Phil in the IC4A's last year.

Holup in Hurdles

Bob Holup was fourth last year in the high hurdles, but he might find the competition a mite improved. Jack Van Deusan will also enter here.

John Buckley was a distinct disappointment last week in the broad jump. He fouled in all three tries. With best effort, this soph could push the top men in the event. Kent Lydic, once a pole vaulter, will try broadjumping.

Ron Brady, another soph pole vaulter, so far has not lived up to his high-school clippings. If he's ever going to come, Villanova fans hope it's this week. He'll be joined in the vault by Norm Cyprus.

For the mile, Elliott plans to run soph Bob Godesky, ordinarily a 1000 man. Vic Di Maio will run with Delany in the 1000.

As of right now, Jumbo won't enter a mile relay team, the thought being that with the large number of heats and semi-finals, it would be difficult rounding up a fresh squad.

Any Freshman or Sophomore interested in becoming a Baseball manager can contact Mr. Charles Farnan in the basement of the Field House.

Bloodmobile Comes Today, Villanova Quota 500 Pints

Today and tomorrow, the annual Villanova Blood Drive will present the opportunity to all Villanovans to donate blood on campus.

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will set up its temporary quarters in Alumni Gym from 9:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. on both days.

Until last year, Villanova was one of the top donors to the Wayne district Bloodmobile with average donations of 350 to 400 pints of blood.

Quota Raised

This year's quota has been raised to 500 pints of blood. Leo Rogers, chairman of the Spirit Committee and director of this year's annual drive, has stated that this is a reasonable quota, since it is only 17% of the total undergraduate enrollment.

Among the advantages gained by Villanovans donating blood is a plan whereby any member of the donor's family in need of a transfusion within the next year, is guaranteed all the blood necessary from the Red Cross at no cost.

Also free juices, coffee, and donuts will be provided to the donor after donating his blood.

350 Sign

As of last Thursday, 350 students, priests and lay teachers had signed up for appointments. Anyone who did not previously register is also welcome to donate.

Students under the age of 21, however, are required to have signed permission slips from their parents in order to donate.

If anyone should miss their assigned time, they may drop in at anytime, but to keep the program moving smoothly, all are urged to try to conform to the schedule.

Regular Meal

The donor is requested to eat a regular meal at least four or more hours prior to the giving of blood. They should also try to avoid eating fats, fried foods and eggs during the four hour period.

Eight weeks must lapse before the donor may donate blood again.

Law School Forum Hears Kilpatrick

James Jackson Kilpatrick, editor of the RICHMOND NEWS LEADER and leading States Rights spokesman, will address the Forum of the School of Law of Villanova at 8:30 the evening of Wednesday, March 5. His topic will be "The Soverign States."

Mr. Kilpatrick was born in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, in 1920. He was educated in the public schools of Oklahoma City, and was graduated from the University of Missouri, with the degree of Bachelor of Journalism, in March of 1941.

He came directly to THE RICHMOND NEWS LEADER as a general reporter. Following several years covering State and Federal courts and offices, he was assigned to The NEWS LEADER'S Capitol staff. There he covered the General Assembly, the Governor's office, and State political news.

In 1953, Mr. Kilpatrick was honored by the University of Missouri for distinguished service in journalism, as the result of a two-year editorial campaign for the release from prison of a Negro life-termer who had been mistakenly convicted of murder. In 1956, he won the annual award of Sigma Delta Chi, honorary journalism fraternity, for distinguished editorial writing, the result of a campaign in support of the constitutional doctrine of interposition. Pequignot Urges '57 Registration

Mr. George Pequignot, Alumni Director at Villanova, has announced that many seniors failed to register with the Alumni Office on Registration Day.

He urges all those who did not sign up at that time to stop in the Alumni Office in Mendel Hall and do so.

There are several reasons for this registration of seniors. Upon graduation in June they will become members of the Alumni organization and this group must be kept as strong and close as possible.

By signing up now they will be notified of all functions of the group, such as the big reunion in June and the Homecoming in the Fall.

Bob Murphy and Joe Schneider are planning this year's Junior Week. Murphy and Schneider were recently named co-chairmen of the entire week, in charge of the coordination of the many activities to come the last week of April.

Intramural Dept. To Sponsor Return of Amateur Night

Amateur Night, for years one of the most entertaining and successful affairs held on campus, but of late eliminated from the annual social schedule, will make a re-appearance sometime within the next two months.

Not since 1943 has Villanova held a show in which individual amateur performers among the student body took part.

Supervision of the affair will be under the direction of the Intramural Department, just as it was in the years before.

Date Not Set

Intramural head Ed Geisz, director of the Amateur Night and one of five members of the affair's committee, said yesterday that the actual date will be announced shortly.

Others on the committee are Rev. John R. Dunne, O.S.A., moderator of the Intramural Department; Rev. Michael O'Donnell, O.S.A., chairman; John Lumsden, assistant director; and Jim Corey, president of the Intramural Council.

Corey has already been chosen master of ceremonies.

Any type of entertainment act can be in the show, beginning with singers, dancers, comedians, musicians, groups of singers, dramatic groups, and extending through trick acts, earwigglers, gymnasts, acrobats and jugglers.

Fill Out Entry Blank

Anyone who wants to enter must fill out an entry blank and turn it into the Intramural Office, 109 Alumni Director Geisz recommends that entries be returned as soon as possible, so that the program can be planned.

The VILLANOVAN has agreed to support the Intramural Department in the show, and is publishing the entry blank schools who did not take part in the last symposium held in November.

Nominations for administerial posts in the organization will be held sometime at the end of March and elections to the vacated offices will take place after Easter, the new officers taking over at the end of that month.

To Sponser Art Show

In conjunction with Opera-Classica, the Literary Club will be a co-sponsor of an art show sometime after the Easter vacation.

Anyone who does any type of art work and wishes to enter his works in the show should contact either Joe Kinney, Tom Martinez, Jerry LaKarnefeau of the club, Raymond Burns, moderator of the club and a member of the English department, Dr. Robert S. O'Shea of the philosophy department, or Mr. Anthony L. Angeline of the Department of Finance in the Commerce and Finance School.

Belle Masque Ticket Sale Begins Today in Cafeteria

Rev. William Farrell, O.S.A., moderator of the Belle Masque Dramma Society has announced that tickets for the Spring production of Shakespeare's "The Taming of The Shrew" will go on sale tomorrow.

The play will be presented on March 20 through 23 in the Villanova Field House. The tickets will be sold in the Day Hop Cafeteria between the hours of 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Prices will be $1.00 for students and $1.50 general admission.

Reserve Seats

Father Farrell announced, also, that ticket sales will once again be under the direction of Jerry McGrath who will be assisted by Bob Brennan. McGrath stated that in keeping with the society's policy, all seats for the show will be sold on a reserve basis.

McGrath stressed that in the past, many students have misinterpreted the prices and to whom they apply. "All students", McGrath said, "are charged $1.00 for every ticket they purchase, whether the tickets be for a date, friend or member of their family. Also students from other schools may purchase tickets at the student rate.

The seating capacity for each show will be limited to 604, thus necessitating the reserve seat plans. The society feels that since many people, in the past, have complained about the crowded conditions that are prevalent on Fridays and Saturday nights that it is in the best interest of the audience to limit the seating capacity, all to insure the theater-goer an enjoyable evening.

Post Show Criticism

Belle Masque invites all to participate in the criticism that will follow the Thursday evening performance. The audience, as in the Fall, will be invited to remain for the criticism with Mr. Richard Duprey, the director, and the cast. Duprey stated that "last semester many faculty members and guests were present but there was a noticeable lack of student participation". He added that "this would afford the student a wonderful opportunity to throw a few bricks or bouquets in the direction of Belle Masque, as they see fit."

The society hopes that the reserve seat plan will be an added incentive to the student to purchase his tickets early. Seats will be sold on a first come first served basis.

LKD, Arranges Dinner Dance

Lambda Kappa Delta Fraternity will hold their annual dinner-dance on April 26.

The affair will be held at the Falcon House Restaurant on West Chester Pike in Manoa. Last year, there was a large turnout.

President Martin Dohaney expects an equal turnout this year. Among those present will be the head of the Biology department, Dr. McClain, and his assistants, Mr. DeCaro and Dr. Lowrey, and their wives.

The favors will be miniture beer mugs inscribed with the name of the fraternity. The dinner-dance will be semi-formal in dress and probably last from 7 until 1. The band to be employed has not yet been disclosed.

Ling Howe, distant cousin of Ching Chow, says it is wisely written that the trouble with opportunity is that it comes disguised as hard work.

Tn'T's "Who's Foo" in April, Collins Business Manager

By TOM MARTINEZ

The Turf and Tinsel organization is in the midst of preparations for their forthcoming spring production "Who's Foo," a satire on the fictitious character, Dr. Fu Manchu, as created by Sax Rhomer.

Chinatown in New York at the turn of the century will be the setting for this musical comedy that has as its main plot the famous Tong Wars of that period.

George Pequignot and Bob Whalen wrote the book and music respectively. They can be remembered for their fine past efforts which include "Barbara of Seville," "Jessica James," "Robin Hood Wink" and many others.

'Toga' Last Year

Last years' success, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga," was the first time that the production was put in the hands of an undergraduate.

This innovation was commendable as Bobby Shiller of the class of 1957 wrote an excellent book and music.

The choreography for this year's show will be done by George Noake whose talents have been put to good use in past productions as well as in amateur shows in the Philadelphia area.

Gerry Gobright, president of Turf and Tinsel, announced that Tom Collins, senior marketing major from Lynbrook, Long Island, has been appointed business manager for this year.

Help Wanted

One of the great difficulties that has arisen so far this year is the lack of help for the business staff. This includes advertising and publicity.

Since all of the members of these staffs graduated last year a large void has been noticed.

Both Gobright and Collins urge that anyone interested should contact them or any members soon.

Dependable underclassmen, especially those in the Commerce and Finance School, should apply for the business staff since it would be an opportunity for them to gain valuable experience and practice of what they learn in class," Gobright said.

Casting for the production which will appear Wednesday night April 23 and continue until April 26 is in its final stages with the dancing chorus being one of the last selections.

VU Marketing Club Awards Senior Prize

The award is to be based on scholastic achievement, extra-curricular activities and contribution to the general welfare and advancement of the club.

Business Meeting

Last Thursday, final action was taken on current old business that had been carried on the minutes for the past few meetings. The meeting was conducted by club president McHugh and Vice-president Dick Poli.

A field trip was taken to Allen Wood Steel Company in Norristown recently and the members heard a talk by a company advertising executive.

Placement Office

Later in February the club was instructed in the operations of the Placement Office by Director John A. Moritz.

S. C. Creates Information Group from Frosh Members

By FRANK DYNAN

Jim Lynch and Frank Dunn, the newly elected freshman Student Congress representatives were welcomed to the Student Congress at last Wednesday night's meeting.

Before going into the business of the meeting Pat Nicholson read a letter from NFCCS stressing its role in aiding Catholic colleges with their problems. The purpose of NFCCS as explained in the letter is to request the opinions of its member colleges on problems it brings to light, and advise the various colleges on their problems from the information it has gathered.

In relation to NFCCS, Nicholson's' proposal that the Student Council augment NFCCS funds in order to send six delegates to the NFCCS State Congress in Pittsburgh was later carried.

Don Kempf, handling the sportsmanship award for the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia announced that unofficially Villanova has dropped to last place in the contest. The final standings will be decided after the St. Joe's-La Salle game. Defending Villanova spirit, Pat Nicholson, claimed that "spirit at Villanova is extremely high". "When the students stop criticising Al Severence, he said, when they stop asking why the team doesn't win, then they will have no spirit". He conceded however that Villanova must have victories to keep up the spirit. He added that he is going to send a letter to Frank Reagan congratulating him for bringing bigtime football back to Villanova.

Society Recognized

The committee reports contained an announcement by Bob Murphy, that the clean-up campaign in the day-hop cafeteria began February 27th. Pat Nicholson urged that the students should "do what a man of twenty-one should do instead of throwing slop around". In addition it was reported that the Semper Fidelis Society has been recognized by the Fraternities and Societies Committee retroactive to February, 1957.

In order to train the two new freshman members, Pat Nicholson announced the formation of a Public Information Committee. It will be made up solely of two new members whose duties are to assist the secretary in recording, the Congress, minutes and to make available to the student body all announcements from the various local colleges.

Three proposals by Nicholson were carried at the meeting. They were that a committee be formed to investigate the advantages of Villanova's joining the United States National Student Association; that a committee be formed to investigate the establishment o fa Council of the Knights of Columbus on campus; and the previously mentioned proposal to augment the funds of NFCCS.

It was decided that Jerry McGrath's proposal, that a student who flunked a course will not be required to repeat that course under the same instructor unless waivered by the student, be reworded and sent to the Academic Acairs Committee for consideration.

Unanimously recommended for passage by the Student Congress were proposals by Tom Whalen, that the 1958 undergraduates wear the colored hood instead of the colored tassel;

Preparations are now well under way for the second issue of the LYNX. The editors expect to be able to announce a definite date of publication within a week.

Tomorrow's LYNX meeting will make the final decisions and plans regarding the second issue.

Also featured will be a series of sketches and an article on Philadelphia's "Jungle," and another in the popular "Conversation" series.

All interested parties have been invited to attend the meeting at 2:30 or 3:30 in the Publications, Office, second floor Doughterty Hall.

Support Shamokinaki

Dancers at last year's Shamokinaki seem to be having a wonderful time. The encire proceeds of the dance, which will be held in the Villanova Field House Friday night, will go to the Augustinian missionaries in Japan. The music for the event will be supplied by Lou Denison and his orchestra.

The Fraternities and Societies Committee has been granted new powers in addition to the necessary old powers it has been exercising. The committee is headed by chairman Joe Murphy. Five members of the Student Congress will comprise the committee with no more than three members being from the same class and no more than two members being from the same division.

(4) A list of members.
(5) The contemplated faculty advisor.

The group also must have two consecutive semesters of activities previous to its petition, and after consideration by the Committee, approval by the Dean of Student Activities whose decision will be final.

Two Thirds Vote

Concerning the disciplinary action taken by the Student Senate at the committees recommendation, an organization is ejected by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. Such disciplinary action is taken by the Council against any official campus organization when the organization performs any activity detrimental to the University or fails to comply with the Constitution and By-laws or any rules and regulations passed by the Student Council and approved by the administration.

Organizations rejected by the council may seek re-admission no sooner than April fifteenth

Gerry Hepburn Appointed Jr. Week Prom Chairman

Through Junior Week co-chairmen Bob Murphy and Joe Schneider, Junior Class President Vic Ludmerer has announced the appointment of Gerry Hepburn as Prom chairman.

At the same time, Murphy and Schneider revealed that Dinner-Dance chairman Oz Scogna has been able to secure the brand-new Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia for that affair.

The Sheraton is one of the most modern hotels in the country, having been completed just last year. The Dinner-Dance will be the first college affair ever held there.

Hepburn is the junior day-hop engineering representative on the Student Council. He is also in the NROTC program.

His appointment marks the first time that one man has ever handled two of the largest functions in Junior Year—he was also chairman of the Ring Dance.

It was because of the fine job Hepburn did on the Ring Dance that Ludmerer was prompted to give him the new assignment.

Hepburn, a graduate of La-Salle High in Philadelphia, is

After the tour the group had the pleasure of speaking with Dr. W. F. G. Swann, who has been the director of the Bartol Institute since 1929.

Also, in a joint meeting with the Chemical Society, the Physics club on last Wednesday evening, was given an enlightening lecture on the implications of Aristotelian Metaphysics in Modern science.

'Toga' Last Year

Last years' success, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga," was the first time that the production was put in the hands of an undergraduate.

This innovation was commendable as Bobby Shiller of the class of 1957 wrote an excellent book and music.

The choreography for this year's show will be done by George Noake whose talents have been put to good use in past productions as well as in amateur shows in the Philadelphia area.

Gerry Gobright, president of Turf and Tinsel, announced that Tom Collins, senior marketing major from Lynbrook, Long Island, has been appointed business manager for this year.

Help Wanted

One of the great difficulties that has arisen so far this year is the lack of help for the business staff. This includes advertising and publicity.

Since all of the members of these staffs graduated last year a large void has been noticed.

Both Gobright and Collins urge that anyone interested should contact them or any members soon.

Dependable underclassmen, especially those in the Commerce and Finance School, should apply for the business staff since it would be an opportunity for them to gain valuable experience and practice of what they learn in class," Gobright said.

Casting for the production which will appear Wednesday night April 23 and continue until April 26 is in its final stages with the dancing chorus being one of the last selections.

VU Marketing Club Awards Senior Prize

The Marketing Club, one of the largest organizations on campus held a business meeting on Thursday February 20th Club President Joe McHugh presented a motion that the club vote to award $25 to next year's outstanding senior. The award is to be based on scholastic achievement, extra-curricular activities and contribution to the general welfare and advancement of the club.

Business Meeting

Last Thursday, final action was taken on current old business that had been carried on the minutes for the past few meetings. The meeting was conducted by club president McHugh and Vice-president Dick Poli.

A field trip was taken to Allen Wood Steel Company in Norristown recently and the members heard a talk by a company advertising executive.

Placement Office

Later in February the club was instructed in the operations of the Placement Office by Director John A. Moritz.

In the social vein the Marketing Club held their annual Dinner Dance on February 22 at the Manoa Falcon House. President McHugh said that nearly 70% of the membership attended

NFCCS Congress To Meet in Pitt

The second annual Pennsylvania State NFCCS Congress will be held in Pittsburgh on March 21 to 23.

Three regions of the NFCCS will attend: Pittsburgh, Scranton and Philadelphia. Villanova, with five votes, will be the largest school taking part.

Villanova will supply two speakers on the intellectual aspect of the general theme of the Congress: "The Function and Responsibility of the Catholic College Student."

This school will also send several observers and alternate delegates. Any student interested in attending the Congress is asked to leave his name, address and phone number in the NFCCS mailbox in the Student Counci office before the end of this week.

Just what have you done while you were in college? George Benet, senior C&F is questioned by J. Robert Morris of the Cities Service Oil Company as part of the senior interviews that have been going on at Villanova during the past few weeks.

Jazz Profit Told By Father Coffey

The Augustinian Seminary Guild, under the direction of Rev. Father J. J. Coffey, O.S.A. has announced that the recent Jazz Concert yielded a profit of $3.500.

The money will enable three future Augustinian Father to go to school for one year apiece. The amount of money necessary to educate each seminarian is about a thousand dollars a year.

Father Coffey announced that he was quite pleased with the concert and said he wished to thank all those who helped with the affair.

S. C. Creates Information Group from Frosh Members

By FRANK DYNAN

Jim Lynch and Frank Dunn, the newly elected freshman Student Congress representatives were welcomed to the Student Congress at last Wednesday night's meeting.

Before going into the business of the meeting Pat Nicholson read a letter from NFCCS stressing its role in aiding Catholic colleges with their problems. The purpose of NFCCS as explained in the letter is to request the opinions of its member colleges on problems it brings to light, and advise the various colleges on their problems from the information it has gathered.

In relation to NFCCS, Nicholson's proposal that the Student Council augment NFCCS funds in order to send six delegates to the NFCCS State Congress in Pittsburgh was later carried.

Don Kempf, handling the sportsmanship award for the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia announced that unofficially Villanova has dropped to last place in the contest. The final standings will be decided after the St. Joe's-La Salle game. Defending Villanova spirit, Pat Nicholson, claimed that "spirit at Villanova is extremely high". "When the students stop criticising Al Severence, he said, when they stop asking why the team doesn't win, then they will have no spirit". He conceded however that Villanova must have victories to keep up the spirit. He added that he is going to send a letter to Frank Reagan congratulating him for bringing bigtime football back to Villanova.

Society Recognized

The committee reports contained an announcement by Bob Murphy, that the clean-up campaign in the day-hop cafeteria began February 27th. Pat Nicholson urged that the students should "do what a man of twenty-one should do instead of throwing slop around". In addition it was reported that the Semper Fidelis Society has been recognized by the Fraternities and Societies Committee retroactive to February, 1957.

In order to train the two new freshman members, Pat Nicholson announced the formation of a Public Information Committee. It will be made up solely of two new members whose duties are to assist the secretary in recording, the Congress, minutes and to make available to the student body all announcements from the various local colleges.

Three proposals by Nicholson were carried at the meeting. They were that a committee be formed to investigate the advantages of Villanova's joining the United States National Student Association; that a committee be formed to investigate the establishment o fa Council of the Knights of Columbus on campus; and the previously mentioned proposal to augment the funds of NFCCS.

It was decided that Jerry McGrath's proposal, that a student who flunked a course will not be required to repeat that course under the same instructor unless waivered by the student, be reworded and sent to the Academic Acairs Committee for consideration.

Unanimously recommended for passage by the Student Congress were proposals by Tom Whalen, that the 1958 undergraduates wear the colored hood instead of the colored tassel;

Dr. Campanella Honored by Assn. Of Psychologists

The Pennsylvania Association of Psycologists has honored Dr. Thomas C. Campanella by electing him as a fellow in their highly esteemed association.

Dr. Campanella is a member of the Education Department here at Villanova.

The recognition which he is being given is because of his work in connection with the Child Guidance Clinic of the Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese.

Dr. Campanella's numerous writings in many professional journals have undoubdedly aided the field of Psycology.

He has also written a text book which deals with the field of the psycology of education.

'You and Marriage' Series at LaSalle

"You and Marriage" a lecture and discussion series sponsored by NFCCS, has started at LaSalle College Library. It is slated to run over a period of three weeks.

The first lecture, held last Saturday was entitled; "Prose or Poetry?"

The others will be: "A Many Splendored Thing," this Satruday, and "Magic Moments," Mar. 16. All lectures begin at 7:30 P.M.

Copy Needed For Planned LYNX Edition

Preparations are now well under way for the second issue of the LYNX. The editors expect to be able to announce a definite date of publication within a week.

Tentative publication date is sometime near the end of this month.

The big question mark as always with the LYNX is the problem of material. All are urged by editor Frank Delany to submit any material as soon as possible.

Anything is acceptable from poems to a one-act play. Five dollars is offered for any sonnet which is deemed acceptable for publication.

Tomorrow's LYNX meeting will make the final decisions and plans regarding the second issue.

Articles accepted so far for publication include an essay and sketch by Robert Pinto, a humorous "Charlie Brown" sketch by Frank Murtha and a review on the "Ramayana."

Also featured will be a series of sketches and an article on Philadelphia's "Jungle," and another in the popular "Conversation" series.

All interested parties have been invited to attend the meeting at 2:30 or 3:30 in the Publications, Office, second floor Doughterty Hall.

Support Shamokinaki

Dancers at last year's Shamokinaki seem to be having a wonderful time. The entire proceeds of the dance, which will be held in the Villanova Field House Friday night, will go to the Augustinian missionaries in Japan. The music for the event will be supplied by Lou Denison and his orchestra.

Congress Grants Powers To Societies Committee

The Fraternities and Societies Committee has been granted new powers in addition to the necessary old powers it has been exercising. The committee is headed by chairman Joe Murphy. Five members of the Student Congress will comprise the committee with no more than three members being from the same class and no more than two members being from the same division.

The duties assigned to the committee are as follows:

(1) To establish rules governing the recognition of all organizations by the council and the right of such groups to representation in the council.

(2) To keep accurate records of the organizations reorganized.

(3) To act as intermediary between the Student Council and all groups not represented in the council.

(4) To give advice and assistance where possible to all organizations.

(5) To recommend disciplinary action to be taken by the Student Senate against any organization which violates the Constitution, By-laws or any University approved ruling of the Student Council.

(6) To receive and investigate petitions by organizations for either a seat on the Student Council or for recognition as an official campus organization or for both.

New Powers

Sections five and six are new powers delegated to the committee. Concerning the petitions mentioned above, the requirements are as follows:

For recognition as an official campus organization, the petitioning group must file with the Fraternities and Societies the following:

(1) A statement of purposes.
(2) A copy of its constitution.
(3) A list of officers and their addresses.
(4) A list of members.
(5) The contemplated faculty advisor.

The group also must have two consecutive semesters of activities previous to its petition, and after consideration by the Committee, approval by the Dean of Student Activities whose decision will be final.

Two Thirds Vote

Concerning the disciplinary action taken by the Student Senate at the committees recommendation, an organization is ejected by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. Such disciplinary action is taken by the Council against any official campus organization when the organization performs any activity detrimental to the University or fails to comply with the Constitution and By-laws or any rules and regulations passed by the Student Council and approved by the administration.

Organizations rejected by the council may seek re-admission no sooner than April fifteenth

Gerry Hepburn Appointed Jr. Week Prom Chairman

Through Junior Week co-chairmen Bob Murphy and Joe Schneider, Junior Class President Vic Ludmerer has announced the appointment of Gerry Hepburn as Prom chairman.

At the same time, Murphy and Schneider revealed that Dinner-Dance chairman Oz Scogna has been able to secure the brand-new Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia for that affair.

The Sheraton is one of the most modern hotels in the country, having been completed just last year. The Dinner-Dance will be the first college affair ever held there.

Hepburn is the junior day-hop engineering representative on the Student Council. He is also in the NROTC program.

His appointment marks the first time that one man has ever handled two of the largest functions in Junior Year—he was also chairman of the Ring Dance.

It was because of the fine job Hepburn did on the Ring Dance that Ludmerer was prompted to give him the new assignment.

Hepburn, a graduate of La-Salle High in Philadelphia, is

GERRY HEPBURN
Junior Week Chairman

also a member of the junior class steering committee, and of the academic affairs committee of the Student Council.

He has been a member of Phi Kappa Pi, the Engineering fraternity, for three years. He is the secretary of the Villanova chapter of Civil Engineers, and is now a member of the Geology Club.

Hepburn has already chosen the chairmen of the various committees for the Prom, 16 men in all, but the official announcement won't come until next week.

Bartol Research Lab Is Visited By Physics Club

The Physics club recently went on a field trip to the Bartol Research Laboratory of the Franklin Institute.

They took particular interest in the high voltage particle accelerator which is capable of producing 10,000,000 volts and in the various detecting devices which are used in the study of particle bombardment.

Hear Dr. Swann

After the tour the group had the pleasure of speaking with Dr. W. F. G. Swann, who has been the director of the Bartol Institute since 1929.

Also, in a joint meeting with the Chemical Society, the Physics club on last Wednesday evening, was given an enlightening lecture on the implications of Aristotelian Metaphysics in Modern science.

Gives Lecture

The lecture was given by Dr. James O'Brien of the Villanova Philosophy department.

Law Student Hall Speaks to Club

There will be a special meeting of the Pre-Law Society at 7:30 p.m. in room 204 Vassey Hall on Wednesday March 5.

The speaker will be Mr. John Hall, a first year Law School student who graduated from Villanova University last year.

Hall will speak on the obligations and activities of a first Law student and all interested students are invited to attend the lecture.

Engineering Frat Asks for Pledges

Phi Kappa Pi announced that its first meeting for prospective members will be held in room 201 Vassey Hall at 7:30 p.m. on March 6.

All who wish to become members of the fraternity must attend this meeting, for rules concerning pledging and initiation will be discussed.

DPM Dinner Dance Planned For April

Delta Pi Mu, Arts and Science Division fraternity, will hold its annual dinner-dance on Saturday night, April 19, at the Falcon House in Havertown beginning at 7 o'clock, it was announced by President John Moynihan.

Music for the affair will be provided by Lou Dennison and his orchestra.

Tickets may be purchased from Pete Palmer, chairman of the dinner-dance or from Moynihan.

Operation Clean-Up

We're sorry to say that we're disappointed in the Villanova student body.

Last week the Student Council initiated a "clean-up" campaign in the day-hop cafeteria and soda fountain in conjunction with the administration in an effort to improve the appearance of Dougherty Hall.

But Villanovans—residents and day-hops alike—don't seem to care. At least, their actions certainly don't indicate any real interest in improving their facilities.

Granted, a clean-up effort would mean a little more work on the part of the students, but we feel that any self-respecting college students would be ashamed to eat in the cafeteria in its present condition.

We can see the point of view of the students in that they feel that, since they feel that since they are paying the same prices as they would to eat in a public restaurant, they are entitled to the same privileges. In other words, they think that someone should be paid to clear their tables.

Also, because of the crowded conditions in the cafeteria, they don't feel that it's their duty to clean up after they have eaten.

However, because of the existing situation in Dougherty Hall, this reasoning cannot be accepted as valid.

The fact is, there are not enough attendants in the cafeteria to handle the perpetual stream of customers. As for the space problem, it is one that Villanova has had to combat in all phases during the past few years. It will be alleviated in a few weeks with the opening of the new Commerce and Finance building, while will contain a new day-hop cafeteria.

So, the Villanova student body will have to cooperate if Dougherty Hall is to be cleaned up.

The campaign, scheduled to last for one week, has been extended for another seven-day period, both because of the attitude of the students and a snag in the original plans for the campaign.

As a result, the Villanova students will have another chance to aid in the improvement of their facilities. they will have a second opportunity to prove that they are gentlemen.

We hope they finally take advantage of it.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

We the undersigned would like to take exception to the so called book review by Joe Giordano, entitled "An American Tragedy."

The first paragraph which excludes The Commerce and Finance and Engineering divisions from the category of students has no place in a (legitimate) literary analysis. Mr. Giordano's highly opinionated views would be more appropriate in a column entitled "Bigots Incorporated.'

Furthermore, traditionally the Arts and Sciences major is educated to become a gentleman, but obviously there are some deficiencies in the author's education.

This is not meant to deny the author the right to his opinion, only to point out his abuse of literary licence. He should have shown the same objectivity in his opening paragraph as he showed in the review of the book.

Signed
Robert J. Cunius
John A. Barnie
Thomas E. Brady
Edward Ward

ED Note: We would like to point out that opinions expressed by our columnists are not necessarily those of the VILLANOVAN. Mr. Giordano, however, still a glutton for punishment, reported that he "was glad to see that some C and F students read his book review." He added that he was "very surprised."

Dear Editor,

Just a few lines to you concerning your Sports Editor's Column February 27, when he made the statement "Now they say Jimmy Huggard, Jim Kenny, John Driscoll, Bob Liberatore et al. will SAVE basketball."

What I'd like to know is since when Wildcat basketball need saving? For Mr. Goldschmidt's information last year was Villanova's first losing season since the war years and it probably will also be the last for quite a while.

It might have been for all concerned if he had said, "Huggard, Kenny, Driscoll, Liberatore, et al. will make a fair team a great one."

Sincerely,
Bill Vincent

Dear Editor:

I was most pleased to see that at long last someone at this university has spoken out publicly against 'rock and roll'. Bill Washington's article was refreshing to say the least.

Mr. Washington has hit the nail right on the head when he states that "it is a cheap form of rhythm which is discordant to the ear of every person that enjoys music.

'Rock and Roll' certainly has no place on a college campus where one is supposedly in pursuit of knowledge and a training of the mind to cope with the problems of later life. It does appeal to the high school set but they are young and easily led by the 'gang'. While a college student is supposed to be an intellectual being who can independently weigh the facts and decide, for himself, just what is good and bad in the way of music.

In conclusion I would like to say that if Mr. Washington dislikes 'rock and roll' as much as I, and many other students do, why not revert to last year's policy at WVIL and limit such junk to just one hour a week airing.

I am sure such a move would be appreciated by many Villanova 'students'.

Sincerely yours,
Jerry McGrath

Dear Editor,

I am glad to see the VILLANOVAN coming back to life. I can truly say I thoroughly enjoyed your last issue, some thing which neither myself nor my friends have been able to say for quite a while.

I wish to congratulate you and your staff especially for returning humor to the paper. I am sure the next issue, which will again feature the "Padded Cell," will be even more enjoyable than the present one.

We read your paper every week, and these few lines are just to prove to you that your innovations are being appreciated.

Sincerely,
A high school student

Dear Editor:

Athletics should play an important part in the leisure time of all of us. Since varsity competition here at Villanova is only available to a gifted few, the majority of us have to rely on the schools system of intramural athletics. After witnessing this system, and I use the word loosely, for three years, it is at best irritating to see how it runs.

Pick up the school's handbook and look at the intramural program for 1957-1958. There is a little paragraph which says "A comprehensive program of intramural sports is carried out during the year under competent guidance. Every encouragement possible is given to every student to take part in athletics." How competent is this guidance? What can we, as students, do about improving the inadaquate facilities which have been provided for us? These are the questions which we should ask ourselves. Lets see if a few changes can't be made!

Junior I. A.
Bob Best

Pat Nicholson, chairman of the student council has announced that Saint Patrick's day, March 17, has been proclaimed the annual student council holiday. The council is given this privilege by the administration. Nicholson said he hopes everyone has a fine time and returns from New York safely.

The Little Guy

RAY QUAGLIA

I don't want anybody to think I'm pretending to know a lot about committees and all, because I've only been on one in my whole life.

I was in the fifth grade and the nun appointed me and two other guys to stay after school and shut the windows with those big long brown poles they had. You know the ones. Well anyway, that's the only committee I know anything about and other committees can't be like this one, because it was really in bad shape. Me and this other kid were smaller than this guy Charlie, so he didn't shut one window all year. I didn't mind the extra work, but he used to go over to the convent and tell the sister the job was done and get all the credit, and the other nuns would smile at him and everything.

Shades of J. D. Salinger

I ddin't get on any committee in high school either, but I'm not blaming anybody. I was one of those guys that hid books in the candy store across from the school and used to ride to class in the front of the bus with a newspaper, so all the girls would think I was a big executive or something. I think this one priest who used to like me wanted me to be on his committee of something or other, but he never asked me because one day he caught me sneaking a smoke on the back stairs, that being against the rules and all.

Who's Salinger?

Well anyway, when I came out here I thought I was really ripe for a whole bunch of committees. I bought a lot of striped ties and sport jackets with three buttons, and lounged around the pie-shop acting like an intellectual. I figured someone was bound to discover me, but nobody did. You can't blame them though, because there was a whole crew of guys like me and quite a few of us made out all right, getting elected and all.

Semper Mediocritus

One thing bothers me. There is this real smart fellow I know who never gets elected to anything. He's a worker and all that, but I guess he doesn't have the right clothes to go with the job.

I feel sorry for this guy, but not for myself. Because I figure when I'm a big lawyer everybody will want me on some kind of committee, me being flashy with lots of money and everything.

POLITICAL ROUND-UP

By FRANK BONNER

One of the bitterest political battles ever to develop in the history of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania came out in the wash last week when both the Republican and Democratic politicians began to maneuver for positions.

On the Democratic side of the ledger sheet, the gubernatorial campaign is developing into the most vicious primary fights since 1940. Governor Leader and his good government boys have united with the political bosses. Lawrence, Lawler and Green in showing their teeth in their opposition to the spoils system philosophy and lieutenant governor Roy Furman.

Leader, a few months ago stimulated interest in the candidacy of Mayor Richardson Dilworth of Philadelphia. This moved failed mainly because Philadelphia city chairman William Green expressed his distaste for Dilworth. Green's opposition stems from Dilworth's stand against Victor Blanc, Philadelphia's District Attorney in last year's general election.

Second Choice

The governor's second choice as his successor is Attorney General Thomas McBride of Philadelphia. McBride seems to be the best qualified for the post but many of the party wigs are opposing him. However, this writer feels that McBride is the front runner because of the strong support he is receiving from government and labor.

Mayor David Lawerence of Pittsburgh is leading the drive for Knox but this push seems to have run our of gas because of the labor leaders unfavorable attitude towards Knox. Other strong contenders for the nomination are Mayor David Hock of Allentown, State Adjudant General Biddle, Allegheny County Coroner McClellan, and Secretary of the Highways, Smith of Pnilaelphia. Whoever receives the organization's endorsement can look forward to a grinding primary campaign from Roy Furman.

Now taking a look at the Republican tally sheet, we see that ex-presidential disarmament advisor and carpetbagger from Minnesota, Harold E. Stassen has already begun his campaign for the Republican nomination for governor, but is running into stiff opposition from all quarters of the Pennsylvania Republican organization.

More Candidates

Chairman Bloom has indicated that he is leaning toward Robert Woodside, from the Western part of the state. Wilbur Hamilton, Philadelphia Republican big-chief, has not yet committed himself. Ex-lieutenant governor Livengood has expressed a strong desire to become the chief executive of Pennsylvania.

There seems to be a fight brewing between state senator James Van Zandt of Youngstown and Congressman Hugh Scott of Philadelphia to see which one will oppose Governor George Leader in his bid for the United States Senate post.

The Padded Cell

By GERRY

A quick review of American advertising is enough to convince any reasonable bloke that the medium is overstepping itself. There is no telling where recent trends will lead unless we put our faith in statistics which are as yet unpublished.

This chap will be bloody well fed up when colleges and universities start peddling their wares on the open market through the magic of advertising. However, being of a practical and pecuniary nature, I should like to submit the rough outline for a bloominn' film short advertising Villanova—quickly asserting royalty rights, patents and immunity to expulsion.

All This in Sazzaphranic Sound

The film opens with an aerial view of Sun Valley, Idaho with the legend, This is Villanova University. The camera dummies in on a group of seven or eight hundred chorines frolicing about the swimming pool with several of the students, played by Rock Hudson, Bruce Bennett, Tab Hunter, Charles Starkweather, and Ferdinand de Lesseps. Pat Boone and Anna Magnani (who is wearing a Rosemont beanie) appear from amid this bevy of beauties, swinging arm in arm and singing "V for Villanova." The caption, TYPICAL SOCIAL ACTIVITIES, serves to shed sufficient light on this scene leaving earthy details for more down to earth people (a pun).

In rich golden tones, Harry Wisenhimer, the narrator, tells horrible lies with the aid of trick photography. With the obvious error of presenting Mendel Hall as a twenty-three story Frank Lloyd Wright monster, Villanova is recreated with maximum verisimilitude.

Wisenhimer, whose excitement reaches fever pitch, has to be carried off, kicking and squealing, as the Wittnauer Choraliers, dressed in blazers and gaudy red ties, sing the Alma Mater.

Good Old Capitalist

The last scene shows several leading industrialists who swear on a stack of comic books that their corporations are staffed entirely with Villanova graduates. This last feature of course is optional due to the prodigious sum involved in making bribes.

As the film ends, Count Villain V appears through a hole in a wall, like MGM's lion, and, with his left hind paw in a tub of scalding water, growls savagely.

Strictly Opinion:

It's Tweed

By BOB PINTO

We can stop criticizing ourselves and feeling inferior. Villanova has arrived. It is still uncertain where it has come from, and why, but the fact remains, it is here. Of course we haven't all noticed it yet but then they say that only a few recognized it at Princeton and Harvard in the first few years.

And what signifies the arrival of Villanova? It is tweed. But not just in the sense of a few fellows wearing tweed jackets. It is in the very air. The tweed I mean.

Viva le Revolution

A small beginning to be sure, but it will steamroll. First a few beards, then thin volumns of Indexed French philosophers clutched under aesthetic arms, and abolishment of the cut system so that in the best intellectual tradition we can attend lectures on individualism and participate in revolutions. We will not be here to see it all, but we have seen the beginning. Or maybe we haven't. Maybe the tweed in the air is just a result of indescriminate crate opening in the campus shop—maybe it comes on the wind from Haverford.

Floating Tweed

But when a ray of sunlight slants to the floor, look for the thin dark strands floating by in the light, or just after two boys brush shoulders in the pie shop, watch for it landing on a clear sheet of paper. But most often (is this just in my mind?) look for them floating on the top of your glass of milk. When you find one, put it in your wallet. When your star is declining, you can show it to your grandchildren—or maybe they won't be so grand.

You can say you remember when Villanova had a sports program, and when if anyone had said that Villanova would one day be the the intellectual capital of the East, they would have been refused a seat in the student cheering section. This is what your strand of tweed will mean to you. And if you get one long enough now, before the collecting starts, you can use it for a page marker in your comic book as I have.

Committee Set-Up Shown

By PAT NICHOLSON

A great deal has been said in this column and in other parts of the VILLANOVAN concerning the legistative system of the Student Council—namely the division of power between the Student Senate and the Student Congress.

However, very little has been said concerning the new administrative process of the Council.

The main administrative arm of the Student Council is the Student Cabinet. The Vice Chairman of the Council is the Chairman of the Cabinet. Besides the other officers it consists of the Chairman of every standing committee of the Student Council. These are the: Spirit Committee, NFCCS Commission, Student Activities Committee, Election Committee, Academic Affairs Committee, Ways and Means Committee, Social Affairs Committee, Fraternities and Societies Committee and the Student Union and Special Problems Committee.

Investigates Reports

The Cabinet investigates and discusses all reports to the Senate or Congress, all activities of the various committees, and all suggestions or problems of an administrative nature.

Student government committees at Villanova are divided into four groups. They are Presidential Standing—Permanent committees which are open to the entire student body for membership. The Spirit Committee is the most outstanding example. Congressional Standing Permanent committees such as the Elections Committee in which membership is restricted to Congress members only.

Presidential Special—Committees established by either the Student Body President or by the Student Congress, open to all members of the Student Body, and designed to achieve a specific purpose. Congressional Special—Committees similar to Presidential Special but only open to Congress members.

Important Committees

The two most important committees are the Student-Faculty and Student-Administration Committees. The Student-Faculty Committee, composed of the Vice-President of Academic Affairs, two faculty members, and four students, attempts to bring about student, faculty, and administration cooperation and assistance in matters of an educational or academic nature. The Student-Administration Committee, composed of the Vice-President of Student Affairs, the Dean of Student Activities and four students, strives for student-administration cooperation in every other possible way.

We have already seen that the new administrative system within the Council itself, although a definite improvement, will not be able to cope with the expected increases in the Student Council's activities. We hope to have a more efficient and effective system worked out by May. We will certainly welcome any suggestions.

Beethoven Is The Coolest, R' and R' Is So Unaesthetic

By JOHN D. KENNEDY and
DENIS A. CARDONE

A vociferous segment of the campus has demanded an end to the VILLANOVAN's student opinion poll on such enthralling topics as space travel, i. e., the moon, and closely related subjects of universal interest. This aggressive minority (doubtless) must be served, so here is Kultur; to every one else, our apologies.

"Music hath charm to soothe the savage beast"—according to one of our more often-quoted poets. There being numerous kinds of music, or non-music (it depends on your being either fan or foe), the soothing charms of music are similarly varied. Musical tastes of men-about-campus—also the female contingent—are scrutiniztd in this week's VILLANOVAN poll.

Beethoven is the favorite of sophomore C&F'er Anthony Provenano. According to Mr. P., "music expresses every need, every desire man can have." To prove this, he indicates that he also digs voodoo music and bongo drums, commenting that these are "primitive." "It moves me," he declares. Provenzano regards music as an outlet or escape.

If freshman nurse Ginny Dassori thinks of music as an escape it is only to the world of Broadway musicals, whose music she much enjoys. "Kismet" and "My Fair Lady" rank foremost among these, according to Ginny. Generally she likes popular music and regards herself as a non-extremist, non-faddist in musical taste. This encompasses a wide range, as Ginny expresses an appreciation of music from "Beethoven to Brubeck."

And - From Education

Hal Durgin, senior Education major, believes that "music is a reflection of the times, of modern ideas and thinking." Fats Domino ranks as top man on Hal's popularity poll and "At the Hop" as top current record. While rock and roll is "real peppy" Hal also has a predilection for the softer and slower strains of David Whitfield, Mario Lanza and Frank Sinatra.

Hi-fi owner Dick Howard, sophomore C&F'er, has recently risen to the ranks of the classical music fans with the initial purchase of Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture." What made him move up from Glenn Miller and Stan Kenton? "I started looking into the background of different records." Dick believes he will receive a "liberal education" from the classics.

At some distance from the classics is Tom Bradley's favorite record "Oh, Julie." Tom, also a sophomore from C&F, favors small combos and indicates a preference for WIBG and Sunnybrook.

According to Betty Giammarino, freshman nurses, progressive jazz is "going to be even better than rock and roll." Roger O' Dwyer, senior E. E., is also a progressive fan.

McCoy Views Jazz

Don McCoy, hi-fi owner and sophomore Arts-man, says he is developing a "taste for modern jazz and pursues it to its lair at the Red Hill Inn and even to Birdland. An eager neophyte, popular man-about-campus Don, has recently begun a hi-fi collection. For spiritual refreshment and relaxation Don listens to that rock and roll station. WIBG.

Fats Domino—One Vote

A fellow listener to WIBG is freshman nurse Joyce Collins, who likes to dance to the "real fast" music of Fats Domino and Jerry Lee Lewis. Moving a bit higher on the scale, Joyce also enjoys Johnny Mathis and Perry Como.

Joe Fitzpatrick, junior Arts

Another progressive fan is Joe Fitzpatrick, junior Arts, who specifies Jerry Mulligan, Jo Jones, Julie London, and June Christie as favorites. Joe also expresses a fondness for Dixieland, especially Stan Rubin. A rarity among most collegiates, he dislikes Frank Sinatra.

President of the Villanova Jazz Society, Harry Ayers, soph C&F, naturally enough prefers jazz. Why? "It swings!" In this area Red Hill Inn gets Harry's nod; in New York it's the Village.

Aggie Leitz, frosh nurse and Bill Tinney, soph C&F, are both jazz aficionados but in a lesserway than some of the others mentioned. Les Elgart and the big band sound are voted tops also.

An Individualist, His Views

Jerry Glackin, senior Arts, is a real non-conformish. He likes popular music, minus rock and roll; he does not collect records because "good popular stopped coming out." The rich man's Lawrence Welk, Mantovani, is a prime favorite of Jerry's for listening. "There are no good record stations," says Jerry; but to end on a happy note, he did like Richard Maltby and Charlie Gresh.

In summation it would seem that conformity is once more the rule in collegiate muscial taste. Jazz is the current 'thing'; a sneaking admiration of rock and roll is almost apologized for. Classical music is gaining adherents, which should make Mr. Angeline a little happier. Next week, the VILLANOVAN will once again bring you another earth-shaking.

The Lost Art of "Conversation"

For more irreverence, tune into WVIL on Monday evening at 8:15 for "Conversation." a program which attempts to bring you the actual, spontaneous, unrehearsed and unfortunately unpopular opinions of college men and women on interesting topics. Some have been offended by this show, It is not intended to be sensational. It is heard strictly within the limits of Villanova and it is impossible to know what people will say in advance. All guests are relatively intelligent people despite any evidence to the contrary.

Whoops! "Conversation" has just been cancelled. A Marine show will take its place by popular demand. Spontaneous opinion will return to the cellars.

Elected as treasurer of the club was Dick Walsh, who has been in this capacity unofficially since the club's conception.

Filling the positions of Recording and Corresponding Secretaries are Jay McKay and John Rowe, respectively. Both men are Freshmen in the Commerce and Finance School.

The new president thanked Joe Shaw, Tony Murry and Ed Germain for the fine job they had done as members of the ogganization committee. He then made several recommendations which would benefit the club in the future.

Long also announced that regular meetings will be held biweekly during the student activities period in Vasey Hall.

Now that the club is firmly established, the officers expressed their desire that all non-member veterans would attend the next meeting, which will be held March 13.

WVIL Scores Success With Hit Disc Show

WVIL has come up with a late evening show called "Encore" which has proved to be very successful.. The installation of this program is the answer to the programming difficulties encountered by the staff last year.

The program is centered around the idea of continuous music. Gene Brochu, the announcer, interrupts the music only once during the forty-five minute period of broadcasting, and then only to ocer to his audience the names of the pieces that have been played.

This type of music when Joined with Brochu's suave mono)' tone results in an atmosphere for easy studying or for just plain relaxation.

The show, a Dalva Production, is programmed by the announcer Gene Brochu.

Another Dalva Production WVIL's new Sunday Matinee heard from 1:30 to 3:00 p.m.

Fourth of a Series:

Navy Program Considered

This week we come close to home in our armed forces series by taking under consideration the United States Navy.

Once again we will start with the enlisted personnel program. Four and six year enlistments are offered with a similar deal to that offered by the other services. There is a minority enlistment by which someone age 17 might enlist and serve to his twenty-first birthday.

There is no six month program offered by the Navy but a two year tour of active duty is available through a Naval Reserve unit with a three year hitch in the ready reserve.

Officer programs are of primary interest to most of us at Villanova and the Navy seems to have one tailored to almost every need.

Of course the largest portion of naval officers comes from Annapolis which turns out 800 officers yearly and from the NROTC units which through their regular and contract programs turn out men with four and two years commitments respectively.

Officers Candidates

For a non-NROTC college graduate the Navy Officer Candidate Corps offers a fine opportunity for a commission. Sixteen weeks are spent in training as a seaman apprentice at Newport, Rhode Island. Then successful candidates receive commissions as line or limited duty officers. There are no restrictions as to marriage in this program.

Those who have been admitted to the bar may be directly commissioned as legal specialists.

OOC people interested in aviation spend four months at Pensacola, Florida following which they are commissioned and go into fourteen months flight training.

Flight OCC'ers candidates serve five years active duty after being commissioned all other OCC'ers serve three years active duty, two in the ready reserve.

ROC Program

A counterpart to the Marine Corps PLC program is the Navy's Reserve Officer Corps. College students not in the NROTC may work towards a commission on this program which consists of two eight week summers courses at Newport, Rhode Island. A commission follows upon graduation. Like the NROTC, this program involves academic considerations which should be investatigated by those interested. The commissions offered by this program are in the Naval Reserve and involve three years active duty. This program is definitely limited though, as to the number of candidates it can accept.

For those who don't quite make it through college for some reason or another may find a home in the Navcad program which accepts candidates with two years of college. This involves sixteen weeks preflight, fourteen months flight training and then four years active duty. Commission comes with the wings.

Nurse Corps

Graduate nurses might be interested in the Navy Nurse Corps which offers them a commission after six weeks indoctrination course. Rates offered vary with age and experience.

The Navy's blood sister service, the United States Coast Guard has opportunities for the college graduate also. Coast Guard OCC involves sixteen weeks as a seaman apprentice at New London, Conn. For this program either a college degree or three years college plus one year active duty is necessary.

Freshman are reminded that they may still join the NROTC as sophomores.

For information on Navy enlisted program call RI-6-7800, for the Coast Guard call WA-3-2400. For Navy officers programs or NROTC information see Commander Burge, USN in Commodore John Barry Hall.

Because engineering is a profession at GM -we offer you a career- not a job

ONE REASON engineering standards at General Motors are so high is that GM recognizes engineering as a profession. And the men who engineer the many different products made by General Motors are respected for the profession they practice.

That is why, when you are invited to join General Motors as an engineer, you don't simply take a job—you start a career.

It is a career that is rewarding both professionally and financially—starting on your first day of association with General Motors at any one of its 35 divisions and 126 plants in 70 cities and 19 states.

During your early days at GM, for example, you work with a senior engineer who guides your career along professional lines.

You are also actively encouraged to pursue your education towards an advanced degree. For we at General Motors recognize that, in doing so, you will become more valuable to us and the engineering profession.

You are given the opportunity to obtain professional recognition through participation in engineering society forums, presentation of technical papers, winning of patents and other recognition of your accomplishments.

And you are also encouraged to take an active role in your community's affairs—because a truly professional man is a good citizen as well as a good engineer.

All this is for a reason—and a good one.

Many of the men who will fill the key positions at GM in the future are the young engineers joining GM today. This is not theory, it is fact. For 14 of our 33 Vice-Presidents are engineers, 23 of our 42 Division General Managers are engineers, too.

Today we are looking for young engineers—such as you—who may fill these positions tomorrow. The rewards—both professional and financial—are substantial. If you feel you have the ability, write us. It could be the most important letter of your life.

June graduates!

A General Motors Representative will be on hand to answer questions about job opportunities with GM.

Villanova Singers Concert March 11 at Gwynedd Mercy

The first appearance of the Villanova Singers following the Choral Festival of March 1 will be a concert March 11 at Gwyned Mercy Junior College.

Ken MacGillivray, president of the Singers, announced that the concert season will get under way with this appearance.

A heavy schedule in April includes concerts at Chestnut Hill, Rosemont, Notre Dame Academy as well as the musical renditions for the junior class Mother's Day.

Varied Repertoire

A varied repertoire has been formed by their director, Herbert Fiss, the songs being those that appeal to the ear as well as pieces that bring out definite quality of tonal superiority.

The numbers include such favorites as "The Winter Song," "Goin' Home," "Cindy," "Stout-Hearted Men," "Aura Lee," "O Shenandoah," and novelties such as "The Old Songs" and "Every Day is Ladies Day."

Aside from his presidential duties MacGillivray is also the accompanist and solo pianist.

Twenty One Receive Car Priveleges

Twenty-one of 33 senior resident students who applied for permission to own and operate automobiles under a new university car ruling, have been accepted by the administration, it was announced last week by Pat Nicholson, chairman of the Student Council.

Registration for ownership and operator permits, which began last week, ends today.

Registration procedures were conducted by a six-man committee consisting of four juniors and two sophomores. Juniors were Bill Murray, Ralph Vecchio, Jerry McGrath and Jim McElhenny. Sophomores were Tom Hoffman and Tom Moakley.

Nicholson stated that the nonsenior committee was chosen in order to train and familiarize these students with registration proceedings. Since the program is on an experimental basis for one semester, it was felt that the junior members of the committee would do an especially conscientious job in pointing out the effect that abuses to the privilege by the registrants would have on the program in the future.

Tonite Opera Club Hears Miss Farrell

The Opera Classica Society will journey tonight to Philadelphia for an operatic recital by Eileen Farrell.

According to club moderator, Anthony L. P. Angeline, the group believes she is the leading American born soprano.

It is the opinion of the club that Miss Farrell's vocal richness has gone unnoticed too long and that too much attention has been focused on that "creature" who has more "temper" than voice.

A copy of the arias to be sung by Miss Farrell is posted on the Opera Classica bulletin board in Vasey Hall.

Week's Events

Earlier in the week, the society listened to the third and fourth acts of Verdi's Otello and Wagner's Tristan and Isolde.

On Tuesday, part of the society travelled to Philadelphia to see the Metropolitan Opera production of Wagner's Tristan Und Isolde featuring Ramon Vinay and Margaret Harshaw in the title roles.

The remainder of the society went to Bryn Mawr College for a concert featuring the Mulliard String Quartet.

New York Trip

The climax of this active week will be a trip to New York for a matinee performance of Otello. The opera will feature Mario Del Monaco as Otello, Victoria de los Angeles singing Desdemona and Leonard Warren who will portray Iago.

Tickets for the opera have been sold out. However, standing room is available.

Recordings of the Villanova University Alma Mater and School Songs are available in the University book store in Dougherty Hall.

Paul Tagliafari, president of the Spanish Club, has announced that the next meeting of the club will be held tomorrow at 10.30 P. M. in Vasey Hall. Because of the importance of this meeting, all members who can do so are strongly urged to attend.

The main topic to be discussed at this meeting will be the club's annual Dinner-Dance.

This year the dance will be held on April 26th. At the meeting on Thursday, committees will be formed to begin actual physical arrangements.

'Bomber' Brennan: Electrical Eng., Basketball Player and Comedian

By JOE FITZPATRICK

Bill Brennan (nicknamed "the Bomber", not because of his shooting, but because in earlier days, he had a rotund figure) made his debut to Villanova basketball late in his college career.

Brennan waited until this, his senior year, to go out for the team.

Bill spent the first three years at Villanova compiling a 3.02 average in the electrical engineering department.

Even though Bill has been hampered by inexperience, he has done a very commendable job on the Villanova five. His best performance so far was against Duquesne when he got the "hot hand" and poured fourteen points through the net.

'Used Them All'

After Bill had performed this sharp shooting, a student who didn't see the display asked what shot be used and Bomber replied, "Oh, I have a variety of shots, and I use them all."

Bill, who played his high school ball under the many-splendored mentor, Jimmy Usilton, at West Catholic, does a pretty fair job on defense.

He points out that he held Guy Rodgers to eleven shots from the floor. "Only trouble was," says big, likeable Bill, "he made ten of them."

Brennan is unlike some of Villanova's controversial basketball players in the fact that he has not yet made Sandy Grady's Daily News black list. It takes more than Grady's flack to br.ng this "bomber" down.

Keeps Team Smiling

Brennan's humor, coupled with the much publicized humor of his coach, who it has been said satirically commended Bill and teammate Joe Ryan on their fine shooting in the Temple game keeps the Villanova team smiling when things aren't going so well.

In the game with St. Joseph's, Bill played beautiful ball. His jump shot was checking and his passing was great, but late in the game, he experienced a "famine" on the foul line.

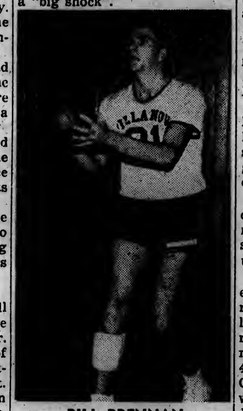
The day after the game, he was seen in Dougherty Hall waiting for a job interview. A student asked him who was going to interview him.

Bill, in his unassuming manner, replied, "Eddie Gottlieb; he wants me to help Senesky with the Warriors' foul shooting."

Bad Passes

On another occasion, against Penn, Bill had passing difficulty. He threw more passes into the stands than he did to his teammates.

A friend told Brennan he had been to see the game. Bill came back with, "I didn't see you there—else I'd have thrown you a pass."



This 6'3" resident of Highland Park, Pa., might make with the jokes, but past performance shows that he diligently attempts to improve.

After missing the fouls in the St. Joe game, he went right to work and in the two following games, his foul shooting was perfect.

Big Improvement

As far as his passing goes, all that one need do is point out the Temple game in which Mr. Severance gave Bill the task of running the club from the outside. Bill's passes were perfect.

Bill Brennan graduates in June, and when he leaves, Villanova will lose not only a great competitor on the court and a fine student, but a fellow with a keen sense of humor. Bill said that the firm that hires him as an electrical engineer will get a "big shock".

BILL BRENNAN

Two Lou's Led Wet 'Cats

By COLLIN CLOUT

Co-Captains Lou Schoener Lou Pinto led the 1957-58 Villanova swimming team through one of its most impressive seasons.

The schedule included Army, LaSalle, West Chester, U M I, Lafayette and others, with the final record being 8-2-2.

To say that both Lou's were valuable to the squad would be a narrow view. Their importance was beyond what they actually did in the meets.

Coach Ed Geisz stated "they are two of the finest gentlemen and finest competitors that ever swam here.

Showed Way

"They were part of the group that helped put our team up on top. Their leadership and example showed the rest of the team how it could be done."

Schoenor was captain of the St. Joseph's Prep team in his senior year. He is in Political Science courses here, and feels that he may enter Law School next year.

But this summer he will go back to Ocean City for his fifth year on the beach patrol.

For the last three years he has been South Jersey half-mile swimming champ, winning over all swimmers f r o m the other beach patrols.

AAU Meets

To stay in shape after the season Lou s w i m s for Sylvan Pools in Amateur Athletic Union meets.

In the first meet of the season, a g a i n s t VMI, Schoenor broke the long standing record set by Dr. Bill Hooper. The time was 5:22.5 for 440 yards.

Used in almost every freestyle race at one time or another, Lou is also part of the foursome which set Villanova records for the medley and freestyle relays.

Just as any athlete who participates in an unheralded sport, Schoener has strong convictions.

"You don't get anything easily in swimming. You have to work hard. "It prepares you for other difficulties you will encounter."

"It's a sport that doesn't lend itself to big-headed athletes. There is always someone better than yourself.

"As for the team, I never met a better bunch of guys who were more closely knit."

Both Schoenor and Pinto came to Villanova as b r e a s t s t r o k e r s and similarly they switched to freestyle to suit the needs of the team.

Made Switch

Pinto was hampered at the beginning of the season because he had just made the switch to freestyle.

But by mid-season he was one of the best sprinters on the team, and he swam on the freestyle relay team that set the Villanova record.

At West Catholic, Pinto was captain of the swimming team.

Besides being co-captain of the Villanova team, Lou is also the Secretary of the Student Council, and an outstanding mechanical engineer.

His future plans tentatively are to work for Scott Paper Company which last year gave him a grant for his scholastic achievements.

He does not plan to continue competitive swimming after he graduates.

Geisz and his swimming team will also miss both Schoener and Pinto next year but because of their efforts the team will continue to be successful.

Phil Reavis clears the bar at 6-4 en route to an eventual 6-8¾ and first place in the IC4A's.

Swimmers Win To End Season

The swimming team closed its season with a 71-15 romp over visiting Georgetown before a capacity crowd on Saturday, as three seniors participated in their last meet for Villanova.

Co-captains Lou Schoener and Lou Pinto, and John Flynn were the three 1958 graduates. Schoener and Flynn came throug with victories to wind up their careers—Schoener, two of them.

Lou, back in stride after illness had sidelined him for the past few weeks, won the 22z-yard and 40-yard freestyle races. Flynn triumphed in the 200-yard orthodox breast-stroke.

The Wildcats won every event, including both relays, the 400 medley (Frank Keefe, Jim Gregory, Bob Pinto and Win Wilson) and the 400 freestyle (Lou Pinto, Schoener, John Rumbarger, and Gene Hewitt).

The other Villanova winners were Joe Mason, twice—in the 50-yard and 100-yard freestyle; Gregory, in the 200-yard butterfly; Keefe, in the 200-yard backstroke; and Steve Cartin, in the diving.

Others who earned points for the Wildcats were: Joe Harvey, second in the 220 freestyle; Lou Pinto, second in the 50 and third in the 100; Bill Gilhool, second in the diving; Jerry Cechony, third in the 200 backstroke; Bruce McCready, second in the 440 freestyle; and Gregory, second in the 200 breaststroke.

Baseball Starts

Baseball Coach Art Mahan has again renewed his call for pitchers and catchers, who are to report to the Field House for practice as soon as possible. Regular practice for everyone will begin shortly.

Equipment manager Charles Farnan also says that there are still openings for freshmen and sophomores who wish to be baseball managers.

Intramurals Now Normal After Storm

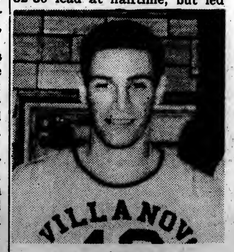
By PAUL BUCKLEY

The blizzard of '58 plus the fact the varsity basketball team has had to use the Field House floor has caused a temporary delay in the Intramural Basketball League. In order to get in all the scheduled games, the season might have to be extended.

The Half-Year Men, an all freshmen aggregation, leads the 10:30 league with a 4-0 mark. In the 12:30 league, the Gunners, who last week routed the IA Bombers by a 77 to 39 count, lead their division with a 4-0 slate. The J. B's., a sophomore group in the 3:30 league, have encountered little opposition.

Action in the 4:30 league has come to a temporary halt. The number of games left for the varsity to play his necessitated its use of the Field House floor.

The Swabbies, the Eastwingers, and the Peanutas lead their respective divisions of the 6:30 league. All have 4-0 records. In recent action, the Alumni Animals dumped Disneyland A. C., 42-36. The Swabbies downed the Chinagang by a 49-36 count, while the Peanuts laced SAPBD, 73-37.



In 7:30 League A, Ouden's Duds dumped the previously undefeated Playboys, thus moving the VW's into the top shot. In League B, two teams are undefeated with both showing 4-0 records—the Gazelle and the Ranch Hands. The Northerners, with a 4-0 slate are the front runners in League C.

Frosh Beat Penn, 72-59

The freshman basketball team kept its record clean with a 72-59 victory over the University of Pennsylvania frosh last Wednesday, for its eleventh in a row.

Previously, the Wildcats had beaten Penn by a 65-62 score at the Palestra.

The Main Liners only held a 32-30 lead at halftime, but led by Bob Liberatore, who poured 15 points through the nets in the second half, they widened the gap steadily after the intermission.

Liberatore paced the winners with 22 p o i n t s overall, while fast-improving Dick Kaminski followed closely with 21. Jim Huggard had 12.

John Cardasis led P e n n in scoring with 22 points. Bob Mlkvy, 6-5 brother of the former Temple great, was limited to just five counters. It was only the second time in 13 contests that he failed to hit double figures.

No, That's Not The Latest Dean's List —It's Just The Gazelles Intramural Five

By KURT BECKER

As the playoffs of the intramural basketball league draw near, the Northeners, pre-season favorites to cop the crown, have encountered a stumbling block on their march to the title in a group calling themselves the Gazelles.

At first glance, the roster of the Gazelles could be mistaken for a Dean's list, but a closer look would tell you that they are also a mighty good group of ballplayers.

Here is just a quick glance at the players and their backgrounds:

Captain and strong rebounder Paul Laughlin, a senior, heads the list. Paul's scholastic achievements are well known to every Villanovan. Besides being handy with the books, Paul was an end on the Wildcat football team this year.

All-State in Football

While in high school in Dermont, Pa., Paul was center on his school's basketball team as well as an all-state selection in football.

Center and spearhead of the Gazelle attack is 6' 3" Jay Husted. Jay is a fifth-year electrical engineer who is also handy with the books—so handy in fact that he ranks number one in his class and carries a 3.9 cumulative average around with him.

He hails from St. Joe Prep and Yeadon, and is well known around the area as a standout performer in the Main Line League, which features many ex-college stars. It goes without saying that he was also a star high school basketballer.

Pat Athlete Too

Next we come to senior Pat Nicholson, the president of the Student Body and a consistent performer in the classroom as well.

What is not so well known about Pat is that he was also quite a high school ballplayer, being a starter for Toledo Central Catholic for two years. Pat is an excellent defensive player, and features a deadly outside jump shot.

Teaming up with Pat on the fast b r e a k is cross-country letterman Terry McHugh. Terry is another fifth-year man who is mighty sharp scholastically. He hails from Valley High in Bloomfield, where he was a track and cross-country star.

Etter Was QB

Another slick ball-handler is Tim Etter, a senior quarterback on the football team who was good enough to make all the road trips, though overshadowed by Bily Magee and Jim Grazione. Tim hails from Hammond, Indiana, where he was an all-state quarterback.

Rounding out the squad are three juniors: Dick Montgomery, Dick Sur, and Jim McElhenny.

Montgomery was a star athlete at West Catholic High and has made quite a name for himself in intramurals here at Villanova. He adds broad strength and a good jump shot to the Gazelle attack.

Sur, a chemical engineer, has helped out on the boards. He features a good jump shot and a tough drive.

In Main Line Loop

McElhenny is a teammate of Husted's in the Main Line League, both playing for Main Line Construction, currently in second place in that league. His best shot is a deadly outside jumper.

These eight men form a team that will be hard to stop in the playoffs. They combine height, speed, and shooting ability to match any in the league.

An added note, and what probably makes this eeam even more outstanding is that every member is not only academically high, but they are also all here on scholarship for their achievements.

Students, athletes, gentlemen—and a good bet to go all the way b[illegible]e and in any competition that may follow.

Sixteen teams have been split into two leagues, one playing on Wednesday afternoons and the other on Thursdays. Both use the Rosemont Sports Center, whose management has arranged special rates.

It is the intention of the VILLANOVAN to carry the results every week, starting with the next issue.

Entries are still being accepted by Spinner and Paja. There is a possibilty that more leagues will be formed.

SCIENCE MADE SIMPLE: NO. 2

Though this column is intended solely as a vehicle for well-tempered drollery, the makers of Marlboro have agreed to let me use this space from time to time for a short lesson in science. They are the most decent and obliging of men, the makers of Marlboro, as anyone can tell from sampling their product. Only from bounteous hearts could come such a lot to like—such filter, such flavor, such flip-top box. The filter works; the flavor pleases; the box protects. Who can resist such a winning combination? Surely not I.

Today let us take up the science of medicine, which was invented in 1066 by a Greek named Hippocrates. He soon gathered around him a group of devoted disciples whom he called "doctors." The reason he called them "doctors" was that they spent all their time sitting around the dock and shooting the breeze. In truth, there was little else for them to do because disease was not invented until 1477.

After that, doctors became very busy, but it must be admitted that their knowledge of medicine was lamentably meagre. They knew only one treatment—a change of climate. For example, a French doctor would send all his patients to Switzerland. A Swiss doctor, on the other hand, would send all his patients to France. By 1789 the entire population of France was living in Switzerland, and vice versa. This later became known as the Black Tom Explosion.

Not until 1924 did medicine, as we know it, come into being. In that year in the little Bavarian village of Pago-Pago an elderly physician named Winko Sigafoos discovered the hot water bottle. He was, of course, burned as a witch, but his son Lydia, disguised as a linotype, made his way to America where he invented the Mayo Brothers.

Medicine, as it is taught at your very own college, can be divided roughly into two classifications. There is internal medicine, which is the treatment of interns, and external medicine, which is the treatment of externs.

Diseases also fall into two broad categories—chronic and acute. Chronic disease is, of course, inflammation of the chron, which can be mighty painful, believe you me! Last summer my cousin Haskell was stricken with a chron attack while he was out picking up tinfoil, and it was months before the wretched boy could straighten up. In fact, even after he was cured, Haskell continued to walk around bent over double. This went on for several years before Dr. Caligari, the lovable old country practitioner who treats Haskell, discovered that Haskell had his trousers buttoned to his vest.

Two years ago Haskell had Addison's disease. (Addison, curiously enough, had Haskell's.) Poor Haskell catches everything that comes along. Lovable old Dr. Caligari once said to him, "Son, I guess you are what they call a natural born catcher."

"The joke is on you, Doc," replied Haskell. "I am a third basemen." He thereupon fell into such a fit of giggling that the doctor had to put him under sedation, where he is to this day.

But I digress. We were discussing medicine. I have now told you all I can; the rest is up to you. Go over to your med school and poke around. Bring popcorn and watch an operation. X-ray each other. Contribute to the bone bank . . . And remember, medicine can be fun!

'Bomber' Brennan: Electrical Eng., Basketball Player and Comedian

By JOE FITZPATRICK

Bill Brennan (nicknamed "the Bomber", not because of his shooting, but because in earlier days, he had a rotund figure) made his debut to Villanova basketball late in his college career.

Brennan waited until this, his senior year, to go out for the team.

Bill spent the first three years at Villanova compiling a 3.02 average in the electrical engineering department.

Even though Bill has been hampered by inexperience, he has done a very commendable job on the Villanova five. His best performance so far was against Duquesne when he got the "hot hand" and poured fourteen points through the net.

'Used Them All'

After Bill had performed this sharp shooting, a student who didn't see the display asked what shot he used and Bomber replied, "Oh, I have a variety of shots, and I use them all."

Bill, who played his high school ball under the many-splendored mentor, Jimmy Usilton, at West Catholic, does a pretty fair job on defense.

He points out that he held Guy Rodgers to eleven shots from the floor. "Only trouble was," says big, likeable Bill, "he made ten of them."

Brennan is unlike some of Villanova's controversial basketball players in the fact that he has not yet made Sandy Grady's Daily News black list. It takes more than Grady's flack to bring this "bomber" down.

Keeps Team Smiling

Brennan's humor, coupled with the much publicized humor of his coach, who it has been said satirically commended Bill and teammate Joe Ryan on their fine shooting in the Temple game keeps the Villanova team smiling when things aren't going so well.

In the game with St. Joseph's, Bill played beautiful ball. His jump shot was checking and his passing was great, but late in the game, he experienced a "famine" on the foul line.

The day after the game, he was seen in Dougherty Hall waiting for a job interview. A student asked him who was going to interview him.

Bill, in his unassuming manner, replied, "Eddie Gottlieb; he wants me to help Senesky with the Warriors' foul shooting."

Bad Passes

On another occasion, against Penn, Bill had passing difficulty. He threw more passes into the stands than he did to his teammates.

A friend told Brennan he had been to see the game. Bill came back with, "I didn't see you there—else I'd have thrown you a pass."

This 6'3" resident of Highland Park, Pa., might make with the jokes, but past performance shows that he diligently attempts to improve.

After missing the fouls in the St. Joe game, he went right to work and in the two following games, his foul shooting was perfect.

Big Improvement

As far as his passing goes, all that one need do is point out the Temple game in which Mr. Severance gave Bill the task of running the club from the outside. Bill's passes were perfect.

Bill Brennan graduates in June, and when he leaves, Villanova will lose not only a great competitor on the court and a fine student, but a fellow with a keen sense of humor. Bill said that the firm that hires him as an electrical engineer will get a "big shock".

Two Lou's Led Wet 'Cats

By COLLIN CLOUT

Co-Captains Lou Schoener Lou Pinto led the 1957-58 Villanova swimming team through one of its most impressive seasons.

The schedule included Army, LaSalle, West Chester, UMI, Lafayette and others, with the final record being 8-2-2.

To say that both Lou's were valuable to the squad would be a narrow view. Their importance was beyond what they actually did in the meets.

Coach Ed Geisz stated "they are two of the finest gentlemen and finest competitors that ever swam here.

Showed Way

"They were part of the group that helped put our team up on top. Their leadership and example showed the rest of the team how it could be done."

Schoenor was captain of the St. Joseph's Prep team in his senior year. He is in Political Science courses here, and feels that he may enter Law School next year.

But this summer he will go back to Ocean City for his fifth year on the beach patrol.

For the last three years he has been South Jersey half-mile swimming champ, winning over all swimmers from the other beach patrols.

AAU Meets

To stay in shape after the season Lou swims for Sylvan Pools in Amateur Athletic Union meets.

In the first meet of the season, against VMI, Schoenor broke the long standing record set by Dr. Bill Hooper. The time was 5:22.5 for 440 yards.

Used in almost every freestyle race at one time or another, Lou is also part of the foursome which set Villanova records for the medley and freestyle relays.

Just as any athlete who participates in an unheralded sport, Schoener has strong convictions.

"You don't get anything easily in swimming. You have to work hard. "It prepares you for other difficulties you will encounter."

"It's a sport that doesn't lend itself to big-headed athletes. There is always someone better than yourself.

"As for the team, I never met a better bunch of guys who were more closely knit."

Both Schoenor and Pinto came to Villanova as breast strokers and similarly they switched to freestyle to suit the needs of the team.

Made Switch

Pinto was hampered at the beginning of the season because he had just made the switch to freestyle.

But by mid-season he was one of the best sprinters on the team, and he swam on the free-style relay team that set the Villanova record.

At West Catholic, Pinto was captain of the swimming team.

Besides being co-captain of the Villanova team, Lou is also the Secretary of the Student Council, and an outstanding mechanical engineer.

His future plans tentatively are to work for Scott Paper Company which last year gave him a grant for his scholastic achievements.

He does not plan to continue competitive swimming after he graduates.

Geisz and his swimming team will also miss both Schoener and Pinto next year but because of their efforts the team will continue to be successful.

Phil Reavis clears the bar at 6-4 en route to an eventual 6-8¼ and first place in the IC4A's.

Swimmers Win To End Season

The swimming team closed its season with a 71-15 romp over vsiting Georgetown before a capacity crowd on Saturday, as three seniors participated in their last meet for Villanova.

Co-captains Lou Schoener and Lou Pinto, and John Flynn were the three 1958 graduates. Schoener and Flynn came throug with victories to wind up their careers—Schoener, two of them.

Lou, back in stride after illness had sidelined him for the past few weeks, won the 22z-yard and 40-yard freestyle races. Flynn triumphed in the 200-yard orthodox breast-stroke.

The Wildcats won every event, including both relays, the 400 medley (Frank Keefe, Jim Gregory, Bob Pinto and Win Wilson) and the 400 freestyle (Lou Pinto, Schoener, John Rumbarger, and Gene Hewitt).

The other Villanova winners were Joe Mason, twice—in the 50-yard and 100-yard freestyle; Gregory, in the 200-yard butterfly; Keefe, in the 200-yard backstroke; and Steve Cartin, in the diving.

Others who earned points for the Wildcats were: Joe Harvey, second in the 220 freestyle; Lou Pinto, second in the 50 and third in the 100; Bill Gilhool, second in the diving; Jerry Cechony, third in the 200 backstroke; Bruce McCready, second in the 440 freestyle; and Gregory, second in the 200 breaststroke.

Baseball Starts

Baseball Coach Art Mahan has again renewed his call for pitchers and catchers, who are to report to the Field House for practice as soon as possible. Regular practice for everyone will begin shortly.

Equipment manager Charles Farnan also says that there are still openings for freshmen and sophomores who wish to be baseball managers.

Intramurals Now Normal After Storm

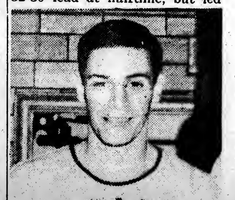
By PAUL BUCKLEY

The blizzard of '58 plus the fact the varsity basketball team has had to use the Field House floor has caused a temporary delay in the Intramural Basketball League. In order to get in all the scheduled games, the season might have to be extended.

The Half-Year Men, an all freshmen aggregation, leads the 10:30 league with a 4-0 mark. In the 12:30 league, the Gunners, who last week routed the IA Bombers by a 77 to 39 count, lead their division with a 4-0 slate. The J. B's., a sophomore group in the 3:30 league, have encountered little opposition.

Action in the 4:30 league has come to a temporary halt. The number of games left for the varsity to play his necessitated its use of the Field House floor.

The Swabbies, the Eastwingers, and the Peanutas lead their respective divisions of the 6:30 league. All have 4-0 records. In recent action, the Alumni Animals dumped Disneyland A. C., 42-36. The Swabbies downed the Chinagang by a 49-36 count, while the Peanuts laced SAPBD, 73-37.



In 7:30 League A, Ouden's Duds dumped the previously undefeated Playboys, thus moving the VW's into the top shot. In League B, two teams are undefeated with both showing 4-0 records—the Gazelle and the Ranch Hands. The Northerners, with a 4-0 slate are the front runners in League C.

Frosh Beat Penn, 72-59

The freshman basketball team kept its record clean with a 72-59 victory over the University of Pennsylvania frosh last Wednesday, for its eleventh in a row.

Two years ago Haskell had Addison's disease. (Addison, curiously enough, had Haskell's.) Poor Haskell catches everything that comes along. Lovable old Dr. Caligari once said to him, "Son, I guess you are what they call a natural born catcher."

"The joke is on you, Doc," replied Haskell. "I am a third basemen." He thereupon fell into such a fit of giggling that the doctor had to put him under sedation, where he is to this day.

But I digress. We were discussing medicine. I have now told you all I can; the rest is up to you. Go over to your med school and poke around. Bring popcorn and watch an operation. X-ray each other. Contribute to the bone bank . . . And remember, medicine can be fun!

Delany, Collymore and Reavis Are Great, But

Unsung Win IC4A's For Villanova

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT
Sports Editor

Norm Cyprus, Ron Brady, Bob Holup, Charley Stead, Phil Reavis, Ed Collymore and Ron Delany—these are the seven men who thrilled a Madison Square Garden crowd and etched their names in the sports annals of Villanova Saturday night by defending the IC4A title against the awesome depth of Manhatten College.

These seven combined for 29 1/3 points. The Jaspers had 27.

For those who witnessed the meet, that total was much more satisfying than the 46 points the Wildcats tabbed last year in winning the IC4A's for the first time.

A year ago, everything went as planned—the greatest college track team of all time romped convincingly. But the 1958 crew had to overcome bad luck all the way to eventually win.

Unsung Come Through

The seven names are not listed in the order they are for no particular reason—Saturday was the day for the unheralded to shine.

Cyprus, sophomore pole vaulter, is no Don Bragg. There are days he has trouble clearing the rather earth-bound height of 12-6.

But on Saturday Cyprus hit his peak in competition—13-feet—to earn one-third of a point for a share of fifth place.

Brady, the other soph vaulter, missed twice at 13-feet, made that height on the third try, then vaulted 13-4 for fourth place and two vital points.

Cyprus' and Brady's points might still not have been enough had it not been for the performances of Holup and Stead.

Holup Surprises

Holup, running under the handicap of a slight muscle "twinge," took a three-point third in the 60-yard high hurdles. Coach Jim Elliott and the dopesters had him figured for fifth or, at best, fourth.

Stead had only been high-jumping for two weeks prior to the IC4A's, and his best jump this year was 6-3. But a superlative second-place effort in the evening's last event—clearing 6-5—sewed up the Wildcat victory.

What Cyprus, Brady, Holup and Stead did, made up for some disappointments which could have cost Villanova the meet.

George Sydnor, figured for one-two-three in the 60-yard sprint, came in third in a questionable decision in one of the semi--finals, then lost to Rhode Island's Fred Lakeway in a run-off to get into the final when he had to run without any rest period.

Don't Qualify

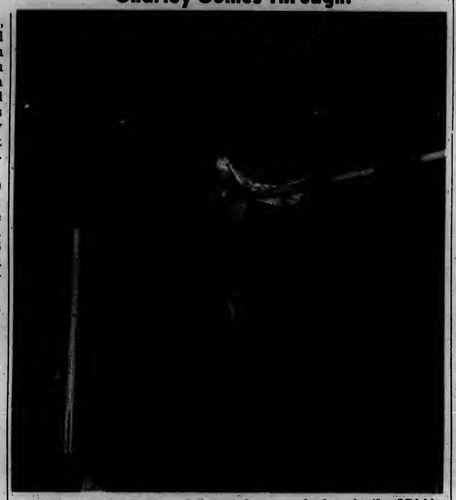
Four others failed to qualify for finals: Vic DiMao, in the 1000; Bob Godesky, in the mile; and John Buckley and Kent Lydic, both in the broad jump.

It's a strange night when three such performers as Ron Delany, Phil Reavis and Ed Collymore, all turning in spectacular jobs, are relegated to the depths of a story.

The three of them were tremendous—as usual.

Collymore followed up his National AAU victory with another 60-yard win, pulling away from Mel Barnwell, of Pitt, as he hit the tape in 6.2.

Reavis easily beat the high-jumpers, going over 6-8¾, and almost clearing the bar when it was set one inch higher, which would have established a new IC4A standard.



Tougher 'Double'

Delany was forced to run a much more difficult "double" than he had last year. It's a measure of Ron's greatness that one can compare his "doubles." They're unprecedented — but Delany is an unprecedented runner.

After negotiating the 1000 in 2:12.7 to qualify during the afternoon, Delany had to run 2:12.8 to beat Manhatten's Joe Soprano in the final of the event—two seconds faster than last year.

Then, obviously tired from the two 1000's and the effects of a lingering cold, Ron had to pass 12 runners in the last two laps of the two-mile, then outsprint the Jaspers' Gene Martin to win in 9:17.6

Charley Comes Through!

Charley Stead clears 6-5, to take second place in the IC4A's, earning three points in the Wildcats' 29 1/3-27 victory over Manhattan.

'Cats To Encounter Mules, Explorers

By FRANK CUNNINGHAM

Coach Al Severance's Wildcats go against Muhlenburg tonight at the Palestra, as the 1958 season draws to a close. On Saturday, the 'Cats will wind things up with a return engagement against LaSalle at the same place.

Muhlenburg's stubborn Mules are one of the top independent teams in the East, though this year they boast a below par 11-9 record.

Headed by Clint Jeffries, last year voted the outstanding visiting player at the Palestra, Birney Crum's outfit averages better than 6'5", with soph Rich Sekunda the all-around second banana to Jeffries.

In their only other appearance at the Palestra this season, the Allentowners dropped a decision to Temple.

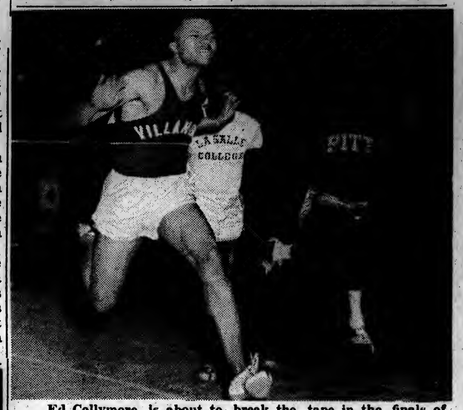
Another Chance

Lately, the Mules have copped easy triumps against Albright and Wagner, with Jeffries pitching in 31 points in the earlier tilt.

By virtue of LaSalle's loss to St. Joseph's last week, the Wildcats will get another chance at the Explorers, who defeated them 111-105 in a thrilling triple overtime session in regular City competition.

LaSalle's defeat at the hands of the Hawks left them in a three-way tie with the locals and Penn for the cellar of the intra-city league.

The Palestra rules stipulate that any ties between clubs (Penn excepted) are to be played off unofficially in the season's final doubleheader.



City Twin Bill

So on Saturday, LaSalle and the Main Liners will meet in one game, with Temple and St. Joe's one-two in the City, contesting in the other game.

Jim Pollard's unpredictable Explorers, who now own a 13-9 log, should be one of the nation's top clubs.

But with Tommy Garberina never really regaining his spark of last year, the club has lacked the catalyst it needed to get the sophomores "up" for every game.

Pollard has alternated between an almost all-senior club and a sophomore one. When the Explorers hit the right combination, they are rough to handle.

Ed Collymore is about to break the tape in the finals of the IC4A 60-yard. Mel Barnwell (right) took second and Ira Davis (center) was fourth.

'Cats Cop Two Easy Wins

In a week dominated by track enthusiasm, the basketeers of Coach Al Severance moved to two easy triumphs over Brandeis University and Washington and Lee.

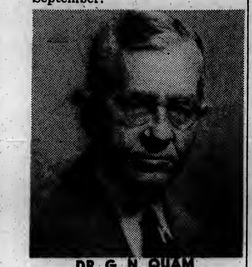
Tuesday night, Brandeis became the 'Cats' 81st consecutive Field House victim. 77-65. A quick opening spurt in the first ten minutes brought a 27-14 lead that proved too much for the Judges to overcome.

Jack Kelly and John Scott had a total of 41 points as the Wildcats notched their 500th win since 1920-21, the first varsity season in the court sport.

Saturday, at the Palestra, a 71-46 victory was accomplished over Washington and Lee ratthe easily in a relatively dull game before a small turnout.

The southerners did register an early 15-5 lead, but the 'Cats moved to a 21-21 deadlock, and from there on romped.

Kelly, playing up to the caliber of his performances in the last three weeks, paced the team in scoring and rebounding, with 22 points and 13 retrieves. Jack dropped in 10 of 17 floor attempts.



George Emma, a productive sixth man, had 17 points, many of which came on long, picture-perfect set shots.

Bruderle came to Villanova in 1946. He received his A.B. from New York University and his M.A. from Georgetown University.

He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa while at New York University. Bruderle received the Carnegie Scholarship to the London School of Economics and Political Science at London University.

He has pursued graduate studies further at the University of Pennsylvania.

At Villanova Bruderle is chiefly concerned with the Modern European History Course. He also teaches a course in the French Revolution at the Graduate School.

Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., Vice-President for Academic Affairs wil be the chairman of tonight's lecture.

Buddy Williams Band Signs To Play for Junior Prom; Rubin 'Five' Also Listed

By JAY BORFF

Buddy Williams and his orchestra, one of the leading dance bands in the country, have been signed to play at the Junior Prom during Junior Week, it was revealed by Prom chairman Gerry Hepburn yesterday.

At the same time, Hepburn also told the VILLANOVAN tha he had signed Stan Rubin and his Tigertown Five to play during the intermissions.

Williams, during his career, has been aranger for such bands as those of Tommy and Jimmey Dorsey, Glenn Miller, Les Brown, Count Basie, and Paul Whiteman.

In a Billboard poll a few years ago, Williams was listed among the top five band leaders and arrangers in the country.

Played at Cotillion

Rubin and his jazz combo will be remembered for their playing at last year's Sophomore Cotillion.

At the same time that the two bands were announced, Hepburn gave a list of all the chairmen of the various committees for the Prom.

The biggest assignment—that of decorations chairman—has been given to Matt Mazza day hop engineer. It will be his responsibilty to put into actuality the main theme chosen for the Prom by Hepburn and his aides.

Working under Mazza will be Joe DePalma, resident arts man, in charge of the floral arrangements; Pete Thorton, resident engineer, in charge of ceiling and overhead arrangement; Al Lepore, resident C. & F., who will handle lobby arrangements; Jim Sloat, resident C. & F., chairman of the art work committee; and Art Greenwood, day hop C. & F., and T. Walker Lloyd, day hop Arts man, co-chairman of the stage furnishings committee.

More Chairmen

Bob Baker, day hop C. & F., and Ed Zeaser, day hop C. & F., will handle refreshments. Mike Axt, resident C. & F., will be in charge of ticket sales. Bob Wagner, day hop engineer, and Bob Krallanger, resident engineer, will take care of posters and publicity.

Frank Cavalier, resident engineer, will handle the Queen Contest. The first pictures of the entrants will appear in the VILLANOVAN in two weeks.

Midshipmen Prep For Commissions And Graduation

Commissioning and graduation are uppermost on the minds of Villanova's midshipmen these days. Preparing for this twin event will occupy much of their spare and Navy time in the coming months.

On his own, each midshipman is responsible for completely outfitting himself as an officer with everything from sword to collar devices. The midshipmen will graduate in their dress white uniforms.

First class midshipmen have already had one lecture on the question of Navy benefits and commercial insurance. Next Tuesday they will hear a lecture on a Naval officer's responsibility, legal and moral, towards the health and welfare of his men.

On March 25 a Navy chaplain will lecture the entire Villanova NROTC unit on the moral responsibilities of junior Naval officers.

Through April the midshipmen to be commissioned will have a personal interview on their future naval career with Captain Neil R. Curtin, USN, Commanding Officer of the Villanova NROTC unit.

Rochester Meeting

The Rochester Area Club will hold a meeting at 7:30 tonight in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Coffee and doughnuts are a welcome refreshment for these Villanovans who donated blood to the Red Cross last week. The bloodmobile visited the campus last Thursday and Friday to receive the donations of the university.

Underclassmen Choosing Rooms For Next Semester

Freshmen, Sophomores and Junior students are picking for the rooms that they will occupy next year in the Student council office, Dougherty Hall, between the hours 10:30 and 3 each day.

The picking started on Tuesday of this week and will continue through Wednesday and Thursday.

Those students who draw the lowest number in their respective class will receive first choice of the rooms available.

Matriculation cards will be necessary when a selection is made, and it is not necessary for a student to know who his roommate will be before drawing.

Juniors will receive first choice on Tuesday of next week in the Dean of Men's office in Mendel Hall.

Sophomores will follow on Wednesday and Freshmen will receive their room numbers on Thursday.

NFCCS Variety Show at St, Joe's

The NFCCS will present the second performance of the fourth-annual Variety Show at St. Joseph's College on March 23.

The NFCCS's opening performance was held last Sunday evening at Immaculata College.

The Variety Show features the Villanovans and the Murphy Sisters from Immaculata, plus a long cast of college talent. Some of the participants include the I.C. Chorus Line, Carol Chapla, the "T" Tones, Sissy DiMarino, and the Continentals. The Villanovans provide the background music for all of the performances and also present a "skit" in the show. Mike Kleisius is the master of ceremonies for the Variety Show.

The following two performances will be held at LaSalle College on April 18 and at Villanova University on April 19. All performances begin at 8:30 and the donation is one dollar.

The third lecture and discussion session in the NFCCS series on marriage will be given on Saturday night at 7:30 in the LaSalle College library.

V. U. Engineer Due Next Week

The March issue of the Villanova Engineer will be circulated next week, it was recently announced.

This issue will mark the revival of a policy carried out in past years in that an article written by a non-engineering student will appear.

Ed Karrer, Senior English major, is the author of this issues article entitled "An Essay", which deals with the social-minded American college student who seeks to acquire a college education, but not at the expense of outside activities.

Dinner On Friday

On Friday evening, Institute participants and those attending sessions will attend a dinner in Garey Hall.

Villanova's Institute of Church and State is intended as a major part of its Law School's contribution to the legal development of the community and nation.

Dean Powers Attends Meet In Chicago

Dr. Eugene P. Powers, Dean of the Evening Division of Villanova University, attended the Sixth Annual Leadership Conference for University Adult Educators which was held in Chicago last week, March 5, 6, and 7.

The conference was the latest in a series sponsored jointly by the Center for the Study of Liberal Education for Adults, the National Urban Educational Association, and the Association of University Evening Colleges, these three being the foremost groups in the advancement of adult education in the country.

20 Deans, Directors Attend

Dean Powers, a member of the AUEC, joined approximately 20 other deans and directors of adult education programs in American universities who were selected by the Center to discuss problems and methods in encouraging adult education.

The Leadership Conference was a gathering of officals whose special concern is the promotion of this extraodinarily vital and significant area in education.

The participants in the meeting, all of them prominent in the field of higher education for adults, continued the efforts of the preceding five annual conferences to define the purposes and establish the means of sound adult education in the university.

Investigate Role

In their endeavors to increase the effectiveness of the evening college, Dean Powers and his collegues at the Leadership Conference investigated the role of administrators of institutions of higher learning in furthering the educational progress of adults.

Chem, Physics Clubs Hear Dr. J. F. O'Brien

Dr. James O'Brien, member of the Villanova Philosophy Department delivered a lecture on "The Implications of Aristotelian Metaphysics in Modern Science" to the members of the Physics and Chemistry Clubs in the Physics laboratory last Wednesday.

The lecturer's background prepared him for such a philosophical - scientific discourse, Dr. O'Brien received his Bachelor of Science in Aeronautical Engineering and Master of Science in Physics from Notre Dame University, and his Doctor of Philosophy degree from the Catholic University of America.

Several important points were brought to the fore in the course of the talk including: the fundamental similarity of the positions of Aristotle and Einstein on the questions of space, time, motion and place.

Dr. O'Brien pointed out that while Einstein refers to the relativity of space and time, Aristotle chose to affirm their accidental nature. Further reference was made to the position adopted by Max Born which substantially supports the Aristotelian-Thomistic outlook on the physical world.

Refreshments were served immediately following the meeting.

The group of Villanovan's pictured above are witnessing the fire in Belle Air Hall on Monday of this week. Fortunately, the damage was slight and Villanova's classic structure which has withstood moving, reconditioning, two foot swows, and winds and rain, adds fire to its list of subdued would-be conquers.

WVIL Inaugrates Policy Of Saturday Broadcasts

Another first for WVIL this year is Saturday broadcasting. On Saturday, Jan. 10, the station expanded its air time to seven days a week.

Larry Seaver and Pete Philbin, two junior I. A. students, begin the day with the Morning After show from 9 a.m. The show is programmed with the idea of "lets wake up the campus."

The boys are funny and lively with a laugh a minute and any tune with a different and unusual sound might be heard at this hour.

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. WVIL presents the Blue Room. The programming of this show is left entirely in the hands of the radio listeners.

All songs played at the Blue Room are by request. The station receives anyone's call and immediately sets its librarian to the task of hunting out the record.

Besides offering four hours of entertainment, the program teaches WVIL just what the student might like to hear during the weekly shows.

Also heard on the new Saturday schedule is a complete coverage of the news and weather and the daily reading of the menu.

will portray the other two suitors, Gremio and Lucentio. Welsh, a senior pre-med, has been in three productions for Belle Masque while Cannon has been in two. Cannon, a junior English major, has had parts in the Caine Mutiny Court Martial and in Billy Budd.

Baptista, the harrassed father of Katherine and Bianca will be played by Dick Dressler who had a supporting role in St. Joan as the Bishop of Beauvais. Joining Dressler in another supporting role is Allan Willig who will portray Grumio. As Grumio, Willig, will be counted on to supply much of the comedy in the play. Willig brings to Belle Masque an impressive list of previous performances in both high school and summer stock.

Immaculata sophomores Dorothy Hoffman and Annette Shaeffer come to Belle Masque for the first time. Miss Shaeffer will understudy Linda Lynch while Miss Hoffman will portray the widow in the play and also understudy Elaine Cake.

Other members of the cast are Tom Flyn, Frank Thornton, Jack Daly, Mike Keating, Bob Sanders, Frank Fagella and Anthony Provenzano.

To insure that the audience receives the full richness of Shakespeare's lines, a sounding board will be used in an attempt to aid the accoustics in the field house.

Tom Kimmel, president of the society, has pointed out that many of the minor characters have considerable talent. "It would be wise to note these performers," said Kimmel, "they are Belle Masque's future."

NFCCS Sponsors Literary Contest

The Philadelphia Area National Federation of Catholic College Students is holding a poetry and short story contest, and the organization has invited Villanova students to enter their work in the competition.

Deadline for all material is April 1. Any manuscripts with post-marks later than that will not be eligible.

First prize in both the poetry category and the short story category will be publication in "The Ave Maria," a national Catholic weekly magazine.

Results will be announced before the end of this semester.

Two copies of each manuscript must be typewritten.

A person may submit as many entries as he or she wishes. Entries should be sent to Literary Commission, NFCCS, St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia 31, Pa. The writer's name and address and the name of his college must be included with his entry.

NRA Pistol Course

The National Rifle Association's Small Arms School pistol course which started Monday, will run until Friday.

The Woman's rifle course will start next Tuesday and will run for four days.

Pictured after his lecture "Implications of Aristotle's Metaphysics on Modern Science" is Dr. James O'Brien of the Philosophy Department. With him Jack Solarski, president of the Physics Club,

The Villanova Field House served as the scene of the annual Shamokinaki dance. The proceeds of the affair are used to assist those foreign missions under the auspices of the Augustian Order. Music was provided by Lou Denison and his band pictured in the background. Decorations were oriental in style, as noted in the Japanese pagoda.

Kilpatrick — College Editor Has 'Responsibile' Freedom

By FRANK DYNAN

"The editor of a college newspaper has freedom of speech," James J. Kilpatrick said in an exclusive interview with the VILLANOVAN, "but it is a responsible freedom.

"The editor is responsible to the administration," he stated, "in the same fashion that the editor of a commercial newspaper is responsible to his publisher."

Kilpatrick, editor of the RICHMOND (Virginia) NEWS LEADER, pointed out that while the editor of a college paper will leave, the school will remain, and therefore the editor has no right to print anything derogatory to the school's reputation.

Spoke at Forum

Kilpatrick gave his views on college censorship after his address before the Villanova Law School Forum last Wednesday night.

Kilpatrick attended the University of Missouri and was editor of the school's newspaper while there.

Kilpatrick, who claims the distinction of being the "only live Whig," spoke to the Forum on the topic "the Sovereign States."

The United States Supreme Court, functioning as a "super legislature" is steadily snuffing out the powers of the States of the American Union, he charged.

States' Power Lessened

"The states have delegated only four powers to Congress since 1788," he said, "yet the powers of the Federal Government have become much greater, and the powers of the states much weaker through the shaping of the constitution by the Supreme Court.

"Judges take powers for the Federal Government out of thin air despite Constitutional wording."

He referred his listeners to the last paragraph of the Declaration of Independence, and to the Articles of Confederation as proof of the states' unwillingness to surrender their powers to a central government.

The states' desire for sovereignty was exemplified, Kilpatrick believes, by their long debate over ratification of the Constitution.

Opposes Supreme Court

While Kilpatrick took exception in toto to the Supreme Court's broadening of Federal power at the expense of the states, he was especially concerned with the Supreme Court's segregation decision.

This he believes, is contrary to the provisions of the Tenth Ammendment.

Calling himself a "Tenth Ammendment Southerner," Kilpatrick said, "The Tenth Amendment is the key which unlocks the Constitution in State-Federal relations."

The Tenth Amendment reserves to the state all powers not delegated to the Federal Government.

Kilpatrick pointed out that "the power to maintain racially separate schools is reserved to the State." Therefore, "the Fourteenth Amendment was not intended to apply to public schools."

No Abridgement of Rights

The Fourteenth Amendment says, in part, that "no state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges of citizens of the United States. . ."

"The Supreme Court decisions in school segregation cases have caused anguish in the South," Kilpatrick said. He believes that the Court is encroaching on the sovereignty of States.

He cited specifically the Court's decision on the Brown v. The Board of Education Case.

Equal—No Integration

Noting the North's hypocracy, Kilpatrick called attention to the decision of a New York court which stated that the Fourteenth Amendment provides for equal school facilities, not integration.

Asked from the floor if he is a supporter of segregation, Kilpatrick answered "Yes."

He expressed no desire to go into sociology but he said that "some reasons for segregation in the South are its modes, customs and traditions."

The Book of Kells, a famous Irish manuscript, is presented to the Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, OSA, the University president, by Mrs. Dominick DeFeo of Bala Cynwood. The treasured publication, which has been in Mrs De Feo's family for many years, will be added to the Villanova Library.

Take Up The Sword

The Holy Father last week cancelled planned ceremonies which were to be held in commemoration of his 82nd birthday and the 19th anniversary of his accession to the Papacy.

The Pope acted in protest to the anti-clericalism which has manifested itself in Italy in the form of the "verdict of guilty" rendered against the Bishop of Prato. The Bishop had declared two members of his See to be public sinners when they were married in a civil ceremony while at the same time refusing to be wed in a church ceremony.

The people in turn took the Bishop to court and successfully sued him for libel. Italians have protested the decision and the Bishop intends to appeal the case.

The tidal wave of anti-clericalism has flood the streets of Italy and it has also shed its dirty water in the United States. Glenn Archer, executive director of the group known as the "Protestants and other Americans for the Separation of Church and State", praised the decision of the Italian Court while offering assistance to any American Catholic who wishes to sue his Bishop on the same grounds.

The policy of the "Protestant and other Amercians for the Separation of Church and State" does not seem coherent. On one hand they would deprive Catholics of bus fare for school children because this might lead to the Church's entering governmental affairs.

But on the other hand, they would not hesitate to have the government interfere in a purely ecclesiastical affair—the censure of church member.

It remains, however, that American Catholics are content to sit back in their chair of security and fail to lift a hand against the people that would see the very foundations of the Catholic faith shaken.

The purpose of this editoral is certainly not to preach but it would seem that Catholic students, who react violently on occasion over minor things, might "take up the sword" and make a concerted effort in defense of their religion.

What the Marines Offer You

By FRANK DELANY
Feature Editor

For our final article in this series on military obligation we come to the United States Marine Corps.

Regular enlistments are for three or four years of active duty with two or one years ready reserve and one year standby reserve. Most enlistees go to the Fleet Marine Force in such fields as infantry, artillery, tanks, aviation, etc. The FMF is spread all over the world from the Near East to Okinawa.

Other duty possibilities for the enlistee include administration, supply security and sea duty. Applicants can sign a contract upon enlistment providing that upon the successful completion of boot camp the recruit will be given duty in the aviation field. About thirty-five percent of marine corps personnel are connected in some manned with the aviation program.

Two-year Enlistments

Two year enlistments are available through the Marine Corps Reserve. Aviation duty is assured by joining up with a marine aviation reserve unit. Those between eighteen and a half and twenty-two years old are eligible for a six-month active duty reserve enlistment with five and one-half years ready reserve and two years standby reserve.

The Marine Corps obtain its officers from more sources than any other service branch. The Corps gets about ten percent of the Naval Academy midshipmen and about sixteen percent of the NROTC graduating class.

PLC's Prevalent

By far the largest amount of Corps officers come from the Platoon Leaders Class. The remainder are obtained by means of the Officer Candidate Corps and the Aviation Officer Candidate Corps.

Naval Academy and NROTC midshipmen have the option of choosing the Marine Corps for their tour of duty. This option is also available to the Navcads, the Naval Air Cadets, the navy aviation program which requires only two years college.

All college students up to and including the junior year are eligible for the Platoon Leaders Corps. This involves only two six-week summer training periods or one twelve-week summer training period. There is no interference with the normal school routine and candidates are required to maintain a C average. Of course the degree must be obtained for the commission.

OCS Opportunity

Candidates for the Officers Candidate Corps or its aviation equivalent must be college graduates and complete a ten-week summer training course at Quantico. If a candidate should fail to complete his training he serves two years active duty as an enlisted man.

Upon commission the AOC candidate goes to Pensacola for fourteen to eighteen months flight training. PLC aviation candidates also go to Pensacola immediately following their commission.

Officers from the Academy or the NROTC must complete the nine months basic school required of all ground officers prior to flight training.

All commissions require three years active duty. Aviation programs require two years active duty after flight training.

If any information is desired on any of these programs, see Captain John J. Grace, USMC in Commodore John Barry Hall. Marine officers will be on campus in Dougherty Hall for one week commencing March 24, for those interested in implementing an interest in the Corps.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

The VILLANOVAN's new policy, that of varied and controversal opinion along with more campus humor, has given life to a previously very dead newspaper.

There seems to be one trouble, though. It is hard to distinguish the opinions from the humor. For example, is Ray Quaglia expressing the opinions that all committees smell, he will be a lawyer when he grows up, and nuns are the best educators or is his column trying to supply more varied and controversal campus humor. Its all very confusing.

The column, titled the "Padded Cell" is another one which has troubled me greatly. I know this column doesn't deal with opinions but I fail to see how it possibly deals with humor. The phrasings, adjectives, and general style of writing used by "Gerry" are exactly the same as those used by "Mad Magazine. And I know "Gerry" doesn't write for Mad. Such adjectives as "Sazzaphranic Sound" have been used before and will be used again, but please no more in the VILLANOVAN. Three cheers for "Kempfing Out".

Sincerely,
Anthony P. Mullen
Junior
Accounting
Major

ED. NOTE: Better check your back copies, son, the title "Kempfing Out" was changed to "Mein Kempf" in October. The column will return in future issues, however.

"The Little Guy" and "Padded Cell" are humor columns, honest—Ray and Gerry told us so. Gerry added that he'd love to write for "Mad," but they never asked him. Come to think of it, neither did we.

Dear Editor (the word is used liberally):

Who's kiding who? I mean, let's get serious. Letters to the editor are nice to have and all that but just how naive do you think the readers of the VILLANOVAN are?

To be more specific: your letter of March 5 issue praising the newspaper's recent effort to gain a little of that much needed intangible, "readability," and signed "a high school senior," was apparently or perhaps I should say, obviously—nothing but the rather poorly concealed work of a staff member.

It would strike this observer as somewhat paradoxical that a letter of such questionable journalistic taste is used as an instrument to sing the praises of the new, and supposedly fine, journalistic features.

If we must sing our own praises—if we don't toot our own horn, who will—let us do so openly.

Sincerely,
(Name Witheld By Request)

ED. NOTE: That's the kind of open criticism we like—short, sweet and unonymous.

PUBlicly Speaking

By BILL CHRISTY

Nostalgia For 'Ye Olde Pie Shoppe'

With the resurection of the Villanovan's two most popular columns, "The Padded Cell" and "Strictly Opinion," I thought it might be nice to bring back a column that no one much cared about, just to offset the shock of it all.

So when the editors approached me and so graciously asked that I compose a regular entry (after two months pleading and bringing them coffee at the printers'), I decided to steal the former title, "Publicly Speaking."

For a time I considered using another defunct title, "Billboard," but after a cursory glance at the condition of the billboards around campus, cluttered with interesting bits of information, I decided that this wouldn't be quite significant of this column,—This column will feature very little information, useful or otherwise.

To wit:

The impending opening of the new C&F building in its full capacity has brought quite a bit of speculation as to what affect this newest expansion will have on the campus in general. Some have suggested the return of the Classroom Annex to its state of former glory as the Olde Pie Shoppe.

Days of Yore

The suggestion is, of course, impractical but it does conjure up visions of the splendor of yore. Juniors and Seniors only will remember those days of glory. Not the period of the reign of the nickel in the hallowed hall, but the times before the innovation of labyrinthian partitions and over-active steam heaters.

It used to be that one could wait for his burnt hamburger or well-lubricated cheese in a friendly spirit of contact competition of a mob scene. These were the days before the regimented lines and the chrome-plated turnstile that keep eager customers to a close-knit rank and file. The old system added a measure of chance to the lunch hour—you could never tell if you'd get anything to eat within the allotted hour.

Mississippi Gamblers

The outstanding feature of the old regime was pinochle. The north side of the building was reserved for fountain-type booths which were constantly filled with three or four avid card players and at least six spectators. Such goings-on would hardly be fitting in the sophisticated atmosphere of the modern cafeteria, but in the dimly-lit, slightly dusty surroundings of the Pie Shoppe of old it added the spirit of a Mississippi gambling boat.

The abolishment of this particular feature has had its good and bad effects. Attendance at class has increased considerably, (although the attendance marking system may be to blame for this change.) The new blue laws have, however, wrought a hardship in another quarter. To this date four former students have found it necessary to leave the school due to the resultant loss of income and three others have suspended all social activities for the same reason.

'Ten-Hut!

There were other advantages in the pre-juke box ear. You could eat an entire meal without having to jump to attention once at the blaring airwaves, "Attention Villanovans!" The service at the counter wasn't any better than at present, but the coffee has an aromatic rusty-pipe flavor that is missing in the new facilities. Lounging arrangements were not half so elaborate as those now available, but it was sometimes possible to find an empty booth and take a small nap without the disturbance of the long blue arm of the law.

Conversation, the lost art, florished in those days. There was always someone to talk to, and more surprising, you could hear yourself think without the dulcet tones of "Bandstand" softly obliterating all other sound. Of course, this was before the founding of the Villanova chapter of the Mickey Mouse club and it was still possible to strike up a conversation without interrupting "Maverick" or "Cheyenne."

There are a few about campus who would return to the ankle-deep coffee on the floor, the conversation, and the pinochle. For the rest they must content themselves with the new noon-time sports of bouncing on foam rubber and breaking plastic spoons.

PADDED CELL:

EMSORE Booms To Greatness

By BOB

There is—though the fact is denied—a satanic little group on this campus known as EMSORE—Early Morning Society Of Rocket Engineers. Only after many weeks of careful search did I stumble across the group accidentally.

It was shortly after midnight, and the dorm was quiet: no sound save my room-mate frantically rebuilding his motorcycle in time for the spring thaw. The room was cluttered so I was doing my skiing in the hall, practicing for the 50 meter jump. There were three of them squatting on the floor. I tried going high, but my left ski caught a rib. Well, I was sore, breaking a ski like that, after it had hardly been used. (The hall is generally too crowded for the 50 meter.) I stumbled back to the group and bent down for a better look. Just then one of the chaps raised his head and yelled "BOOM!"

"BOOM," I returned in as friendly a manner as I could muster at that hour, "BOOM." Then the whole scene was obscured by smoke. This set me to wonder at the friendliness of their intentions. The smoke cleared, and a rather ragged head stared at me from the floor. "BOOM!" I said. He hit me.

The next few moments were rather hazy, and the soot from the stove pipe was ruining the monogram on my pajamas. There wasn't much room inside the pipe, but finally one of them said "No, I wouldn't do, and that they would have to keep using dogs, like the Russians. It was then I learned that this was EMSORE headquarters. Composed of dedicated Villanovans, this group was putting everything (gunpowder, match-heads, three mice, one counselor) into the current effort to conquer space. The society is in the hands of the Anthropology majors, and includes a few frustrated English majors, and a foreign looking chap, who stood with his face pressed against the wall and kept mumbling, "So dis iz Amereka." An exchange student, invited into the EMSORE inner circle. "Quite all right," I was assured, "They think he went down with the Doria."

"Boom!" I yelled in greeting.

He smashed his head against the wall.

I was led over to a bunk. They pointed to a mound under a blanket I took to be someone's room-mate. It wasn't. There were pipes (stove pipe, water pipe, wind pipe), a can of black powder, a dead mouse, and a crumpled fruit cake. Gad, I thought, what happened to his room-mate? I poked the mouse. (I didn't think the mouse was his room-mate; I like the feel of dead mice.)

This, they explained, was the rocket material. No, not the mouse—the pipe and the powder. "Yes, you can have him." I put the mouse into my pocket.

Privilege Yet?

Then they showed me the latest rocket—a length of stove pipe stuffed with 73 cases of match heads. The launching crew was already cutting through floors three stories up. They would break through the roof in a matter of minutes. Would I hold the match to light it, they asked? As a new member it would be a privilege etc., I told them. They crowded against the wall. "Light it!" they yelled. "Hell No!" I said and ran.

Safely locked in my own room, I took the mouse from my pocket and held him by the tail. "BOOM!" I said. He didn't move. I stuffed him through the hole and into the cylinder of my roomie's motorcycle. "BOOM!" I said when I thought how surprised my roomie would be after the spring thaw.

THE LITTLE GUY:

No Rowing Team? What Is This?

. . . . . RAY QUAGLIA

I just saw this kid again yesterday when I was walking down by Mendel Hall. He didn't have time to dodge me so he smiled and said hello. He really thinks I'm a grade "A" creep and in a way I can't blame him too much.

I have to laugh, though, when I think of how I met this fellow. We were both out here for the first time and we were really "gung-ho." Me and my pal from high school were yelling "Bear Meat" all over the place, singing songs, and really getting in good with those guys with the white hats.

Well anyway they herded us all into the stadium, with our beanies and bow ties and rolled-up-pants. We really looked like a bunch of clowns, but me and my buddie thought this was great stuff, being in college and all.

These guys kept yelling about all the sports we have out here, and they finally asked us if we had any questions. Well a few guys asked about some silly stuff, so I figured I'd shake everybody up and play a bit of a role.

I asked this guy real suave like, if we had a rowing team. He got all flustered and said no, but if enough fellows were interested perhaps he could arrange it. Well did I act dissapointed! I got that look on my face like I was all broken up, and sort of sulked. This really cracked my buddie up, he was giggling like mad and trying to hide it at the same time. He was really getting a big kick out of me.

That's when I met this kid I'm talking about. He came barrelling up to me all out of breath, trying to run and not miss any "Bear Meats" at the same time. He started popping questions all over the place.

How many guys do we need for the team and he's got nine guys that are really good and how many guys can I get.

Stuff like that. Well I shot the breeze with him for awhile, stopping now and then for a "Bear Meat," because the kid was all enthused and thought I was a wheel or something.

Well anyway he finally asked me what school I'd rowed for and I said I didn't row for a school. He looked a little puzzled and said "private club huh?" I said no-I didn't row for a private club either and started trying to sneak away.

He was really confused now, so he said sort of mad like "well, where did you row then?" I told him I'd done quite a bit of crabbing. "CRABBING", he yelled. "Crabbing", I said real soft and sincere like. He just walked away sort of mumbling to himself.

I guess he generalized about me and mistrusts everybody out here since then, because the kid still doesn't talk much and we still don't have a rowing team that I know of.

Strictly Opinion

What Are You Going To Be? - Why?

By BOB PINTO

BOB PINTO

"What are you going to be?" No question strikes more terror in the heart of a liberal arts man. He will try to give a dignified answer, lauding knowledge per se and handing out a lot of jazz about knowing the best that man has thought, but inside, you've got him scared. I know. It happens to me all of the time.

When I was a senior in high school, my counsellor told me that all of the persons going into engineering and business in college were already as educated as they could be. They didn't need any more general schooling, but I was still a slob; I needed a liberal education. So you see the fallacy? Everyone thinks an arts man should be smart but it's just the opposite. He needs the course to catch up with everyone else. He is just expanding his high school education.

Psalm of Life

When he graduates from the arts course, he will have only a lot of knowledge about things that everyone and anyone could easily learn if they didn't think it was a waste of time. He can't set up a system of accounting or find the optimum mixture of two fuels or do any of those things which are really so important in a life that is measured by a bank book and justified by production.

If everyone in history had taken liberal arts, we wouldn't have television, cars, automation and industry, rockets and warheads, and all of the fabulous things that make everyone so happy today. (Only a fool would question the ability of these things to make us happy—they made the late Mr. Robert Young of the N. Y. Central happy!)

Philosophy From Modern Magazines

So the arts man will go on in this world being a parasite, adding no new weapon or means of production, blanching inside when asked to justify his existence in society, and doing nothing but thinking and learning about life. (Which is unnecessary because the modern women's journals tell us all about life without our even having to crease our cerebrum.)

If "What are you going to be?" is the important question for a college man—with undertones of "How much money?" and "What social prestige?", then liberal arts is a waste of time. But if the important question could sometimes be phrased "How are you going to be?" then we will have to keep some of the outdated subjects and bullthrowing courses that we teach now, so that we will have a few students around to answer that question if it should ever happen to come up.

How often dear one do you think of me . . . . . those lovely nights in a coconut tree . . . the time you saved me from a natives spear . . . . hunting for roaches when the mornings were clear . . . . . the way you'd smooth my hairy head picking out lice that you knew were dead . . . . . do you remember dear? . . . . . Oh! . . . . . I was so TRUE . . . . . but now I'm just another ape in the New York Zoo.

Semper Fi Group Holds Instructions

The Semper Fidelis Society will hold the second meeting of its current series of instruction for new officer candidates tomorrow morning.

The instructions are given by George Reikle, Bill Ganz and George Wimberg. The meeting will be held in Barry Hall at 10:30.

Last week Semper Fidelis Society held a meeting at which movies were shown. The movies portrayed the life of a typical Marine Corps Second Lieutenant.

The society is also making plans for a Communion Breakfast which will be held on April 13. The Mass will be in the chapel and breakfast will be served in the resident dining hall. Reservations can be made with Captain Grace in the Marine office in Commodore Barry Hall. The price is $2.50 per ticket.

The above announcemen‹s were made by Jack Goodyear, senior Arts major, who is president of Semper Fidelis Society this year.

Four British Schools Offer Students Summer Programs

Four British University summer schools to be held this year afford American students the opportunity to study history, literature, philosophy, music and art.

The University of Birmingham will give a course in "Shakespeare and Elizabethan Drama" from July 7 to Aug. 16 at Stratford-on-Avon. There will also be a seminar on Elizabethan music.

The University of London's course will be on "Literature, Art and Social Change in England, 1789-1870." It will run from July 7 to Aug. 15.

The University of Oxford will offer "Literature, Politics and the Arts in Seventeenth-Century England" from July 7 to Aug. 15.

The Scottish Universities will give "The European Inheritance-History, Literature and Philosophy" from June 30 to Aug. 8 at the University of Edinburgh.

More information can be obtained from The Institute of International Education, 1 East 67th Street, New York 21, or from British Information Services, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20.

Finance Society To Visit New York City March 23

A representative of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith will speak to the Finance Society tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in 101 Vasey Hall.

The Finance Society will travel to New York City on March 26 to see the American Stock Exchange, Federal Reserve Bank of New York, Morgan and Stanley, Hornblower and Weeks, First Boston Company, and possibly the new York Stock Exchange.

Because of space limitations, only the first 45 students to pay for the trip will be allowed to go.

The purpose of the field trip, and of the society itself, is to offer some practical experience in the field of finance through the medium of speakers from the business and finance world.

Also, visits to brokerage houses and other establishments connected with the money market will help familiarize the students planning a career in finance.

Previous activities include speakers from Reynolds and Co. of Philadelphia, and the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia.

Mr. Lawrence Kirwan, a Villanova graduate of the Class of '57, who is now in the brokerage business, was also a guest speaker.

Singers' Concert Set for March 23

The Villanova Singers in line with their heavy spring schedule will give their next concert March 23 at Notre Dame Academy.

This appearance comes after performances at Mother Cabrini College, Holy Family College and an exceptionally good performance at the Choral Festival held two weeks ago at St. Joseph's College.

Both the director, Herbert Fiss, and the president of the organization, Ken MacGillivray, expressed their approval of the results shown so far, stating that the future of the singers looks to be favorably bright.

In order to remain in the position they have attained this year students who have singing ability and are willing to put in the time needed for weekly rehearsals should see the officers or come to a practice session any Tuesday night at 6 o'clock.

cal chemistry, (e) an advanced course in chemistry, and has passed courses in mathematics through integral caculus and a year course in college physics.

Deficiencies in any of the above may be corrected by taking courses at Villanova. This necessity will extend the time required for qualifying for the M.S. degree.

Thesis Required

A candidate for the degree, M.S. in Chemistry, must complete 30 hours of graduate work acceptable to the Dean of the Graduate Division and the Department of Chemistry. A thesis based on research is required and may carry credit for six of these hours.

The major subject may be selected from: analytical, inorganic, organic, organic-biological, and physical. Courses in biology, physics, geology, and mathematics may be recommended as supporting supplementary training as part of the required 30 hours.

Reading knowledge of German will be required of all candidates.

Scholarship Aid

A limited number of assistantships and fellowships are available to qualified candidates. Graduate assistantships requiring up to 12 hours of teaching service per week carry a stipend of $1600 for ten months with exemption from tuition and fees.

Inquiries regarding the graduate program assistantships and fellowships may be directed to Dr. G. N. Quam, Head of Chemistry Department, Villanova University, Villanova, Pa.

Outside Jobs Lower Marks, Survey Shows

Chicago, Ill.-(I.P.) Outside employment has a definite effect on college students' grades.

Students working more than 12 hours a week have somewhat lower grades than those working fewer hours or not at all, it was revealed in a survey conducted at Illinois Institute of Technology.

Thirty-five per cent of these students were employed from four to 40 hours a week, or an average of 15 hours. The proportion of working students among seniors was 50 per cent, slightly higher than the 30 per cent figure for employed underclassmen.

Light Load

A light class load—11 to 15 hours—was carried by one-fourth of all students who did not work and by 34 per cent of students who did. Half of the students who are not employed and 60 per cent of employed students carried a medium class load of 16 to 18 hours. Only six per cent of the employed students and 25 per cent of the others carried a heavy class load of 19 to 21 hours.

Does a student have to be extra intelligent to work his way through college?

According to the survey, students working more than 20 hours each week had significantly higher scores on col-

Opera Classica to Limit Membership in September

Opera Classica Music Society has announced the proposed limitation of its membership effective September, 1958. Only 50 student members will be admitted into the society. .

Printed applications will be available April 1, 1958. All applicants will be interviewed by the Director and the officers. Successful applicants will not be notified until May 1, 1958.

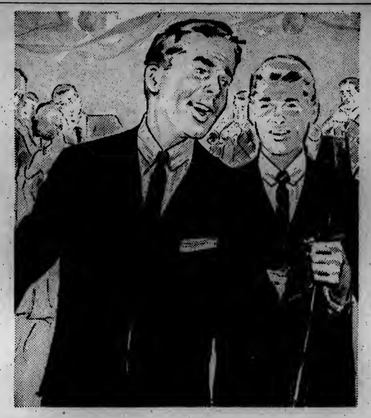
Puccini's Tosca will be heard tonight when Opera Classica meets in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall at 7:30. Controversial, callous Maria Callas will appear in the title role.

Callas, who is known more for her temper than her voice, will be accompanied by the voices of Giuseppe DiStefano as Cavaradessi and Tito Gobbi as Baron Scarpia. Tullio Serafin conducts.

Film Trips Set

Film trips of the Metropolitan Opera production of the opera Tosca will be shown in addition to reading the Italian-English libretto and listening to the recordings. The film stars Callas with Giuseppe Campora and George London.

Tosca will also be offered Friday night by the Philadelphia Grand Opera at the Academy of Music at 8:15. Licia Albanese will assume the title role ably assisted by Richard Cassily as Cavaradessi and Cesare Bardelli as Scarpia. Giuseppe Rambos-check will conduct. Student tickets are available at $1.75 in the family circle and $1 in the amphitheater. Contact Mr. Angeline, Ext. 310 or 383.



Society Marks 5th Year

Opera Classica will mark its fifth anniversary in October and plans are in the making to engage 18 members of the Philadelphia Orchestra who will present a concert of classical music. In addition, plans are in progress to engage one tenor and one soprano for a night of operatic arias.

Outstanding opera stars and conductors will be invited to join the celebration.

JOB FACTS FROM DU PONT

DU PONT

LIBERAL EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PROGRAM AT DU PONT INCLUDES INSURANCE, SAVINGS AND STOCK PLANS

WHAT'S YOUR LINE? DU PONT NEEDS ALL KINDS OF ENGINEERS

Du Pont has always needed chemists and chemical engineers, and still does. But today, there's critical need for engineers in almost every other field—civil, mechanical, electrical, instrumental and industrial engineering, to name a few.

Expansion is the major reason. In 1957, for example, sales at Du Pont were nearly two billion dollars. Four new plants were being built. New research programs were being launched. New products were moving into the production and marketing stages. Engineers and scientists of all kinds work in 75 Du Pont plants and 98 laboratories in 26 states. All of this tends to broaden opportunities for the young scientist and engineer at Du Pont.

If you're interested in finding full scope for your ability, and this includes a great many special fields, Du Pont offers you plenty of opportunity to move ahead.

SEND FOR INFORMATION BOOKLET ON JOB OPPORTUNITIES AT DU PONT

Booklets on jobs at Du Pont are yours for the asking. Subjects covered include: mechanical, civil, metallurgical, chemical, electrical, instrumentation and industrial engineers; atomic energy, technical sales, business administration, research and development. Name the subject that interests you in a letter to Du Pont, 2494-F Nemours Building, Wilmington 98, Del.

PERSONALIZED TRAINING

by C. M. Forbes
Du Pont Representative

When you join Du Pont as a scientist or engineer, you're given an actual project assignment almost at once and begin to learn your job by doing it. That's the essence of our training philosophy at Du Pont.

Our objective is to give you responsibility at the outset and qualify you quickly for more, because the more we grow, the more we need trained leaders.

Although there is no one training program at Du Pont (each of our many departments runs its own), all have several basic features in common. All are personalized—tailored to the new man's background and interests. All involve close supervision on an informal, day-to-day basis. And all permit periodic evaluation of the new man.

This flexible system helps the new man to move ahead according to his abilities. He gets to know Du Pont and his job quickly. He gets a head-start on future responsibility.

You probably have questions about this program and how you'd fit into it. I'll be glad to try to answer them when I visit your campus. Why not sign up for a Du Pont interview at your placement office now?

Means More Security, Greater Real Income To Young Graduates

Du Pont believes that the employee builds his own job security by the way he does his work, by his contributions to the progress of the Company and by his readiness to accept responsibility.

But Du Pont meets the employee more than halfway with a program of benefits designed to help him as he advances.

Your employee benefits go to work the day you join the Company. They grow and build equity for you as the years go by. Vacations, life insurance, group hospital and surgical coverage, accident and health insurance, pension and bonus plans are all part of the program.

Let's look at a special example, the Thrift Plan. You become eligible for it after one year with the Company. For each dollar you invest in U. S. Savings Bonds, the Company contributes twenty-five cents toward the purchase of Du Pont common stock in your name. Roughly 65 per cent of the Company's 90,000 employees are now participating in the plan.

When you're deciding on a career, security is only one consideration. But it's an important one to you and your family. At Du Pont, security is a bright part of the future awaiting the college graduate.

More than 700 of the some 1100 degree-granting colleges and universities in the U. S. are represented at Du Pont. Of these 700, more than half are the smaller liberal arts colleges.

THE ENGINEER'S CORNER:

New Column Feature For Engineers Will Present Science Students' News

By BOB MERKERT

The idea of having a column aimed at catching the attention of the engineering students, in addition to providing a place where all important engineering news could be channeled, came about as a result of an informal talk last week between news co-editors Ed Karrer and Joe Wheeler, and the author.

Our purpose is to bring to notice some of the newer discoveries and advances made in this field, and also to act as a central point into which all news, notices, activities, pertaining to the engineering school could be brought and made known. Quite often important meetings and activities are missed solely because of lack of publicity.

Lose A Slide Rule?

Anyone wishing an announcement made in this column whether it be the time and place of a meeting or a "Lost Slide Rule" distress signal, need only leave a note in room 344 Sullivan Hall by the Wednesday preceeding the week that it is to appear.

Recently unveiled at the Air Power Panorama of the Air Force in Washington D.C., was the new and more powerful brother of the famed Vulcan gun.

The new 30 millimeter version of the "Gatling gun" (the name given last year to the 20-millimeter Vulcan because of its similarity in operation to the orginal "Gatling gun" invented by Richard Jordan Gatling in 1862) is capable of giving modern high-speed jet aircraft three times the striking power of the earlier 20-millimeter version.

Although firing shells only 50 per cent larger than the earlier model, the new gun inflicts far more damage, in addition to having a higher rate of fire. The new gun, designated the Vulcan T212, weighs the same as its predecessor, which is currently being used on the Air Force's supersonic F-104A Starfighter but in overall length is eight inches shorter.

Modern Computers Used

Development in 10 months by the General Electric armament engineers of the Missile and Ordnance Systems at Burlington, Vermont, for the U.S. Air Force under a U.S. Army contract, was made possible through the use of modern computing means, such as digital and analoy computations.

Within 10 days after the first unit was put on test, the gun met Army Ordnance specifiations.

Many in Professor Greyson's Material Testing Lab and Dr. Borowik's class know, the testing of materials will never become routine so long as new materials are being developed and older ones are being improved.

Hot Stuff

This is particularly true in the case of alloys designed for operating temperatures between 1200 and 1250 degrees F. The problem of finding delicate instruments to measure physical properties of alloys at such temperatures arises, and in many cases, the building of the instrument very often entails more work than the development of the alloy.

Important properties that must be considered are the variation in the modulus of elasticity at elevated temperatures and the degree of surface incurred by heat cycling.

To meet this difficulty, the engineers of Westinghouse Materials Engineering Department adapted a standard optical gauge used for measuring strains at room temperature for use at high temperatures.

By silver brazing a 1/8 by 5/16 inch strip of 30-mil thick platinum to the Refractaloy knife edge blocks of the gauge, a bright and reflective surface can be maintained even at 1250 degrees F, making possible the detection of changes in length as small as 20 millionths of an inch.

Freshmen and sophomores are reminded that the Villanova Engineer is looking for new blood to help fill vacancies that will be created when the seniors leave in June. Gaining experience by working on the last two issues will guarantee a continued excellence in the publication in the forthcoming years. Anyone interested may join the staff, provided he is willing to work, by contacting editor John Fillman, or any member of the staff. . . .

PKP Bowling

Phi Kap's bowling league, with Bill "Poppy" McNeill, is again in high gear. The league is comprised of eight teams, with a ten week schedule planned. One point will be awarded to the winner of each game, with a bonus of one point going to the team with total pins for the match. . . . The standings and results will be carried on the sports pages every week. . . .

The privilege of becoming a brother of Phi Kappa Pi fraternity has been opened to all interested freshman. If you want to become better acquainted with the rest of the engineering students, in addition to having a lot of fun, don't miss this chance to pledge for the frat. Remember, it takes a well-rounded person to become a successful engineer. The social life of a student is also an important aspect in his training for the professional world. . .

Radio Club Moves

The Amateur Radio Club has moved the date and time of its meetings to 8:00 P.M. on Wednesday in order to allow more who are interested a chance to join. Don't be mislead by the title of the club; it doesn't confine itself to radio alone. That fundamentals of electronics, use of testing instruments, explanations, demonstrations, and project-building are in the future plans, has been indicated by co-chairmen Pete Thornton and Jim Lawless.

For those who have not heard, the Engineering Day, scheduled for February 22, was postponed because of the snow until March 22. . . .

lege entrance examinations than those who worked less or not at all. However, students working fewer than 20 hours per week have slightly lower intelligence test scores than non-working students.

Students working more than 12 hours a week spent an average of 20 hours a week in study, while those working less than 12 hours or not working at all spent an average of 28 hours a week in study.

FOR BETTER OR FOR WORSE

The first thought that comes into our minds upon entering college is, of course, marriage. But how many of us go about seeking mates, as I like to call them, in a truly scientific manner? Not many, you may be sure.

So let us today make a scientific survey of the two principal causes of marriage—personality need and propinquity.

Personality need means that we choose mates because they possess certain qualities that complete and fulfill our own personalities. Take, for example, the case of Alanson Duck.

As a freshman Alanson made a fine scholastic record, played varsity scrabble, and was president of his class. One would think that Alanson was a totally fulfilled man. But he was not. There was something lacking in his life, something vague and indefinable that was needed to make his personality complete.

Then one day Alanson discovered what it was. As he was walking out of his class in Flemish pottery, a fetching coed named Grace Ek offered him a handsome red and white pack and said, "Marlboro?"

"Yes!" he cried, for all at once he knew what he had been needing to round out his personality—the hearty fulfillment of Marlboro Cigarettes, the soul-repairing mildness of their fine tobacco, the easy draw of their unparalleled filter, the ease and convenience of their crushproof flip-top box. "Yes, I will take a Marlboro!" cried Alanson. "And I will also take you to wife if you will have me!"

"La!" she exclaimed, throwing her apron over her face. But after a while she removed it and they were married. Today they live happily in Baffin Land where Alanson is with an otter-glazing firm and Grace is a bookie.

Propinquity, the second principal cause of marriage, simply means closeness. Put a boy and a girl close together for a sustained period of time and their proximity will certainly ripen into love and their love into marriage. A perfect example is the case of Fafnir Sigafoos.

While a freshman at Louisiana State University, Fafnir was required to crawl through the Big Inch pipeline as part of his fraternity initiation. He entered the pipe at Baton Rouge and, alone and joyless, he proceeded to crawl north.

As he passed Lafayette, Indiana, he was agreeably surprised to be joined by a comely girl named Mary Alice Isinglass, a Purdue freshman, who, oddly enough, had to crawl through the Big Inch as part of her sorority initiation.

Chatting amiably as they crawled through Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New York State, Fafnir and Mary Alice discovered they had much in common—like a mutual affection for licorice, bobsledding, and the nonsense verse of Arnold Toynbee. When they reached the Vermont border they were going steady, and when they emerged from the pipe at Boothbay Harbor, Maine, they were engaged.

After a good hot bath they were married and today they live in Klamath Falls, Oregon, where Fafnir is in the weights and measures department and Mary Alice is in the roofing game. They have three children, all named Norman. © 1958 Max Shulman

Hall, Smith Speak To Pre-Law Society

A meeting of the Pre-Law Society was held on Wednesday night March 5. The speakers were Mr. John Hall and Mr. Peter Smith, two first year Villanova Law Students.

Mr. Smith, a Liberal Arts graduate, spoke of the obstacles that the first year Law Student can expect to meet. He put his main emphasis on the necessity of working constantly.

Acc'ting Society Meets Tomorrow

The accounting society will hold it's bi-weekly meeting, tommorrow morning at 10:30, in the 201 V.H. The purpose of the meeting will be the nomination of officers for the coming year.

Since the society has recently been given a seat in the student council, the officers elected will be responsible to the council for the function and activities of the society.

Mr. George J. Chorba, society moderator, has stressed to the society the seriousness on nominations.

'Hands, Gyros 'Could Surprise'

By KURT BECKER

Two teams loom as dark horses in the intramural playoff competition as the season nears its finish. The Ranch Hands in the 7:30 league and the Gyros in the 4:30 league have completed their respective seasons undefeated and could pull a few surprises in the finals.

The Ranch Hands are a group of resident engineers who are also mighty handy with a basketball.

Big man in the Ranchers' attack is 6'3" Bobby Powers from Brooklyn, a good board man and possessor of a deadly outside jump shot.

Rebounding Help

Bob has plenty of help under the boards in Bill Lytle, Dan Gallagher, and Ed Knepley, all of whom stand 6 foot plus. Lytle, former York Catholic ace, is also a strong offensive man from the pivot.

This bounding quartet is backed up by the sharp ball-handling duo of Bob Murphy and Butch Reynolds.

Bob hails from Lawrence Mass. and is captain of the team. A 5' 11" hustler, he features a terific jump and a strong drive, and teams with Reynolds to form a great fast break combination.

Best Scorer

Butch Reynolds, a 5' 10" jumping jack from St. James in Chester, is top scorer in the Ranch Hand attack. He has poured in most of his points with long, leaping one handers, but also has a mighty good drive.

Rounding out the squad are backcourt men George Matouk and Bob Merkert. The former, known to his friends as "Monty," gets up suprisingly well for his size, and has a fine driving one-hander. The latter's forte is ball handling, but has a good outside shot too.

Thus far the Gyros have little competition in the 4:30 league, and could cause quite a surprise in the playoffs.

Bradley Is Ace

The team has been led by the sensational shooting of West Catholic High grad Joe Bradley. Joe has been pumping them in at a thirty-point-per-game clip. His sets and jumps from all over the court have worn down all opposition to date.

Biggest surprise to date has been Dick Gillespie, another West man who has scored at a 20-point rate to date.

McNichol Pivot Man

6'3" Dick is helped out under the boards by Hank McCarthy John McNichol, and high jumping Jim McNaney. This trio can do a pretty fair job on offense too, in particular McNichol, who is a terrific man to have in the pivot.

Rounding out the Gyro squad are Tom Boyle, jump shooting Joe Colin, and Lefty Cona. Coach and sometime player is senior engineer Gene Fogarty, who is mighty high on the Gyro chances in the playoffs.

ing ability, as he hit eight of nine shots in sparking the 'Cats to close the gap to 62-58 with 3:25 to go.

Then a full court press put on by the 'Cats was effectively broken by the Explorers as they ultimatcly triumphed, 75-64.

The 'Cat's cause was hindered by the seven per cent field goal effectiveness of Kelly and Tom Brennan, and the fact that Ryan could get off but one shot in the last four minutes.

Kelly Gets Trophy

After the game, Jack Kelly was awarded the Food Fair trophy given annually to a Big Five player for outstanding qualities of scholarship, sportsmanship, and leadership.

Frosh Finish Undefeated, Beat Temple

By LANCE COLONNA

The frosh basketball team finished its finest season in Villanova's history by trampling Temple, 101-68, for its twelfth straight victory, last Tuesday in the Field House.

Temple threatened only during the first 10 minutes of the game. At that point the score was 18-17 in Villanova's favor. Suddenly the Wildkittens started playing the razzle-dazzle type of basketball that has been their trademark all season long.

Sparked by the brilliant shooting of Bob Liberatore and the nifty playmaking of Jim Huggard, the speedy freshmen left the bewildered Temple squad in their wake. Villanova lead at halftime was 43-28.

Rolled up Score

The second half was a complete romp for the Wildkittens. When the score reached 80-49 with 8 minutes left, the Field House crowd started cheering for the Little 'Cats to reach the one hundred mark. With 5 minutes remaining the score was 85-56.

With 15 seconds left and the score 99-66, Jim Huggard took a shot and missed but Bob Liberatore grabbed the rebound and scored to put the frosh over the 100 mark for the second time this season.

The team scored a fantastic 58 points in the second half. As they left the court they received a rousing and deserved ovation from the Field House gathering.

in the 4:30 league.

In the 6:30 league, the Ronrico Kids, Terry's Terrors, the Irish Dukes, the Boppers, and the Delurey Devils have not reported. In division B of the same league, the East Wingers, the Small Five, Jizz AC, the Runabouts and the Dunks have incomplete records, while in the C division, the 69'ers, Kiersak Raiders, Aces, SABD and the Out of Its have not posted their scores.

More Delinquents

In the three divisions of the 7:30 league the Little 5, Furriers, Vagartens, Robinson's Loosers, Jolly Trotters, Globe Men, the Sensations, Vill. AC, Saints, Baskethangers, Gazelles, PSWW'S, the Keyholes, Playmakers, Kort Kings, GLOV All-Stars, the Duffers, and LKD show incomplete records.

In action during the past week, the Ranch Hands downed Villanova AC 81-36. The Gyros ran over Bravo Co. 81-45, while the Alumni Animals upended the previously undefeated Swabbies by a 48-46 count.

The intramural department has announced that the softball league will begin in the first week in April. Entries will be accepted during the last week in March.

Liberatore High

Liberatore led the Villanova scoring with 25 points. Others in double figures were Jim Huggard with 16 points, Don McGinley with 14, and Jim Kenny with 14.

The top scorers for Temple were Stoddie Watts with 20, Norm Ginsberg with 19, and Bernie Ivens with 16.

Bill Scott, Ace Sharp Shooter, Ranked One of Nation's Best

By JOE FITZPATRICK

Popular rock n' roll singer Jerry Lee Lewis would find it necessary to change the wording of his hit from, "There's a whole lot of shakin' goin' on," to "There's a whole lot of shootin' goin' on," if he wanted to describe senior Bill Scott.

Scott fills the basement of John Barry Hall with a large quantity of lead, and most of this lead finds a resting place in that portion of the target known as the "bull's eye."

Bill is the captain of the pistol team, the leading man on the squad and one of the best collegiate shooters in the country.

Engineering Student

Bill is an electrical engineer, and is interested in microwave communication. He is a member of Phi Kappa Pi fraternity and the Quarterdeck Society.

Scott, a fifth-year NROTC student, became interested in shooting when he took the National Rifle Association basic course as a freshman. His interest changed from rifles to pistols in freshman year, and ever since, he has been using the smaller piece.

In his sophomore year, Bill received the Most Valuable Player Award for shooting and performing the duties of manager of the pistol team.

Arranges Matches

The manager, by the way, is an indispensible part of a pistol team, because he not only arranges the matches, but he also takes charge of the actual conduct of the matches.

Since his sophomore year, Bill's achievements on the range have been many. Last October he took part in the matching at Holmesburg, Pa., and in the expert class, Bill won all seventeen matches.

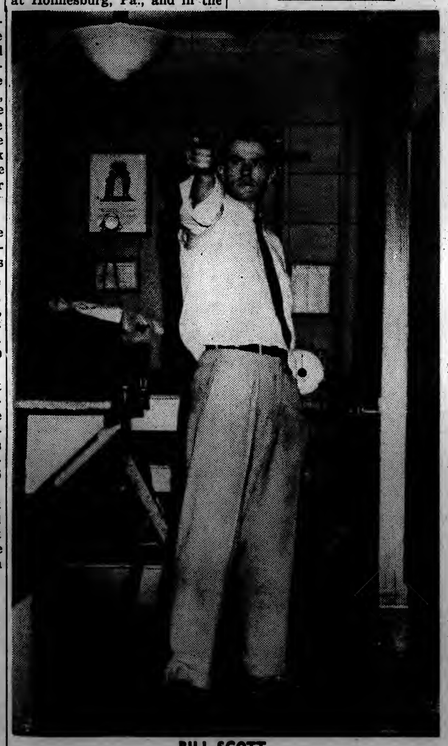
He also holds the all-time high for a Villanova shooter in a shoulder match on our range. He scored a 275 out of a possible 300.

Face-to-Face Combat

A shoulder match, by the way, is one in which both teams compete on the same range at the same time.

The alternate type of match would be the postal match. In the postal match, each team shoots on its own range and the results are mailed to the opposition.

Along with his fine indoor shooting, Bill holds the all-time high for outdoor shooting also. His outdoor score was a nifty 297 out of 300.



Come the summer months, Bill is like the mailman who takes a hike on his vacation. Bill shoots for the Frankford Revolver Club and the Philadelphia Rifle Club.

Better Than Champ

Bill has fired scores in pistol matches that are higher than those fired in last year's National Intercollegiate Individual Championships. He has shot 291 as compared to the 289 fired in the championship.

Bill also placed second in the matches held for all NROTC students in the United States. Fifty-two schools participated.

Bill is presently teaching his girl, Eleanor Walsh, a graduate of Gwynedd Mercy College the art of shooting, and he states quite proudly that she is pretty good. Some guys just don't know when to let well enough alone.

Track Team Shows Wares To Midwest

By BILL VINCENT

After winning his 22nd straight mile run in the New York Knights of Columbus Games this past Saturday, Ron Delany, along with the rest of the Villanova IC4A Championship track team will move westward to compete in the Chicago Daily News Relays this Friday evening.

A year ago Delany and his teammates dazzled 16,000 Chicagoans by sweeping to four individual championships and by setting a world indoor record in the mile relay.

The fleet footed Irishman set a meet record by running the mile in 4:03.8, which was only two tenths of a second off Gunner Neilsons world indoor record.

More Winners

Charlie Jenkins easily copped the Daily News 600 yard run in 1:11.6; Don Bragg topped Olympic champ Bob Richards in the pole vault with a 15'3" jump; and Phil Reavis leaped 6'9¼" to register a V.U. victory in the high jump.

The fabulous foursome of Gene Maliff, Al Peterson, Ed Collymore and Jenkins blazed to a 3:16 mile relay victory, setting a world indoor record for an eleven lap track and also breaking the national collegiate indoor record.

However, many of these Wildcat greats will be missing when the Wildcats return to the Windy City this year to try to excede their magnificent performances of last year.

Three Champs

As a warmup to their 1958 midwestern debut Jumbo Elliott's runners swept to three individual championships in the New York K. of C. games last Saturday evening in Madison Square Garden.

Leading the Wildcat aggregation was George Sydnor, the never-say-die, comeback kid. Sydnor, after losing out in the IC4A 60 on a disputed decision, came back to win the same event in the K. of C. Games last week.

Right behind Sydnor was Pitt's Mel Barnwell, who came on strong at the end; Ira Davis of La Salle, and AAU and IC4A champion Ed Collymore.

Delany Steals Show

But once again the invincible Ron Delany stole the show from all. This time it was not only because he won the race, but that he was forced to run somewhat of an obstacle course to do it.

On the next to last lap Delany just missed tripping over Burr Grim, who got his spikes caught in the boards. Delany and his competitors were also confused when the starter's gun failed to go off to signal the last lap. Ron's time was 4:08.4.

Reavis Ties Again

The other Wildcat winner was Phil Reavis, who leaped 6'8" to tie George Dennis of the Philadelphia Shanahan Catholic Club for top honors in the high jump.

The other Wildcat to place in the meet was Bob Holup, who took a fourth behind Hayes Jones, Elias Gilbert, and IC4A champ Al Hoddinott of Georgetown.

Another Basketball Season Fades Away; Kelly Honored

By RODGER VAN ALLEN

Villanova court fans were this week treated to three close, exciting ballgames in which the fine all out effort of the Wildcats was not properly told by a mere addition of one game to the win column and two games to the loss column.

The three games closed Villanova's thirty-sixth basketball season, the final record reading 12-11.

Last Tuesday night, St. Francis of Loretto, Pa. successfully invaded our field house, and in gaining their nineteenth victory in twenty-three games, snapped the Cat's eighty-one game victory streak that had been going since December 6, 1947.

The Wildcats had a ten point spread 19-9 on the powerful Frankies midway through the first half, but a rather large William Torsch, at 6-9 and 235 pounds, led his upstate mates as they then proceeded to outscore the Cats, 16-2, in assuming a 25-21 lead. The 'Cats, however, came back to take a 29-28 lead at half-time.

Emma High

In the second half, the lead switched hands several times with the NIT bound Frankies taking over 60-57 and controling the game for the remaining five minutes and the 70-64 triumph.

George Emma was high for the 'Cats with 20 points as he once again exhibited his fine set shot ability.

"Strings are made to be broken", said Coach Al Severance after the ballgame. "This was one of the biggest, toughest teams I've seen, We scared 'em and could have won if we'd gotten the lead that last three minutes."

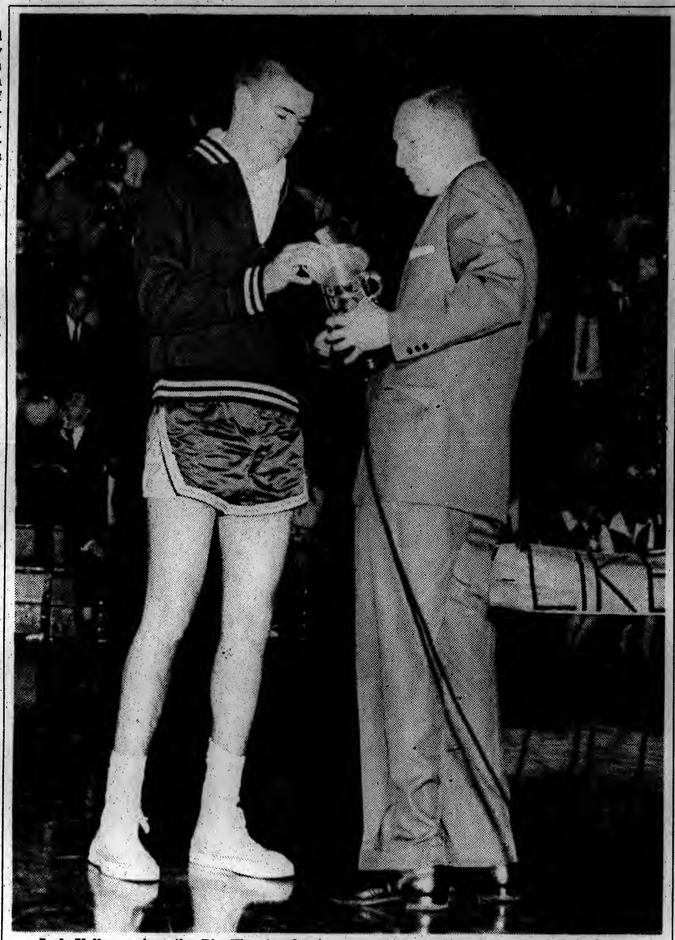
Frankie coach Doc Hutchins commented, "I'm glad to get out of this one."

Beat Mules

On Wednesday night, before the smallest Palestra crowd since the Big Five started playing there three years ago, the Cats triumphed over a determined Muhlenberg team, 81-73.

The 'Cats were early leaders against the Mules, but fell behind at halftime 37-33. A surge at the outset of the second half gave the Wildcats a 46-39 advantage, but the Mules came back to take the lead 53-52.

In the close action which followed, George Raveling dominated the boards and gained many of his 19 rebounds in those deciding moments, as Kelly, Emma, Harrison and Ryan contributed the scoring punch. Kelly was high for the Cats with 22, as he hit 10 of 19 field goal attempts.



In sharp contrast to the small crowd of Wednesday night was the City Series throng of 9638 who saw the 'Cats, in their final ballgame, fight gamely before succumbing at the hands of La Salle, 75-64.

Lead Changes

The lead changed hands six times in the first half with the 'Cats at one time enjoying a 27-21 margin, only to fall behind at intermission 31-28.

In the opening minutes of the second half the Explorers moved to a 37-38 advantage. At this point, Joe Ryan entered the game and displayed some phenomenal outside shoot-

Court Finals to Begin

By PAUL BUCKLEY

The regular season of the intramural basketball league, due to end last week, has been extended until tomorrow to give the 3:30 and 4:30 leagues a chance to play more games.

The intramural council announced that a tentative list of teams eligible to play in the finals will be posted at the pool on Thursday.

It is the responsibility of the teams to check the list. If a team feels that it should be in the playoffs, a representative of that team must check in at the pool no later than Saturday.

On Saturday a final list of teams for the playoffs will be posted. After Saturday, no team will be accepted.

Finished Before April

The council hopes to have the intramural championship decided by the end of March. One loss in tournament play will eliminate a team from the playoffs. It should be noted that not only undefeated teams will be accepted for the finals, but any team with a good record in league play.

In the initial games of the tournament, the teams must supply their own referees. The council will supply referees and timekeepers for the quarter-final games as well as for the final rounds.

The council reports that a number of teams have failed to report the scores of their games. Some of these teams are undefeated and if they wish to be included in the finals, they must bring their records to the pool.

No Records

The following teams have not posted their records:

10:30 league—The Hops, I-R Society, the Intellectuals, and the Wangwards; In the 12:30 league, the Holly Men, SR. Civils and the C. C. Collegians; the JB's, the Kertek Raiders, the Clowns and the Terrors in the 3:30 league; and the Gyros, Alpha Co., and the Austin Cats

Bowlers Vie For Trophies

The eighth annual Eastern Intercollegiate Individual Match Bowling Championship Games will be held, as it has for the past seven years, at the Bowlmor Recreation Center in New York, April 26 through May 4.

The championships are hosted by the 21-member Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling Conference.

As a result of the competition, the 1958 Champion Intercollegiate Bowler of the Eastern Half of the United States will be crowned.

The Conference has pointed out that bowlers can enter the competition as individuals, even if their school has no bowling team.

150 Last Year

Last year the tournament attracted about 150 students from thirty-three colleges.

Any Villanova student who wants to enter should contact Tom McPherson in Sullivan Hall.

On Saturday April 19, the regular Friday class schedule will be held. On Saturday, April 26 the regular Monday class schedule will prevail and on Ascension Thursday, May 14, the regular Thursday classes will take place.

Robert Pinto Named Editor Of Belle Air

Robert Pinto, junior English major, has been appointed editor of the Belle Air, Villanova's year book, for the next year, it has been announced by Jack Daly, outgoing editor.

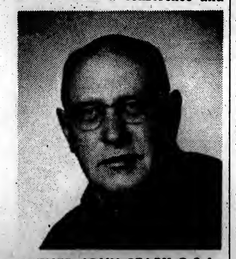
Some time after the Easter holidays, Pinto will make a call for anyone who might be interested in working on the year book.

Tentatively, the first assignment for the new staff will be handling the portraits for next year's seniors. They will probably be taken in the middle of April.



Pinto, in issuing a post-appointment statement, said, "I hope I can do as fine a job as Daly.

Council Sets Nominations, Election Due

The elections committee of the Student Council, under the chairmanship of senior Paul Laughlin, has announced the dates for nominations and election of class officers and Student Council representatives.

Nominations for all offices will be held in Vascy Hall April 17.

All names of nominees will be submitted to the University Administration for approval. To hold a class office a student must have clearance of the Dean of Men, the Chaplain and the Dean of Academic Affairs.

Election Rules

Elections will be conducted by the Council committee Tuesday, May 6. Rules for election and campaigning will be published at a later date.

Student Council elections for the officers of the Student Senate and Congress will follow nominations to be conducted the day after class elections.

These elections will be at another joint meeting of the Congress and Senate May 12.

Spirited Campaign

Last year's class elections followed a spirited campaign that resulted in a heavy turnout at the polls. The overall percentage of those elections was 72 percent.

The present Junior class was the best represented with a total of 78 per cent, with the present sophomore class behind with 72 per cent. The seniors polled 68 per cent of the total in the class.

Sheraton Hotel Site of Junior Dinner-Dance

For the first time, a Villanova dinner dance will have a theme.

Chairman Oz Scogna, releasing information on the Class of 1959's dinner dance to the VILLANOVAN, reported that the addition of a central theme —"Moonlight Serenade"—will be an innovation at Villanova in functions of this type.

Scogna and his committee also released other pertinent information regarding the dinner dance, to be held at the Sheraton Ballroom on May 3.

Paul Judge and his band, who made an appearance at Villanova earlier this year at the Class Ring Dance, will supply the music for the affair, which will last from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Tickets, priced at $11.50 per couple, will go on sale on Thursday, April 17, in table groups of four, five and six couples.

Information in Villanovan

Information regarding the sale of tickets will appear in the VILLANOVAN of April 16.

Scogna, a day-hop accounting major, was appointed to the dinner dance chairmanship by Class President Vic Ludmerer last spring. He is also a member of the Class Steering Committee and the Debating Society.

Mass, Banquet, Theatricals Planned for Mother's Day Opener of Junior Week

The itinerary and chairmen for Mother's Day traditional opener to Junior Week activities, were announced to the VILLANOVAN by Mother's Day Co-Chairmen Ken MacGillivray and Don Kempf yesterday.

The Villanova—Temple baseball game of April 28, originally scheduled as an away game, has been changed to a home game. That is the day on which Mother's Day will be held.

Besides adding another interesting campus event to the Mother's Day program, the move will make it possible for Juniors on the baseball squad to have their mothers down for the day.

Both From Chicago

MacGillivray and Kempf, both history majors from suburban Chicago, were chosen to act as Mother's Day Co-Chairmen by president Vic Ludmerer.

MacGillivray has been Class President and Kempf was Vice-Chairman of the Student Council.

MacGillivray said that the day will begin with a Mass sung at 11:00 at our Lady of Good Counsel Shrine. Celebrant will be class moderator, The Rev. Henry Weeks, O.S.A.

Planting of the Class Tree will take place immediately after the Mass. At 12:30 there will be a luncheon for the juniors and their mothers in the resident dining hall.

Field House Show

Besides the varsity baseball game, the afternoon will feature entertainment in the Field House, including skits of the NFCCS Variety show and the Turf 'n' Tinsel Show.

The winner of the Diaper Dan Contest will be announced at 4:00, after the juniors and their mothers have looked over the entries.

The day will be concluded with Benediction at 5:00 at the Shrine and a banquet in the Field House at 6:30.

As an added feature, for early arriving mothers, the final performance of this year's Turf 'n' Tinsel Show has been scheduled for Sunday night, April 27.

Ticket sales, under the direction of Jim Hull and Gary Mara, will begin on Tuesday, April 8, and continue through Friday, April 25.

Do We Have Plans!

Chairmen of Mothers' Day events for Junior Week, Ken MacGillivray and Don Kempf, take a break from their planning to pose for the VILLANOVAN camera. The event will be the first of Junior Week, to be held April 28 to May 4.

Amateur Nite Planned For Junior Week

Amateur Night, slated to make a reappearance in the Villanova social calendar after an absence of 15 years, has been scheduled for Wednesday of Junior Week, it was announced by Junior Week Co-chairmen Bob Murphy and Joe Schneider.

The affair, which had been tentatively listed for some time in the next two months, has been added to Junior Week "after Joe and I negotiated with the Intramural Department," said Murphy.

The Junior Class will award $25 to the act chosen as the evening's best, while additional cash prizes will be given to the runners-up.

The Intramural Department actually has charge of running the show. Ed Geisz will be director, and Jack Lumsden will be his assistant.

After Amateur Night was announced in the VILLANOVAN a few weeks ago, there was an immediate stir of interest on the part of prospective performers.

Murphy and Schneider, realizing that up to that time nothing had been scheduled for Wednesday night, contracted the Intramural Department, and were fortunate in being able to secure the show.

Aside from Geisz and Lumsden, there are three other members of the Amateur Night Committee, which will supervise the show and pass upon the acts to be presented. They are Rev. John R. Donne, O.S.A., moderator of the Intramural Department; Rev. Michael O'Donnell, O.S.A., chairman; and Jim Corey, president of the Intramural Council. Corey will act as master of ceremonies.

All those who want to take part in the show are asked to fill out entry blanks and turn them into the Intramural Office, 109 Alumni. An entry blank was printed in the March 5 edition of the VILLANOVAN. If additional blanks are needed they can be secured from the office.

Any type of entertainment act can be in the show. Director Geisz has emphasized that the show is not in any way to be considered open only to polished performers.

"We're out to have a good time and to see that everyone else has one too," is the way Geisz put it.

Geisz expects that singers, dancers, comedians, groups of singers, musicians, dramatic groups, gymnasts, acrobats, jugglers, and ear-wigglers will take part in the show.

Lit. Club Meets -- Nominations Held

The Literary Club will hold a symposium a tits first meeting after the Easter holidays, Club President Joe Kinney has announced.

At its last meeting the club held nominations for its four offices. Nominated for president were Bill Christy, Jack Curtin and Tom Goldschmidt.

For Vice president Tom McKenna and Joe Fitzpatrick were nominated and for treasurer Ray Quaglia, Larry O'Rourke and Bill Gallagher received nominations.

Paul Buckley and Frank Dynan were put up for secretary.

Elections will be held during April sometime after Easter.

Dr. W. Klein Awarded Ford Fellowship

Dr. Walter H. Klein, Associate Professor of Economics and Industrial Administration, and Chairman of the Industrial Administration Department, has been awarded a Ford Foundation Fellowship to Yale University.

Dr. Klein will be one of ten participants in a facultyresearch seminar dealing with the role of the government in the economy.

The seminar, running eight weeks this summer, will be conducted by Professor Charles E. Lindblom of Yale.

Seminar Survey

The seminar will open with a survey of the most important literature in the field, followed by several weeks of writing on a research topic; discussion of the problems brought to light by the research work of the participants will be considered.

Several of the specific topics considered during the seminar will be: politico—economic processes, the budgetary process, the role of government in alternative economic systems and theories of planning and policy making.

A standout when discussions turn to theories of planning and policy making, he has written an article called "The Role of Economic Theory" for the REVIEW OF SOCIAL ECONOMY.

In addition, his doctorate dissertation was a close study in the application of economic theory in policy making.

Phd. At Pittsburgh

Klein received his BS in Business administration and his MA and PhD in economies from the University of Pittsburgh. He has also studied at Washington and Jefferson College, Penn State, and Carnegie Institute of Technology.

He came to Villanova in 1952 and is the organizer of the Industrial Administration Department, teaching both in the undergraduate and graduate divisions at Villanova.

"My concern is bridging the so-called gap between theoretical economic concepts and their practical applications in business and economic policy making," the fellowship winner said.

Opera-Classica, Literary Club Plan Joint Art Show

Opera-Classica Society and the Literary Club have announced joint sponsorship of a student Art show, tentatively slated to be held the third week of April.

The exhibit will be set up in the Library and will remain there for viewing for at least one week.

A committee composed of Literary Club members has already begun accepting entries from artists and would-be artists on campus. All work must be submitted at least one week from the date of the show

More Info Later

Further information as to the exact date, the location in the Library, and the place where the art work is to be submitted will all be announced shortly by way of bulletin board posters and leaflets.

The two sponsoring organizations, through their faculty moderators, Assistant Professor of Finance Anthony L. Angeline (Opera-Classica) and English Instructor Raymond S. Burns (Literary Club), have revealed that first-and second-place ribbons will be awarded in each of several divisions, at a special Literary Club meeting the week of the show.

All Types of Art

The divisions will be according to mediums of expression, and will include oil painting, water colorings, charcoal, pen and ink sketchings, sculpture, and any other type of art which students submit.

The judging will be done by artists and art instructors in the local universities.

All the paintings and sketches must be framed for hanging, although no wires should be attached to the frames. The committee emphasized that the frames need not be elaborate, since presentable frames can be bought or constructed quite cheaply.

Student Congress Proposes Parent's Day; K of C OK'ed

The Villanova Student Congress has announced that it has recommended to the administration the inauguration of a "Parents' Day".

Specifically, the proposal called for "a special program paying tribute to the parents of all Villanova students to be arranged for a home football game".

It is felt that such a program would appeal to the parents of Villanova students, and would be beneficial to the University.

The suggested program is much simpler than those previously offered. A home football game will be designated as "Parents' Day". Special tribute will be made to the parents of the students and the football squad in the program. During the half the parents will be extended a welcome by the President of Villanova or some other University dignitary, followed by a special show by the Villanova Marching Band.

The arrangements will be handled by the Athletic Department.

It has alsoo been announced by the Student Congress that the on-campus chapter of the Knight of Columbus has been approved. The Administration has concurred with the approval.

Father's Day Plans Move Ahead Fast

Vince Caracio and Jerry DeGroft, co-chairmen of Father's Day, have announced that "plans are in rapid progress for the affair" to be held on Saturday, May 10.

Assistant Chairmen have been appointed for Father's Day: Joe Herzog and John Fixl, Banquet Co-Chairmen; Ray Lyons, Luncheon; John Cuama and Dick Squier, Flowers and Furnishings; Bob Mahoney, Invitations; Bob Lampert and Bill Henry, Programs; Tony Lisa, Entertainment; Ralph Udicious, Religious Affairs; and Pat Nicholson, Miscellaneous.

Program

A tentative schedule of events has been prepared beginning with Mass at 11 a.m. followed by a luncheon at 12:30. The entertainment in the afternoon consists of a baseball game featuring the Wildcatst against Seton Hall at 2 p.m. and also films of the Olympics at 3. Closing the day will be a banquet catered by Smyth who served at Mother's Day last year.

It was announced that invitations will be sent out this week so that each senior can talk to his Father while they are at home for the Easter vacation.

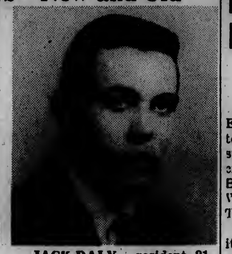
Jerry expressed hope for success and expects 700 fathers and sons to attend.

'Research' Lecture Heard by AAUP

"Operations Research" was the topic of an address by Dr. A. M. Chung of Drexel Institute to the Villanova University Chapter of the American Association of University Professors last Thursday in the reading room of the Commodore John Barry Hall.

Dr. Chung of the Department of Economics of Drexel devoted attention in his lecture to the nature of operations research, and the contribution of the physical and social sciences to operations research.

He also commented on the influence of operations research in the military and economic areas. A discussion period followed the formal presentation.



The site of this year's Junior Dinner Dance, the climax of Junior Week, will be the Ballroom of the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia. The event is scheduled for May 3.

Radio Station Slates 'Diary OfAnneFrank'

On April 9, from 7:30-8:00, WVIL presents an adaptation of the Pulitzer Prize winning drama, THE DIARY OF ANNE FRANK.

The play was written by Francis Goodrich and Albert Hackett and has enjoyed continual theatrical success to the present day.

This presentation is Rosemont College's winner in its annual interclass play competition. The half hour adaptation was written by Gay Anger for the Junior class entry.

Not All Originals

In that competition the play was performed by an all-female cast. In this production only the female parts will be played by the originals.

The theme demonstrates the personal conflicts of seven people, each trying to lead a normal life in an Amattrdam attic. These peopole constitute two Jewish families, the Franks and the Van Danns.

Their subjugation to this environment has been for one year and a half and they now are living through the last threat of Nazi terror, the year 1944.

Tension Mounts

Miep, an office worker, supplies contact with the outside world during the duration. The arguments are trivial, the personalities pressed, and the air static.

The cast for the drama is:

Anne ..... Marla Judge
Miep ..... Sissie Dimarino
Mrs. Frank ..... Joan Marano
Mrs. Van Dann .... Jane Dagit
Mr. Frank ..... Paul Finan
Mr. Van Dann ..... Jim Corey
Peter ..... Jerry Pajek
Narrator ..... Gene Brochu

This WVIL presentation is being produced by Bill Hearn who is assisted by Tom Valenti.

The annual student S.A.M. Conference will be held at the University of Pennsylvania on April 12. The theme will be "Management Problems in Unions". Speakers will be prominent union officials.

Belle Masque Scores Dramatic Triumph In Shakespears' "Taming of the Shrew" by JOE WHEELER

News Editor

With the hot breath of the English Department on my extended neck, I would like to state what I hope are fair and critical opinions on the recent Belle Masque production of William Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew".

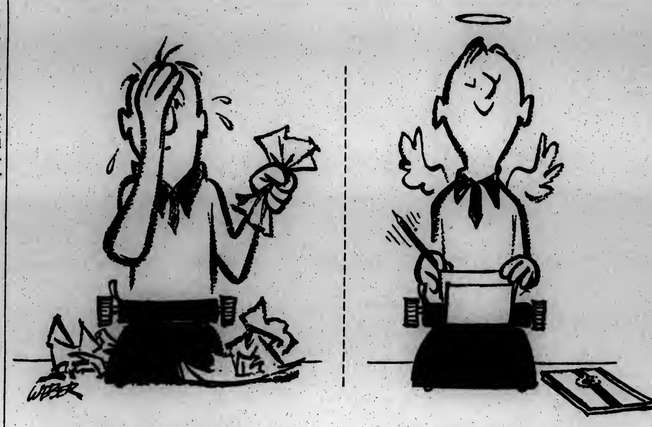
Before proceeding any further it would be wise to mention one small fact; the show was a most enjoyable experience, or in the words of a friend of mine, "a great show." It is a shame that the inclement weather kept so many people away. The audience on Saturday night was apallingly small but still much larger than the two previous nights.

In the male lead Clem Birch was excellent; he dominated every scene in which he appeared. The most notable aspect of his performance was his stage presence and his satanic laughter; he stole the show.

A Shrill Shrew

As Kate, the "shrew", Linda Lynch gave an adequate but shrill performance. Miss Lynch, I feel, went to extremes in her interpretation. Admittedly she was effective at times, but the transition from shrew to doting and most obedient wife could have better been accomplished had the degree of "shrewishness" been tempered ever so slightly in the middle scenes, so that, when the actual taming is achieved, it would be more believable. Shakespeare, of course, does not give the actress portraying Kate much of an opportunity to show this change, but it could still have been accomplished. I don't know if it was Miss Lunch's interpretation of the part or the directors, but I feel that Kate was unbelievable.

Owen Klein as Hortensio the rejected suitor of the younger sister Bianca, played his part with gusto and feeling. I believe that Mr. Klein gave his best performance for Belle Masque in this play.



As one of Hortensio's rivals and also a fruitless suitor in the quest for Bianca's hand was John Cannon asGremio. He gave a surprisingly good interpretation of Gremio as a palsied old man.

Bianca, the object of the chase, portrayed by Elaine Cake, was won by Lucencio, played with believable fervor by John Welch. Miss Cake was technically adequate, but at times I received the impression that she was a confused Bianca. If that was the effect sought, then she succeeded, if not, she was weak in the part. At this time I can only wonder.

Willig Scores

To continue commenting on the various actors would take an entire page, but in conscience I must mention Allen Willig. Mr. Willig was cast as the comic relief; in a comedy a most demanding role. Demanding because of the chance of his becoming ludicrous. Belle Masque has a seasoned performer in Mr. Willig and would do well to take advan-

It's That Time of Year Again

The publication of this issue of the VILLANOVAN marks the end of the tenure of this year's ediorial staff.

Following the Easter vacation, next year's editors will take over the operation of this—the student newspaper.

Putting out the VILLANOVAN requires many long hours willingly volunteered by its members. While the average student can and probably does realize the work done and the responsibility shared by the editors, there are many indispensibl e tasks performed behind the scenes, that escape the average reader.

It is this hidden effort that makes publication possible. Of such a nature are the Circulation, Photography and Business Management departments who never receive the recognition and reward bestowed on the editors.

Four years of work on the paper have been rewarding in gaining a greater perspective of college life. The newspaper as an activity creates a unity within its members because of the close co-operation and constant deadlines that are always falling due.

In appreciation the editor would publicly like to take this opportunity to thank all the members of this year's staff, Public Relations Dircetor Eugene Ruane and moderator the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A. for their cooperation and work.

Especially we thank the seniors who have contributed in any way during the past year. Particular recognition is extended to seniors Joseph Kinney, Frank Delany, John Kennedy, Ed Karrer, Joe Wheeler, John Fixl, Bill Ickes, Ken Miller, Tom Martinez, Joe Kulick, Mike Mancuso. Mike Klesius, Norm Peer, Jack Garrity, and Paul Terruso, for the valuable part which they played.

To next year's staff we wish all the success possible.

Are You Called?

March has been proclaimed vocations month by Holy Mother Church.

At one time in life the thought of becoming a priest has entered every boys mind. Regardless of what vocation each one of us thinks he has, careful thinking and much prayer must go into the choosing of a state in life.

With the closing of Lent and the arrival of Easter all of us should lift our minds and hearts to God in prayer to obtain the necessary grace to conform our life's work to God's will. There are many religious vocations that come a little later in life. Has God chosen you?

Through Snow . . .

No, Friday is not the new publication day for the VILLANOVAN. If you are astonished to see the paper today just think about the plight of the editors last week when the snow caused a cessation of regular operations during the week.

Starting last Friday night this issue was born. A few editors and one staff member gathered in Dougherty Hall and started the wheels rolling. What you see today is the regular VILLANOVAN—two days later than usual.

Dear Boss,

After reading the intelligent and inspiring letter which appeared in your last issue —penned by some sort of an Anthony P. Mullen, I have decided to accept your offer of a pay boost. Spring is here and there seems to be a multitude of things upon which one may muse. Besides, I have plenty of time for column writing these days.

I have decided to reject your generous offer, however, to promote me to a "Co-Assistant Associate Managing Editor." After talking it over with several readers of the VILLANOVAN—I was amazed to discover that there are several—I decided that it would be nice if the newspaper had at least one person in the organization with the title of "Staff Member." Then too, if the masthead were to get much bigger, there wouldn't be a great deal of space left in which respective editors could do their editing . . . would there?

A Rose is a Rose

Junior Week is just around the corner, Boss, and that provides us with plenty of material. The prom should really be beautiful. Why even now, Frank Cavalier, John Moran, and Joe Perozziello and I are busy making those flowers which will be here, there and everywhere in the decorations.

From what I can find out—in between making phone calls, trying to get a date for the prom—the Dinner Dance, under the direction of Oz Scogna, should be quite an affair. This in itself is a m a z i n g, considering the amount of time Oz has to put in thinking up jokes, spirited speeches or what-have-you to deliver at Junior Class meetings.

A Lynx is a Quarterly

I was sitting in my room the other day, Boss, reading last year's three copies of the literary quarterly—somehow this fails to add up—when I heard some screaming rock-and-roll music over W V I L. When someone announced that it was the Frank Thornton show, "Tempo," heard every Thursday at 5:30, I turned the radio off and decided that I would eat dinner at 5:30 every Thursday.

Yes sir, Boss, Spring is here. You can feel it in the air. J. J. Sullivan is already strolling about the campus in his "Victory Garden" trousers. Ken MacGillivray is struggling to improve his tennis game. T. Walker Lloyd and Luke Pape can be seen in the Pie Shoppe talking over rowing plans for the current crew season.

Yes sir, Boss, Spring is in the air.

Strictly Opinion

By BOB PINTO

Having received several helpful notes (tied to rocks thrown through my windshield) advising a column written for everyone's benefit, this week we offer a serious outline of the proper method to follow when being interviewed. These tricks were suggested by the disgusted interviewers themselves, and are sure-fire to get you a high paying position well above your recession year worth.

First of all, never arrive until five or ten minutes after the designated time. This will add an air of respectability to you and put your interviewer on the defensive. Mutter something about having a deuce of a time parking your jaguar or hating to rush your meals. He will be impressed by your apparent success and your busy schedule. By all means call your interviewer by his first name or at least by his initials so that your interview will get off on a personal note.

However any other planning such as looking up the background of the company or preparing questions will kill the spontaneity of the whole thing and prevent the real you from coming through. Bring no writing materials. He will impressed by the confidence you show in your memory. This will serve a twofold purpose for those who haven't yet learned to write.

Poor—But Eager

The essentials of neatness and cleanliness scarcely need be mentioned. But don't over do it either. They can spot a phony a mile away. If your hands happen to be grimy at the time or you need a shave, don't clean up. Show him that you are a man of action who is not afraid of a little hard work. And to suggest that you are the poor but eager lad so sickeningly popular in most circles, wear sneakers—but making sure that they are well shined. Having a hole in the bottom is effective in letting him know that you play hard too.

Don't be friendly. Let him know that you are no kid and that you have a serious side. If you are nervous say something to relieve the tension like, "Boy am I nervous." He will respect your frankness. Puns are the best stimulus for a lagging conversation (say you had thought about loafing in a bread factory), and a few saucy jokes will be a subtle way of indicating that all of your time wasn't spent in the library. Don't be afraid to display the disgust you have for several of your teachers. A man lacking discriminating taste is no good to anyone and your interviewer is aware of this.

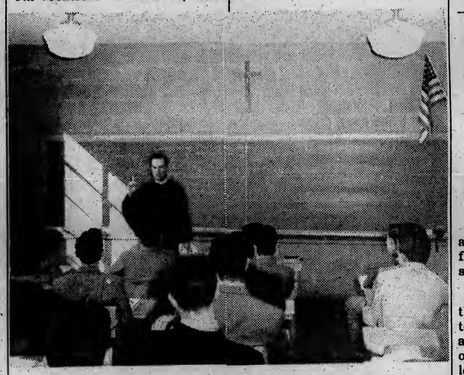
Last Ditch Attack

If the interviewer somehow implies that you do not quite fill the job requirements, a last ditch tantrum may convince him of your sincerity and swing his final decision in your favor. Furniture and glass fixtures should be the object of your tantrum, however, and not the interviewer himself. Naturally these tips need not be strictly adhered to. Just remember that in general your best guide is to rely on your native craftiness and hyprocrisy.

March is Vocation Month

Call to Priesthood From God Is Not of Our Own Choosing

EDITOR'S NOTE:
Holy Mother Church has proclaimed March v o c a t i o n s month. We wish to thank the members of the Augustinian Vocation Seminar in Washington for the material herewith presented.



A vocation to the priesthood is a free gift from God. No one can ever say that he has earned it or that it was due to him. Considering many of the persons who have gone away to study for the priesthood, many times one is led to exclaim, "He's got his nerve! of all the people in the world he is the last one I'd consider to have a vocation!" Well, that is just the core of the whole mystery: he did not do the choosing. "You have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you", says Christ.

The night of the Last Supper, the night before he died, Christ celebrated the first Mass. He instituted the Sacrament of Holy Orders when He told the Apostles, His first priests, "Do this in commemoration of Me." Since then He has repeated this command to those chosen souls who have heeded the Divine Invitation, "Come, follow me."

This invitation of Christ is not restricted by position, by wealth, or by education. It has been given to souls for the last nineteen centuries and will continue to be given as long as the world lasts. But because man has free will, because he has a mind of his own, Christ does no more than plant in the heart the seed of a vocation. The acceptance of the invitation, the cooperation with the grace depends on the individual.

It's up to him to appreciate the life of a priest, his duties, the years of preparation, and the purpose of such a wonderful vocation. In this way one may measure his idea with the reality and discover if this call, this leaning toward the priestly life is really and truly a call from God.

Possibly you feel attracted to the priestly life, happily in your love of God and your desire to serve Him perhaps you wish for that closer union with Christ who told his first priests, "I will now call you friends." If so, do something about it; do it today. Do it now.

This priest is illustrating one phase of a Augustinian's life —that of teaching young men the Catholic way of life.

Augustinians Meet Church's Needs With Missionary Work

Unlike most religious Orders, the Augustinians are not devoted to any specific type of work, but were founded to meet the needs of the Church, whatever they might be. Late in the eighteenth century, the Augustinians came to the United States from Ireland to do missionary work. These missions later became parishes, and as a result, the Order has at the present time about thirty-eight parishes.

The Augustinian parish, however, is not like an ordinary parish. In addition to the regular parochial duties of the parish, the Fathers maintain the traditional Augustinian devotions and retain their common life.

Another field of labor in which we are engaged is the preaching of missions, retreats and novenas. The Fathers of the Augustinian Mission Band lead a life of constant preaching, long hours in the confessional and continuous traveling. These self-sacrificing priests reside at various centrally located houses, and after preaching for several weeks, return to their community for a breathing spell or to prepare new sermons.

It was not long after their arrival in America that the Fathers entered the educational field. The Augustinians were among the first to open high schools, academies and colleges where the Catholic youth of our young nation could not only be taught the usual subjects, but also be given solid training in the teaching of their Faith.

At present the Order maintains high schools and colleges of various types from coast to coast. In an effort to keep abreast of the times and realize more fully the wide scope of Catholic education, the Fathers introduced technical training in their schools, a unique feat for religious teachers.

This move was hailed in educational circles as the beginning of a new trend in Catholic education. Besides the regular schools, there are seminaries. The training of future Augustinian priests and brothers is a task not taken lightly by the Order.

Such is the variety of work done by the American Augustinians. God alone knows what the future labors of the Order will be. But we as Augustinians know, however, that whatever may be the needs of the Church, we will ever be ready to lend our efforts for the cause of Christ.

Among thoses enjoying a spare moment in a good old fashioned bull session — seminary style — is father Thomas Kenny, O.S.A., now perfect of the third floor in Sullivan Hall.

ST. MARY'S HALL, in the middle of the campus, is the center of seminarian activities at Villanova. It houses the chapel, classrooms, dining room and living quarters for the aspiring priests.

Augustinian Describes Rewarding Seminary Life

Visitor. Is that another dorm?

Sophomore. Oh, no. That's the Angel Factory.

Vis. "Angel Factory"? What in the world is that?

Soph. "Angel Factory" is a nickname we use for the seminary. The real name of the building is St. Mary's Hall, and the students living there are studying to be priests in the Augustinian Order.

Vis. What do they do in there all day? How do they prepare for the priesthood? what is seminary life like, anyway?

To rescue our sophomore from this barrage of questions, and to satisfy our inquisitive visitor and others who may be curious or interested (or both) the following is offered as a bird's-eye view of seminary life in the Order of St. Augustine.

Seminary Defined

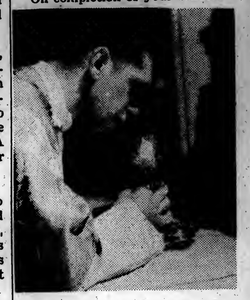
First of all, what is a seminary? Many of us think of a seminary as a training school for priests, just like West Point and Annapolis are training schools for military officers. Actually a seminary is much more than this, as the words "priest" and "seminary" indicate.

A priest is an alter Christus, another Christ. The word seminary comes from the Latin seminarius which means plantation or nursery. Combine the two and you have a place where the seeds of Christ are planted. A seminary, then, is a place for growth in union with Christ.

Suppose Christ were to say to you, "Come follow me", and acting under this divine grace, you decided to follow Christ as an Augustinian priest. This briefly and generally is what you would do:

Begin With Retreat

After all the preliminaries are taken care of, you will make a ten-day retreat, at the end of which you will be invested in the white habit of the Augustinian novice. For a year and a day you will live in our hidden and homelike novitiate on the banks of the Hudson River.



This happy year is something like an extended retreat, predominately a life of prayer. There will be a few classes instructing you in such matters as the spiritual life, the constitutions of the Order and the Liturgy of the Church. Farm work and sports will provide a guarantee for bodily health.

The joys of community life, the wealth that comes from poverty, and the charity that is wedded to chastity—all these you will experience for the first time. After the year has fled by —and fly it will—you will make a profession of the simple vows of poverty, chastity and obedience.

Then you will come to the "Angel Factory", St. Mary's Hall, Villanova. The prayer life of the novitiate will continue, but the farmer will become a philosopher. Under the guidance of learned and competent professors you will become acquainted with such great minds as our Holy Father St. Augustine and St. Thomas of Acquine. A solid foundation in Scholastic philosophy is the best preparation for theology.

Degree Conferred

On completion of your studies you will receive a B. A. degree in philosophy. Then you will transfer to Augustinian College in Washington, D. C., for a four year course in theology. This will be a crowning point in your studies and in your spiritual training, because you will concentrate on God Himself, and, God willing, you will be ordained to the holy priesthood.

He holds God in his hands.

As you look back you will realize that these are much more than three separate buildings, or training houses, more even than three homes. They are phases of growth in the likeness of Christ. The seedling planted in the nursery of the novitiate has blossomed into a flower of "spiritual beauty, giving forth the good odor of Christ" (Rule of St. Augustine).

The Catcher On the Aisle - With Apologies to Salinger

By BILL GALLAGHER

During the first intermission of "Say Darling," the play about how a musical comedy is put together, which is continuing through this, it's final tryout week at the Shubert Theatre in Philadelphia, I caught a glimpse of an old friend of the family.

Marjorie Eveningstar was spreading a great deal of glamor (she thought) on the other side of the lobby. Since she wasn't a particularly dear friend of mine, I sort of looked the other way, hoping she hadn't seen me.

Marj was the type that gushed all over you when she saw you. She tried to be sophisticated and all but she didn't fool me. I knew she was a phony, even if she was a debutante.

At her coming-out party, there was so much whiskey that you'd think her father was in the liquor business instead of flower seeds (he was really nuts about portulacas) and old Marj was acting it up all over the place.

I Was Caught

Standing there smoking in the crowded lobby, I was developing a headache. Then Marj saw me and waved for me to come over. I don't know why I went over but I did.

After I elbowed by way through the people and got a closer look at her (she was sort of draped around this marble column), I started to feel sick. She just stood there puffing smoke in this girl's face, showing off her long mink and expensive jewelry. In my book, she was still a phony.

Her mink coat was getting into everyone's path (probably to attract attention) and she let her cigarette ashes fall on a man's tuxedo. She was the sloppiest debutante that I ever knew.

"Holden, Dahling!"

I couldn't go back now. That's me. Holden Caulfield. "Dahling." Half the lobby turned around on that one, boy. She could be extremely loud when she wanted. No fooling.

Plenty of Fur

She stood there smirking at us. I was beginning to get quite sick. I really hate girls who stand smiling at a lobby full of people. I really mean it's enough to make anybody sick.

"Hi," I sort of whispered. I was playing it casual.

"How mahvellous to see you, Holden."

Strictly a phony.

"How are you enjoying the show?" I asked. I had to talk about something.

"I just adore it, dahling", she whooped, "but it doesn't have any hohses in it".

None-Too-Bright

For a girl in her twenties, Marj doesn't know too much about shows, about their not having horses in them and all, unless it is a special occasion like a circus show or something with Ethel Merman in it. I guess old Marj was pretty horse-minded because she was always bringing them into her conversations.

"No, I joked, "but it has a lot of people in it."

"But they're so common dahling."

That girl was a very perceptive snob.

"What do you think of David Wayne's portrayal of the struggling playwright?"

"Uttely funny"

"And Vivian Blaine and Johnny Desmond?"

"Delectable."

'Quick, A Drink'

If I ever needed a double scotch, it was then. But before I recuperated, she continued:

"Jerome Cowan is the suavest."

I've heard a lot of phony words but that one stopped me. If there's one word I hate, it's suavest.

That made me stop and think maybe old Marj hadn't even been paying attention to the show. I bet she sat there smiling at the people around her, even up at the actors.

Finally I lied, "I have to go now." Then she did a silly thing. She shouted, "It's been dihvine." Everybody was looking and I tripped over that coat again. I just sort of waved at the people and Marj didn't disappoint them. She flashed that smile of hers.

Maybe She Was Right

After the last curtain, I started thinking Marj might have been paying attention after all. David Wayne was hilarious. In fact, the entire cast was fine. The scenery and costumes, the dancing and musical interludes were above average.

In adapting his book of the same title, Richard Bissell injected much humor into the script concerning his troubles in adapting his novel, 7½ cents, into the smash musical "Pajama Game."

Complicated? Not really. However, the fun seems to diminish slightly each time Mr. Bissell milks another product from his original. Nevertheless, what I want to know is, why do sloppy, horse-conscious debutantes smile at a lobby full of people?

Editor's Note—We sent critic Bill Gallagher out to bring back a view of the current back-stage musical "Say, Darling". Instead of his usual load of constructive criticism, Mr. Gallagher contributed this gem. Soon, we trust, Mr. Gallagher will return to earth.

"If at first you don't succeed, that makes you just about average."—Warren Hull.

LP Records, PKP Pledges, Elections And Contests Make An Engineer Happy

By BOB MERKERT

Just as the LP records replaced the old, fast, fragile and noisy shellac records, the new stereo disc is about to make its bid to replace the LP.

The new stereo discs, which should start to go into production by midsummer, can be played non stereophonically on conventional LP players. This will eliminate the necessity of companies putting out two separate versions of every recording, one stereo, one conventional single channel.

In the case of stereo tape, a recording is made with two microphones, or sets of microphones, spaced some distance apart. The twin products, usually recorded on the two bands of a dual-tract tape, are kept separate, for separate reproduction later through two amplifiers and two speakers, spaced more or less as were the microphones, the idea being to give in the living room reproduction which incorporates the subtle difference that the right and left ears would have heard had they been in the concert hall.

Earlier commercial stereo discs had twin bands of grooves and required a twin pickup cartridge to play them. The new type records have the two "channels" of sound engraved in the same groove and are worked by the same stylus. This motion is not purely lateral but partly horizontal as well.

The stereo cartridge of which it is part has not one but two sensitive elements, set at right angles to each other. which translates its movements into electric impulses. It is thus possible to separate the "right ear" signal from the "left ear" and feed two amplifiers and loudspeakers.

An old style pickup, however, can play the new stereo records as if they were of the ordinary, laterally-modulated kind. It will pick up a blend of the two channels. Being played in this fashion, the new records will differ from the best of the present type only in a slightly lowered level of volume and a slight proportional rise in surface noise.

To make them yield stereo sound, all that is necessary is a stereo cartridge, a second amplifier, and a second speaker —or a whole new phonograph, incorporating dual-channel sound reproduction, and of course, the most important item, the backbone of the system—money.

P.K.P. Meeting

All Phi Kappa Pi pledges are reminded that there will be an important meeting tonight at 7:30 in room 207 Vasey Hall. At this time dues, initiation fees, and dinner dance ticket money must be paid. Members of the frat will be given "little brothers" on Thursday, April 10th at 8:00 p.m. in Vassey Hall auditorium.

Start rounding up those old shoes that need to be polished. I'm sure the "brothers" won't mind doing a "few" worthwhile chores in the ensuing week. As usual, the week will be topped off by the annual dinner dance. This year it will be at Kuglers, in Philadelphia. Date—April 19th.

A word of praise should be given to pledgemasters Joe Driscoll and Joe Krackler for the fine job that they have done this year with the pledges.

Thanks should also be extended to Professor Auth, Neil McAllister, Joe Panis, Bill McNeill, and all the other people who worked so hard to make "Engineering Day" a success.

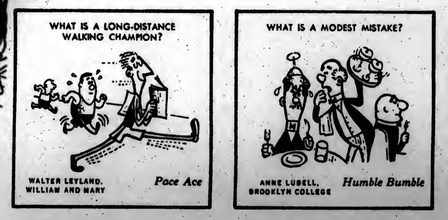
Sticklers!



BON VOYAGE presents? You might give a substantial checking account in the Left Bank of Paris. A deck of cards for playing London Bridge. Or walking shoes in which to Rome Italy. Better yet, give Luckies—and make your present a Partin' Carton! A Lucky, after all, is the best-tasting cigarette anywhere. In Paris you hear, "Un Luckee? C'est merveilleux!" (That's French!) Roughly translated, it means: it's all fine, light, good-tasting tobacco, toasted to taste even better. (That's advertising!) Just light up a Lucky and see for yourself! (Now, that's smart!)

Stuck for dough? START STICKLING! MAKE $25

We'll pay $25 for every Stickler we print—and for hundreds more that never get used! So start Stickling—they're so easy you can think of dozens in seconds! Sticklers are simple riddles with two-word rhyming answers. Both words must have the same number of syllables. (Don't do drawings.) Send 'em all with your name, address, college and class to Happy-Joe-Lucky, Box 67A, Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Radio Club Constructs Model Satellite Fully Equipped; Summer Launching Due

The Radio Club has announced that they have successfully completed their first major project—the construction of a model of the Vanguard's baby satellite.

The project, planned mainly by junior Jim Lawless, was one of the major demonstrations on the Engineering Day program.

Modeled after the Vanguard's baby sphere, it consists of a 4 inch plastic sphere, weighing less than a pound and containing the necessary equipment for the transmission of radio signals.

Telemetering System

Co-chairman Pete Thornton stated that this was made possible by means of a telemetering system.

The heart of the system is a thermister—a small, temperature sensitive resistor. Four mercury batteries connected in series to give 4½ volts, assures the sphere of approximately 200 hours of operation.

The satellite also contains an oscillator and transmitter to send radio waves containing the coded information. As the temperature varies the resistance also varies.

Frequency Changer

This changes the frequency of the broadcasted signal being received. This signal is then fed into a non-linear amplifier, then into a meter calibrated in temperature.

Lawless said that it was hoped that the satellite would be put aloft in a balloon this summer to record temperature pressure and height.

Wireless Mikes

Although a new organization, it has its own room where there is an experimental lab and short wave radio station have been setup. At the present time, wireless mikes are being constructed.

For the newcomer, elementary projects, such as transistorized receivers and practice code oscillators, will be undertaken.

Besides the building of the model satellite, the club has conducted many other projects this year. Of particular mention is the series of lectures given by the moderator Mr. Joseph Hicks, entitled "Computer Logic". The tracing of the first "Sputnik" helped to fill out the first semester activities.

Anyone Can Join

Thornton went on to state that the aims of the club are not only to help those interested in obtaining their amateur license, but also to give the members a chance to become familiar with electronic circuits by supplying them with the equipment and providing an opportunity for individual research.

The club, Thornton stressed, is not exclusively for engineering students. Anyone desiring to learn radio and electronics is invited to join, by contacting either Jim Lawless or Pete Thornton in rooms 127 or 230 Sullivan Hall.

The occasion was Paul's retirement from active coaching to become head of the Athletic Department of the city of Stamford. While at Villanova he was an outstanding quarterback. The main speaker was Frank Reagan.

Opera Classica Music Society will observe National Opera Week tonight with the LONDON ffrr of Puccini's "Madam Butterfly." Renata Tebaldi sings the title role.

Giuseppe Campora, tenor sings Benjamin Franklin Pinkerton and Nell Rankin portrays Suzuki. The recording is rated the best by most music critics.

On April 1, the Metropolitan Opera will give Puccini's "MadamButterfly" in Philadelphia. Antoinetta Stella, Bergonzi, and Zanasi will be heard in the major roles. It is a new production.

The Society has just published new applications for membership which will be available today. Prospective candidates are required to complete them and return them to Room 317 Commerce and Finance.

Each candidate will be interviewed and successful ones will be inducted into the Society on May 1, 1958.

The Society is concentrating on quality of students, rather than quantity. The following is a summary of the very rigid requirements:

A Prospective Candidate:

1. must have a sincere desire to learn the highest form of musical art—classical music, it being assumed that the candidate does not have a substantial knowledge of such music.
2. must attend two meetings per month.
3. assist in the preparation of program notes for at least one concert.
4. subscribe to season tickets of one or more of the following:
   - A. Philadelphia Orchestra Student Concerts ($5.25)

9. must be capable of thinking.

Real Students

"It should be apparent that we are looking for 'real' college students and not those who are 'playing' college. Classical music requires concentration.

"We hope that there are 50 'real' college students on this campus. We believe there are," Anthony L. P. Angeline, club moderator said.

Biology Club Plans Exhibit In Library

The third meeting of the newly organized Villanova Biology Club was held March 13th, in the General Biology Lab.

The club, organized for Biology majors, is being moderated by Dr. John A. McClain, Biology Department Chairman.

Officers were elected at the March meeting. They are: Don McNelis, president and Carl Melini, secretary.

The club has undertaken its first project, that of presenting an exhibit in the Villanova Library. It will run in conjunction with the Conchology exhibit from April 7th to 22nd.

The club has decided to exhibit a display on microscopy, in efforts to give an insight on one of the biologists' most important tools—the microscope.

The scopes will be supplemented with books illustrating various types of microscopes.

Lectures on various subjects by members of the Biology staff and explanations of various projects undertaken by the freshman, will constitute most of the agenda for the coming meetings.

MY CLOSEST SHAVE by Elgin Ciampi
Skin Diver, Shark Expert, Author

"My closest shave happened under water while baiting sharks to photograph," says shark expert Elgin Ciampi. "My speared bait-fish hid in a hole, pouring clouds of blood around me. Smelling blood, a 7-foot man-eater, unable to find the bait, rushed me. I dodged and started taking pictures. I kept the camera between us while the shark circled hungrily for five full minutes. Then my air supply ran short, so I used psychology: I lunged at the shark with my camera. Startled, he shot away—and so did I!"

Kardas Rock Collection To Be Exhibited at Library

The University Library will feature an exhibit on "marine molluska" commonly called sea shells, beginning April 7th, and continuing until April 22nd.

Sigmund J. Kardas, Jr., a student of Biology, and a day-hop freshman from Mayfair, will present the shells and fossils, plans to enter the field of Paleonthology.

Summers In Wildwood

He explains that he has had an extreme interest in shells ever since he first saw one as a child back in Wildwood, N. J., where he still lives during the summer.

The exhibit will represent specimens ranging from the South Jersey coast to Japan to the Phillipines. He has agreements with various museums including the Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia, and that of the University of California.

Kardas also trades with collectors, in order to improve his Collection. Presently he is awaiting the return of one of his collections from Florida.

Two Display Cases

Two cases will be used to display the exhibit. The shelves of the first case will include representative species of Conidae, Cypriadae, and Pecten.

Kardas said "Pecten is the shell of the common eatable scallop. Among the many shells in the exhibit, will be included a model of the rarest shell in the world—Conus gloria maris."

He pointed out that the original shell sold for $1200. Literature pertaining to the subject of Conchology will occupy the entire second case concluding the "marine molluska" exhibit.

BELLE MASQUE

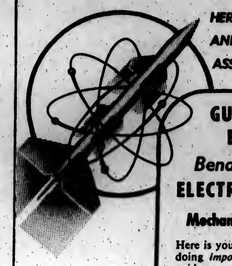
tage of that fact. Oh yes, Mr. Willig was "very' funny. Willig was "very' funny.



In major supporting roles were Tom Flynn as Tranio, Dick Dressler as Baptista, and Frank Fagella as an amusing Biondello.

As in my last attempt at sounding like a critic, I find I have very little space and many more cast members, all of whom deserve recognition for their long hours of work that resulted in an excellent production. Those members of the cast were Frank Thornton, Bill Fried, Mike Keating, Ron Anderson, Jack Daly, Bob Sanders, Tony Provenzano and the lone girl i a supporting part, Dotty Hoffman.

I should salute, at this point, the valiant effort made by Belle Masque to reduce the acoustical problems it confronted in the cavern in which it performs, the Field House. A sounding board was placed behind the Elizabethian style stage to reduce the dampening effect of the curtains. This was an effective move but not enough, for the voices were still muffled. This was a most regretable situation, especially with Shakespearean English, which to the average theater goer is not every day English.

The most enjoyable part of the show was Act 4, Scene 1, a really very funny scene. Everyone enjoyed himself, audience and actor alike. One thing that should be mentioned; in any comedy the actor should play his audience and take advantage of the time allowed by the laughter. After all, timing is the essence of good comedy. If the timing is off, much of the rapport between the audience and actor is lost. At times some of the principles forgot this fact and many of the effects sought were lost.

I would like to congratulate Mr. Richard Duprey, director of Belle Masque shows, on his success with Shakespeare and wish him luck in his future dramatic attempts on both the graduate and undergraduate levels.

SPORTS CHATTER

It's All Turse's Trotters

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Turse's Trotters are having themselve quite a year in intramural play. . . . On Wednesday, they beat the Jolly Trotters for the basketball title. . . . In the Fall, they won the football crown. . . . The Red Cross Life Saving Course will start April9 and continue for six weeks. . . . Those interested in getting certification are advised to contact Ed Geisz or Jack Lumsden. . . . Swimming lessons are still being given by the Intramural Department. . . . They will run until April 4. . . .

There is a strong movement afoot to ask the University administration to increase the number of minor sports in the school. . . . In the Bud Dudley era there was a request for a rowing team. . . . It was rumored that one of the prominent boat clubs was willing to allow Villanova to use its facilities at practically no charge. . . . But nothing ever came of the offer. . . . Now, there is renewed interest in crew on the Main Line. . . . It has nothing to do with The Little Guy's column the other week—honest. . . .

Equally as strong as the enthusiasm for a rowing team is that for tennis and wrestling squads. . . . Sad to say, the Catholic schools of the United States are woefully weak in minor sports. . . . It is only natural that this would be so, since Catholic schools do not have endowments to withstand the hugh deficit incurred by a really complete sports program. . . .

Last month, the writer got a letter from the captain of the Georgetown swimming team. . . . He said that his sport gets practically no recognition from the school. . . . The team does not even have a coach of its own, instead has to get some help from the coach at another Washington school. . . . Fortunately, swimming has grown in importance here since it was reinstituted at Villanova. . . . And golf, pistol and rifle are treated about as they are in other schools. . . . But, as one student points out, "This is a Main Line school. Tennis and rowing certainly belong here." . . . We agree—in theory. . . . There might be unsurmountable obstacles, but it's worth examining. . . .

The pistol and rifle teams have closed up shop for the year. . . . The pistolers were on the low side of a 2-5 record. . . . The rifle team had a winning log—four wins and three losses. . . . Final pistol averages were Bill Scott, 260, Jim D'Arcy, 254, Ed Byrne, 252, Art Martinez, 244, Joe Bizzano 240, Paul Lang, 232, Bill Wescott, 221, John Gillespie, 216, Norm Huddy, 216, Bill Pfoser, 205, John Kathman, 205. . . . Rifle averages were Jim Abernathy, 178, Chris Kloss, 275, Lou Spevetz, 274, Frank Murtha, 273, Bill Hearn, 260, and Jon Rietzke, 260. . . . Sergeant Molcany's rifle team gose to Annapolis for the sectional play-offs tommorrow. . . .

Anyone interested in the Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling Championship in New York at the end of April should get in touch with Tom McPherson in 109 Sullivan. . . . Players enter as individuals, not as members of a team. . . .

We sat with LaSalle High coach "Obie" O'Brien the other night when he was looking over some prospects for LaSalle College. . . . He is known as one of the best scouts in the country. . . . Asked what he though of the Big Five race next year, O'Brien said that he picked them this way: Villanova, St. Joseph's LaSalle, Penn and Temple. . . . "There will be a big gap between the first two teams and the last three," said O'Brien. . . . "Actually, LaSalle, Penn and Temple will be about even. . . . but they won't be able to touch the two suburban schools." . . .

Why did he pick Villanova to finish on top? . . . "More good players than anyone in the city," is the way that O'Brien put it. . . . "There are plenty back, and plenty coming up from the freshmen" . . . O'Brien probably knows the Philadelphia teams as well as anyone. . . . He scouts for various visiting teams . . . And he know the Philly high school leagues inside out. . . . Since most of the local teams depend on home-grown talent, he has seen some players for as many as six seasons.

Baseball Team Will Open Season On April 3-Maybe

By JOE FITZPATRICK

The Villanova baseball team opens its 1958 campaign against the Dartmouth Indians on April 3.

A number of problems lie between now and opening day. Coach Art Mahan will need a large bottle of aspirins.

For example, recent snowstorms have made outdoor practice impossible and he has been unable to make the final cut.

Field House Drills

The team has been forced to practice in the field house and with about a week remaining to opening day, these conditions are anything but ideal.

Dartmouth, in contrast to Villanova, will be well groomed, having played three games with North Carolina.

If this isn't enough to give Mahan a big headache, let him consider the condition of Villanova's diamond. This week, it was covered with six inches of snow and when this melts there might well be the same depth of mud.

Still Optimistic

Even in the face of these adversities the coach has an optimistic outlook when it comes to talking about this season.

He is particularly happy with the pitching prospects. What was a dull mound last year might well be a bright spot on the field this year. Seniors Jack Kelly and Joe Michell are joined on the staff by Sophomores Bob Kropinicki, Hal Bauser, and Lee Parry.

The catching spot, left vacant because star receiver Terry Hayes entered the seminary, also gives the coach cause for jubilation. Behind the plate are three returnees, Hank Nichols, Bob Cipriano, and Jerry Reczek—all of whom are seniors.

Emma On First

In the infield, Junior George Emma is at first base, juniors with Hank Ferendo and Skip Handschur close at his heels.

ART MAHAN

Up the middle, soph Bobby Klenck will play second base and senior John Donatucci leaves little to be desired at short.

At third base there is a very hot battle. Senior Larry Massotti has his hands full holding off Fred Anthony, Ray Lenzi and Ed Moran.

In the outfield, seniors Joe Kolen, Rick Sapienza and John Neal vie for the right field spot. Soph Bob Vincent is a sure bet in center and Soph Paul Borian looks good in left.

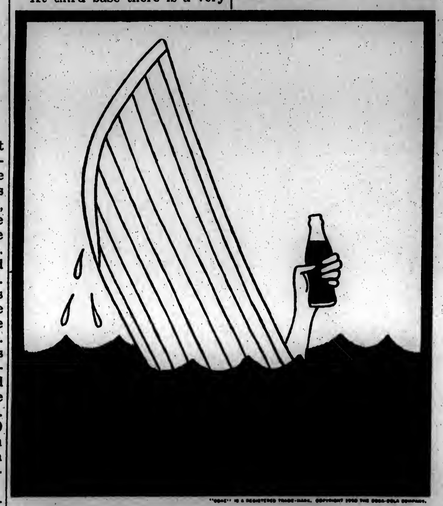
Carton, Keefe, Mason Perform In Easterns

Villanova was represented at the 18th annual Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming League championships by sophomores Steve Carton and Frank Keefe, and junior Joe Mason. The event was held last week at the United States Naval Academy.



Only six swimmers qualified for the finals in each event. None of the Villanovans was among the qualifiers, but the three came through with some of their own finest performances.

Carton scored over 80 points in the one meter diving competition. Mason swam the 50-yard freestyle in 24 seconds and the 100-yard freestyle in 55 seconds. His own personal low for the 100 this year was 54.9. Keefe swam the 100-yard backstroke in 1:04.6 and the 200-yard backstroke in 2:26.

The 36 competing teams included swimmers from Australia, Hawaii, and England, some of them listed among the best swimmers in the world.

Coach Ed Geisz said after the meet that he as pleased with the performances of his swimmers, and that he envisions another very fine team next year, with Mason, Keefe and Carton supplying the nucleus.

Team applications will be accepted by the Intra-mural Council for the Intra-mural softball league up to April 11, after that no other application will be considered. League competition will begin on April 14 at the Field House alleys.

Turse's Trotters Capture Intramural Title, 35-30

By PAUL BUCKLEY

Two teams with similar names and undefeated records clashed for the intramural basketball championships yesterday.

Turse's Troters beat the Jolly Trotter's 35-30, to fulfill captain Joe Murphy's boast that his club would go all the way.

Turse's Trotters and the Jolly Trotters have fought their way to the finals by registering decisive wins in the last two weeks of playoff competition.

During the first week of the playoffs, eighteen teams were in the running for the title. Several of the games played in that week were very close, with the big game featuring two teams from the 6:30 league, in this encounter. Turse's Trotters downed the highly rated Gazelles by a 38-34 count.

Peanuts Romp

The Jolly Trotters were also engaged in a heated contest with the previously undefeated Dudens Duds, but the final score showed the Trotters on top by five, 30-25.

In other games during the week the pre-season favorite, the Northerners, managed to keep their hopes alive with a 44-26 drubbing of the Assets. The Gyros knocked off D P M 52-46 while the half year men, a freshman quintet, downed the Pirates, 40-28.

The Peanuts ran up the highest score in the playoffs thus far, in clobbering the Kangaroos 99-25. The Small Five racked up 86 points in downing the Swabbies, 86-24.

Northerners Win Again

The Alumni Animals stayed in contention by defeating the Gunners, 52-36, while the Raunch Hands won by forfeit from the Baskethangers.

Going into the second week of play, there were eleven teams fighting for the title. Turse's Trotters drew a bye for the second week action.

The Northerners opened the action by edging the Gyros, 44-41. The Jolly Trotters jarred the previously unbeaten Raunch Hands by a 58-24 count, while the Small Five defeated the Peanuts 45-37. This game's score was much below those rolled up by these two squads the previous week.

Two Trotters in Final

In other contests, the Duffers easily defeated the Furriers, 45-20 while the Half-Year Men crushed the Alumni Animals, 50-27.

In the remaining two rounds of elimination, the favored Northerners found themselves on the wrong end of the score with the Jolly Trotters winning by 55-49. The Small Five halted the campaign of the freshmen five by upending the Half Year Men and Turse's Trotters advanced by defeating the Duffers.

In the semi-finals game the Jolly Trotters eliminated the Small Five and will meet Turse's Trotters for the intramural title.

Forest Rangers Lead Intramural Bowling League

Without a man among the top five individual scoring leaders, the Forest Rangers have utilized a steady team performance to take a slight lead in the intramural bowling league.

The individual scoring leader at the end of the second round is senior Jack Gallagher with a 161.1 average. Junior footballer Gene Paja closely follows with an even 161 average.

The standings of the six teams in the league are:

2. Holy Rollers	5	3
3. Los Carbies	4	4
4. Mainliners	4	4

Daly Sure on Ron

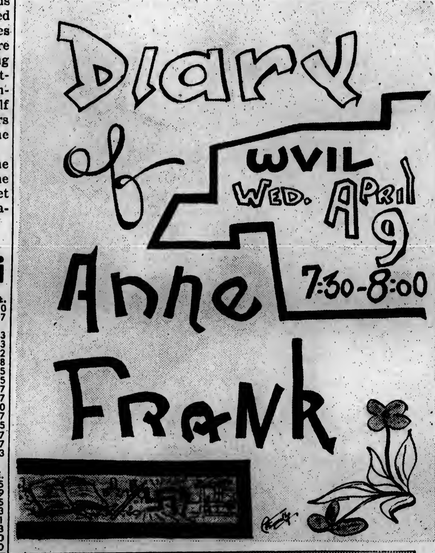
He's training all the time, while myself and most of the others are training and racing both.



All Want Greatness

"We all want to be the greatest there is, but I think that the beat runner is the one who trains hardest. Right now, Elliott is working harder than any of us.

"But, if I'm in condition on June 6, either he is the greatest, or I'll have beaten him. But that won't necessarily mean anything, because there are a lot of other guys who might beat me—like Derek Ibbotson, for example.

"There's no way of really setting up a world champion in the mile, the sport is too wide spread. If I beat Elliott, they'll be saying I'm the greatest there is, yet in my own heart I won't think so."

Maybe he won't but a lot of other people already do.

Ron Delany Breaks Record In Chicago Meet

By BILL VINCENT

The scene is Madison Square Garden; the attraction is any indoor track meet in the past three years; the event is the mile run and a thin, dark haired young man is blazing around the final lap of the mile with his competitors falling farther and farther back. The crowd is cheering and yelling for him as he crosses the finish line a good twenty yards ahead of his nearest pursuer.

About a minute after the race one hears the announcer shout, "The winner-Ron Delany of Villanova-Time 4:05.8 Suddenly the cheers turn to boos. Why? Of course, Delany once again ran to win the race, not to set a world record, which seems to be the only thing New York track fans are interested in.

This has been going on for almost three years now, but things have changed somewhat since the last meet in the Garden. For the great Delany moved away from New York and two weeks ago he, along with four of his teammates, headed into the Midwest for the Chicago Daily News Relays.

Hot Final 440

Something new was added in Chicago, for Delany's competitors, namely Phil Coleman and Burr Grim, pushed the Irishman to a 3:05 three quarters of a mile. Then just as he promised he'd do, if pushed earlier in the race, Ron ran a brilliant final quarter-mile to surpass Gunnar Neilson's world indoor record as he won his 24th straight mile on the boards in 4:03.4

Following Delany's superb exhibition another Villanovan, Phil Reavis, thrilled 10,000 Windy City fans by leaping to an incredible 6'10¼" to win the high jump.

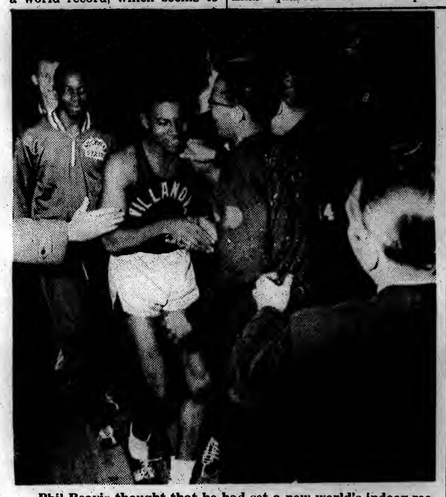
Nevertheless, even a fabulous jump of 6'10¼" can be a disappointment to an athlete. For Phil Reavis thought he had cleared 6'11", another new world indoor record. The judges did also until they officially measured the height, only to find a ¾" sag in the bar.

Almost Won

In the 60-yard dash, Ed Collymore placed second behind Western Michigan's Ira Murchison. Collymore, after a poor start, came on strong and just missed nabbing the fleet-footed Murchison at the tape.

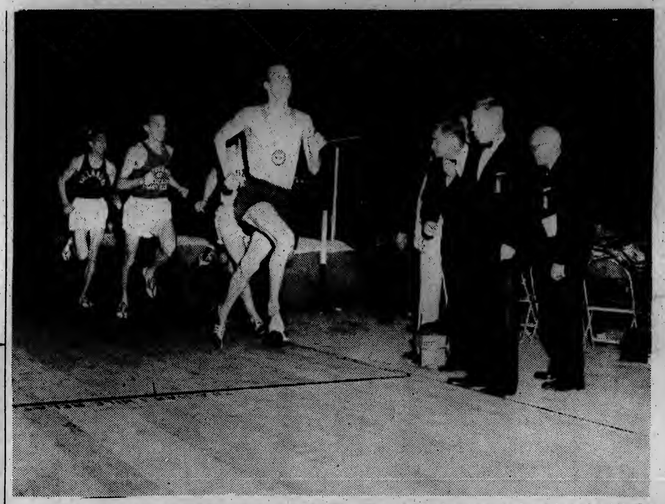
A week later, Delany, along with four other Wildcats and also some former Villanovans, proved to be a good bit of the show at the Cleveland Knights of Columbus Games.

Delany had things pretty much his own way in the mile as he completely outclassed his competitors, winning by over fifteen yards in 4:12.7.



Phil Reavis, along with Ernie Haisley of Illinois, cleared 6'8" to tie for top honors in the high jump.

Two Ex-Wildcats



Two former Villanovans, Charley Jenkins and Joe Gaffney, finished one-two in the 600-yard run. Jenkins won the event in 1:11.7 to cop the race for the second straight year. Gaffney, now running for the U. S. Army, also has won it twice.

Ex-Main Liner Don Bragg finished second to Occidental's Bob Gutowski in the pole vault. Gutowski cleared 15'4" to establish a new meet record, a half inch better than Bob Richard's mark of last year. Bragg, who is now jumping for the Shanahan Catholic Club, cleared 15'.

Others to place in the meet were Ed Collymore, fourth in the 50-yard dash; Bob Holup, fourth in the 50-yard high hurdles and Villanova-grad Alex Breckenridge, who finished third in the two-mile run.

Phil Reavis thought that he had set a new world's indoor record in the high jump at the Chicago Daily News Track Meet two weeks ago. But the officials discovered a ¾-inch sag in the bar. Still, Phil hit his best height of the year—6'10¼".

Most likely this unidentified runner was wishing that he had a tape to breast as he hit the finish line. But two laps still remained —and Ron Delany (there in last place) went on to break indoor mile record.

He Wanted Some Pictures

'Kinda Cocky' Daly Sure Ron Would Do It

By JACK CURTIN

A telephone rang in the Chicago Daily News' offices one Thursday two weeks ago, and a reporter picked it up, little realizing that he was about to hear the voice of a prophet.

It was a long distance call from Philadelphia. The speaker was Jack Daly, editor of the 1958 Belle Air yearbook.

"I want some pictures of Delany breaking the record," he said.

"What?" queried the amazed reporter.

"I want some pictures of Ron Delany breaking the indoor mile record. He's going to do it tomorrow night at the Daily News relays."

Who's Cocky?

The reporter laughed, told Daly he was "kinda cocky," and sent his photographers to cover the meet. He told them to try and get a couple of good shots of the mile.

He was rewarded with a pair of photographic classics—prints of the fabulous Irishman bettering the world's indoor record by two-tenths of a second, in 4:03.4.

Daly's tip? Just a quiet reply from Delany when asked if he would try for the record at Chicago.

"Well, it's mighty fine track," quoth he.

And that it was.

In an interview on campus days later, Delany gave the VILLANOVAN his views of the race, amid philosophical comments on life, America, Ireland and even Rosemont College.

Agreed on Chicago

"I knew I could break the record. Aside from my own confidence , I had it drummed into me by sportswriters and Mr. Elliott. (Villanova coach Jim "Jumbo" Elliott). So, before the season, I had a talk with Jumbo, and we agreed that the best place to go for it would be Chicago.

"However, we also agreed that if I ever got a chance, I would go for it in New York, and I would have had it that night (the indoor AAU championships when he ran 4:30.7) if I knew I was near it.

"Anyway, I knew that Chicago was my last chance, but I tried not to think of it—I don't like to think of records—and Jumbo never pushed me to go for it, which was a relief.

"Then, in the race, things worked just right. The pace was ideal, and when I heard the three-quarters time, 3:05, I made a dash for it, and got it."

Delany gave his views on other track subjects, such as his timing ("I don't have a good sense of timing. I'm definitely a back runner, I like to come from behind."), before discussing what may be one of the greatest miles of all time, his planned meeting with Australian wonder-boy Herb Elliott at the Compton Relays in California on June 6.

2:56 is 'Fantastic'

He was asked what he thought of a comment by Elliott's coach, Percy Cerutty, that " we will see how much kick Delany has left at the finish after he hits the three-quarter mark in 2:56."

"I feel," said the Dubliner "and you can quote me, that if Elliott runs the three-quarters in 2:56, he'll end up flat on his face. It's fantastic, I don't think it's possible to hit the distance in that time and then go on to a good mile.

"However, Elliott is a remarkable young man, and he does an amazing amount of training (Elliott is reported to run 25 miles a day in practice) and if he can do it, and pull the time down to 3:56, I'll be the first to congratulate him."

The Main Line ace did feel that there was a good possibility that track fans would be treated to a record-breaking race, because of the calibre of the runners and the usually ideal conditions at Compton.

He said that it could turn out to be a tactical race, but that he would refer "a show-down, one where we both run like mad and see who's the best."

Others Could Win

Delany also pointed out that the other entrants in the mile, principally Roger Moens of Belgium, could upset the two favorites and walk off with the honors.

Villanova's favorite Irishman said that he would not change his strategy for the race, but "try to beat him with the kick. That's my kind of race, and I feel that I am in charge that way and can decide when to make my move."

Ron Delany

Delany said that he did not fear Elliott. "I don't worry about my opponents. I respect all of them, but feel that, in condition, I can beat any of them.

"Of course, I'm pointing to beat Elliott, but he's going into this race with an advantage.

Council Offers Leadership Program On Campus Sunday

The Student Council will sponsor a special leadership program this Sunday at 1:30 P.M. in the Vasey Hall auditorium.

Student Council Chairman J. Patrick Nicholson said that representatives of all local colleges have been invited.

Rosemont, Immaculata and Chestnut Hill colleges have already announced they will attend.

Opening Address by Pinto

Lou Pinto, Secretary of the Student Council, will give the opening address. Pinto will consider the role of student leadership and student government on a college campus.

Lieut. j.g. Eldon Park, freshman orientation instructor in Naval Science here, will speak on the qualities of a student leader and his role on the college campus.

Paul Yurchak, NFCCS senior delegate at Villanova, will speak on the role of student government on a college campus.

Yurchak, senior philosophy government vice-president at the major, and Park, former student University of Nebraska, will then answer questions from the floor.

Six Discussion Groups

Attending students will then break into six discussion groups. Leading the discussions will be Nicholson, Bob Murphy, treasurer of the Student Council, Don Kempf, Yurchak, Gerry McGrath, Bob Mulcahy, Tom Whalen, Tom Moakley, Tom Hoffman and Dick Hamburger.

The will discuss the role of a student government, student government's relations with the faculty and administration, need for leadership today on the college campus, and the role of executives and committees in student government.

Leadership Discussion

Nicholson said other topics would include developing leadership within an organization and qualities of a good student leader.

After the discussion period, the students will hold a recess for refreshments.

After the brief intermission, Nicholson will give an address considering student government now and in the future at Villanova.

The delegates will then re-assemble in other discussion groups considering the bi-cameral system, executive and administration organization, duties and powers of standing committees, and student council's role in intercollegiate affairs.

Student, faculty and administration relations, and the relationship of organizations to the student council will also be discussed.

Groups Will Report

The various groups will then submit reports to the general assembly. There will then be discussions and comments from the floor.

The meeting will end after Nicholson's closing remarks.

Nominations For Offices Tomorrow

The Student Council, through Paul Laughlin, Chairman of the Elections Committee, announced yesterday that nominations for Class Officers and Student Council Representatives will be held next Thursday.

The nominations will take place during the Student Activities period, at 10:30 A.M. in Vasey Hall. The classroom assignments are as follows:

Juniors Room 204
Sophomores Room 207
Freshmen Room 206

Laughlin expressed the hope that the nominations will attract a large underclass turn-out in order to assure that the nominations will represent a true cross-section of the class.

Screening Required

Laughlin further announced that all those who are nominated will be screened by the Dean of Men, the office of Academic Affairs, and the Chaplin's office.

Beside the Class Officers the Juniors and Sophomores will also nominate a resident and day-hop representative for each of the three divisions.

Frosh Election

The Freshmen will nominate for just one additional resident and day-hop representative.

The Election Committee members are, beside Laughlin, Jack Fisher, Clem Birch, Joe Kinney, and John Lyons.

600 Junior Dinner Dance Tickets On Sale Tomorrow; Held In Sheraton Hotel

More than 600 tickets for the annual Junior Dinner-Dance will go on sale at 9:30 tomorrow morning in the Student Activities office in Dougherty Hall.

Tickets are priced at $11.50 a couple, John Fischetti, ticket chairman, announced last week.

The sale will continue tomorrow until 4:30 P.M. On Friday, tickets will be available from 10:30 to 4:30 P.M.

Dinner At 6:30 P.M.

The Dinner-Dance will be held Saturday night, May 2nd, in the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia. Dinner will begin at 6:30 P.M. Dancing to the music of Paul Judge's band will follow.

Only entire tables may be purchased tomorrow and Friday upon payment of the entire purchase price. Available tables sit four, five and six couples. Most tables are set to accommodate five couples.

After Friday, individual tickets can be purchased. Fischetti was unable last week to tell the VILLANOVAN where and when individual tickets may be available.

750 Juniors Eligible

There are over 750 Juniors eligible to attend the affair, Fischetti explained. "We fear though that some will be left out and unable to get tickets," a member of the dinner-dance committee said.

"Therefore, we strongly urge that tickets be purchased in groups or tables tomorrow and Friday. Another thing, that way you can be assured of sitting at the table with buddies," he continued.

In other recent Junior week planning, Mike Axt, ticket chairman for the Junior Prom, announced that tickets will continue to be sold in the Pie Shoppe for the event.

Early Response Poor

Prom tickets went on sale last Monday. Early response was poor, it was reported to the VILLANOVAN. Tickets for the prom are priced at $6 a couple.

Don Kempf and Ken MacGillivray, co-chairmen for Mother's Day, opening event of Junior Week, announced that the Program Committee has made arrangements for special programs with a special cover.

Program Committee co-chairmen are John Murray and Jim McElhenny. Tickets are on sale in the Pie Shoppe and throughout the halls. They are priced at $8.50 a couple.

Entertainment co-chairmen Ray Quaglia and John Rumbarger said that their plans are continuing smoothly as expected.

Wilbur de Paris Group Signed For Jr. Week Jazz

The popular Wilbur de Paris jazz band has been signed for a special Junior Week jazz concert. "The famous New York group will play for Juniors and their dates on Tuesday night of the big week," Bob Merkert, concert chairman, told the class at a meeting last week. The group recently completed a three month State Department sponsored tour of Africa.

Wilbur heads the group on trombone, with brother Sidney de Paris on trumpet and Omer Simeon on clarinet. Wilbur Kirk doubles on drums and harmonica.

In addition, Skep Shephard strums the banjo, Henry Turner is on bass, with Sonny White on the piano.

Besides striking up a hot 'bone', de Paris acts as emcee, combining his humor with the music that has become such a favorite of Villanovans who have stopped into Jimmy Ryan's when visiting New York.

African Tour

The de Paris tour of Africa began March 1, 1957 in Accra, Ghana, where he was invited to participate in the Gold Coast Independence Celebration.

This was followed with performances in Nigeria, the Belgian Congo, Kenya, Libya, Tunisia, and Ethiopia, with a grand finale tour of the U. S. Air Force bases in Morocco.

Only Small Part

But this is only a small part of the fabulous career of Wilbur de Paris that has spanned over a half century.

It was in 1907 that he first began his career, spending much of the early part in New Orleans where he played with such bands as Louis Armstrong and Jelly Roll Morton.

During the twenties is was Philadelphia where he organized his first band, the Cotton Pickers.

K. of C. Campus Unit Forming, Meets Tonight

The Knights of Columbus will institute a new council of the organization at Villanova.

An organizational meeting will be held tonight at 7:30 in the Vasey Hall auditorium.

The announcement of the establishment of the council was made last week by Frank Delany, chairman of a Student Congress committee handling the establishment of the council.

Invitation Issued

Delany has issued an invitation to all Catholic men on campus, faculty and students. A special invitation has been extended to all members and former members of the K. of C.

Delany explained that the meaning and purposes of the council will be explained at the meeting. Therefore it is most important that all interested in becoming members of the organization attend.

The forms and purposes of a campus council will be explained

Speakers Named

Edward C. Delahunty, Esq. State Advocate; Charles S. Shillingford, State Warden, and John J. MacGrory, District Deputy, will address the meeting.

Belle Masque Takes 'Shrew' To New Rochelle On Sat.

Horace Greeley advised all young men to travel west. Well, the Belle Masque Dramatic Society isn't exactly traveling west but they are journeying far off the Villanova reservation.

This weekend the Society will present its production of "The Taming of the Shrew," by William Shakespeare, on the campus of the College of New Rochelle, in Westchester County, New York.

This will be the first time in the history of the society that it will appear outside the Philadelphia area.

Approximately twenty-five Villanovans will make the trek north to New Rochelle for the weekend. The troup will be composed of cast, stage crew, and make-up personnel. A bus and truck van will be used to transport students, costumes, stage, and scenery.

Will Take Own Stage

The new collapsible stage which was designed and built by Ted Klinka, stage crew chief, will be used at New Rochelle. Klinka estimated that with a crew of about seven the stage can be assembled and ready for use in less than four hours.

Arrangements for the appearance were made by George Becht, Secretary and Treasurer of the Society, through Mother Margret Crowley O.S.U., directress of the Props and Paints Society at New Rochelle.

Belle Masque will present two shows on the campus in Chidwick Hall on Friday and Saturday evenings.

All Villanovans in the New York area have been invited by the College of New Rochelle to attend the performance.

Old Home Week

Lynda Lynch, who plays the female lead, Katherina, in the show, will be returning to somewhat familiar territory. Both her mother and her older sister, Barbara, are graduates of New Rochelle.

The College of New Rochelle is a Catholic Women's Liberal Arts college. It has a total enrollment of about 600 students and is conducted by the Order of Saint Ursula. It has long been noted as one of the outstanding women's colleges in America.

Reverand William Farrell, O.S.A., Moderator of the Belle Masque Dramatic Society, expressed the hope that this is the beginning of a long and cordial relationship between Belle Masque and New Rochelle.

Banmiller Addresses Law Forum In Closing Program

The Villanova Law School Forum closed its current program last Wednesday night with a speech by William J. Banmiller, Warden of the Eastern State Penitentiary.

Warden Banmiller's topic was "The Lawyer's Responsibility to the Offender."

To qualify him for such a talk, Banmiller has been associated with the State penal institutions since 1934 and has read extensively such experts on law as Blackstone, Bentham and Judge John Biggs.

Banmiller briefly traced crime and punishmnt from the days of the Old Testament and noted the changes wrought in punishment since the New Testament.

Desire for Vengeance

It is derogatory of our present society that the desire for vengeance still permeates our penal codes, he believes, but contemporary concepts are increasingly concerned with the "substance rather that the offense; condemning the sin rather than the sinner."

"Present changing conditions and the inability of the individual to adjust to them is responsible for the increases in crime," Banmiller said, and consequently criminal law and social sciences must and are becoming more interested in the welfare of the people.

Lawyer's Duty

Banmiller happily noted this tendency toward true justice being done and he urged lawyers to do their part. It is the duty of lawyers he said to see that poor and indigent offenders be given prompt and adequate counsel and that this counsel do all in its power to see justice properly administered.

Ray Cantra, sophomore chem major, hits the books late into the night, because he knows what's going to start on the day he has circled on the calendar—final exams. He better check again though, because rumor has it that finals have been moved again, a regular second semester occurance.

O-C, Lit. Club-Sponsored Art Show Starts Monday; Applications Close Today

The student Art Show sponsored by Opera-Classica Society and the Literary Club will go on exhibit in the Library for one week starting next Monday.

All late entries for the show will be accepted today by Assistant Professor of Finance, Anthony L. P. Angeline, moderator of O-C, in the Commerce and Finance Building. Oil and water paintings, sketches, charcoals, sculptures, or any other forms of art are eligible.

Of the works already submitted, Angeline has said the majority "look professional." He said that he and Raymond Burns, English Instructor and moderator of the Literary Club, have been quite surprised by the large number of entries they already have.

Judges Chosen

The Art Show Committee has asked James S. Ryan, Professor of Art at Villanova; Wallace Peters, a Philadelphia artist and also a teacher at the University of Pennsylvania; and Dr. Alexander Rudhart, Assistant Professor of History, amateur artist and critic (as staffer Frank Dynan's story showed a few weeks ago), to judge the art. The judging will take place this weekend.

First and second-place ribbons will be awarded in each type of art.

Joe Kinney, chairman of the Art Show Committee, said that he and his co-workers are "extremely pleased by the reception the Art Show has had on campus.

Kinney Says

"I hope that the interest shown by artists will be matched by interest on the part of the other students."

The Literary Club members who are on the Art Show Committee, besides Kinney, are Tom Martinez, Paul Buckley, Tom McKenna and Tom Goldschmidt.

Those Opera-Classica members who are on the Committee are: Chuck Fritz, Bill Bennett, Clem Novitzky, Mike Wesley, George Bielitz, Bill Hearn, Bill Murray, Bob Wagner, Joe DiRocco, Emmett Paradine, Norciso Gendara, Bob Healey, George Matouk, Don McNelis, John Mussio, Andy Sheehy, and Vince Shields.

Belle Masque Joins City Drama Fete

The Collegiate Conference of Greater Philadelphia will present its First Annual Drama Festival next Wednesday evening at the La Salle College Auditorium.

The same schools which comprise the Big Five, LaSalle, Pennsylvania, St. Joseph's, Temple, and Villanova, will each present a one act play.

The evening's festivities will start at eight o'clock. Tickets will be available at the door. Admission will be only one dollar.

No Competition—Just Culture

Each school will be represented by its dramatic society. There will be no competition since the purpose of the festival is to create cultural activity among the Big Five to match the City Series sports competition.

Villanova, which will be represented by the Belle Masque Dramatic Society, will offer "The Parade at the Devil's Bridge" by Henri Gleon. The production will be directed by Richard Dressler, a Senior Education major.

La Salle's Masque Society will present a student-written play, "Helena's Husband". St. Joseph's group will perform one act of "Juno and the Paycock" by Sean O'Casey. Pennsylvania and Temple as of this writing have not announced their productions.

Set Up Last Week

Final arrangements were made this past weekend at the regular monthly C.C.G.P. meeting held at Temple University. All on-campus advertising is being handled by the respective dramatic societies, while the off-campus advertising is being handled by the C.C.G.P. Council.

It is hoped by the Council that this is only the first in a number of cultural endeavors which will bring the student bodies of the Big Five schools into closer contact.

Finalists Named For Grad Speaking

The six finalists of the nominees for the student commencement speaker were announced by Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O.S.A., Vice-President of Student Affairs.

The list of final nominees includes; Walter DeGroft, Finance major from Detroit; Joseph Kinney, English major from Philadelphia; Joseph Panas, Mechanical Engineer from Philadelphia; John Rowland, Pre-Law student from Upper Darby; Anthony Silvestri, Chemistry major from New Jersey, and William Wescott, Civil Engineer from Pittsburgh.

Final decision as to the commencement speaker will be made on April 22nd, when the various candidates present the speech they would deliver, should they be chosen.

Jim Lawless, junior electrical engineering student, poses with the model earth satellite which the Radio Club has constructed. Lawless was chairman of the project.

'Parents' Day' Receives OK; Slated For Home Grid Tilt

Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O.S.A., Vice-President for Student Affairs, has approved a "Parents' Day" for next semester, to be held the day of a home football game, it was announced today by the Student-Administration Committee.

The Villanova Marching Band will present a special half-time show as part of the proceeding.

In the football program there will be tributes to the parents of the general student body and, more particularly, the parents of the football players.

Welcome By President

At half-time the University President or another member of the administration will make a welcoming address.

Before the football season the athletic department will send out applications for tickets to the parents of all undergraduate students. There will not be a special seating section, however.

The actual date for the affair will be announced at a later date.

It is expected to take place rather early in the football season.

Approved By Student Congress

A proposal favoring "Parents' Day" was submitted to the Administration in February, after the plan had been unanimously approved by the Student Congress.

In his presentation of the "Parents' Day" plan to the Student-Administration Committee, Student Council Chairman Pat Nicholson had this to say:

"We, the members of the Student Council, as sons and daughters know how much such a day would mean to our parents, and as Villanovans, we think we know how much such a day would mean to Villanova."

Reagan Favors It

Frank Reagan, when informed of the approval of "Parents' Day," said that the athletic department is heartily in favor of the idea. He anticipates no undue trouble in handling the arrangements.

The report to the Student-Administration Committee listed what it thought the advantage of "Parents' Day" would be to the parents themselves:

"This would make "Mothers' Day" and "Fathers' Day" more enjoyable to our parents because they would be able to renew friendships made on "Parents' Day.

More Visits To Campus

"It would create the incentive for our parents to pay more visits to Villanova before the student's junior and senior years.

"It would pay homage to both parents of students, thus enabling them to attend the affair together."

As to its benefits to the University, the report had this to say:

"It would aid considerably in developing a greater feeling of friendship between our parents and Villanova University."

Annual Tribute

"It would provide an annual way for the students and for Villanova to pay tribute to those who have made our presence here possible.

"It would help to promote a much greater parental interest in our football team and in the growth and development of Villanova."

'Antigone' At Rosemont Thurs., Friday

"Antigone", an adaptation by French playright Jean Anouihl of The Sophocles' classic Greek play will be presented in the Rosemont College gymnasium tomorrow and Friday nights.

The play features Barbara Burke, a pre-med at Rosemont, in the lead of Antigone.

Joseph Boni, a psychology major from St. Joseph's, costars in the role of Creon, King of Thebes.

The Greek chorus will be portrayed by Carole Miceli, Carole is a sophomore History major at Rosemont.

Debbie Trainer, a junior education major will be seen as Ismane, the sister of Antigone.

Sullivan Plays Haemon

Villanovan Gerry Sullivan is the romantic lead. He plays Haemon, the suitor of Antigone.

Gerry is a general arts student and has been seen in the Belle Masque production "The Skin of Our Teeth" and in the Rosemont production of "The Heiress".

Other Villanovans in the cast are Jack Dillon, Junior English major, Larry Seaver, Junior I.A. and Bill McCann, Junior general arts student. All three are seen as guards in the play.

Written As Protest

The play was written by Anouihl as a protest against the German's treatment of the French during World War II.

In the play, Antigone symbolizes France. Creon represents Germany.

Antigone refuses to accept the material gifts proffered by Creon. When applied to the Anouihl adapation, this represents Germany's attempt to buy the French population.

Even Germans Cheer

The play was so cleverly written by Anouihl that even the German officers who viewed the play applauded it.

The play which is being staged jointly by the Belle Masque Society and the Jest and Gesture Society of Rosemont is directed by Cele Sullivan.

Admission to the performance is $1. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Car Registration Closes Fri., Results To Be Posted

Registration of eligible candidates for senior car privileges will end Friday, Pat Nicholson, chairman of the Student Council announced Monday.

Registration was held today in Dougherty Hall from 11:30 to 1:30 and will be held at the same time tomorrow and Friday.

Subject Approval

The applications will be approved by the University Chaplain, the Dean of Men, and the Dean of Student Affairs. The results will be posted on the general bulletin board in Dougherty Hall.

GERRY DEGROFT
Helped With Car Plan

The plan for the car program were worked out by Nicholson and Walt DeGroft who submitted it to the Student Council last semester where it was passed and presented to the administration for investigation.

15 Schools Contacted

During the investigation into the program, some 15 of the top Catholic colleges in the country were contacted by the Student Council to find how these schools met the car problem.

Nicholson emphasized that the car privileges must not be abused. The Student Council is administering the program for the most part to relieve any burden that might befall the administration.

Nicholson stated that the acceptance of the program shows that the administration is willing to work with the student body through the Student Council if the Student Council does an effective job in presenting proposals to the administration.

Applications For O.C. Club Close Friday

Students desiring admission into the Opera Classica Music Society must file applications before this Friday, it was announced Monday by Mr. Anthony L. P. Angeline, society moderator.

"The society is interested in quality not quantity. Thus only 50 members will be admitted next year," the moderator said.

Many Requests

In order to interest non-resident students and to satisfy their many requests for day-time concerts, we will initiate a new plan tomorrow," Angeline said.

There will be a special hearing at 10:30 A.M., in the east student lounge, of Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture. Armando Alberti will conduct the Vienna State Opera rendition of "In a Persian Market" "Bank Holiday," and "In a Chinese Temple Garden."

The "Triumphal March" and "Ballet Music from "Aida" will be presented.

Program Tonight

There will also be a regular program tonight featuring the "Merry Widow Suite' with the Vienna State Opera chorus and orchestra.

Recordings of Eugene Ormandy's rendition of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will also be heard. Ormandy conducts the world famous Philadelphia Orchestra.

Grad Successes Are Announced By Alumni Office

The Alumni Office announced that several alumni of Villanova have received important positions in their chosen careers.

James C. Montgomery of the cass of 1939 has recently been appointed president of the Textron Metals Company of Girard, Ohio. Since his graduation, Montgomery has been in the field of industrial engineering and management.

Pathology Chairman

Dr. Joseph E. Imbriglia of the class of 1934 has recently been appointed professor and chairman of the department of pathology at Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital of Philadelphia.

Prior to joining the staff at Hahnemann, Imbriglia was an assistant professor of pathology at the University of Pennsylvania.

The Rev. Howard J. Garrity of the class of 1931 was ordained to the priesthood on March 19, 1958 at San Orego, California.

Other Appointments

Jim McKelvey, '32 has been named superintendent of the Pennsylvania Power and Light Company's Martins Creek plant.

Frank Pimpinella, '40, has been appointed Corporation Counsel for the city of Stanford, Conn.

Vinnie Carisimp, '44, has accepted the position of football coach and athletic director at Our Lady of the Valley High School, Orange, Pa.

Lit. Club To Hold Talk On Salinger

The Literary Club will hold a symposium on J. D. Salinger tomorrow at 7:30 in seminar room three of the library.

Joseph Kinney, president of the Literary Club, announced that a number of area colleges have been invited, including Rosemont and Immaculta.

Representing Villanova on the panel will be Jack Curtin, Junior English major and managing editor of the VILLANOVAN. Frank Delany, who was a member of the November symposium on "Art and Morality", will be chairman of this week's panel.

Kinney urged all who are interested to attend the symposium.

Elections for next year's officers were held last Tuesday. The new officers will take over their duties after the art show which will be held the week of April 21.

The K. of C. and Catholic Action

The Student Council, recent author of a progressive new Constitution, has added another accomplishment to its list.

With the announcement this week of the proposed formation of a council of the Knights of Columbus on campus, they have pledged an all out effort to increase Catholic Action among Villanova students.

The seventy-six year old Knights of Columbus is an organization composed mainly of Catholic laymen dedicated to fostering of religious activity among the laity of the Church. It engages in charitable and social activities as well as positive programs of Catholic Action. A council on campus will be able to adjust its activities to the interest of the students and faculty.

It is incumbent on all students and faculty members interested in Catholic Action to conscientiously consider membership in the organization.

Any Catholics who fail to take all available opportunities to share in the spread of the Faith do both themselves and their Church a grave injustice. All thinking Catholics here at Villanova then will find it necessary to attend the meeting tonight.

Failure to do so might some day bring regrets.

A Time for Re-Appraisal

The Augustinian Educational Association, which held its first meeting last week during the National Catholic Educational Convention, considered as a theme the vital problem of "Educating the Priest-Teacher."

The Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., Vice President of Academic Affairs at Villanova, was chairman of the sessions which delegates from throughout the United States and Cuba attended. The Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., and the Very Rev. John Seary, O.S.A., Augustinian Provincials in the United States, presided.

The meetings were devoted to a re-appraisal of the educational objectives in the priest-teacher training in the Augustinian seminaries. According to Father Boyle the shortage of priest-teachers is alarming. One of the purposes of the organization is to "re-appraise its approach" to this problem.

The Association was formed last February to consider Augustinian education throughout the Order. Last week's meetings were evidence of the earnestness of the group to effect improvement wherever needed.

Dean Speaks Out On Education

Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the School of Law, told the National Catholic Educational Convention last week that "Many students who graduate from colleges today can't even read or write the English language."

The Dean, speaking at the closing session of the convention, also declared that education in the classroom should be inferior to that of the home, thus pointing out the supreme obligation parents have for the education of their children.

To answer the question of why Johnny can't read, Reuschlein suggested the failure of parents to set a proper example of reading habits. He blamed television in part for the decline.

He advocated fewer students being admitted to college, and the establishment of higher academic standards.

It was refreshing to hear Dean Reuschlein speak out candidly about the existing problems. Let's hope educators take the suggestions of the Dean and of the entire convention seriously.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

In a recent issue of your paper, there appeared an article concerning the amateur night's activities. Among the acts mentioned that would be eligible for application to appear in the festivities was a type of entertainment described as "earwiggling."

Since we are one of the few original earwiggler teams now active, we considered this an opportunity to enter as well as to bring publicity to this long inactive profession.

Quite enthusiastic about the entire matter, we attempted to procure a suitable entry blank. But much to our chagrin, we found that no one knew where to obtain this blank. In desperation we went to the Intramural office and found that the news article in your paper was in error.

The fact is, editor, there was no place for ear wigglers in the amateur night's program.

Sir, you can imagine our feelings upon hearing this: we were quite ready to seek out the writer of this article and thrash him for causing our unnecessary tragic disappointment.

In the future, we would appreciate it if the VILLANOVAN would confine itself to printing confirmed facts. It could be that the earwiggling was inserted to make the article humorous. If so, please separate the humor from the news articles.

There is room for humor in a college paper, but certainly not in the news section.

To The Editor:

Much has been said against those responsible for planning Junior Week. To a certain extent I agree that some of the arrangements could have been better.

But on the other hand I believe that the Junior Week chairmen did a good job. They were working under many limitations of which the majority of Juniors were unwere. Let's not be too critical until we know the entire story.

WITH THE EDITOR

Staff Wishes Mulcahy Luck

Robert E. Mulcahy, III, can now sleep normal hours, eat regularly, and study consistently. He gained this distinction last week when he completed his full term as Editor-in-Chief of the VILLANOVAN.

Winding up a year of fighting deadlines and consoling editors, Mulcahy, at a special staff meeting, turned over the editorship of the paper to a new staff.

"We've had a good year, accomplished much, and each of us has gained a lot of satisfaction," Mulcahy told the staff veterans. "You new fellows now are getting a real chance to do something for both your university and yourself."

Then Bob shook hands and slowly left the publications office. With him went the well wishes and sincere gratitude of his friends, those who contributed so much the past year.

The honor and the praise coming to the VILLANOVAN, belongs to Bob. He deserves all the accolades, fitting for one who constantly accepted complete responsibility.

So as he returns to normal living, we wonder if sometimes he might thing of us, continuing the paper. We sort of think he won't be able to forget our work together. Nor shall we forget him.

Thanks, Bob.

In the excitement of releasing the story last week, we didn't get a chance to congratulate new Belle Air yearbook editor junior Bob Pinto. Ditto and thanks also to retired editor senior Jack Daly. Daly, who finished the yearbook on schedule with few major difficulties, spent the vacation resting either in Florida or under a bright sun lamp. That was after the book had been submitted to the publisher.

Ace Reporter Frank Dynan made newspaper history when he attended a closed session of the Junior class steering committee. Joe Fitzpatrick, of the sports department, wanted to cover the baseball team so badly that he drove all the way from Ocean City to South Orange on Saturday to see the Seton Hall game. It was rained out.

Our Little Guy Columnist Ray Quaglia and his sidekick photographer Al Lawler toured the Evening Division last Wednesday evening. Both gentlemen reported that the atmosphere of the night school was one of pleasant determined informality. Their fine report of the night school appears on page 5.

In the Spring a young man's fancy quickly turns to thoughts of . . . softball. Student Council chairman Pat Nicholson is loosening his pitching arm ready for innumerable battles with the underclassmen. Junior Jack Curtin is getting his tennis trunks out of mothballs. Junior Education major John Hughes has not yet resumed leading the boys on long hikes into Bryn Mawr between classes.

Frankly, we're rather pleased with the progress Junior Class officers have made thus far in their preparations for Junior Week. Class president Vic Ladmacer said last week that "this could be the finest Junior Week ever." Vic said plans for both the prom and dinner-dance were in fine shape. "The only thing needed now is students to buy the tickets," another class officer said.

College students interested in the rapid advances in the medical field were delighted last week to read that Dr. Noah D. Fabricant, a Chicago ear and throat specialist, announced that whiskey is good for the common cold. Of course it must be used during the early stages of the cold and in moderate doses to be truly effective. It was reported that some students have already mailed copies of the doctor's report to the infirmary.—L. M. O'R.

Roving Reporters Pull 'The Night School Caper'

by RAYMOND J. QUAGLIA
of the Villanovan Staff

Villanova reporter, Ray Quaglia, having a pre-class interview with Phyllis Marchion, who is a third grade teacher at St. Donoto's school in Phila. Phyllis is a student in elementary education

A Group of night students gather in Mendel hall to await the beginning of their next class. As most of them have completed an eight hour day at their regular jobs, the few moments of relaxation are especially appreciated.

The Rev. Joseph Burns, O.S.A., assumes a stern countenance while dictating notes to his class on the History of education. Night classes, such as this, vary in length, but most last one and a half hrs.

It was about 8 o'clock in the evening when Al Lawler and I left the VILLANOVAN office and started the long trek to Mendel Hall. Al smoked silently, his precious camera clutched tightly in his right hand, while I whistled a few bars from "the Witch Doctor" and wondered if my ball point would last out the evening.

We entered Mendel at exactly 8:04 p.m. Al threw away his cigarette and said in a well modulated voice, "ready?" "Ready, Al," I answered, praying that my ball point wouldn't let me down.

We split up to scan the occupied classrooms for likely looking prospects. I started at one end of the first floor and Al at the other. Before I had time to write a "night school" caption at the top of a page in my yellow notebook, I saw Al give me a signal from down the hall.

Behind the Green Book

I hurried down the corridor and saw two students, one male and the other female, sitting in a classroom closely examining a large book with a green cover.

Al and I entered, introduced ourselves, and I started asking questions. The male turned out to be a dayhop who had a flat tire, and was waiting for a friend to give a ride home.

The female's name was Phyllis, Phyllis Marchioli; she had dark hair and brown eyes. I asked her what she did during the day and she said that she taught third grade. I asked her if she enjoyed teaching and she said that she did. (Al and I were both glad.) Al took her picture and I asked her what courses she was taking here at Villanova. She said that she was an elementary education student. We talked a while longer and at 8:14 left her to the perusal of her book with the green cover.

But Soft!

At about 8:16 p.m. we entered Fr. Burns' class and took a picture of the group. I began worrying about my ball point again, and Al told me to put it on a radiator to soften it up. While it was softening, Al smoked a cigarette and I back to get my coat which I had left in Fr. Burns class. The class laughed.

At 8:20 P.M. Al took a picture of a group of students who were lounging in the corridor. I interviewed a nurse named Mary Ellen Hennessy. She was taking two courses, Physics and Religion, and was studying for her B.S. in nursing.

I asked her what she did with her spare time and thought that she would consider the remark at least slightly humorous. Instead, she told me that she liked to skate and that she was interested in classical music. Al told me that we had to go back to the photography room for more film. I excused myself and went along with Al.

After we got the film, we decided to take a walk down to the Annex classroom building. Al talked about photography and I smoked a cigarette and listened.

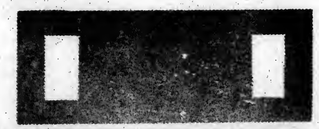
A Good Group But—

In A.C. we took a picture of Prof. Amellotti's graduate class in applied statistics. (They were a good group but we didn't have enough room for the picture.) Al said he was thirsty so we went into the Pie Shoppe Al had a coke and I had coffee.

At about 9:10 P.M. we returned to Mendel Hall for more pictures. We sat and waited for the last class to finish, so that we could get a group picture of them coming through the doors. Al said that it would be a good shot and I agreed with Al.

I then interviewed Mr. John Francks of Broomall, Pa. He was in the accounting program, and had three courses a week. I asked him where he worked during the day and he told me that he was employed at the Frank Nelson Co., which is a textile firm. I asked him if he was married and he said that he was and that he had three children. Al was nowhere in sight and I began to wonder where he had gone.

Mr. Francks told me that this was his fifth year as a Villanova night school student. When I asked him if he found it difficult to both work and go to school, he said that it was difficult but it was also very worthwhile. I said goodnight to Mr. Francks, thanked him for his cooperation, and went looking for Al.



I found Al talking to two women whom he wanted me to interview. One woman was Mrs. Charlotte Harris, a R.N. at the Abington Memorial Hospital, and the other was Mary Lou Delaney who was also employed there.

Al and I decided to take a picture of them getting into their car. Mrs. Harris told us that she had two children and that she was attending night classes in order to obtain her B.S. in nursing. Al took the picture of them getting into their car and we both waved goodby.

At 9:55 PM we walked back to the VILLANOVAN office. Al was a bit tired so he only came in for a minute and then went back to his room. I took off my jacket, threw away my ball point pen, sat at a typewriter and fell fast asleep.

A group of psychology students leave Mendel hall after the completion of the evening's classes. The long day of work and study ends at 9:30 P.M.

Charlotte Harris (left) and Mary Lou Delaney, who are both RN's at the Abington Memorial Hospital, begin the 40 minute drive to their homes. Both women have been attending night classes for 3 years in quest of a B.S. in nursing.

Mein Kempf

By DON KEMPF

What is Freedom? Webster calls it "exemption from necessity, in choice and action."

A group of student leaders which I have observed this past summer at the University of Michigan carried it a little further and stated that "Freedom is not thought of as a privilege, not as a concession that any authority . . . may properly grant or deny, qualify, or regulate according to its interests or its discretion."

Freedom of the Press

Journalists talk about a special type of freedom—freedom of the press. Pressmen state that censors "qualify or regulate according to their interests or discretion" the contents and editorial policies of newspapers over which they have influence. Thus if we subcribe to what has gone above we would agree that freedom does not exist in such cases.

The fact that freedom does not exist in these cases is not, a priori, evil. Often private educational institutions—especially those with religious affiliations, whether Catholic or otherwise, are dedicated by their nature and in their aims and purposes to certain principles, truths, and standards. And to comply with these ideals, those who are entrusted with this task are completely justified in applying this "censorship." (Censorship then need not be thought of as an evil word.)

Individual Restriction

When an individual becomes a part of any private institution—educational or not—thus dedicated to stated principles, he willingly places certain restrictions upon his freedom for as long as he is a part of that institution. He does this because of gains he hopes to make in becoming a part of such a group (strenghthening of his religious convictions, etc.).

However, those concerned with operations of a Press under such conditions must always be alert and on guard to see that this good and important "censorship" is not perverted so that it changes its nature from what Webster calls the power "to examine written or printed matter . . . in order to forbid publication, if objectionable," to a positive force which could attempt to misrepresent a "controlled press' as a "free press." For while a controlled press and a free press are both essentially "good"—they are not the same.

A Matter of Degree

Under a controlled press the question becomes—How much? Control is a vague word, and where to draw the line is a complex and difficult problem and both editors and censors must work towards the best solution.

They must evaluate and re-evaluate, and when they are through, they must begin again with a fresh and open mind, for, while it is better to turn on the light then to curse the darkness, it is only when the light fails to be turned on that one realizes how dark it really is.

The Little Guy

By RAY QUAGLIA

I was walking down by the new C&F building the other day, just sort of strolling aimlesaly, wondering when the trees would be getting green and the flounder would be coming back into Barnaget Bay, when I got hit by this crazy idea.

Not that I don't often get crazy ideas, like writing letters to some woman's club to stop the persecution of that little blue man who the girl in the song is always pushing off the roof and all, but this one was even crazier than usual.

I Enjoy Me

I guess when I get crazy ideas, I get more of a kick out of them then anybody in the world, because I really cracked up and started laughing all over the place. I had to cover my face and straighten up a little though when these two guys who are pretty big on committees were looking at me kind of weird like.

Well anyway, this idea of mine was really something. I figured that I'd get myself one of those big army tents they sell in the surplus store, and real smart looking pair of combat boots with a leather jacket with a white silk scarf around my neck and go off somewhere and fight in a real rip-roaring revolution. I'd write poems like old Lord Byron use to do.

Where's Little John?

I kept on thinking that it wouldn't be long before I took over a whole country, and then I'd take care of the poor people like some modern Robin Hood. I figured that they'd run my memoirs in some big magazine, and all the guys out here would be running around telling everybody how they knew me when I was here and a nobody.

Well I was really enjoying myself, and I started slapping my knee and all, when I saw this real intellectual kid I know coming down the walk on my right. I didn't think he saw me giggling like I was, so real quick like I got real solemn and started looking like old Rodin's thinker.

I Think, Therefore

The kid asked me how I was and what I was doing down here all alone (since I'm usually in the pie shoppe looking intellectual). Well I sort of screwed up my face like you do when you're really thinking hard, and told him that I was meditating on the deficiencies in Descarte's theory of methodic doubt. I told him I'd walk with him for a while and discuss it more fully.

I started lighting my pipe and was thinking of the lousy taste I would have in my mouth when I got finished smoking it. As I was lighting it, the kid turned toward me real serious like and said, "that's what's wrong with most of the students of today, they never do any profoundthinking like you or I." How true, "How true." I said looking abstractly over his shoulder.

Political Round-Up

By JOHN P. KELLEY

With the presidential nominating conventions only two summers away, experienced candidates and inexperienced prognosticators are already preparing for the hard run. With President Eisenhower handicapped by the no-third term amendment and the G.O.P. bearing the brunt politically of recession and rapid Soviet advance, Joe Democratic is already smiling—broadly.

Let's look at some of the potential Democratic candidates for the Presidency.

Most prominent nationally is Senator John Kennedy, of Massachusetts. Bob Meyner, progressive New Jersey governor, has also been frequently considered.

In the Eastern states area, Philadelphia's own Joe Clark certainly deserves consideration.

Senator Clark will be 59 years old when the presidential elections come around. He is a man of political maturity having engaged in a bitter fight for many years with his pal, Dick Dilworth, to overthrow the 70 years of corrupt government in the city.

Clark succeeded in his fight for good government in Iwo and has served in the office of City Controller, Mayor and now Senator representing the Keystone State.

Clark is the possessor of the two major qualifications that will be required of the Democratic aspirant in 1960.

First of all he comes from a powerful, populous state and he is a powerful man in this powerful state as was demonstrated when he won his senate seat while the Republicans were sweeping the country nationally.

Recently, Victor H. Moore, a Philadelphia councilman, was approved by the Democrats as their candidate for Lieutenant Governor in the forthcoming state wide election. Clark, since he had to be in Washington at the time of the selection, gave Dilworth his proxy vote to cast. Dilworth then voted for Moore, contributing both his vote and Clark's. The senator, hearing of this, then refused to concur, because Clark, while Mayor had had various conflicts with Moore.

The Democrats immediately rescinded their approval and gave the nod to Judge John Morgan Davis of Philadelphia, thus demonstrating political power of Joe Clark.

The characteristic, seemingly lacking in Clark, which the others mentioned possess, is national prominence.

It is safe to state that if he does become nationally known within the next two years and at the same time remains compatible with the remainder of the party, he will be a man to be reckoned with by present and future Democrats.

In 1960 approximately 100 years will have passed since James Buchanan, the only President ever selected from Pennsylvania, left the White House. Perhaps in this same year the populace of Pennsylvania, Republicans and Democrats alike, will rejoice with the election of their favorite son—Joe Clark.

Strictly Opinion

He was sitting in a dim corner of the lounge, alone naturally. Approaching him I felt uneasy. He was the first individualist I would converse with. Caution was the word.
